wee are yet in our sinnes. On the contrary then, seeing hee is risen, such as beleeue in him, are not in their sinnes. Againe, who shal Rom.8.
condemne vs? it is Christ which is dead, yea or rather which is risen againe. The fourth effect is iustification, as Paul testifieth: Hee died for our sinnes, and rose againe for our iustification, and that was on this manner. When hee was vpon the Crosse, he stoode there in our roome, hauing our sinnes imputed vnto him: and when hee rose from death, hee acquitte and iustified himselfe from our sinnes, and ceased to be any more a reputed sinner for vs: and thus, all that doe or shall beleeue in him, are in him acquit, absolued, and iustified from all their sinnes. If any demand, how they which liued in the time of the olde Testament, before the resurrection of Christ, coulde bee iustified thereby, considering the effect must follow the cause: I answer, that they were iustified by the future resurrection of Christ: which though it followed in time, yet did the value and vertue thereof reach euen to the beginning of the world. The fift effect, is the conferring and bestowing of all such giftes and graces as hee had merited and procured for vs by his death and passion. Thus Christ testifieth that the giuing of the spirite in large and plentifull manner, was reserued to the glorification of Christ, which beganne in his resurrection. And the preaching of repentance and remission of sinnes is reserued til after his resurrection. And Saint Peter saith, that the Elect are regenerate to a liuelie hope by the resurrection of Christ. By reason of this bestowing of graces and giftes, the resurrection of Christ is the beginning of a new and spirituall worlde, which the holie Ghost calles the world to come, in which shal be a new heauen and a new earth, as Isaiah speaketh, and a peculiar people of God, zealous of good workes, keeping an eternall Sabbaoth vnto God. This one effect alone sufficiently declares the excellencie of this vertue of Christ. The sixt effect is viuification, which is a raising of vs from the death of sinne to newnesse of life. And the reason hereof is plaine. For Christ in his resurrectiō put away his natural life, which with our nature he receiued from Adam, and tooke vnto him a spirituall life, that he might communicate the said life to all that beleeue in him. Againe, as the first Adam makes vs like himselfe in sinne and death: so Christ the second Adam renews vs and makes vs like to himselfe in righteousnesse and life. And the head quickned with spirituall life, will not suffer the members to remaine in the death of sinne. The seuenth effect is to preserue safe and sound the giftes and graces which hee hath procured by his death, and bestowed on them that beleeue: and this he doth by the vertue of his resurrection. For to this end, hath hee conquered all our spirituall enemies, and dooth by his power conquer them still in vs; so as none shall be able to take his sheepe out of his handes. The last effect is, to raise the body from the graue in the day of iudgement to eternall glorie. If it be obiected, that the wicked are also raised then by the power of Christ: I answer, that the power of Christ is two-folde. One is the power of iudgement, the other a power of a Sauiour. By the first, Christ a Iudge raiseth the vngodly, that hee may execute on them the curse denounced from the beginning of the worlde [at what time thou shalt eate the forbidden fruite, thou shalt die the death.] The second power is here termed the power of Christs resurrection; and it belongs to him as hee is our Sauiour: and by it hee will raise to life eternall, all those that by the bond of the spirit are mistically vnited to him. For by means of this vnion, this raising power shal flow from the head to the dead bodies of thē that are in Christ. Thus we see what the vertue here mentioned is, and what Paul desires, namely, that he may haue experience of these effects in himselfe.

The vse of the doctrine followeth. First of all, in that Christ rose for vs, and in that his resurrection is of endlesse efficacie, here is the foundation of all our spirituall comfort. For by this vertue of Christs resurrection from death to life, all our spirituall enemies are conquerd and subdued, and by the saide vertue dooth hee daily more and more subdue them in vs. Vpō this ground saide Christ: Yee shall haue affliction in the world: but be of good comfort, I haue ouercome the world. And this victorie is for vs, and it is made ours by our faith, as Iohn saieth, This is the victorie which ouercommeth the worlde, euen your faith. Art thou then terrified and afraide with the conscience of thy sinnes, with the cruelty of tyrants, the rage of the world, the paines of hell, the pangs of death, the temptations of the diuell? Be not disinaid, but by thy faith rest on Christ that rose againe from death to life for thee, and thereby shewed himselfe to be a rock for thee to rest on, and to be the lion of the tribe of Iudah: and thus shalt thou be sure to finde certen remedy against al the troubles and miseries of life and death.

1.Iohn 5.4

Againe, here we are taught to rise with Christ from our sinnes, and to liue vnto God in newnesse of life: and for this end to pray that wee may feele the vertue of Christs resurrection to change and renew vs. Great are the benefits which we reape by this vertue, & we are to shew our selues thankfull to God for them: which wee can doe no way, but by newnesse of life. Againe, the end why Christ rose for vs, was, that we might rise from our sinnes & corruptions, in which wee lie buried as in a graue, to a new spirituall life. And the reward is great to them that make this happie chaunge. For hee that is partaker of the first resurrection shall neuer see the second death: as on the contrary, hee which neuer riseth from his owne sinnes and euil waies, shall certenly feele and endure the second death. And further, it must be knowne, that the virtue of Christs resurrectiō, & the merit of his death, are inseperably ioyned together: and therefore he that findes not the vertue of Christ to raise him to an holie & spiritual life acceptabl to god, falsly perswades himselfe of the merit of his death in the

the remission of his sinnes. Christ by rising put vnder his feete all our enemies, and led captiuitie captiue euen sinne it selfe. It is therefore a shame for vs to walke in the waies of sinne, and to make our selues slaues and captiues to it. Christ by rising from death made himselfe a principall leader & guide to eternall life. What wickednes then is it to walke in the waies of our owne heart, and not to follow this heauenly guide? The care and purpose to keepe a good conscience is a certen fruit & effect of Christs resurrection. Thus Saint Peter saith, that the effect of our baptisme is the stipulation of a good conscience by the resurrection of Christ. Where the word which I translate, Stipulation, signifies an interrogation vpon an interrogation. For the minister in the name of God demands, whether we renounce the world, the flesh, and the deuill, and take the true God for our God. And we vpon this demand, doe further in our hearts demaunde of God, whether he will vouchsafe to accept vs being wretched sinners for his seruants; and thus we make profession of our minde and desire. When Christ rose, by the vertue of his resurrection the earth trembled, and thereby this bruit creature in his kind professed his subiection and homage to Christ that rose againe. If then we beleeue, that Christ rose from death for vs, much more should our hearts tremble and we yeeld our selues in subiection to him in all spirituall obedience. Some men may say, you bid vs rise from our sinnes, as Christ rose to the glorie of his Father, whereas this is wholy Gods worke in vs, and not ours: I answer, it is so indeede: yet can we vse the outward meanes of hearing and reading; and if we haue any sparke of grace, we can aske and desire the spirit of God, that worketh this in vs. Againe, exhortations, admonitions, and such like, are meanes appointed of God, whereby he worketh in vs the things that hee requireth and commandeth. Wherefore lette vs listen to the voyce of Christ, Awake thou that sleepest, stand vp from the dead, and Christ shall giue thee life. And worldly cares must not hinder vs in this worke: for as Paul saith, they which are risen with Christ, must seeke the things that are aboue.

Ephes.5.14

Againe, here we are taught, that we may not content our selues, if we know Christ in the braine, and can speake well of him with a glibbe tongue, we must yet go further, and by all meanes labour, that wee taste and feele by experience how good & sweete a Sauiour Christ is vnto vs; that our hearts may be rooted and grounded in his loue. This is the thing which Paul aimed at: which also we must seeke by al possible meanes to attaine vnto.

To proceede; that wee may haue right knowlege of our communion with Christ in his death, two poynts are to be handled. The first is, what are the sufferings of Christ? I answer, not onely the sufferings which he indured in his owne person, but also those which are indured of his members. Thus Saul persecuting the Church, is saide to persecute Christ himselfe. And Paul saieth, that hee fulfilled the rest of the afflictions of Christ in his OWNE FLESH. And whereas the Lord saide of the people of Israel, I haue brought my sonne out of Egypt: it is applyed by Saint Mathew to Christ himselfe. Yet here it must be remembred, that if the members of Christ suffer eyther ciuill or ecclesiasticall punishments, for euill dooings; they are not the sufferings of Christ. For when S. Peter had saide, Reioyce in that you are partakers of the sufferings of Christ: he addeth further, Let no man suffer as an euill doer, opposing the one kinde of sufferings to the other. Therefore our sufferings are then to be accounted the sufferings of Christ, when they are for good cause, and for the name of Christ.

Coloss.1.24.

1.Pet.4.13.15

For the second poynt, fellowship with Christ in his death is, either within vs, or without vs. That within vs is called the mortification of the flesh, or the crucifying of the affections and the lusts thereof. The other without vs, is the mortification of the outward man by manifold afflictions: and of this Paul speakes in this place: and it may be thus described out of this text. Fellowship with Christ in his death; is nothing but a conformitie in vs to his sufferings and death. And it is a thing worthy our consideration to search wherin stands this conformity. For in ij. respectes there is no conformity betwixt our sufferings and the sufferings of Christ. For first of al, God poured forth on Christ the whole malediction of the lawe due to our sinnes: and by this means shewed vpon him iustice without mercy. Contrariewise in our afflictions God moderates his anger, & in iustice remembers mercie: becausse hee layeth no more vpon vs, than wee are able to beare. Secondly, Christs sufferings are a redemption and satisfaction to Gods iustice for our sinnes: so are not ours; bicause before

God, we stand but as priuate persons, and for this cause the sufferings of man can not satisfie for another: & there is no proportion betweene our sufferings and the glorie which shall be reuealed. And Christ saith Isay 63.3. of himselfe, I haue treadde the wine presse alone.

Now this conformity stands (as I take it) properly in the maner of suffering; and that in foure thungs. First of all, Christ suffered for a iust and righteous cause: for he
1.Pet.2.21. suffered as our redeemer, the righteous for the vnrighteous. And so must we likewise suffer for righteousnesse sake. Secondly, Christ in suffering was a mirror of all patience & meeknes. And we in our sufferings must shew the like patience. And that we be not deceiued herein, our patience must haue three properties. It must be voluntary, that is, wee must willingly and quietly renounce our owne willes, and subiect our selues in our sufferings to the will of God. Patience perforce is no patience. Againe, it must not be mercenarie, that is, we must suffer, not for by-respects, as for praise, or profit, but for the glorie of God, and that we may shew our obedience to him. Hence it appeares that the patience of the Papist, that suffers in way of satisfactiō, is no right patience. Lastly, our patience must be constant. If we endure afflictions for a brunt, and afterward begin to grudge & repine, casting off the yoke of Christ, wee faile in our patience. Further, if it be demaunded, whether the affections of griefe and sorrow may stand with patience: I aunswer, yea: for Christian religion doeth not abolish these affections, but onely moderate them, and bring them in subiection to the will of God, when we lie vnder the crosse. The third point wherein stands our conformitie with the sufferings of Christ, is Hebr.5.8. this: Christ learnd obedience by the things which hee suffered, not because he was a sinner, but because being righteous he had experience of obedience. And we likewise in our sufferings must be more carefull to take the fruite thereof, than to haue them taken away. And the fruit of them is to learne obedience thereby, specially to the commandements of faith and repentance.
Iob 42.6. When Iob was afflicted of God, not for his sins, but that hee might make a triall of his faith and patience, hee neuertheless in the end tooke an occasion thereby to renew
2 Cor.1. his old repentance. And Paul saith, that he receiued in his owne flesh the sentence of death, that he might learne by faith to trust
Hebr,12.4. in God alone. Lastly, Christs sufferings were euen to death it selfe: euen so must we resist sinne, fighting against it to the sheadding of our blood. Faith and good conscience are things more pretious than the very blood of our hearts: and therefore if neede be, we must conforme our selues to Christ, euen in the paines of death.

This is that conformitie which Paule heere speakes of, which also he magnifies as a speciall gaine. And there be many reasons thereof. For first of all this conformitie is a marke of Gods child. For if wee obediently endure afflictions, God in them, and Hebr.12.7. by them, offereth himselfe as a father vnto vs. Secondly, it is a signe that the spirit of God dwelleth in vs: as Peter saith, If yee be railed
1.Pet.4.13. vpon for the name of Christ, the spirite of glorie and of God resteth vppon you. Thirdly, the grace of God is most of all manifested in afflictions, in which God seemes most of all in mans reason to withdraw his grace.
2.Cori.12.9. Gods power is made manifest in weakenesse. Afflictions bring foorth patience: not of themRom.5.3. selues, but because then the loue of God is shead abroad in our heartes. Hope of eternall life sheweth it selfe most in the patient bearing of afflictions. In peace & ease naturall life raignes. Contrariwise in our suffrings naturall life decayes, and the spirituall life of Christ apparantly sheweth it selfe. Lastly, this conformity with Christ, is the right and beaten way to eternal life. By Acts 14. many tribulations we must enter into the King-
1.Tim.2.12. dome of heauen. That wee may raigne and liue with Christ, wee must first die with him. The estate of humiliation is the way of exaltation and glorie, first in him, and then in vs.

The vse of this doctrine followes. Here we see what for this life is the condition of all true beleeuers: namely, that after they are made partakers of Christ and his benefits, by the vertue of his resurrection, they must also be made conformable to his death. The commandement of our Sauior Christ to them that will be his Disciples, Luke 9.23. is, To denie themselues, and to take vppe their owne crosses euery day. And there be three weightie causes, why God will haue it so. The one, that he may correct sinnes past: the other, that hee may preuent sinnes to come: the third, that he may prooue what is in our hearts. Secondly, we learne by this which hath bin said, to comfort our selues in our sufferings. For in them Christ & we are partners, and he vouchsafes to make vs his fellowes. Hence it followes, that all our afflictions are well knowne to Christ, and that that they are layd on vs with his consent: and for this cause wee shoulde frame our selues to beare them with all meekenesse. And hence againe we learne, that hee, being our partner, wil help vs to beare them, either by moderating the weight of thē, or by ending them for our good. Lastly, here we learn that our afflictiōs are either blessings or benefits: and such may we discern them to be, though not by the light of reason, yet by the eie of faith: because they are meanes to make vs conformable to our head Christ Iesus. Benefits of God are of two sorts, positiue, and priuatiue. Positiue, whereby God bestowes something on vs. Priuatiue, wherby God takes away a blessing, and couertly giues another. Benefits of this kind be afflictions. Of the twaine, these are the rifer for the time of this life: & the other for the life to come. And therfore whil we liue in this world, our duty is with Paul to labour to attaine to this conformitie with the sufferings of Christ, when vpon any occasion wee shall be afflicted: for then shall wee be fashioned like vnto him, and reape much comfort thereby.

Thus much of the second gaine: nowe followes the third in these words, [If by any meanes I may attaine to the resurrection of the dead.] The word [resurrection] here signifies the reward of eternall life; the antecedent being put for the consequent. For to rise againe of it self is no gaine, considering it is common both to good and bad, but eternall life that followeth is the rewarde. And the forme of speech, [if by any meanes] dooth not signifie or imply any doubting in Paul of his owne resurrection to life: for he was perswaded that nothing should seperate him from Christ: and it is an article of our and Pauls faith, to beleeue the resurrection of the body to eternall life. Wherfore it signifies properly a difficulty to obtaine the gaine desired: and an earnest affection in Paul to obtaine the same. And when hee saieth, [By any meanes] wee must know that there be three wayes or meanes to come to eternall life. One is by peaceable life and death: th'other is by a life lade with many afflictions: the third is by a violent, cruell, and bloody end. And Paules minde and desire is, to obtaine the crowne of eternall glorie by any of these wayes: and if not by the first or second, yet by the third.

In these wordes foure things are to bee considered. The first is the gaine it selfe, & that is, the rewarde of eternall glorie. And that we may the more with Paul be stirred vp to a desire thereof, I will stand a while to declare the excellencie and the conditions of it. It is nothing else but a certaine estate of life, in which all the promises of God are in and by Christ accomplished vnto vs in heauen. And it wil the better be conceiued by the aunswering of three questions: What shall cease in this estate? What we shall haue? What we shall doe?

For the first, seauen things shall cease. The first is the execution of the Mediatorship of Christ, or of the offices of a king, priest, prophet. Thus much teacheth Paul, when he saieth, that Christ in the last day must giue vppe his kingdome to his father. And though the execution shall then cease: yet nothing shall be wanting to them that beleeue: because then shal be the ful and eternall fruition of all the benefits of our redemption. Secondly, then shal cease al callings in familie, church, & commonwealth: because Christ shall then put downe all power, rule, and authoritie. In this blessed estate, there shall not be magistrate and people, maister and seruaunt, husband and wife, parents and children, pastor and people: but all such outward distinctions of persons shal cease, and we shal be as the angels of God. Thirdly all vertues, that pertaine to vs, as we are pilgrimes here vpon earth, shall haue an end, as faith, hope, patience, because the things beleeued and hoped for shall then be obtained. Withal, that part of inuocation called Petition, shall cease, as also the preaching and hearing of the word and the vse of the sacraments. The fourth thing that shal cease, is original sinne with the fruits thereof: because no vncleane thing may enter into the heauenly Hierusalem. Fiftly, then shall cease all miseries, and sorrowes, all infirmities of bodie and minde: for then all defects of eies, armes, and legs, shall be restored. The sixt thing that shall cease is naturall life with the meanes thereof, as meat, drinke, clothing, physicke, recreation. For then our bodies shal be spirituall, that is, immediatly and eternally preserued by the operation of the spirit of God, as nowe the bodie of Christ is in heauen. The last thing to be abolished is the vanitie of the creatures, specially of heauen and earth: which in the last iudgement shalbe restored to their former excellencie.

The second question is, what we shall haue and inioy in this estate? I answer, three things. The first is, immediate and eternall fellowship with God the Father, Sonne, and holy-Ghost. For in this happie estate the tabernacle of God shall be with men, as S. Iohn saith: and God shall be all things that heart can wish to all the Elect. Reuel.21.5.

Augustine saith notably, There shall be exceeding peace in vs, and among vs, and with God himselfe. Because we shall see him and inioy him alwayes and euery where. Therefore blessed shall that life be, for the thing which we shall enioy: for wee shall enioy God himselfe. For the manner of enioying him: for wee shall enioy him by himselfe, all other meanes ceasing. For the measure of enioying him: for wee shall fully enioy him. For the time: for wee shall eternally enioy him. For the certaintie, whereby wee shall knowe that it shall be so. For the place: for we shall enioy him in heauen. Lastly, for the companions ioyned with vs: for they be the Elect. Ser. de temp. 148. From this fruition of God shall arise endlesse and vnspeakable ioy Psa. 16 11. In thy presence is fulnesse of ioy, at thy right hand are pleasures for euermore. In the transfiguration of Christ, which was but a shadow of eternall glorie, Peter was rauished with ioy and delight: the ioy therfore that shall be in the kingdome of heauen, must needes be vnspeakable. The second thing which shall be enioyed, is glorie both in minde and bodie. In minde, because wee shall then be partakers of the Diuine, not essence (for then we should be deified) but nature, that is, diuine vertues and qualities, more excellent then those which God bestowed on Adam, thogh of the same kind. The third thing is, Dominion and lordship ouer heauen and earth; which lordship once lost by Adam, shall then fully be restored. He that ouercommeth shall possesse all things. Reuel.21.7. Phil.3.21.

The third question is, what we shal do? I answer briefly, keep an eternall Sabboth in praising of God, and giuing thanks vnto him. And thus by the consideration of these things, we may take a taste of the excellencie of this third and last gaine.

The second point here to be considered, is, the difficultie of obtaining this desired gaine of eternall life. And the reason is plaine. For the way to eternall life is full of impediments, which I reduce to iiij. heads. First of all in this way wee are to fight, not with flesh and blood, but with principalities and powers in spiritual things, seeking the destruction of our soules. Secondly, there be within vs innumerable lustes that compasse vs round about, presse vs down, and draw vs away to the broad way of destruction. Thirdly, this way lies full of offences, partly in doctrines, partly in euill examples; all tending to this end, either to make vs fall, or to goe out of the waie. Lastly, it is beset with manifold and diuers tribulations, from the beginning euen to the end. Hence we learne, that wee must giue all diligence that we may attain to the reward of glorie: and therefore wee must struggle, striue, and wrestle to enter in at the streight gate. The principal gaine, and the hardnes to obtain it, requires our principall studie and labour. Therefore they deale wickedly that vse no meanes, but (as they say) leaue all to God, thinking it the easiest matter in the worlde, to winne the kingdom of heauen. The like is their fault, that professe religion in a slacke and negligent maner, being neither hote nor colde.

The third point, is Pauls minde and desire of eternall life. If it be said, that wicked men haue the like desire, as for example Balaam: I answer, in Paul there was an endeuour aunswerable to his desire, as appeares Act.24.16. where he saieth, that he waited for the resurrection of the iust and vniust: and that in the meane season he laboured to keepe a good conscience before God and men: now this desire in the vngodly is barren, and yeelds not his fruit. Againe, Paul being iustified, still desires to attaine to full fellowship with Christ, and to conformitie with him in glorie. The like desire, with the like indeauour, shoulde be in all vs.

The last poynt, is Paules courage and fortitude. He is content to indure any kind of death, yea cruell death, so he may obtain this third and last gaine. And thus it is verified, which hee saieth, that God had giuen him the spirite, not of fearefulnesse, but of courage. 2.Tim.1.7.

Like was the courage of Moses, who was content to indure afflictions with the people of God, that hee might winne the recompence of reward. Like was the courage of the Martires, that were racked and would not be deliuered, that they might obtaine a better resurrection. Wee likewise walking in the way to eternall life, must take the like courage vnto vs in all daungers. For this cause we must pray vnto God, to giue vs the spirite of courage: and wee must alwayes attend vppon the calling and commaundement of God, making it the stay & foundation of our courage: and wee must yet further stay our selues on the promise Hebr.11.26. Verse 33.

of Gods presence and protection, so long as we obey him. If it be alleadged, that we are by nature fearfull in dangers, and therfore vncapable of courage: I answer, there is a threefold feare. The first is, feare of nature; when mans nature feares, flies, and eschews that which is hurtfull vnto it. This feare was in Christ, whose soule was heauy vnto death, who also feared the cursed death which he indured. And therfore this feare of it selfe is no sinne, and it may stand with true fortitude. The second feare is that which riseth of the corruption of nature, when a man feares without cause, or without measure. Without cause, as when the disciples feared Christ walking vppon the sea: or when they feared drowning, Christ lying asleepe in the shippe. Without measure, as when men distrusting god, neglect their callings in time of danger, & the duety of inuocation, flying to vnlawfull meanes of deliuerance. Now this second feare is an ennemie vnto all true courage. The third feare is, when perills and death are indeede feared: but yet feare is ordered by faith in the mercie and prouidence of God, by hope, by inuocation; and it is ioyned with obedience to God in the time of daunger. This is a proceeding of grace, and it may well stand with courage, & it serues to order the two former feares, the one of nature, the other of distrust.

THE IDOLATRIE OF THE last times. And an Instruction

touching Religious, or Divine worship.

Printed by IOHN LEGAT, Printer to the Vniuersitie of CAMBRIDGE. 1605.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE, Lord Henrie Earle of Kent, Lord of Hasting, Wels-ford, and Ruthyn.

RIght Honourable, &c. great hath bin the mercie of God to this our English nation, in that beside peace and protection, he hath bestowed on vs the Treasure of his Gospel, now more then fourtie yeares, and that vnder the gouernment of a most gratious Queene, le is a benefit vnspeakeable: and England (as I thinke) neuer had the like before.

For this great mercie we owe to God all thankefulnes, that heart can thinke or tongue can speake. Our thankefulnes must shew it selfe in the fruit of obedience to the Gospel. And obedience is to turne euen vnto God from euery euill way, to beleeue in Christ, and to walke in newnes of good life.

But, alas in respect of the greatest number, we are a nation very vnthankefull: yeelding small obedience to the Gospel of life. If the things which haue beene done in England, had beene done in Barbarie, or Turkie, or America, it may be they would haue repented in sackcloath and ashes, and haue turned more earnestly vnto God then we haue done. And for this cause we haue deserued, that God should take away his Gospel from vs, and giue it to a nation that will bring forth the fruits thereof. For the preuenting of this euill which we haue deserued, it stands vs in hand to repent of our vnthankefulnes, to imbrace the Gospel more then we haue done, and to walke worthie of it in holines of life.

For the furthering of this good worke, I haue penned this small treatise of Idols and the true worship of God. For this is the right practise of the Gospel, to put from vs all manner of idols, and to sanctifie God in our hearts, that is, to serue him in minde & spirit, namely with a pure heart, a good conscience, and a faith vnfained.

And hauing penned this Treatise, I now present it to your Honour, and presume to publish it in your name. First, because God hath made you honourable, not onely by ciuill dignitie, but also by an vnfained loue and obedience to the Gospel of Christ. Againe my desire is, to giue some testimonie of a thankefull minde for fauour vndeserued. Thus I take my leaue, praying God to establish the heart of your Honour, and all his people, without blame in holines before him, euen our Father, against the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ with all the Saints.

Your H. in all dutie to command, W. Perkins.

To the Reader:

IF any demaund, wherefore I haue penned, and am allowed to publiſh a Treatiſe of Idolatrie, now in the light of the Goſpel, and in a Church, where Idolatrie is condemned to the pitte of hell: let them vnderſtand that I doe it for ſundry cauſes.

The firſt is, to declare and conuince the Church of Rome of manifeſt Idolatrie: and conſequently, to ſhew that they are deceiued, who thinke that Proteſtants and Papiſts differ not in the ſubſtance of religion, but in circumſtances.

The ſecond is, to aduertiſe our Recuſants (if they wil vouchſafe to reade and conſider what I haue ſaide) that they ought to be Recuſants to the Church of Rome; becauſe ſhe is a maintainer and a worſhipper of Idolles.

The third is, to ſtirre vp and kindle in the mindes of our country-men a further deteſtation and loathing of the Romiſh religion. For if it had no other fault or defect, the very crime of Idolatrie vnexcuſable, wherewith it is iuſtly charged, is a ſufficient inducement to mooue all men that regarde their owne ſaluation, to an vnfained loathing of it.

The laſt is, to informe the ignorant multitude touching the true worſhippe of God. For the remainders of Poperie yet ſticke in the minds of many of them, and they think, that to ſerue God, is nothing elſe but to deale truely with men, and to babble a fewe wordes morning and euening, at home, or in the Church, though there be no vnderſtanding.

THe intent and ſcope of the Apoſtle in this Epiſtle is to ſette downe markes and tokens, wheereby menne may know whether they be the children of GOD, or no. Hauing performed this from the beginning of the epiſtle to the end therof, toward the end of this chapter in the 18. verſe, he anſwers a ſecret obiection, which may be framed on this maner. Hee that is the child of God may fall from God, commit a ſinne vnto death, and ſo conſequently looſe his aſſurance. Therefore it ſeemes, that there is no comfort by the aſſuraunce of our adoption, but for the time preſent. To this the Apoſtle anſwers negatiuely in the 18,19,20. verſes: the effect of the anſwer is, That he which is borne of God ſo preſerues himſelfe by grace, that he cannot be drawne by Sathan to commit the ſinne that is to death. And in this laſt verſe of this chapter, hee ſettes downe a rule how men ſhould preſerue themſelues, that they fall not into this ſinne. Babes, keepe your ſelues from Idols: that is, hold faſt the true and ſpirituall worſhip of God: and for this cauſe auoide all things that may withdraw your hearts from God, eſpecially take heede of Idolls.

In this rule I conſider twoo thinges: a commandement and a reaſon. The commaundement, Keepe your ſelues from Idolls. The reaſon is infolded in the word Babes. That the right meaning of the commaundement may appeare the better, I wil ſtand a while to ſhew: firſt, what is meant by Idolles, and ſecondly, how wee are to keep our ſelues from them. The worde Idoll generally and properly ſignifies as much as Image, that is, the reſemblance of any thing either good or badde. For that which Image is in Latin, Idol is in Greek. Tertullian ſaith, that Idoll ſignifies a forme or litle forme: and the diſtinction of Idoll and Image was not obſerued of the a Latin interpreter. Yet by more narrow and more vſuall ſignification, the word Idol is put for any ſuch image as is erected to repreſent either falſe or true God. That idols are images of falſe gods, all men graunt; but that they are images alſo of the true God, there is the queſtion. But I make it manifeſt thus. The golden calfe of the Iſraelits, was an idol, as it is called by Saint Steuen, Act. 7.41. and it was an image of Iehoua. For after the calfe was once framed, Aaron proclaimed a day of ſolemnitie, and ſaith, To morrowe ſhall be the holye day of Iehoua, Exod. 32.5. That which the Iſraelites did in this caſe was no doubt the ſame which they had often ſeene the Egyptians doe before them. Now the Egyptians repreſented and worſhipped God in the formes of wilde and tame beaſts, as b Strabo the Geographer plainely ſaith. Images in vſe of religion, erected by the wiſeſt of the heathen, were nothing but Idols: and many of them verely were images of the true God, as Paul teſtifieth, when he ſaith, Rom. 1.23. they turned the glorie of the incorruptible God, to the ſimilitude of an image of a corruptible man, and of birds, &c. Thirdly, idolles often ſignifie falſe gods themſelues, 1.Chron. 16.26. The gods of the people are vaine thinges, or, Idolles. Thus Rahell is ſaide to ſteale the Idolles, or the gods of her father. And Paul, 1.Corinth. 8.4. makes an oppoſition betweene an Idoll and the true God. Yet are not falſe gods idolles properly ſo tearmed, but by a metaphor. Becauſe as images made in the way of Religion, drawe the heart from the true God: euen ſo doe falſe gods. Vpon this reſemblance are falſe gods truely called idols. Thus then, an idol is any thing ſet vp to be worſhiped, either in the roome of God, or as God. In the roome of God, as prophane images: as God, namely falſe gods.

The generall propertie of idoles, is, that they are NOTHING in the worlde, as Paul ſaith, 1.Cor. 8.4. and they are ſo tearmed becauſe they haue nothing in them of the diuinitie or Godhead, whether we regard the nature or the efficacie thereof. And this appeares by Pauls reaſon, An idol, ſaith he, is nothing in the worlde: because vnto vs there is but one God. Furthermore, it is nothing in respect of representation: for an idoll sometime is nothing at all: sometime it representeth as God, that which is meerely nothing: somtime it represents the true God, otherwise than he is; and in this respect also it represents nothing.

The kindes and sorts of idols are likewise to be considered, specially such as haue beene erected since the dayes of the Apostle. For there is no question, but hee did foresee that the Apostolicall religion should be corrupted by Idolatrie, and that made him say; Babes, keepe your selues from Idolls. That the diuers kinds of idols may be knowne, wee must consider how many wayes a man may erect an idoll to himselfe. And this may be doone three wayes. The first is, if God be otherwise conceiued, than hee hath manifested and reuealed himselfe in his owne word. God is to be conceiued as hee reueales himselfe vnto vs, and no otherwise: if otherwise, God is not conceiued, but a fiction or idoll of the braine. Augustine vpon the wordes of Iosua, Take away the strange gods from among you, saith on this manner: The holie Prophet Iosua sawe in their heartes, thoughts of God not beseeming God, and hee wils them to be taken away. For whosoeuer conceiueth God to be such an one, as hee is not indeede, carries in minde a strange and false god. Two famous examples we haue in this kinde. The first is, when the true God is conceiued out of the father, sonne, and holie-Ghost; or out of Christ our Redeemer God and man. For when the mind abstracts the godhead from the father, sonne, and holie-Ghost, God is transformed into an Idoll. The Ephesians before their conuersion, woorshipped God the maker of heauen & earth and so did the Galatians. And yet neuertheless Paule saieth of the first, that they were without God, Ephesians chap. 2. 12. and of the second, that they worshipped them that were not gods by nature, Galat. 4. 8. becaus they worshipped God out of Christ: for hee that denies the Sonne, hath not the Father. And the vnitie of the Godhead is to bee adored in the Trinitie of persons. Heere then beholde the Idol-god of the greatest Nations of all the world; of Turkes, of Iewes; yea of many that pretend Christianitie, who vpon ignorance worship nothing but an Absolute God, that is, God absolutely considered, without any relation to Father, Christ, or holy Spirit. Yea the multitude in al places set vp vnto themselues, a god that is all mercie, and no iustice: because they content themselues with the light of blind nature, and frame God according to their owne desires and affections. And by this meanes they erect vnto themselues Idolles within their owne hearts, and committe a most secret and spirituall idolatrie, which the world cannot discerne.

1. Iohn 2. 23.

The second example followeth, and that is, Christ Iesus falsly and farre otherwise conceiued then he hath reuealed him self in the word. For hee in one person is perfect God and perfect man: our only redeemer al-sufficient in himselfe, and therefore perfect king, priest, prophet, without either partner or fellow in the woorke of mans saluation. And hee which otherwise conceiueth of him, turnes him into an idoll or forged christ. This doth that great and famous Italian Diana, I meane the religion that stands in force by the late coun cell of Trent. For it presenteth vnto vs Christ indeede, but yet a poore disguised and deformed christ. For it spoileth him of his manhoode, and degrades him of his offices. He is spoiled of his manhood by the presence in the sacrament: for if the bread be verily transubstantiated into the body of Christ, this verie bodie must needes be made, not onely of the substaunce of the virgine, but also of the substaunce of bread: nay, it is made a verie monstrous bodie. For beeing in his full quantitie and dimentions, and so remayning, it is supposed to bee included and contayned in the quantitie of a small round cake: as if a solide body of many foote could be contained in a solide bodie of twoo or three inches. Againe, if Christ be bodily in the bread, and in the hand of the receiuers, remission is to bee asked of God, from that which wee holde in our hands, and receiue with our mouth. For remission of sinnes must be asked and looked for at Gods handes for Christes sake, specially in the vse of the Lordes Supper. Communicants therfore must thus thinke with themselues, and speake vnto God; I pray thee, O heauenly Father, be merciful vnto me for this thine owne sonne, whom beeing nowe bodily present, I holde in this mine owne hand, and receiue with my mouth. And this is the oblation of the Popish Masse, in which the Priest imagins that hee holdeth and carrieth Christ bodily in his handes, and there offereth him-him to his father, that he may obtaine remiſsion of ſins for himſelfe and others, and that for his ſake whome hee holds in his hands. And this, no doubt, is horrible and deteſtable idolatrie: and it were better to endure many deaths, then ſo much as once to be a doer in it. For we are taught by the word of God, to waite for our ſaluation by Chriſt made man, and now appearing at the right hand of his father in heauen, and not for him whome we hold and carrie in our hands. Touching his offices the ſaid religiõ degrades him of his prieſthoode by fiue things. The firſt is, the daily offering of Chriſt in the maſſe, and that in reall manner, and alſo for the ſinnes of the quicke and the dead. For by this meanes, the ſacrifice vpon the croſſe is either continued as a thing but begunne & after to be perfected, or it is repeated. If continued, it was not then accompliſht on the croſſe. If repeated, thẽ alſo it is imperfect: if imperfect, then no ſacrifice of a Redeemer. The ſecond is the doctrine of humane ſatisfactiõ. For if our ſuffrings conſidered as ſatisfaction for the temporall puniſhment of our ſinnes, muſt concurre in the worke of our redemption with his ſatisfaction for the fault and the eternall puniſhment of the ſame ſinnes, then is this ſatisfaction of his in very deed imperfect: becauſe it receiues an addition and ſupplement from ours. And if I ſatisfie for my ſelfe to my creditour, my friend dooth not make full ſatisfaction for me: neyther is it requiſite. And ſo farre foorth as I ſatisfie for my ſelfe, I redeeme my ſelfe. The third is the doctrine of the merit of works, which makes void the work of redemption wrought by Chriſt. For if Chriſt merited by his death and paſsion, that wee might merite by our workes eternall life: then is not Chriſt a full and perfect Sauiour, but onely the principall cauſe of our ſaluation; or rather an inſtrument of God to make vs our owne Sauiors. The fourth is the doctrine of veniall ſinne: for if ſome, yea, many ſinnes be veniall in their owne nature, ſo as we our ſelues may ſatisfie for them, it was not needefull that Chriſt ſhuld die, & by his death redeem vs from all ſins. The fift is the doctrine of the Interceſsion of Saints, who in Romiſh doctrine make interceſsion not only by requeſting, but alſo by meriting; a yea by commanding. For thus the virgine Marie doth; More then which Chriſt himſelfe can not do.

In the reformed Maſſe-booke there is aſcribed to the interceſsion of Saints. Firſt Protection, b Let bleſſed Sabbas be making interceſsion for vs, protect vs, O Lord. Againe, by c thy Apoſtles keepe vs with thy continuall protection. Second, Appeaſement. d Being appeaſed by the interceſsion of thy Saints, graunt O Lord we pray thee, &c. Againe, Let not the prayer of Saint Chryſoſtome be wanting vnto vs, which may cauſe our gifts to be accepted and obtaine thy pardon for vs. Againe, by the prayer of Mathias make vs to be cleanſed of our ſinnes and defended. Third, Confidence, e by reſting on their ſuffrages. What can be ſaid more of the interceſsion of Chriſt? I know they adde in the end, per Dominum, but what is that to the purpoſe? If we giue any poynt of ſupremacie to a ſubiect, it is treaſon; though otherwiſe in termes wee magnifie the ſoueraignty of the Prince. Againe the ſame Catholike religion degrades him of his kingly office, by giuing vnto the Pope two royalities of the kingdome of Chriſt: One is a power to giue pardon of ſinnes vnto men, both fully & f properly, which none can doe but God. The other is to make lawes truly binding the conſciences of all men in the Catholike church vppon earth, and that as truely as g the lawes of God: whereas there is but one Law-giuer that can ſaue and deſtroy the ſoule. Laſtly, it degrades Chriſt of his prophetical office. Firſt, bicauſe it giues vnto the Pope a power ſupream & infallible to determine in his conſiſtorie and in generall councells of all controuerſies in religion, whether concerning faith or maners; whereas this power indeede is inſeperably annexed to the perſon of chriſt, who in & by his written word determines of all matters pertaining to ſaluation, and that infallibly and ſufficiently to the contentation of an humble minde, and to the ſetling of any conſcience. Secondly, it addes & takes away, it changes and reuerſes the doctrine Chriſt hath left vnto his church, ſpecially in the bookes of the new teſtament by an heap of humane traditions, ſpecially by the law of ſingle life, & the communion in one kind, &c.

It may happily be alleadged, that the Religion pretended to be Catholike, holdeth the Vnitie of the Godhead, the Trinitie of perſons, the diſtinction of natures in Chriſt, the perſonall vnion, the offices of the Mediator, as we doe. I anſwer, that in word it doth, but indeede by infallible conſequence of doctrine it dooth aboliſh

Chriſt, as I haue ſhewed. Papiſts in word confeſſe him to be Our Lord, but with this condition, that the Seruant of Seruants may alter and change his precepts, whoſe power (they ſay) is of that greatneſſe that hee may be iudged of none, and that hee can open or ſhutte heauen to whome hee pleaſe. They confeſſe him to be Ieſus Our Sauiour; yet a Sauiour in vs, in that hee giues vs this grace, that by our owne merites wee may be our owne Sauiours; borrowing alſo (if neede be) a ſupplie from Martyres and the reſt of the Saintes. They confeſſe him to be crucified, dead, and buried for vs: yet with this condition, that the fault being pardoned, wee our ſelues muſt ſatisfie for ſome parte of the puniſhment, either in this world, or in Purgatorie. They confeſſe, that hee ſittes at the right hand of God the Father, to bee vnto him the Mediatour of interceſsion for vs: and yet withall, they holde that his mother is the Queene of heauen, hauing authoritie to controll and commaunde her ſonne. What a Chriſt is he, that in ſundry actions pertaining to our redemption hath partners or fellowes ioyned with him? For this cauſe wee reiect this religion, becauſe it turnes our onely and perfect Redeemer into a faigned chriſt of mannes deuiſing. It may be further ſaide, that ſome falſe opinions conceiued of Chriſt, doe not ſtrait way turne him into an Idoll. I aunſwere with Hierome: Euen to this daie an Idoll is ſette vppe in the houſe of God, or in the heartes and ſoules of beleeuers when a new doctrine is deuiſed. Againe, a falſe opinion, is an Idoll of falſhoode.

Hieron. in Ierem. ca. 31 & Dan. 3.

The ſecond way of erecting an Idoll is, when God is worſhipped otherwiſe, and by other meanes, than hee hath reuealed in the word. For when men ſet vp a deuiſed worſhippe, they ſet vp alſo a deuiſed God. Auguſtine ſaieth of the Gentiles, that they refuſed to worſhippe the God of the Hebrewes, Becauſe, if their pleaſures were to worſhippe him in any other ſorte than he hadde appoynted, they ſhould not indeede worſhippe him, but that which they had faigned. The Samaritans worſhipped the God of Abraham, Iſaac, Iacob: and they waited for the comming of the Meſsias: and yet Chriſt ſaieth of them, Yee worſhippe ye know not what: becauſe they worſhippe the true God by a worſhippe deuiſed of olde, and ſet vppe by men. The Lorde ſaieth to the Iſraelites, yee ſhall call me no more MY BAAL: whereby hee ſignifieth, that becauſe the Iewes didde ſometime worſhippe God in the ſame manner, with the ſame images, rites, and names, whereby the heathen worſhipped the falſe god Baal, therefore they made him indeede to be euen as the Idol Baal. And this I take to be the right meaning of the former words; becauſe the wordes following are: For I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth: verſe 17. When the Iewes in Ieremie chapter 2. verſe 23. denie that they worſhipped Baalim, there can be no reaſon (I ſuppoſe) of their deniall, but this, that they intended to worſhippe God in the Idols of Baal. Againe, Saint Iohn ſaith in epiſt. 1. ſecond chapter, and the foure and twentieth verſe; If that which ye haue heard from the beginning remayne in you, yee alſo ſhall continue in the Father and the Sonne. Hence it followes, that they which abide not in the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, but ſet vp ſome other forme of worſhipping God, abide not in the Sonne and the Father. Gods worſhip muſt bee according to his nature, heauenly, diuine, and ſpirituall; but all deuiſed worſhippe is according to the nature and diſpoſition of the deuiſer, fooliſh, carnall, vaine: as Chriſt ſaith, Math. 15. 9. In vaine doe they worſhip me, teaching for precepts the commaundements of men. And according to this worſhippe is the God that is worſhipped. Therefore when God is worſhipped, not according to his owne wil, but according to the pleaſure and will of man, the true God is not worſhipped, but a god of mans inuention is ſet vp. One notable example wee haue in this kinde. When God is either repreſented or worſhipped in any Image of mans deuiſing, there is preſently made a double Idoll, the one is the Image repreſenting: the other is GOD repreſented, who is by this meanes turned into an Idoll.

Oſe 2. 16. with Deut. 12. 4.

That the Image made of vs to reſemble and repreſent God, is an idol, I prooue it thus. The image which Micha erected was a flatte Idol: for it is called Teraphim, which all commonly tranſlate, Idolls. And it was an image of Iehouah. For before it was made, the ſiluer where- Verſe 3 of it was made, was dedicated to God: and after it was made, when ſhee had got a prieſt into her houſe, to offer ſacrifice vnto it, ſhee ſaide; Nowe I knowe that Ie- Verſe 13 houah will be good vnto mee. The two golden calues erected in Dan and Bethel by Ieroboam, were idolles in the iudgement of all Iud. 17.5

all men; yet were they nothing else but Images to represent the true God of Israel.
2.King.17.28 For the worship of them, is called the feare of Iehouah.
2.King.10.31 Iehu neuer departed from the sinne of Ieroboam, and therefore he was iustlede a patrone and defender of the golden calues: neuertheless it was not his minde and meaning to make gods of them, but to worship the Lord of hosts in them and by them. For when hee was about to destroy the Images and priests of Baal, he said, Come see how zealous I will be for the Lord of hosts. Grauen images and likenesses mentioned in the second commaundement, are plaine Idols; and they are images, not onely of false gods, but of the true God. For Moses expounding this commaundement, saith thus,
Deut.4.16. Take heede to your selues, that ye corrupt not your selues and make you a grauen Image or representation of anye figure: and his reason is,
Verse 15. for yee saw no image in the day the Lord spake vnto you in Horeb out of the middest of the fire that is, ye saw no image of the true God, but onely heard his voice: therefore ye shall make no image, namely of God, to represent him, or his presence. Notable is the testimonie of Strabo for the proofe of this point: his words are to this effect.
Geographiæ l.16. de Syria. Moses ( saith he*) did affirme and teach, that the Egyptians did not iudge aright, who represented God in the shapes of wild and tame beasts: nor the Lybians and the Greekes, who figured God in the formes of men. For God is that thing alone which containes vs, and the earth, and the sea, which we call heauen, and the world, and the nature of all things that are: the image of whome, who in his right wits dare presume to make like to any of the things that are about vs? But we must put away all making of Images, and set vp a temple and secret place beseeming him, and worship him without any forme.* A little after he addes of his owne, that the Iewes are the true worshippers of God. Origen saith against Celsus; that angels may not be adored, and that religion keepes Iewes and Christians from worshipping of God in temples, altars, Images; because the Law saith; There shall be no other gods vnto thee before my face: and thou shalt not make to thy selfe any grauen Image. Hence it folowes, that the framing or erecting of an image, with an intent to represent or worshippe God thereby, is the erecting of an Idoll, though it be not further applyed to idolatrous vse. It may be obiected, that we may lawfully make an Image of Christ, & that this image is no Idol. I answer: it is not vnlawfull to make or to haue the Image of Christ, twoo caueats beeing remembred. The first, that this Image be onely of the manhood: the second, that it be out of vse of religion. For if otherwise it be made to represent whole Christ, God and man: or, if it be vsed as an instrument or a signe in which, and before which, men worshippe Christ himself, it is by the former doctrine a flat Idol. Again, friends of Images pleade on this manner: Though wee may not set vp what Images wee will vnto God, yet may we represent him in such formes and shapes, in which hee hath vsed to manifest himselfe vnto men; as in the forme of a man, or in the forme of a doue, &c. I answer first of all, that the formes in which the Sonne and holie-Ghost haue appeared, were not their Images, but onely sensible signes and pledges of their presence: and signes not for euer, but onely for the present time, when they appeared: and therefore neyther signes nor images of Gods presence now. Hence it followes, that when the historie of the Bible is painted or pictured, as in some of our Bibles it is, there are no images of God described; but onely such visible appearances as (sometime) were signes of the presence of God, are expressed. 1 Againe, I answer 2 that the commaundement of God dooth generally forbidde images, not excepting the very shapes in which God himselfe hath heretofore testified his presence. And where the prohibition of God is against vs, it is in vaine to deuise shifts or excuses. For there is no exception against Gods commandement. Thirdly, it is a falshood 3 for vs to thinke that wee may lawfully doe whatsoeuer God doth. And therefore wee must warily reason from the example of God, when wee would defend our owne doings. Fourthly, God will not 4 be so adored and worshiped as idols are worshipped. Thou shalt not doe thus vnto the Lorde thy God. Fiftly, God hath power 5 to represent himselfe in what signes hee will; and so hath not any creature; neyther hath he giuen vs any power to represent him in this or that forme. Sixthly, 6 God can at his pleasure auoyde and cutte off all occasion of idolatrie, when hee represents himselfe in visible formes; so can not men doe, as common experience declares. Therefore in so doing they tempt God, and lay open themselues to the danger of Idolatrie. Lastly, images which men 7 ſet vp vnto God, aboliſh and deface his Maieſtie, breede abſurd opinions of God in the mindes of men, and doe as little beſeeme his endleſſe glorie, as a picture of an Ape, or of a foole dooth the excellencie of an Emperour. Thirdly, it is obiected that the Scriptures doe not ſimply condempne religious images, but onely becauſe Iewes and Gentiles eſteemed and helde them for their gods: and that this opinion of theirs is confuted by Paul, when hee ſaith, Acts 19.26 They are not Gods which are made with hands. I anſwer againe, it was not the opinion eyther of the Iewes, or of the wiſeſt of the Gentiles, that grauen or carued images were their gods: the very light of nature didde teach them the contrarie. That they made a diſtinction betweene their gods and the Images thereof, it appeares by the very diſtinction of the firſt and ſecond commaundement. In the firſt are forbidden the falſe or ſtrange gods themſelues: in the ſecond are condemned the Images, which are either of the true Iehoua, or falſe gods. And if images be onely forbidden, becauſe they are reputed and worſhipped for gods, then the firſt and ſecond commaundements o of antient time diſtinguiſhed, ſhall be indeede but one and the ſame commaundement. Images (I grant) are called often in Scripture gods, but for two other cauſes. Firſt, becauſe in mans intention they haue relation to God, and repreſent him. And therefore by a metonymie they borrowe his name; as a painted man is called a man, or, as he that plaies the part of a king, is called a king. Secondly, they are called gods, becauſe men, though not in opinion and iudgement, yet in truth made them their gods, in that they gaue religious worſhip vnto them. And for this end dooth Paule ſay, they are not Gods which are made with hands, to draw the Epheſians by conſequent of reaſon from dooing of any worſhippe to the image of Diana.

o Ioſeph. antiqu. l. 3. c 4. Origen. in Exod. homi. 8. Ambroſ. & Hiero. in Eph. 6. v. 1. Athan. in Synopſi.

The ſecond poynt to bee confirmed, is, that God beeing eyther repreſented or worſhipped, in, at, or before an image, is preſently transformed into an Idoll. Habakuk ſaith, that Images are doctours of lies. Becauſe ſo ſoone as God is repreſented in an Image, he is depriued of his glorie, and changed into a bodily, viſible, circumſcribed, and finite Maieſtie. When the Iewes intended to worſhippe God in the golden calfe, the Pſalmiſt ſaieth, they turned God Pſa. 106.20 into the likeneſſe of a beaſt that eateth graſſe.

Hab. 2. 18

Secondly, we may not binde the preſence of God, the operation of his ſpirite, and his hearing of vs to any thing, to which God hath not bound himſelfe by worde of commaundement, or promiſe, or both. Now God hath not bound himſelfe by any word to be preſent at images, and to heare vs when we call vpon him, at them, or before them. Hence it followes, that when men preſent themſelues before Images, there to worſhippe God, they worſhippe not God, but either a fained god, that can and will be preſent and heare at images, or the verie Images themſelues. For God is not worſhipped of vs, but when it is his wil to accept our worſhippe: and it is not his wil to accept our worſhip, but when it is according to his will. Patrons of images wil here profeſſe and proteſt, that they intend not to worſhip the images themſelues properly, or any falſe god, but only the true God maker of heauen and earth. I anſwer firſt of all, that this was the very excuſe of the wiſer ſort amõg the heathen (as afterwards ſhall appeare:) and it could not excuſe them from Idolatrie. Secondly I anſwer, that mans intention makes not Gods worſhip, but Gods will. And it is not his will to accept the worſhip that is done to him in images: and therefore hee indeede is not worſhipped, but ſomething elſe in his roome. It was the reall intention of the Iſraelites (as I haue ſhewed) to worſhip the God of their forefathers in the golden calfe: and it was the intention of Ieroboam to doe the like in the calfes at Dan and Bethel: and their meaning was not t'addreſſe or direct their ſeruice to the molten images: yet hath the holy Ghoſt giuen his iudgement and ſentence, that the Iſraelites in the wildernesſe Pſa. 106.19 worſhipped the moulten Image, and that Ieroboam offered ſacrifice to the calues. 1. Kin. 12. 32 The Gentiles are ſaide to ſacrifice to Diuelles, 1. Cor. 10. 20 whereas they, at the leaſt ſome of them, offered ſacrifice to God in images. And the reaſon is, becauſe God did not accept this ſeruice at their hands. And indeed deuills were ſerued, though the Gentiles intended the contrarie. For they thought verily that their images were the receptacles of celeſtiall powers and good angels, but Paul giues ſentence that they were deuills, or wicked ſpirits. Again, when God is adored in deuiſed Images, the worſhippers are ſayde to forget God, though they Pſa. 106. 21. thinke that they will remember him. And the reaſon is, becauſe they forget not only his his comandement, but alſo the true knowledge or acknowledgement of God, ſo ſoone as they repreſent him in an image: for then he is conceiued to be otherwiſe, than he is.

By this which hath beene ſayde vppon manifeſt grounds out of the word of God, we may take a cleare view of the idolatrie of the pretẽded catholike church of Rome. For it teacheth men to worſhip God and Chriſt, in, and before Images, eſpecially Crucifixes which in very truth is nothing elſe but the Idolatrie before deſcribed. Againe, this Roman church adoreth Chriſt, in, at, and before a peece of bread in the Euchariſt, and it teacheth men to doe ſo. Now to direct our adoration to the bread, or the place where the bread is, what is it leſſe then idolatrie? For firſt of all, it is manifeſt, that adoration is not tied, either to the bread it ſelfe, or to the forme of bread, or to the place thereof by any commandement of God, or by any promiſe. And it is a practiſe very idolatrous, to bind adoration to any particular thing, or to any particular place: that is, to determine, that god is to be adored, and that he heares vs in any ſet place, in which he hath not expreſly commanded himſelf to be worſhipped, & made promiſe to heare vs. Againe, in the new Teſtament, or after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, it is certen that ſpirituall adoration is onely required, and that worſhip which is tyed to any certaine thing or place on earth, is vtterly aboliſhed and forbidden. This Chriſt himſelfe teacheth, The houre
Iohn 4.21,22 commeth, and now is, when yee ſhall worſhippe neither at Ieruſalem, nor in this mountaine: And therefore neyther in the breade nor wine of the Lords ſupper, nor in the altar, nor in the hand of the Miniſter. For by a figure Synechdoche hee taketh away all circumſtaunce of place on earth, to which the worſhip of God may poſsibly be tyed and directed. And this appeares manifeſtly by the oppoſition in the words following; But in ſpirit and trueth. If it be ſaid, that the Iewes worſhipped God, at, and before the Arke: I anſwere, they did ſo: and for this deede of theirs, they had both commaundement, and promiſe: and therefore they which worſhipped God at the Arke and Temple in Hieruſalem, were accounted true worſhippers of God. But they that worſhipped the verie ſame GOD in Dan and Bethel, before, and at the golden calues, or in the Temple of Samaria without a word or warrant from GOD, were, though not equally, yet in like ſorte reputed Idolaters, as if they had worſhipped the golde it ſelfe whereof the calues were made. For it is Idolatrie to turne, diſpoſe, or direct the worſhip to God, or any parte thereof, to any particular place, or creature, without the appoyntment of God. Now they of the Church of Rome, direct their worſhip to God, in, at, and before crucifixes, or before the breade in the Sacrament, hauing no warrant of their doing, either by commandement or promiſe. If they haue, let them ſhew it: if they haue not, they are to know, it is a deuiſed worſhip which they performe: and it is a deuiſed god which they worſhip, namely, a God that wilbe preſent and ſpecialy heare them, in, or at Images. Their intention to worſhip the true Chriſt is nothing, vnleſſe they worſhip him according to his owne will. Baal in Iſrael ſometime was worſhipped for the true God, if wee reſpect the intention of men; and yet for all this, Baal ſtill remayned an Idoll, and was nothing elſe but an idle and emptie name: and ſo, conſidering there is no ſuch Chriſt as will be corporally preſent, and lie hidde vnder the form of bread: not Chriſt which is now corporally in heauen, but a meere fiction of the braine of man is worſhipped.

Furthermore, vpon the former ground it followes, that not onely falſe gods, but alſo angels and ſaints departed, when they are worſhipped, at, in, and before their Images, are likewiſe turned into Idolls: for if God thus worſhipped bee turned to an Idoll, then they much more, becauſe we haue no warrant more to worſhippe them on this manner, than God himſelfe.

The third and laſt way whereby Idolls are erected, is, when that which is Gods in proprietie, is giuen to the creatures. For to whatſoeuer thing the glorie which is due vnto God, is aſcribed; it is made an other God. The reaſon and foundation of this doctrine is this: When Rachel ſaide, Giue me children, els I die: Iacob anſwered, Am I as God who hath depriued thee of the fruit of thy wombe? Gen. 30.1,2. When the king of Syria had written to the king of Iſrael, that Naaman might be cured of his leproſie: he rent his cloathes and cried out: Am I God to kill and to giue life? 2. king. 5,7. I am Iehouah, this is my name, and my glory will I not giue to any other, neyther my praiſe to grauen Images, Iſa. 41.8. And that which is proper to GOD is giuen to the creatures three wayes.

The

The firſt is, when the Godhead, Diuinitie, or diuine nature is aſcribed to any other things whatſoeuer, that are not by nature Gods: for then they are made falſe or ſtrange gods. Falſe gods are ſpecially of two ſorts, the gods of the Gentiles, and the Romane gods of this time. That we may the better haue ſome little conceiuing of the gods of the heathen, three points are to be explaned: what be the ſorts & kinds of them? what is meant by them? what images they had? Touching the firſt, the Heathen gods are of two ſorts: ſome ſuperiour, ſome inferiour. Superiour gods are theſe: a Baal the god of the Chaldeans and Aſſyrians: b Aſhtaroth the god of the Sidonians: c Moloch or Melcom the god of the Ammonites: d Chamos the god of the Moabites: e Rimmon the god of the Syrians: f Dagon the god of the Philiſtims: g Remphan mentioned by Steuen called Cijun by Amos. The Scripture beſides theſe mentioneth others, but I omit them. Inferiour gods were liuing or dead men: for it was the manner of the Aſſyrians and Romans to make their Kings and Princes gods, yea while they were liuing. King Aſſuerus exalted Haman. And this exaltation was not in reſpect of ciuill degree, but in reſpect of ſome higher and diuine eſtate, whereby he was made a petigod. For Mardocheus refuſed to honour him whome the king honoured, and that becauſe he was a Iewe: which he could not haue done with good conſcience, if no more had beene expected but ciuill honour. And the Fragments of the booke of Heſter (as much to be beleeued as any humane hiſtorie) haue theſe wordes of Mardocheus, I did it becauſe I would not preferre the honour of a man aboue the glorie of God: and would not worſhippe any but thee my Lorde. In like maner Conon an heathen man refuſed to adore king Artaxerxes, as the maner of the Perſians was. In like maner the men of Liſtra hearing and ſeeing Paul and Barnabas, preſently ſay, they are gods in the forme of men, and would haue offered ſacrifice vnto them.

In the ſecond place, if it be demanded what is meant by the gods before mentioned: I anſwer that the firſt and principall, namely Baal, ſignifies Iupiter, the ſunne in the firmament, or the hoſte of heauen, yet not alwayes: for the holie-Ghoſt in the booke of the Kings diſtinguiſheth Baal from the ſunne, moone, ſtarres, and the hoſte of heauen. If I might coniecture, I would thinke it ſhoulde ſometime ſignifie Saturnus, that is, Time, which the heathen worſhipped as a ſpeciall God. For the prophet Elias taking occaſiō (as I ſuppoſe) from the faſhions of Baal, in mockage ſays to his prieſts, that he is in a purſuite, or in his iourney, or that hee is aſleepe at noonetide: which three properties fitly agree to Saturne, who hath of olde beene vſually repreſented a purſuing and deuouring his owne children, that is, all things which he bringeth forth: hauing alſo foure wings, two always ſpread, and two cloſed, to ſignifie, b that though he ſeeme to ſtand, yet is he alwayes going ſwiftly, as in a iourney: likewiſe with foure eyes, two open, two ſhut, wherby he is alwayes waking and alwayes ſleeping, euen at noonetide. And in c auncient writers Baal or Bel is the name of Saturne. Moloch is thought likewiſe to be Iupiter or Saturne: and Remphan to be Saturne or Lucifer, that is, the day ſtarre. And the reſt ſignifie either the worlde, or nature, or time, or fortune, or fate, or the ſunne, the moone, or the ſtarres, or ſpirits, or the ſoules of men departed, or ſome vnknowne God.

Touching their images, Baal had many. One among the reſt was the forme or repreſentation of a flie: and hence hee is called Baalzebub the lord of flies, becauſe he was thought to bee the chiefeſt flie in the world: and as Nazianzene ſaith, A flie was the God of Accoron. Aſhtaroth Sidonian gods were worſhipped in the formes of ſheepe, as the name ſeemes to import: Dagon in the forme of a fiſh: Diana in ſiluer plates, in which was ſtampt the figure of a temple, and the forme of Diana. When the Aſſyrians came to inhabite Samaria, they brought their gods with them, Sucoth, Benoth, Nergel, Aſima, Nehabaz, Tharthac, Adramelech, Anamelech; all which in the Syrian tongue, are ſaid to borrowe their names of cockes, hennes, chikins goates, dogs, aſſes, horſes, mules, peacockes, &c. Thus we ſee in part, what were the heathen gods commonly mentioned in Scripture. And here we are to take knowledge of the mercy of God towards vs, that hath not left vs to our owne waies, as he did the Gentiles in former ages, who were without God and without Chriſt; but he hath reuealed himſelfe vnto vs, and his will, and choſen vs to be his owne people. For his mercie let vs be thankefull, and ſhew it by cleauing vnto him alone with our hearts.

The

The Roman false gods are two. The first is the Virgin Marie; whome the pretended Catholikes of this time, of a Saint make a goddesse: for they cal her the queene of heauen, the queene of the world: our Ladie: the mother of grace and mercie. Shee is esteemed as an vniuersall aduocate to the whole world, and there be other mediatours vnto her, as to a queene: there be eight solemne feasts for the honour and inuocation of her; besides this, there is no day passeth, in which shee is not inuocated in hymnes or in the masse. And they ascribe to hir, power to command and controll her sonne in heauen, saying, Aske the Father: command the sonne, and command him by the authoritie of a mother: againe, cause him to receiue our prayers. This is to make her, not only a goddesse, but also to place her aboue God himselfe. Here they alleadge, that these formes of speech are spoken by a metaphore, or by a Prosopopœia: but thus cannot be. For the ground of these speeches is properly ascribed to Marie, namely the right of a matter, and therefore also the act of commanding is without figure properly ascribed to her.

In officio B. Mariæ.

roga patrem, iube natum, iure matris impera. —— Sumat per te preces.

We take our selues beholden to Turselline the Iesuit for his fiue bookes of the Ladie of Lauretto, as she is called. For two things may plainely thence be gathered: The first, that shee is made a goddesse, beeing worshipped with the very same worship wherewith God himselfe is worshipped. For when men be in any danger, necessitie, or extremitie, straightwaies they offer vp their praiers to her with solemne vowes. Secondly, when in their Pilgrimages they come neere to the towne of Lauretto, and behold the place where her image is, a farre off they fall downe and worship her: and some goe bareheaded afterward in the very middest of winter, till they come to her Temple, at the dores whereof they fall downe againe and worship. Thirdly when they come before hir Image: all, yea the greatest persons in the basest manner that may be, humble themselues before her, kneeling or lying vpon the bare ground, and kneeling among the base multitude. Fourthly, shee hath a quire of boies to sing praises to her. Fifthly, shee is honoured with a double feast, one of her conception, the other of her natiuitie: one in the spring: the other in the autumne: the solempnitie of eache of them lasteth three moneths: and there resorts to her at euery feast, two hundred thousand people. Lastly, shee is worshipped with temple, altar, and offerings without measure: for none almost come to her emptie handed. The furniture pertaining to her image is of gold, siluer, pearle, pretious stones, silke: and of all things of excellencie that heart can wish.

Lib.4.14. & lib.5.c.vlt.

Lib.5.c2.

The second point is, that the thing worshipped vnder the name of the Ladie of Lauretto, is indeede neither God nor saint, but the deuill himselfe. For first her couetousnesse appeares to be vnsatiable, because shee findes no measure in taking and accepting of gifts; whereas God and his true seruants doe the contrarie. Secondly her miracles be as many as those which we reade to be done by Christ and his Apostles. And yet they indeede are such as may be done by Satanicall operation. For the deuill knowes the secrets of nature more then all men doe, and by this meanes he can doe things like miracles, which indeede are no miracles: and he is the best physition in the world, and can cure diseases, which in the iudgement of man seeme vncurable: yet cannot giue sight to them that are borne blind, nor raise the dead: and therefore among all her miracles there is no mention of such. Thirdly her apparitions and her miracles tend all to erect, stablish, and maintaine the worship of her selfe: whereas the true Saints of God seeke not to aduance their owne honour but the honour of God. Fourthly, when men make absolute formes of praier to the Virgine Marie for any temporall helpe or deliuerance, they haue neither commandement nor promise so to doe: and yet these praiers are commonly accomplished. Fiftly, our Sauior Christ, beeing king of heauen and earth, neuer medled with matters pertaining to the execution of ciuill iustice in priuate persons: but this Ladie of Lauretto sometimes breaks the halter when mē be in hanging: and when they are hanging shee preserues their liues till they be taken downe: when praiers be made for infidels shee heares them: thus was the Turkes Bassa cured of an impostume in his breast.

Lib.3.18.

The second false god is the Romane bishop, who though he be not called God commonly, yet is he made a god. For first he takes to himselfe the titles of God, and suffers himselfe to be called God in his owne law, in which the tenour of a certaine canon is to this effect: He that is god may be iudged of none. The Pope is god: for so ſo he is called of the Emperour Conſtantine. Therefore he may be iudged of none. And it muſt be remembred, that theſe words are found, not only in the old copies of the Cannon law, but in the newe corrected edition of Gregorie the thirteenth. Againe, he ſuffers himſelfe to be called the Doctour and Paſteur of the Catholike church, and the ſpouſe of the Church. And he himſelfe calles the Catholike Church his owne ſpouſe, in expreſſe words; whereas this fauour is proper to Chriſt. And it had beene enough for him to be friend of the ſpouſe. Bernard ſaith of him, that he is by annointment Chriſts. Secondly the Pope chalengeth to himſelfe infinite power, according to the place in Matthew All power is giuen to me in heauen and earth. Thus ſaith the booke of the Pontificall Ceremonies; This Pontificall ſword doth figure that ſupreame Pontificall power, which is giuen of Chriſt to his Vicar vpon earth the Biſhop of Rome, according to that, All power is giuen to me in heauen and earth: and againe, he ſhall rule from ſea to ſea, and from the flouds to the ends of the world. And this is ſignified by that velvet cap which the Popes vſe to weare on the night of the nativitie of our Lord. And this appeares in that he vſurpes power and authoritie ouer all creatures, yea ouer kings and princes: and will be the deputie of Chriſt for the gouernment of the vniuerſall Church. Thirdly, he takes to himſelfe a ſoueraigne iudgement ouer all perſons and cauſes; ſo as if he carrie innumerable people into hell with him, no man may iudge him. Laſtly, he takes to himſelfe fulneſſe of power to diſpence with the lawes of God. In his law it is ſaid, that men doe with ſuch reuerence reſpect the apoſtolical ſeat, that they rather deſire to knowe the auncient inſtitution of Chriſtian religion from the Popes mouth, then from holy Writ: that they inquire only what is his pleaſure, and according to it order their conuerſation. And therefore in the councel of Trent he hath preſumed to forbid vnder pain of Anathema, more degrees of conſanguinitie then God hath forbidden. What is this elſe but to verifie the ſaying of the Apoſtle, that he exalts himſelfe aboue al that is called God, or worſhipped?

2. Theſſ 2. 4.

The ſecond way whereby that which is Gods is giuen to the creatures, is when properties or proper actions of the Godhead are aſcribed to them. And thus are creatures made gods in part, & conſequently idols. Heretofore it hath bin thought a kind of Idolatrie, to appoint the conſtellations of heauen, and to make them ſignes to manifeſt ſecret trueths: becauſe that which is indeede proper to God is giuen to them. And the Church of Rome at this day affoords vs foure notable examples. Firſt of all, it makes the Saints in heauen idols. For it teacheth men to kneele downe to them and to make praier to them, beeing abſent from vs, as farre as heauen is from earth. And by praying to them, men doe acknowledge, that they haue power to heare and helpe in all places, and at all times, and that they know the ſecret minds and hearts of men. Now to heare and to diſcerne the very heart, is a propertie of the Godhead, as Salomon ſaith, Heare thou in heauen in thy dwelling place——: for thou onely knoweſt the hearts of all the children of men. And Paule takes it for a granted truth, that there is one onely that ſearcheth the hearts, and knowes the meaning of the ſpirit, and that no man knowes what is within a man, but the ſpirit or conſcience of a mã. Anſwer is made, that God heares and knowes the hearts of men, of himſelfe, and by his owne nature, and that the Saints doe it not of themſelues, but by communication or religion. I anſwer againe, that God doeth ſometime reueale to his ſeruants ſome particular and ſecret ſayings and doings of men, as he did to Elias and Peter, we denie not: but that God ſhould reueale all the thoughts and deſires of all that pray in all times, and all places, and that the Saints by reuelation ſhould know thus much, this wee denie. For this is to communicate the glorie of God to the creature, and conſequently to make the creature God: though not by nature, yet by cummunication. Such were the Gods of the Gentiles for the moſt part, for they were men indeede, and were made Gods by a participation, and no otherwiſe.

Secondly the Church of Rome tranſformeth the Sacraments to Idols, by teaching that they conferre grace ex opere operato, by the very worke done: that is, that the outward elements or wordes duly ſpoken, or both, in the adminiſtration of the ſacraments, doe as phyſicall cauſes effectiuely, actiuely, and immediatly worke & produce in the heart, the grace of regeneration & iuſtification. To this effect the prieſt is appointed to pray, that the nature of waters might cõceiue the vertue of ſanctificatiõ: that God would make the water fruitfull full by the ſecret admixtion of his godhead, that hauing conceiued ſanctification, a new creature may ſpring out of the immaculate wombe of the diuine fountaine, that it may be liuing water, that it may be effectuall to purifie our minde; that the holy Ghoſt would deſcend into the fulneſſe of the fountaine; that hee would make the whole ſubſtance of the water, fruitfull in effecting of regeneration. Now the worke of regeneration in man, is a propper and immediate worke of the Godhead, and I proue it thus. To create, is a proper and immediate worke of the Godhead: To regenerate, is to create, and man in that he is regenerated, is created againe. To regenerate therefore, is the proper and immediate worke of God. Nothing therefore can actiuely regenerate but God. Sacraments are ſaid to regenerate as moral inſtruments, becauſe when they are rightly vſed, God himſelfe conferres grace: yet if they doe, and can effectiuely and actiuely regenerate and iuſtifie, they are not onely morall, but they are more then phyſicall inſtruments; nay they are as God himſelfe in this regard. Paul ſaith; That in planting and watering, he is not any thing. We receiue not new and ſpirituall life from the Sonne, but by the meanes of his fleſh, apprehended by our faith: yet the power and efficacy of quickning or reuiuing, is not in the fleſh, as in a proper ſubiect, but in the Godhead. God will not giue this glory to men or angells, nor to the fleſh and manhood of the Son of God, much leſſe to creatures without life or ſenſe: and therefore not to Sacraments.

Thirdly, the Romane Church makes very idols of works, by aſcribing the merit of iuſtification and ſaluation to them. For none can merit of God, but he that is God. The creature can doe nothing to benefite God; and therefore, God is not bound by the bond of mans deſert to reward man, for any thing hee doth. If he be bound, it is becauſe hee bindes himſelfe by his owne promiſe: and hee is mooued to make his promiſe, not for the goodneſſe of any worke to be done by man, but meerely vpon his owne goodneſſe. If it be ſaid; that Chriſt meriteth, and yet hee himſelfe can doe nothing to benefit God. I anſwer, that Chriſt meriteth properly, vpon the dignity of his perſon: for in that God incarnate, or God-man ſuffered and fulfilled the law for vs; diuine iuſtice dooth require that ſhould be giuen him, which by ſuffering and obeying, he hath deſerued. This cauſe is found in no man or Angell. For God, as being the cheefe good, is to magnifie himſelfe, and to maintaine his own honor, and that by the order of diuine iuſtice: and he is not ſo bound to his creatures, but of his free and meere good will, he giues the bleſsings which he giues.

Fourthly, they of the Romane Church, make the bread in the Euchariſt to be that which it is not, and conſequently an idoll. For the cheefe of them ſay; that the bread after conſecration, without annihilation, is made by conuerſion, the very bodie of Chriſt; and by this meanes, bread is exalted aboue men and Angells, and is receiued into the vnity of the ſecond perſon. If it be ſaid; that in their opinion the bread is no idoll, becauſe they beleeue this conuerſion. I anſwer, that Sacraments out of their vſe, the adminiſtration being ended, ceaſe to be Sacraments, and bread ceaſeth to be the body of Chriſt. Therefore, the Hoſt, (as it is called) or the bread in the box, carried in proceſſion, and worſhipped, is nothing elſe but a wheaten or breaden god, and an idoll, not inferiour to Aarons calfe, or Ieroboams calues, or the Nehuſtan that Ezechias brake in peeces; nay, as vile and deteſtable, as any idoll among the heathen.

The third way, whereby that which is Gods is giuen to creatures, is, when his worſhippe is giuen to them. And thus are they transformed into idolls. For Gods worſhippe is proper vnto him, as Chriſt our Sauiour ſaieth; Him onely ſhalt thou ſerue. Mat. 4. 10. And when diuine worſhippe is directed or giuen to any creature, that creature is made a God, or equall to God: and therefore an idoll. Now images made by the miſ-applying of Gods worſhip, are of three ſorts. Firſt of all, creatures are made idolls, when men giue their hearts vnto them, and fixe their principall affections on them. The Scripture bindes vs ſtreightly to giue our harts, & the affections thereof, to God, and the obedience of the inward and outward man, Acts 5. 29. We muſt rather obey God than men, Math. 10. 28. Feare not them that kill the body, 1. Pet. 3. 14. Feare not their feare, but ſanctifie the Lord in your hearts, Pſal: 118. 8. It is better to truſt in the Lord, than to put any confidence in man, Ier. 17. 1. Curſed is he that truſteth in man, Math. 10. 37. He that loueth father or mother more than mee, is not worthy of mee, Ier. 10. 5. Feare not idolls, they can neyther doe good nor euill. There is none like to thee, O King. And the Scripture requires theſe thinges at our hands, becauſe by them we acknowledge God to be our God. Wherefore on the contrary, when any creature is placed aboue God, or matched with him, in regard of obedience, feare, loue, confidence &c. it is made another god to vs. For then the firſt Commandement is broken, and there is no poſsible ſeruing of two Maiſters, Math.6.24. Sathan is called the god of this world, 2. Cor. 4.4. becauſe men rather obey his ſuggeſtions, than God. In this reſpect alſo Antichriſt is called god: becauſe hee more ſtraightly inioynes men to obey his owne traditions, then hee doth the very word of God. Saint Paul ſaieth; couetouſneſſe is the worſhipping of idolls: becauſe the couetous man puts his confidence in his riches, for the preſeruation of his life. Againe, hee ſaieth; that ſome make their belly their gods: becauſe they minde nothing but earthly things, and loue their pleaſures more than God. [a] A learned man calls this, Idolatry in maners. His words are theſe: An idolater is hee that giueth to the creature, the worſhip that is due to the Creator. And there be two kindes of idolaters; for ſome are idolaters in opinion, as they which in opinion doe aſcribe to the Sunne, or Moone, or any other creature, a certaine diuinity. Others be idolaters in manners, as they which preferre the creature before the Creator. For that which a man loues more [than God] he makes his god. And therefore, hee that preferres the pampering of his belly before God, makes it his God. Hee that preferres wine before God, makes Bacchus his god. Hee that preferres luſt before God, makes luſt his god. Of which ſort, (I cannot ſpeake it without greefe) are many at this day, rather ſeruing their vices and ſinnes, than God, which though they ſay with their mouthes, that they beleeue in God, yet in their deedes and maners they denie him. And thus dooth the Church of Rome make idolls of works, becauſe it teacheth, that men may put their confidence in them, touching their ſaluation; [b] ſo they do it in ſobriety: this is indeed to deifie them, and to put them in the room of God. Hierome [c] ſaith well; If we muſt put our confidence in any, let vs haue our affiance in God alone. [d] Baſil, As it is meete to worſhip nothing beſide God, ſo we muſt fixe our hope in one God.

Againe, Angells and Saints departed, are made idolls, and that by the Church of Rome, foure waies. Firſt, in that it giues vnto them, religious worſhip or adoration; that is, the bending of the knee, or the proſtrating of the body. The diuell deſired no more of Chriſt, but the bowing of the knee, in token and ſignification, that by Gods permiſsion, hee was the diſpoſer of the Kingdomes of the world: But anſwer was made, that hee might not; becauſe it was written: Thou ſhalt worſhippe the Lord thy GOD, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerue. When Iohn the Apoſtle fell downe to worſhip the Angell, he meant not to worſhip him as God, for he had well learned to diſtinguiſh betweene the creature and the Creator; onely hee meant to worſhip him as a wonderfull and diuine creature; and therefore to adore him with ſome portion of diuine honour. But he is forbidden by the Angell: See thou doe it not, for I am thy fellow ſeruant: worſhip God. Hence I reaſon thus: They which be our fellow ſeruants, are not to be worſhipped with diuine honour: Angells and Saints are our fellow ſeruants: therefore they are not to be worſhipped with diuine worſhippe. It may be alleadged, that wee adore Kings and Princes, yea inferior perſons. I aunſwer: Adoration or worſhip, is either diuine or ciuill. The bowing of the knee, or the proſtrating of the body, is one and the ſame in both, and the cauſe of bowing makes the difference. Wherefore it is diuine adoration, when wee bow the body vpon ſome diuine cauſe, properly concerning God: as when we kneele downe vnto him, in token of ſubiection; becauſe hee is Lord of all things, yea of our bodies and conſciences: becauſe he knowes all things, and knowes the heart; becauſe he is euery where preſent, and can doe what he will; becauſe hee is the author and giuer of all good things; becauſe hee is able to heare, and helpe all that call vpon him through the whole world at all times. And thus God alone is to be adored. Ciuill adoration, is vpon ciuill cauſe; as when wee bow to men, either becauſe they are in gouernment, or becauſe they are indued with excellent gifts and graces of God. And this ciuill adorarion hath his degrees, as the authority and gifts of men are more or leſſe. Vppon this ground I anſwer; that Kings and Princes, are worſhipped onely with ciuill, not with diuine adoration; whereas Angels & Saints, are worſhipped in the Roman Church, with diuine adoration. For we haue no outward ſociety with them: and therfore if any worſhip be done to them, it is not for politicke conſiderations, but for ſome higher reſpect. Yea the

cauſe for which they are worſhipped, is properly diuine: for there is giuen to them, the faculty of hearing and helping all ſuch as pray vnto them, in what place, and at what time ſoeuer; yea, though they be abſent from the place, in which they are adored. And this kind of adoration giues vnto them, knowing and ſeeing of our hearts, preſence in all places, and an infinit power to helpe all that call vpon them. And they that worſhip Saints and Angells, doe ſuppoſe with themſelues, that they being in heauen, can heare and helpe them at all times, and in all places, if they pray vnto them. Therefore it is nothing but a vaine ſhift, when the Papiſts ſay; they giue worſhippe to God, and no more but a certaine kinde of ſeruice to the Saints: when they giue that which is Gods to the Saintes. When certaine ſeely women vpon fooliſh deuotion, did not ſo much as offer candles or prayers to the Virgine Mary, nor ſo much as call her the Queene of heauen, the aduocate of ſinners, our hope, the gate of heauen, our mediatreſſe, &c. but only offered a a cake in honour of her: Epiphanius Biſhoppe of Cyprus condemns their fact, and ſaieth; It is honour aboue meaſure: namely, adoration, which is honour due to God alone, and not to Angells: much leſſe to the Virgin Mary. Againe, Angells and Saints are made idolls, in that prayer or inuocation is directed to them: for prayer is a proper part of Gods worſhip. The commandement of God is this; Call vpon me in the day of trouble. Heere the word [alone] muſt be vnderſtoode. And that I gather by proportion. Moſes ſaieth: Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him ſhalt thou ſerue. Now Chriſt alleadging, and withall expounding this teſtimony, ſaieth thus: Him ONELY ſhalt thou ſerue. By this it appeares, that all commandements inioyning the worſhip of God, include the force of this word [alone] though it be not expreſſed. Moreouer, the reaſon of this commandement, I will deliuer thee: prooues as much; and it may be diſpoſed thus. To him that can deliuer thee, muſt thou pray: I alone deliuer thee; therefore call vpon me alone. Secondly, hee to whom we muſt pray, muſt be of that nature and condition, that wee may beleeue in him: as Paul ſaieth: How ſhall they call vpon him, in whom they haue not beleeued? We muſt not beleeue in Angells or Saints, but only in God. For the auncient and Apoſtolike faith is, to beleeue in God, and to beleeue the Church. Auguſtine ſaieth well; wee beleeue the Apoſtle, we doe not beleeue in the Apoſtle. Againe, it muſt be knowne, that wee muſt beleeue the Church, and not in the Church. Thirdly, ſacrifice is proper to God. Prayer in the new Teſtament, comes in the roome of ſacrifice: for whereas Malachi had ſaide; That incenſe and a cleane offering ſhould be offered to God in euery place; Paul ſhewes what is meant heereby, when hee ſaith; Lift vp pure hands vnto God in euery place. And praier is ſpirituall ſacrifice, and therefore is called the calues of our lips. The opinion of the auntient Church hath beene, that the holy Ghoſt was God: becauſe he was inuocated. For the heretikes obiection was this: God is to be inuocated; the holy Ghoſt is not inuocated: therefore the holy Ghoſt is not God. Anſwer was onely made to the Minor, and declaration made, that the holy Ghoſt was inuocated. Origen ſaieth; That all vowes, all interpellations, deprecations, and thankſgiuing, are to be addreſſed vnto God, the Lord of all things; and that it is not conuenient to inuocate Angells, vnleſſe wee could know them. Athanaſius ſaieth; a The Saints, that is, beleeuers, pray not for aide to any thing that is created: and therefore, that Ieſus Chriſt to whom men pray for aide, is God. Patrons of inuocation of Saints alleadge, that they pray not to them as to God: becauſe they make them not (as they ſay) to be authours and giuers of the good things which they aske, but onely helpers by prayer. I anſwere, it is falſe. For they make them not onely helpers by their prayers, but alſo by their b merites: and this is to make them Redeemers. And the forme of their prayers in their Breuiaries and Maſſe bookes, is this: Haue mercy on vs: giue vs this or that: deliuer vs from this or that euill. I anſwer againe; ths ſpeech of theirs, is as if the adultreſſe ſhould ſay: I company with this man, as with my louer and friend. I know hee is not my husband, neither doe I conuerſe with him, as with my husband. Againe, they alleadge, that if the liuing may requeſt the liuing to pray for them, then may the liuing alſo requeſt the helpe of the dead. I anſwer, the reaſon is not like; becauſe it admits foure maine differences. The firſt, we haue a commandement to requeſt the prayers one of another, and there be examples thereof in the word: wee haue no commandement at all to pray to the dead. Secondly, we are preſent with them, whom wee requeſt to pray for vs; wee are not not present with Saints, who are in heauen. Nay, if a man heere among vs, should kneele downe to a man in London, Rome, or Hierusalem, and request his prayer, hee should commit idolatry: Why not then much more, when men on earth kneele downe and pray to Saints in heauen? It is alleadged, that they are present, in respect of hearing of our prayers; because they are present with God, and see him who sees all things; and therefore in him they see all things. I answer, it is false. The Angells of God, see the wisedome of God, & the whole mystery of our redemption, not in God, with whom they are present, but in the Church, after it was gathered by the apostolical ministry. The Saints vnder the Altar, cry; How long Lord, holy and true: as not knowing the time of their deliuerance. Christ saieth; that the Father hath kept the times and seasons in his own power. And that the very Angells know not the time of his comming. The Prophet Esay saieth; Abraham is ignorant of vs, and Israel knowes vs not. And to this purpose dooth Augustine alleadge this text. The third difference: One liuing man may seeke the helpe of another, either by word of mouth, or by letter: and thus fully open his minde, and shew his wants. In prayer we reueale our wants, not by voice or writing, but by secret groans and desires of our hearts, and wee lift our soules to him, to whom we pray, and by our faith wee make him our refuge. For prayer is not in speech, but in the desires & the faith of our hearts. Lastly, when a man requests the prayer of his friend, they both stand as fellow members, and direct one prayer to one God, in the name of one Mediatour Christ: but when wee pray to the dead, the case is otherwise. For then they stand not as fellow members with vs, but are lifted vp aboue vs, in degree: in that they are made Mediatours of intercession betweene vs and God.

Thirdly, Saints and Angells, are made idolls, in that Temples, Altars, holidaies, are consecrated to their honour and worship. For all these properly appertaine to the worshippe of God. Temples: because none can binde his presence, operation, and his hearing of vs, to this or that place, but God. Altars: because they are for sacrifices and oblations which are proper to God. Festiuall daies: because God is the onely Lord of daies and times, and therefore they are onely to be dedicated to his honour. And though we retaine the names of Saints daies in the Church of England, yet are we altogether free from this idolatry; because wee dedicate the daies themselues to the honour of God.

Lastly, they are made idolls when men sweare by them, and make vowes vnto them. Ier.5.7. Your children haue forsaken me, because they sweare by them that are no gods. And God threatens to destroy them that sweare by God and Melcom; that is, Moloch their King. The like iudgement is to be giuen of them that sweare by God, and by Mary, by the Masse, and such like. One saith; that he which sweares by any thing beside God, defiles that thing, and thereby makes himselfe an idolater. Touching vowes, Isai saieth; In that day men shall vow vowes vnto the Lord, and performe them: where hee makes vowes a proper part of the worship of God, and by it, signifies the rest. And Origen auoucheth, that all our vowes are to be made and addressed to God.

Contra Celsum.l.5.initio.

To come to the last kinde of idolls: images themselues, reliques of Christ, and Saints; Holy things, as Temples, Altars, and such like, are made idolls two waies. The first is, when they are adored and worshipped with religious worshippe: or, when the liuing image of God, namely, man, falls downe before a dead image: for then indeede they are made false gods. In the second Commandement the Lord saieth; Thou shalt not bow downe to them and worship them: that is, (as I haue proued before) to the images either of the true God, or of any thing else. And hee giues this reason: I the Lord thy God am a iealous God. Hence it followes, that images when they are worshipped, are turned into false gods, and consequently to idolls. For God would not be iealous, vnlesse it were because we, who haue espoused our selues vnto him, set vp another god, to be as it were an husband vnto vs in his roome, or with him. For when we bow to them, it is more then ciuill worship: and therefore the honour of God is giuen to them; whereas he admits no partner or fellow in the least part of his honour. Againe, man is a liuing image of God, made by the very hand of God: and in this respect, a thousand folde more excellent than all images, made by the hand of man. Now if any meere man shall be worshipped with any worshippe that is more than politike or ciuill, hee is made more than a man, and by this meanes, he is trãsformed into an idoll. And if no more be due to man, but ciuill honour, though hee be considered as the image of God: then may not religious honour be giuen to any image, made by the hand of man. When Cornelius fell downe and worshipped Peter, hee meant not to honour him as God, but to doe ciuill worship vnto him: yet because this worship was excessiue and mingled with some portion of diuine honour, Cornelius is reproued for it. What reproofe then is due to them, that in religious manner bowe downe to images? Such as worshipped the Sunne, Moone, and starres, are condemned for idolatours: much more then are they to be condemned for idolatry, that worship images and reliques. For the Sun, Moone, and starres, are the workmanship of God; whereas images are but the workmanship of man. It was idolatry to kisse the golden calues of Ieroboam. Augustine saieth, that they which are worshippers of pictures, want the power of Christianity. Againe, he numbers the worship of images among heresies: Of the sect of Carpocrates (saith hee) Marcellina his companion was thought to be, who worshipped the images of Iesus, and Paul, and Homer, and Pythagoras, with adoration and the offering of incense. Againe he saith, that in the second Commandement, we are forbidden to worshippe any likenesse of God, made by mans inuention: because no image of God may be worshipped, but that which is the same with himselfe. Ambrose saith, it is an heathenish errour to worship the Crosse, on which Christ died. And Holcot vpon the booke of Wisedome, saieth; That the spirit of God there condemns idolaters, that honour and serue images and artificiall figures. Catharin, a great man in the Counsell of Trent, saieth thus: There is some question among the Catholikes, whether images may be carued and painted for this ende; that they may be adored, and worshippe may be giuen them. And there be, that vtterly denie it, and cry out against it, as against idolatry. And they seeme not to be mooued with slight reasons, nor without the authority of Fathers, and Scriptures. For without doubt, the Scripture condemns the idolls and images of the Pagans, not onely because they represent false gods, but also because the idolls themselues, are the workes of mens hands, and also without all sense: so as euen in this regard, they could not deserue worship of themselues. And this opinion some of the auncient Doctours seeme to approoue, if wee shall at any time consider that which they haue written. Durand saieth; We doe not adore images, nor call them gods, nor put our hope in them: because this were to commit idolatry. In the same place he makes a double vse of images. One moderate, when they are vsed for memory and representation. The other b excessiue, and that is, when they are worshipped. And by this he saith, that simple and weake ones are easily drawne to idolatry.

It is obiected, that men may bow to the chaire of estate, or to the letter of a Prince, without idolatrie: and therefore much more to the images of God, Christ, and Saints. I answer, the reason followes not. For when wee bow to the chaire of estate, or to the Seale of a Prince, it is but meete ciuill worship, for a politicke end, that we may doe homage and signifie our loyalty and subiection to our lawfull Prince: whereas bowing to images, is done in religious regard. Secondly, the chair of estate, is a signe of the Princes presence, and his, or her letters, are signes of their pleasures, and that by Princes will: and so are not images, signes and monuments, eyther of Gods presence, or pleasure: because God will not be worshipped in them, by them, or at them; neither doth hee binde his presence, or his hearing of vs to them. Thirdly, men vse not to bow to the chaire of estate, when the Prince is present: yet men that worship images, vse to bow to them, though God be present neuer so: as he is alwaies present. And I returne the argument on their owne heads, on this manner. He that sets vp a chaire of estate, and saith, it is the Presence; hee that sends a letter in the princes name, and puts to a counterfeit seale, is guilty of treason: euen so, they which set vp on their owne heads, images, as signes and monuments of the presence of God, and of Christ, what doe they else, but commit treason against God himselfe? When Nadab and Abihu offered sacrifices, that God had appointed with fire of their own appointment, it was present death vnto them. When the Iewes worshipped the true God with his owne worshippe, in places of their owne choise and appointment, the holy Ghost saieth; They corrupted themselues, and did not prepare their hearts to the Lord. What wickednesse then doe they that worship God in images, without commaundement vpon their owne heads? When the Iewes set their thresholds by Gods thresholds, and their posts by Gods posts, that is, ioyned their traditions to Gods commandements, they ſet a wall betweene them and God, and defiled his holy name with their abominations. An oath may not be made by the creatures, though they be conſidered as ſignes and pledges of the preſence & power of God: and though when they be named, all the worſhip in the oath be directed vnto God. For the right manner of ſwearing, which the Scripture allowes, is, that our oathes be ſimple, without fraud, direct, and not oblique oathes; leſt the authority of God be diminiſhed, or our neighbour deceiued, (which is againſt the order of humane ſociety) or the religion of an oath, grow into contempt, as commonly it comes to paſſe, when it is made by the creatures. And therefore Chriſt ſaide; Yee ſhall not ſweare at all, neither by heauen, &c. Now as one part of Gods worſhip is, ſo are all the reſt, direct, and not oblique. And therefore we may not worſhip God, in, at, & before images, though they be conſidered of vs as ſignes and pledges of the preſence of God, and we only intend to worſhip God in them.

Ezech. 43. 8.

Againe they alleadge: The woodden Croſſe of Chriſt, was an inſtrument of our redemption; and therefore it is to be worſhipped. I anſwer. Firſt of all, it was an inſtrument of Chriſts death, but it was no cauſe nor inſtrument of mans redemption, which came by his death. Secondly, by the ſame proportion of reaſon, Iudas, and the Iewes, ſpeares, and thornes, are to be worſhipped; becauſe they were inſtruments of the death of Chriſt; yea, ſpittle and clay is to bee worſhipped, becauſe Chriſt vſed them ſometime in working of miracles.

Iohn 8. 9.

Thirdly, the words vſed to Moſes and Ioſua, are vrged. Put off thy ſhooes, for the place where thou ſtandeſt is holy. Anſ. Moſes and Ioſua put off their ſhooes, not to the place where they ſtood, but to God, whoſe preſence made the place holy. Secondly, the place was not holy alwaies, but onely for the time, in which God manifeſted his preſence. Now images and reliques, are ſaid to be holy at all times, and in all places.

Ioſua 5. 15. Exod. 3. 5.

Againe, images and reliques, are made idolls, when incenſe is offered to them, when tapers are lighted before them, when altars are erected, and gifts offred to them, when men goe on pilgrimage to them. For all theſe are parts of religious worſhip: and when they are performed to images and reliques, it is becauſe there is a ſecret perſwaſion in mens mindes, that there is ſome diuine power and preſence, and operation in them, or at leaſt about them. The brazen Serpent was an ordinance of God, a a figure of Chriſt, and a monument of deliuerance, from fiery Serpents in the wilderneſſe: yet when the Iſraelites offered incenſe to it, (b incenſe being a part of Gods worſhip) it was turned into an c idoll: and for this cauſe was it deſtroyed by Ezechias, whoſe fact is commended in Scripture.

Vpon this which hath beene ſaid, wee are to take notice of the profeſſed idolatry of the Church of Rome, whereof the principall ring-leaders teach and defend, that Roodes or Crucifixes, and other images of God, are to be worſhipped with the very ſame worſhip, wherewith Chriſt himſelfe is worſhipped. And as one ſaith, with the d ſame kinde of worſhippe, with the ſame affection, and the ſame deuotion. What is this elſe, but to make gods of crucifixes? And the excuſe, that crucifixes are worſhipped with reſpect to Chriſt, and that the worſhip paſſeth by the image to him, will not ſerue the turne: becauſe ſtill the image is honoured with religious honour, which may not be. Neſtorius conceiued the manhood of Chriſt, to be a diſtinct perſon from the word or Sonne of God: and withall, hee fained a co-adoration, whereby this manhoode was to be adored with the word. Now the e Counſell of Epheſus condemnes this co-adoration: much more then would it haue condemned a co-adoration of the crucifixe with Chriſt. It will heere be ſaid, that adoration is giuen to God properly and directly, and not to the image in the ſame manner, but improperly, and indirectly. I anſwer againe, there is more giuen to the image of God and Chriſt, than ſhould be, if any adoration be giuen: and there is more giuen by farre than co-adoration. For they aſcribe fiue things to images. The firſt is, an Vnion with God, whereby, when wee ſee the image, the thing ſignified comes to the minde. Vpon this vnion, ſtanding in relation, followes a relatiue Preſence, whereby God and Chriſt, are in their images, and their images with them, as one and the ſame obiect. The third is, the property of Signification, whereby the image, as an image ſignifies God and Chriſt. The fourth is the propertie of Repreſentation, whereby the image ſtands in the ſtead, place, & roome of God; not only as an ambaſſador, baſſadour, but as a viceroy or deputie is in the roome of the Prince. And by this meanes all things muſt be done about the image which ſhould be done about God, or Chriſt, if he ſhould manifeſt his owne preſence. And this is verily a portion of diuine honour. For the image is in the roome of God to receiue honour for god, and God by it. The fift is the communication of religious worſhip to God and the Image. And that is two-fold, one when the worſhip paſſeth by the image to God directly, and returnes to the image by o conſequent indirectly: as when a man kneeles downe before an image, and prayes, the worſhip is Gods properly, and pertaines to the image only by conſequent. The ſecond is, when worſhippe is directed to the image, and comes to God by conſequent, as when a man paſsing by, ſalutes the image, or puts garments & iewels vpon it. Vpon this communication of worſhip followes a communion of worſhip, whereby God partakes in the worſhip of the image, and the image again partakes in the worſhip of God. Now this communion in religious worſhip, abaſeth the honour of God, and exalts the image into a diuine eſtate aboue the condition of men and angels. If a king ſhal make one of his ſubiects to be his image, & to be his Deputie, for worſhip, ſo as ordinarily the worſhip of the king ſhal be done before the deputie, though there be neuer ſo many intentions in the mindes of the ſubiects to worſhip the king, and not the deputie; yet indeed the deputie is king, & the other only beares the name. And ſo images being not onely images of God, but alſo his deputies, haue indeede the honour of God giuen vnto them. Againe, when Latria, diuine honour is giuen to God in his image, it hath his termination in the image: for this worſhip is firſt directed to God, and ſecondarily by conſequent in one and the ſame motion, it is extended to the image. Nowe that religious worſhip, whoſe termination is in the creature, is by common conſent, Idolatrie.

o Vno & eodem motu.

Hitherto haue I ſhewed what an Idol is, and the kinds thereof, and the wayes of erecting them: now I wil proceede to a ſecond point; and that is to ſhewe how we ſhould keepe our ſelues from Idols. And that we may throghly preſerue our ſelues from the contagion of them, foure things muſt be done. We muſt auoid the making of them, the hauing of them, the vſing of them, the vſers of them.

The making of them muſt be auoided by the expreſſe commandement of God. Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelfe any grauen Image, or the likeneſſe of any thing. In theſe wordes are forbidden Images of all kinds, grauen or painted: and images of al things in heauen, earth, vnderneath the earth: & therfore of God, whoſe dwelling is in heauen. Tertullian ſaith thus: Little children (ſayth Iohn) keepe your ſelues from Idols, not now from Idolatrie, that is, as it were from the ſeruice, but from the Idols, that is, from the image of them. Yet is not the making of images here forbidden ſimplie. For there is a two-fold lawful vſe of images: one holy, the other common. The holy vſe is, whē they ſerue to ſignifie the holy things of God. Such images are properly ſignes and types, & are only at the appointment of God. Thus the Cherubims vpon the mercie ſeate, were figures of the preſence of God. The braſen ſerpent a figure of Chriſt crucified: the outward elements in both the Sacraments of the newe teſtament, ſignes and ſeales of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, with the benefites therof. The common vſe of images is three-fold. One is Symbolicall, or politicall, as when they ſerue for the diſtinction of coynes. Thus the Iewes, who might not on their owne heades erect images in the Temple or Synagogues, had libertie to make and vſe images in their coynes. Chriſt hauing ſeene and acknowledged the Image and ſuperſcription of Cæſar in the coin, ſaid; Giue vnto Cæſar that which is Cæſars. The ſecond vſe is Hiſtoricall, when Images ſerue to repreſent humane or diuine hiſtorie. And here it muſt be remembred, that the painting of the hiſtorie of the bible, though otherwiſe lawful in it ſelfe, is not expedient in churches: becauſe danger of idolatrie may riſe thence. And therefore commendable is the practiſe of the Church of England, that ſuffers not in places, that ſerue for vſe of religiō, images either painted or carued, no not in the hiſtorie of the bible painted. And the caſe is otherwiſe with ſuch repreſentations of the hiſtorie as are found in ſundrie Bibles, becauſe there is not the like occaſion of idolatrie. The third vſe is, when Images are made for the beautifying of houſes, either publike, or priuate, that ſerue onely for ciuill meetings. Wherefore it is the ſcope and intent of the commaundement of God, onely to forbid bid the making of images, in reſpect they are to be applied to Diuine or religious vſe, that is, to repreſent God in his nature, or properties, or preſence. Some man may thus obiect: when we thinke on God, we conceiue an internall image or forme of him in our minds, and that which we conceiue, we may proportionally ſet downe by painting or caruing. Againe, if the internall forme of God be lawfully conceiued, why may not the externall be made? I anſwer, the right way to conceiue God, is not to conceiue any forme: but to conceiue in minde his properties and proper effects. So ſoone as the minde frames vnto it ſelfe any forme of God (as when he is popiſhly conceiued to be like an old man, ſitting in heauen in a throne with a ſcepter in his hand) an idoll is ſet vp in the minde. And the formes of things internally conceiued in minde, are neuer worſhipped of vs, as painted and carued images be. Laſtly, God who allowes internall images rightly conceiued, forbids the externall in vſe of religion.

The ſecond thing to be auoided, is the keeping and hauing of idols, that is, images that haue beene abuſed to idolatrie, and are in likelihoode ſtill to be abuſed, ſpecially if they ſtand in publike places.

Exod.34.13.a The commandement of god is to deſtroy the idols of the heathen, their altars, and their high places. According to this commandement Moſes deſtroyed the golden

Deut.7.25. calfe. Ezechias the braſen Serpent. And Exod.32.20. there be ſundrie weightie reaſons of this commandement of God. Firſt, Idols preſerued are ſignes and monuments preſerued of the worſhip of diuels, and of the contempt of the true God: and therefore this preſeruation tendes but to continue a memorie of the diſhonour of God, and of things that are an abhomination to him, deu.7.25. A good ſubiect wil not preſerue and keepe in ſtore the ſignes of conqueſt made by the enemie: for thus he declares that he carries no loyall mind to his owne prince. Secondly, our dutie is to make confeſsion, not onely in word, but alſo in deede, that we are the people of God, and worſhippe no idols. And this confeſsion is not made, if we keepe them in ſtore and lay them vp. This reaſon the Deut.7.5.6. Lord himſelfe vſeth. Ye ſhall deſtroy them, becauſe ye are an holy people to the Lord. Thirdly, the keeping of them is a ſcandall to them that carrie Idolatrous mindes: for hereby they conceiue an opinion, that there is ſome reuerend regard had of them. Fourthly, our dutie is to cut off all occaſions of idolatrie. This is not done when idols are preſerued: for hence they haue often opportunitie and occaſion to worſhip them, that are ſuperſtitiouſly minded. Fiftly, occaſion is giuen to the ſimpler ſort to abuſe them. When the idols of the nations remained in the ſight of the Iſraelites, they were a ſnare vnto them. Laſtly, Idols are called by the holy Ghoſt, Iud.2.3. vanities, not as other things which ſerue for good vſe, but they are ſimplie vanities, becauſe they are altogither vnprofitable: and therefore the keeping of them is to no good ende: whereas among the Iſai 44.10. people of God all things muſt in their kinde tend to the glorie of God, either more or leſſe. If it be ſaid, they are Laymens bookes, and that in this regard they may be kept: I anſwere, they are no bookes of Lay-men: for the Lord hath giuen the ſentence, that they are meere vanities. Auguſt. ſaith, they are worthy to be De conſenſu Euan.l.1.c.10 deceiued that ſeeke Chriſt & his apoſtles, not in Scriptures, but in painted walles.

The third thing to be auoided, is the vſe of Idols in religious manner, which vſe ſtandes in the worſhippe thereof, vtterly condemned in the ſecond part of the ſecond commandement: Thou ſhalt not bowe downe to them and worſhip them. In which wordes the Lord makes two parts of the worſhip of Idols, Honour, and Seruice. Honour is either inward, or outward. Inward, in the affection of reuerence. Outward honour ſtandes in all geſtures of the bodie, which ſignifie honour, as the putting off the hatte, the lifting vp of handes, and eyes, bowing of the knees, proſtrating of the bodie and ſuch like. Seruice likewiſe is either outward or inward. Inward ſtands in the deuotion of the mind; in cõfidence, hope, inuocation, vowes, and ſuch like. Outward ſeruice ſtands in all other duties that are beſide the geſture of the bodie: as ſacrifices, oblatiõs, lighting of tapers, burning incenſe, the erection of Altars and Temples, and pilgrimages to them, &c. And all theſe, with all of like kind, are vtterly forbidden. Furthermore, that there may be no place for the vſe of idols amõg the people of God, he hath by law ſtraitly barred vs the vſe of all ſuch things as are properly memories and monuments of idols: Ye ſhall make no mention of the Exod.23.13. name of other gods, neither ſhall it bee heard out of thy mouth. Yea, all things that pertain any any way to the worship of idols must be

1.Cor.10. eschued. Vpon this ground Paul disputes at large, that the Corinthians might not be present, or sit downe at the feasts, which were made to the honour of Heathen gods, thogh otherwise they abstaine from the worshippe thereof. Thus Tertullian
De idola.c.20 saith, It is a customable fault to say, me Hercule, me Dius fidius, arising of the ignorance of some that doe not know it is an oath by Hercules: and yet he saith the former law doth not forbid vs to pronounce the names of false gods, which conuersation with men constraines vs to speake.

In the fourth and last place, we are to auoid the vsers of idols, & that in two speciall regards. First, in respect of the vaine deceits they vse: secondly in respect of fellowshippe. Touching the deceits whereby the Idolaters of this last age paint ouer their idolatries, and bleare the eies of the world, we haue a speciall caueat giuen vs by the holie Ghost to beware of them.
Col.2.8. Take heede lest no man spoile or make a prey of you by Philosophie and vaine deceite, through the traditions of men. And that they may the better be auoided, I will note fiue of the principall.

First of all, they tell vs that they worshippe no idols, but images of God, Saints and angels. Behold a poore & seely shift. For the golden calfe, Ieroboams calues in Dan and Bethel, and Michaes Teraphim were images of God (as I haue prooued) and they were idols, as all men graunt. Againe, an image of a feyned god, is a flat idol in the common iudgement of al. Now the image, that is erected to the honour of the true God, is an image of a fained god. For God will not be honoured by any image of mans appointing, though the honour be neuer so much directed to him in the mind and intention of man: and therefore the thing that is honoured is indeed a god of a mans deuising, who will heare, be present, and giue his blessing in, at, and before images. Hence it followes, that the image which is supposed to be the image of God, is indeed the image, not of God, but of an idol: and euery image of an Idol is an Idol. They say, that there is a difference betweene the images of the heathen, and the images of Christians. Well, but let them consider the 115. Psal. and let them shew, that their images can heare, smell, speake, and goe better then those of the heathen, & I wil grant a differēce: els not: for many of thē were images of the true God, as well as theirs. Irenæus reproueth the Gnostickes, not onely because they made images of Pithagoras and of Aristotle, but also because they made the images of Christ, and Paul, and worshipped them. Ambrose hath these words, The Gentiles adore wood, because they thinke it to be the image of God. Furthermore they define an idol falsely: for it is a false image a not onely representing that which is not, but that which is, as it is not, Thus b Popish diuines teach and write, and by name Catharin saith thus, The adoration and worship of Saints which the Church of Rome especially vseth, hath his termination in God. For God is adored not absolutely, but as hee is laudable or glorious in this or that man, who is acknowledged for a Saint. Therefore, if hee be not a Saint, it is false adoration and false worshippe, and God so worshipped, is indeede a false God. For God is not adored absolutely, but as hee is existing in him by amitie and grace. But this God is not God: and therefore it may be called Idolatrie. And the case is the like in the hoste not consecrated. For God and Christ is not adored simply, but as hee is existing vnder the formes of bread and wine. Therefore if he bee not there, not Christ but a creature for Christ it found, to whome diuine worshippe is giuen: and therefore heere is Idolatrie also. For euen in this regarde they also were Idolaters, who adored heanen (for example) or any other thing, supposing with themselues that they adored in it, whome they called the soule of the worlde, according to Varroes diuinitie. De ciui. Dei l.7.ca 5. Therefore they are not to be cleared from idolatrie, because they intended to worshippe one God, as indeede there was but one God: but because they adored him there, where he was not, in that manner they supposed him to be.

The second excuse is, that they worshippe not images properly and principally, but Christ, Angels and Saintes in them, and at them. I answer: so didde the Heathen. Thus witnesseth Lactantius of them: We feare not Images, say they, but them after whose likenesse they bee figured, and in whose names they are dedicated. And in saint Augustine, I worshippe (say they) neyther the Image nor the Duell, but in a bodily figure I beholde the signe of that which I ought to worshippe. Againe, I doe not worshippe that stone or that immage that is without sense: but I doe adore that which I see, and serue him whome I see not. Who is that? the inuisible diuine power who is president of that Image. And Chrysostome saith thus: When we say vnto him that they worshippe an Image:

Deut.12.4. ſaith the contrarie. You ſhall not doe ſo to the Lord your God, namely, as the heathen doe to their falſe gods. And that Chriſt is not to be worſhipped in a crucifix, it is plaine. For when he is worſhipped, the godhead is worſhipped, and the perſons therof: becauſe the trinitie is to be worſhipped in the vnitie, & the vnitie in the trinitie. And De fide l.4.c. 17. & Pe. Fab. de Dei nomine. c.3. the Godhead being a ſubſtance immateriall, and inuiſible, is not to be worſhipped in any ſenſible thing; as Damaſcene, otherwiſe a friend of Idolatrie, teacheth.

The third excuſe is, that they giue worſhip to God alone, and that they honour Angels, Saints, and Images with ſeruice. I anſwer firſt of all, that religious adoration inuocation, vowes, and ſuch like, are part of Gods ſeruice, as I haue ſhewed before: and therfore they may not be giuen to the creature, by what termes ſoeuer they be called. Inuocation and the reſt, whether they be called worſhippe or ſeruice, they are ſtill proper to God: who will not be mocked with wordes. And it is abſurd to thinke, that a diſtinction of termes, ſhould make the proper worſhip of God to be the worſhip of the creature. The diuell required no more of Chriſt but Dulia, Sernice. For he deſired not to be worſhipped of Chriſt with diuine honour, but only to be worſhipped as a miniſter of God, to whom he had (as he falſely ſaid) committed the diſpoſition of the kingdoms of the world, Luk.4.6. And this to do Chriſt refuſeth, becauſe it is ſaid, Him onely ſhalt thou ſerue. Therefore not onely religious worſhip, but alſo religious ſeruice is gods. Secondly, that we may the better arme our ſelues againſt this vain diſtinction of worſhip and ſeruice; we muſt vnderſtand that worſhip is of two kindes. The worſhip of religion and the worſhip of ſocietie. The worſhip of religion is that, whereby the creature worſhips the Creator, becauſe he is the author and giuer of al good things. And all the partes and the manner of the performaunce heereof is preſcribed in the commaundements of the firſt table. The worſhip of ſocietie is that, which one fellow-creature giueth to another, in reſpect they are th'inſtruments of the good things whereof God is the Authour. This worſhip pertaines to the ſecond Table, and is preſcribed in the fifth commaundement, Honour thy father and thy mother. And heere commeth in the worſhippe that is to bee giuen of Saints and Angelles. For though they be in glory, yet remaine they ſtill our felow-ſeruants, and felow-creatures. And as we honour our betters, yea princes, with ciuill or politike worſhippe, ſo muſt wee worſhippe them, if they ſhoulde appeare. The kind of worſhippe muſt not be changed in reſpect of the excellencie of anie creature, but onely the degree. And we may not giue ſo much as the leaſt parte of the worſhip of religion to the chiefeſt and moſt glorious creatures, that are but creatures. Auſten ſaieth, that religion is not the worſhip of any thing, but of God. Hence it followes, that neither religious worſhippe nor religious ſeruice can be giuen to Saints or Angels. Againe, the worſhip of ſocietie is doone to the creature in reſpect of the neighbourhood, that is, becauſe it is viſibly preſent with vs, and we haue outward felowſhip and ſocietie with it. And where is no mutuall conuerſation nor ſenſible preſence between creature and creature, there is no worſhippe to be done of them ech to other. Hence againe it followes, that we may not giue to Saints or Angells ſo much as ciuill worſhippe, becauſe we haue not any outward ſocietie with them. Thirdly not onely worſhippe is Gods, but alſo ſeruice. Thou ſhalt not bow downe to them, and ſerue them. And reaſon good, for ſeruice is more than worſhip. For worſhip may be done of equall to equall: whereas ſeruice is properly of the inferiour to the ſuperiour.

De vera relig. 55. & de ciu. Dei. l.10.c.1. —— fidenter dicere audemus religionem non eſſe niſi cultum Dei.

The fourth excuſe, wherby the Idolaters of our time delude themſelues & the world is, that prayer to Saints, and the worſhip of Images & relikes is confirmed by reuelations & miracles. I anſwer firſt, that reuelations now are not the rule of our faith, but onely the written woorde: They haue Luke 19.29 miracles. Thirdly, the ſcripture ſaith plainly, that the comming of Antichriſt, who in all likelihood is the Biſhop of Rome, ſhall bee in miracles and lying wonders. And therefore we may iuſtly ſuſpect the reuelations and miracles pretended by the Romaine Church. And the ſpeaking, weeping, and bleeding of images, & the bleeding of the Euchariſt, what are they elſe but Satanicall illuſions?

The fift and laſt deceitfull excuſe is, that the Idolatry, which the ſcripture cõdemns, is (as they ſay) the worſhip of heathē gods. I anſwer, that the worſhippe of heathen idols, and the worſhip of God, Angels, Saints, images, in the Romane Church, is for ſubſtance all one. Like is the follie of both in the making of their gods. The

So doe the Papiſts to Saints. Gentiles did not eſteem their idols to be gods, but they of the wiſer ſort profeſſed to wor ſhip God in them. The booke of Recognitions vnder the name of Clement, ſets downe ſundrie excuſes of the heathē thus. As there is one Cæſar, and he hath many iudges vnder him, conſuls, tribunes, and other inferiour powers: in like manner we thinke there is one great god, and other gods ſubiect to him, yet ſuch as gouerne vs and all things in the world. Againe, they adde, that the calfe called Apis of the Egyptians, Ibis, ſerpents & goats, &c. worſhipped as gods, were figures and allegories of certaine vertues, by which, as by helpes, mankinde is gouerned. Againe, they are woont to ſay: We worſhip viſible images, to the honour of the inuiſible God. a Euſebius teſtifieth as much, that the Gentiles adored idols as the images of excellent mē that had been helpfull vnto them. And yet for all this they are cõdemned of idolatry. So preachers among the Papiſts vſe to ſay to the image of the crucifixe, Thou haſt redeemed vs thou haſt reconciled vs to the Father. Anſwere will be made, that they ſay not this to the image as it is wood, but to Chriſt in whoſe roome the image is. And I ſay againe, that the Iſraelites did the ſame. The gentils ſaid that images erected were elements or letters to knowe God by: ſo ſay the Papiſts, that Images are Lay-mens bookes. The wiſeſt among the Gentils vſed images and other ceremonies to procure the preſence of angels and celeſtiall powers, that by them they might attaine to the knowledge of God. The like do the Papiſts with images of Angels and Saints. Gentiles d appointed gods ouer ſeuerall countries, cities, families, houſes, perſons, eſtates, artes, diſeaſes, &c. Thus popiſh ſuperſtition aſſigneth ſeuerall Countries to the patronage and protection of ſeuerall Saints. Saint Martine is for Germanie, Saint Iames for Spaine, Saint Michaell for France, Peter and Paul for Italie, Saint George for England. The learned among the Heathen knewe, that there was one chiefe and true God, maker and gouernour of heauen & earth, and all things therein: and that their other gods were creatures, & men that excelled in gifts, and were tranſlated into heauen. Ariſtotle ſaieth, The world and the order of all things is preſerued by God. And that which is higheſt in the world, is the ſeat of God: and there is nothing in the world that is ſufficient of it ſelfe to preſerue it ſelfe, and can be without his helpe. In the lawes of the 12. tables of the Romans it is ſaid, Let men govn to their gods purely, and let all pompe bee remooued: if they doe otherwiſe, God ſhall reuenge. Lactantius ſaith of Tullie thus. In the booke, in which he comforted himſelf for the death of his daughter, he makes no bones to ſay, that the gods which are publikely worſhipped are men. And ſo much yet appeares in his bookes that are extant, in which he ſaith, that Hercules, Caſtor, Pollux, Æſculapius, Liber, &c. were men after death by common fame tranſlated into heauen. And the ſame he thinkes of the chiefe gods, called Dij maiorum gentium. Triſmegiſtus ſaith of heathen gods thus: we call them gods, not in reſpect of their nature, but for honours ſake. Auguſtine brings in the Pagans ſaying thus: What is to be thought that our anceſtours were ſo vnwiſe and ſo blinde, that they ſuppoſed felicitie, and loue, &c. to be gods? Nay, they beleeued there was one God, whoſe gyftes and functions they were. Furthermore, the heathen, though they worſhip theſe falſe gods, yet they alſo worſhipped the true God. Athanaſius ſaith of the heathen, that they worſhipped one God vnbegotten, & many gods made or created. Tertullian ſaith, that the heathē inſlaued to falſe gods, vſe to name God, and to ſay that God will giue this or that, and to call him to be their iudge, and to ſay that God ſeeth, & I commend vnto God, and God will repay: and that ſaying theſe things they looke not to the Capitall of Rome, but to heauen. Lactantius ſaith, when they ſweare, when they wiſh any thing, when they giue thankes, they name not Iupiter, or the other gods, but God, ſpecially in the feare of wars and other daungers, and that when they are ouerpaſt, they returne to the Temples of their gods againe. Neuertheleſſe, becauſe they gaue diuine honour to their ſuppoſed gods in prayer and ſupplication, they are condemned of idolatrie, & are ſaid by Paul, to paſſe by God, and to worſhip the creature. For as Lactantius ſaith, It cannot be, that the true God be worſhipped and other gods too: becauſe of his honour be giuen to others, he is not worſhipped at all: conſidering his religion is, to beleeue that he is that onely true God. Wherefore the Church of Rome doth indeede forſake God, whatſoeuer it pretend, and it cannot be free from idolatrie; becauſe it doth the verie like, when it canonizeth Saints, & giues vnto them diuine or religious honour. One in fauour of this Church, ſaith to this effect, that the Idolatry of the Gentiles hath fiue degrees: one, when ſtocks and ſtones are worſhipped; the ſecond, when the creatures, as the ſunne, moone, and ſtarres; the third, when dead men; the fourth, when the world; the fifth, when good angels or diuels are worſhipped. And further he addes, that in all theſe, the honour that is giuen by the heathen, beginnes in their mindes, and endes not in God, but in the creature: wheras the worſhippe which the Church of Rome maintaineth, beginnes in the minde, and endes in God. I anſwer, it is falſe which is ſaid. For Paulus Oroſius ſaith of the Pagans in his time, that they confeſſed, that they followed not many gods, but that they worſhipped vnder one great god many inferiour gods, as being his miniſters. Auguſtine alſo records their ſpeeches, that they worſhipped not wicked ſpirits, but angels the vertues of the great God, and the miniſters of the great God. And hence it appeares that they worſhipped men deceaſed, and angels for Gods cauſe, and God in them, becauſe they adored them in reſpect they were the inſtruments and miniſters of the great God. And therefore ſuch among the heathen as had more vnderſtanding, worſhipped the true God, in thoſe which they called inferiour gods, as the Papiſts worſhip God in Images. Neither was it their minds to impart the ſupreme adoration to their gods, but to honour them in a lower degree, as being inferiour to the great God. Horace the heathē Poet ſaies of the higheſt God: It is he that gouerneth the affaires of men and gods, which ruleth the ſea and land, and the whole world with diuerſe ſeaſons: ſo that nothing is brought foorth greater then he, neither is there any thing like him, or ſecond to him. Yet Pallas receyueth the next honour to him. The very ſame ſay the Papiſts at this day of God and our Ladie. And euen hence it appeares, that the Gentiles hauing many gods, gods, worſhip one as the chiefe, namely, Iupiter; and their inferior gods they worſhipped, as Papiſts worſhippe Saints. By this which hath been ſaid, it appeares, that heatheniſh idolatry, and the worſhip of images and Saints, in the Roman Church, are for ſubſtance all one. Yet a difference I acknowledge. For the wiſeſt among the heathen, ſaw the vanity of their religion. Seneca ſaid to this effect: We will doe worſhip; yer ſo as we remember, that this worſhip is rather for faſhion, than for any thing elſe. Lactantius ſpeakes in a certaine booke to Tullie, in this manner: I ſee thou doſt worſhip to theſe earthly things, made with hands: thou ſeeſt they are vaine things, and yet thou dooſt the ſame things that they doe, whom thou confeſſeſt to be the verieſt fooles of all. Neuertheleſſe, the vanity of images, and the worſhip of them, the Papiſts will not acknowledge, neyther can they abide to heare of it.

Againe, as wee are to take heede of all the vaine deceits of idolaters of our time, whereby they doe nothing elſe but varniſh ouer the idol-ſeruice of the Pagans, and preſent vnto vs, olde things with new names: ſo muſt we auoide their fellowſhip. For Saint Paul ſaith; Wee may not carry one and the ſame yoke with infidells: and, that there may be no agreement betweene the Temple of God, and idolls. Fellowſhip with them, is either in religion, or in the things of this life. Fellowſhip of religion, is two waies. One, when wee are content to be of the ſame faith with them. The ſecond, when wee ioyne with them in the exerciſes of their religion.

2. Cor. 6. 14.

Touching the firſt, we may not haue any fellowſhippe with them, in one and the ſame faith, or in the doctrine of the worſhip of God: for their religion ouerturnes the foundation of our ſaluation. Saint Paul ſaith: That they which worſhip Angells, hold not the head Chriſt. Now worſhippers of Angells, were ſuch as thought they might not approach vnto God, without the mediation of Angels: and therfore they prayed to them, that they would pray to God in their behalfe: as Theodoret teſtifieth. This errour (ſaith hee) touching the worſhippe of Angells, remained long in Phrygia and Piſidia. Wherefore, euen a Synode aſſembled at Laodicea, which is the mother City of Phrygia, by an ordinance, forbade men to pray to Angells. And to this day we may ſee in thoſe quarters, and in the Country about Chappells of Saint Michael. They therefore gaue this aduiſe, vſing forſooth humility, and ſaying; that the God of all things, can neither be ſeene nor comprehended, nor that men can come vnto him, but that they muſt attaine the good will of God by Angells. And this is that which Paul ſaith, in humilitie and worſhip of Angells. Againe, Paul (ſaith hee) commandes that they giue thankes to God the Father, by Chriſt, and not by Angels. And the Counſell of Laodicea, following this law, and willing to remedie that olde diſeaſe, prouided men ſhould not pray to Angells, and forſake Chriſt. Further it appeares by theſe words of Theodoret, that the Counſell of Laodicea iudged Angells when they were inuocated, to be idolls, and inuocation of them, to be abhominable idolatry. Papiſts alleadge, that the Councell condemnes them that denied Chriſt, and praied to Angells in his roome. Indeede Chryſoſtome ſaieth as much: yet I anſwer two things. Firſt, that Theodoret dooth not ſpeake of them that reiected Chriſt, and betooke themſelues to the mediation of Angells: becauſe he ſaith; they made a mixture of the Law and the Goſpel: which mixture cannot ſtand, vnleſſe Chriſt, at the leaſt in word, be confeſſed. Secondly, that the error might be redreſſed which tooke place in Phrygia & Piſidia, (whatſoeuer it was) Theodoret ſaith; that the very act of inuocation, directed to Angells, was condemned. Thus much his very words import. Againe, idolatry is ſpirituall adultery; and therefore it breakes the band of ſpirituall wedlocke, that is betweene man and God: and it makes a people of God to become no people, and quite excludes them from the couenant of God. By this it appeares, that wee haue vpon good ground, departed from the Church of Rome, and that we may not ſo much as dreame of any Vnion to be made, or Reconciliation of the two religions. It is not true which many ſuppoſe, that we differ onely in matters of circumſtance. Idolatry is one ſpecial cauſe, that makes vs renounce the Roman religion.

Againe, it is vtterly vnlawfull to ioyne with idolaters, in their exerciſes of religion. Saint Paul exhorts the Corinthians on this manner; Flie idolatry: that is, all feaſts and meetings that tend to maintaine the honour of idolls. And hee vrgeth his exhortation by ſundry reaſons. The firſt is framed thus: They which are partakers in one and the ſame diuine ſeruice, haue fellowſhip with him, whoſe ſeruice it is. This propoſition is confirmed by a double example: the firſt of the Lords Supper, in which, they that partake of bread & wine, are alſo partakers of the body and blood of Chriſt. The ſecond is, the Iewiſh ſacrifice; of which, whoſoeuer did eate, were partakers with the Iewes in their religion. The minor followes: they which are partakers of the feaſts of idolls, are partakers of the diuine ſeruice: they therefore which are partakers of the feaſts of idolls, haue fellowſhip with the idolls themſelues. The ſecond reaſon is this: they which are partakers of things offered to idolls, haue fellowſhippe with diuells: but yee may not haue fellowſhip with diuells: therefore ye may not be partakers of things offered to idolls. The third reaſon is this: they which are partakers of the Lords Table, may not be partakers of the table of diuells: but yee are partakers of the Lords Table: therefore yee may not be partakers of the tables of diuells. Now againſt theſe reaſons the Corinthians might happily reply thus: That they did not preſent themſelues at idol-feaſts, with an euill minde, as though they approued the idolls themſelues, and their ſeruice; that they went with their kinred and friends for this end; that they might preſerue them in the faith, by keeping their olde loue and acquaintance; or at leaſt, winne them to Chriſt. To this Paul anſwereth: What, ſhall wee prouoke God to anger? are wee ſtronger than hee? ſignifying thereby, that albeit, they had colourable ſhifts to defend themſelues, yet indeede by ſo doing, they incurred the wrath of God. Furthermore he ſhewes it to be vnlawfull for the Corinthians, to eate things offered to idolls, and that euen in priuate feaſts, ſo be it, they ſhall by their example offend their weake brethren, and draw them to doe that, whereof they are not as yet perſwaded. Vpon this doctrine of Paul, it followes by neceſſary conſequent, that it is wickedneſſe; yea, flat idolatry to be preſent at the Maſſe, though men keepe their hearts and their faith neuer ſo firmely vnto God.

Verſe 20. Verſe 20. Verſe 22. Verſe 28.

Sundry things there be which are obiected to the contrary: And firſt of all, the example of Naaman, who ſaieth to Eliſha; When I bow in the houſe of Rimmon, the Lord be merciſull to mee in this thing: and Eliſha anſwered; Goe in peace. Therefore (ſay ſome) hee giues leaue to Naaman to bow in the houſe of Rimmon. A double anſwer (to omitte many) is giuen to this place. The firſt is, that Naaman kneeled in the Temple of Rimmon, onely in ciuill reſpect, that the King might leane on his ſhoulders: and that he did this with open and publike proteſtation, that hee would indeede, worſhip none but the God of Iſrael. The ſecond anſwer, to which I rather incline, is this. In the words of Naaman, there be two things plainely to be gathered. The firſt is a confeſſion, in which hee doth acknowledge it to be a ſinne to enter into the Temple of Rimmon, there to kneele downe before idolls, or to giue any ſigne of reuerence to them. And therefore he ſaith twice; The Lord be merciſull to his ſeruant. The Lord be merciſull to his ſeruant in this thing. And by this alſo it appeares, that his reſolution & purpoſe, was no way to bow downe in the Temple of idolls, but to worſhip the God of the Hebrewes, of whom he had beene healed. And for this cauſe he craued that two Mules might be laden with the earth, where the Prophet dwelt: a no doubt for this end, to make an Altar thereon in his own Country, that might be a monument of the health of his body reſtored, and a place of ſpirituall ſacrifice in prayer & thankſgiuing. The ſecond thing in the words of Naaman, is a requeſt to the Prophet, that he would pray for him, that he might be conſtant in his profeſſion and purpoſe; and that if he were drawn againſt his purpoſe, and by humane frailty yielded to bow againe in the houſe of Rimmon, with his king, he would likewiſe pray, that God would pardon this ſinne of infirmity. And to this requeſt of his, Eliſha anſwered; Goe in peace: and hereby he ſignified, that he would pray for him, that he might no more fall to idolatry; and if he fell vpon weakeneſſe, that hee might obtaine forgiueneſſe. This place therefore giues no warrant to them, that ioyne themſelues to idolatrous aſſemblies; but rather it prooues the contrary.

2. King. 5. 18. a Verſe 17.

Secondly, it is alleadged, that none refuſed to worſhip the image of Nabuchadnezzar, but the three children: and conſequently, that Daniel bowed as the reſt. An. There is indeede, no mention made, that Daniel refuſed to worſhip: becauſe (it may be) he was neuer accuſed, as they were: and if hee had beene accuſed, yet were not the accuſations receiued of the King: becauſe he was in fauor with both Prince and people. Furthermore, that he did not worſhip the image, it appeares by his conſtancie in godlineſſe: and by his refuſall in leſſe matters, as namely to eate the portiō of the Kings meate.

Thirdly it is obiected, that there is great difference between the feasts of idolls, and the popish Masse; and that the idolatries of the Gentiles, were inuented of the diuell, whereas the Masse was at the first inuented by Christ, though now it be corrupted by men. Answer, that the Masse is an abridgement or compendium of all superstition and idolatry: there is adoration directed to bread, or the formes of bread: there is the body of Christ offered really in a sacrifice of propitiation, which was neuer offered, but once with shedding of blood. There is adoration of stockes and stones, inuocation of dead men, saying of Masse to the honour of Saints and Angels. worshipping of dead mens bones, & such like abhominations.

Fourthly, it is alleadged, that the godly, as Ioseph and Marie, Christ, his Apostles, and the rest, came to the Temple, and there worshipped God: the worshippe then, being corrupted with many abuses. I answer. First they were bound by commandement, to offer sacrifice, and to doe other parts of Gods worshippe at Ierusalem, and they could doe it no where else. Secondly, the outward worshippe of God in Sacrifice and Sacraments, was not corrupted for substance: doctrine indeed was corrupted by sundry errours, but the godly did not therein communicate with the rest. Now in the Church of Rome, doctrine & sacraments, are corrupted in substance, and abound with idolatrous abhominations (as I haue shewed) and their outward worship of God, hath more affinitie with Gentilisme, than with the first institution of the Lord.

Deut. 16.16.

Lastly it is said, if we goe not to Masse, men count vs for heretiques, hate vs, and take offence at vs, and all offence must be auoided. Answer. Offence is either actiue, or passiue. Actiue offence giuen: passiue offence taken. Offence actiue, must alwaies be auoided of vs: passiue cannot possibly bee auoided. And wee must doe our dutie, though men be offended neuerso: remembring the rule of Christ, concerning them that be offended: Let them alone, they are the blinde leaders of the blinde. Furthermore, by hearing of Masse, weake ones are discouraged, obstinate idolaters are confirmed, & made more obstinate. Thus they that feare lest offence be taken, giue offence.

Matt. 15.

Heere it may be demanded, whether it be lawfull for Christian men, to goe into the Temples of idolls. I answer, they may, if they haue a calling so to doe, and doe not communicate with idolaters in their superstitions, or giue any honour to Idolls: but on the contrary, doe openly professe, either by word, or by their deeds, or both, that they abhorre both the idolls, and their seruice. Thus was Elias present with the Priests of Baal. Thus were the three children present, when the golden image was worshipped. Thus was the Prophet of God present at the Altar of Bethel, when Ieroboam stretched out his hand to offer incense to the idoll. Thus Paul was present in Athens, and in the places of idolatry, that hee might behold their superstitions. The protestant Princes, in the crowning of Maximilian at Franckfurt, brought the Emperour to the Church, and to the place where he was to sit: this done, they returned without dooing any reuerence at all, and thereby, professed their misliking of popish idolls, and their seruice. It may be obiected, that the Prophet of the Lord, prayed in the place where idolatry was exercised: because hee prayed at the Altar of Bethel, for the restoeing of the kings arme. Answer. Hee did not amisse. For to the cleane, all things indifferent are cleane: and therefore the place, though polluted with idolatry of others, was cleane to the cleane Prophet. And the Iewes were commanded, when they were in the middest of idolatrous nations, to worshippe GOD towardes the Temple at Ierusalem. And God heard his praier, by miracle restoring the Kings arme: and therefore he approoued it. And a prayer made in an idolatrous assembly, is no approbation of idolatry, if there be an open profession of the mislike thereof: and the prayer be made vpon some necessitie, as this of the Prophets was, that the King might be conuinced of his impiety. It may be obiected, that the Prophet, refusing to eate in the place, should also haue refused to pray there. I answer, no; because God appointed abstinence from meate, to be the signe of this detestation of the idolatry committed in Bethel, and not abstinence from prayer. And this example of the Prophet, dooth not warrant vs to be present at idolatrous seruice, there to worshippe the true God; because hee did not dissemble, but hee openly professed the truth against idolaters.

Verse 8.

On the contrary, if men resolue not to profesſe their deteſtation of idolatrous worſhip, either by word of mouth, geſture, or ſome other way; but onely deſire vpon curioſitie, to ſee new faſhions, and heereupon, enter into the Temples of idolls: I thinke they ought not to doe it. For they themſelues tempt God by ſo dooing; they offend their weake brethren, and drawe them by their example, to doe the like. And laſtly, by their preſence they confirme the obſtinate idolaters, in their ſuperſtition. The like is to be ſaid of them, that curiouſly without calling, goe out of the precincts of the Church, into idolatrous countries, for this end onely, to ſee, and to be ſeene.

Touching ciuill ſocietie with them, two points are to be handled. What ſociety may be vſed with them, and what not. For the firſt, we may vſe their ſociety vpon neceſsitie, that cannot be auoided, vnleſſe we will vtterly reiect the fellowſhip of mankinde. Paul, who forbiddes the Corinthians, to company with a brother that is an idolatour; for all this giues them libertie to conuerſe with the idolatours of the world. This may ſeeme ſtrange: but the reaſon is, becauſe the company of beleeuers, was then but ſmall, and the whole world beſide, was nothing but idolaters: and therefore, it was impoſsible for beleeuers to auoide their ſocietie, vnleſſe they meant to goe out of the world. And vpon this neceſsitie, Paul permittes the Church in his daies, to vſe the fellowſhip of idolaters: and for the very ſame cauſe hee ſaieth: If any of them that beleeue not, bid you to a feaſt, goe if ye will. Secondly, beleeuers may lawfully ioyne with idolaters, in the ſociety of Concord. For by the generall calling of Chriſtianity, they are bound to haue peace with al men. Vpon this ground may the church make couenants of peace with idolaters, vpon euen and iuſt conditions. Hebr. 12. 14. Haue peace towards all men and holineſſe. Rom. 12. 18. Haue peace with all men, if it be poſſible, and as much as in you lieth. Thus Abraham made a league of peace with Aner and Eſchol, Kings of the Amorites, and with Abimelech, and Iſaac with Abimelech, and Iacob with Laban, and Heber the Kenite, with Iabin a forrain king: and theſe examples haue ſufficient warrant. For that which we may do, we may binde our ſelues to doe. Thirdly, we may vſe any ſuch fellowſhip with them, as is, or ſhall be occationed by vertue of our particular calling. Thus Chriſt being the Sauiour of the world, conuerſed with Publicans and ſinners. Thus Paul being the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, enters into Athens, and there beholds their deuotions. It is Gods commaundement, that the beleeuing wife, ſhall not forſake her vnbeleeuing husband, if he be willing or deſirous to dwell with her. If it be alleadged, that Ezra conſtrained the Iſraelites to put away their Ammoniti ſh and Moabitiſh, and the reſt of their heathen wiues. I anſwer; that their marriages were indeede void, and no marriages. Firſt, becauſe the nations with whom they married, were people, according to Gods law, ciuilly dead: in that God had commanded their deſtruction, vnleſſe when peace was offered, they accepted of it. Secondly, in that they were not onely idolaters, but alſo intiſers to idolatrie, God by expreſſe commaundement, did ſimply forbid the Iewes to marry with them; vnleſſe they did repent and change their religion. And in regard of this commandement, the foreſaid marriages were nullities; as inceſtuous marriages are no marriages, by reaſon of the abſolute prohibition of God.

Touching the ſociety forbidden vs with idolaters, it is the ſociety of Amity: that is, of familiarity and ſpeciall loue. Two examples, whereof we finde in the word of God. One is of contracts of marriage with idolaters; which the Scripture preciſely condemneth, as an abbomination in Iſrael, and a prophanation of the name of God, when Iuda marrieth the daughter of a ſtrange God. Booz indeede married Ruth, a Moabiteſſe, but ſhe was entred and receiued into the body of the Iſraelites, by a former marriage: and ſhee was one that beleeued in the God of Iſrael; Thy people, ſaith ſhee to Naomi, ſhall be my people, and thy God my God. Samſon likewiſe married a woman of the Philiſtims, but that was by diuine inſtinct, and conſequently, by a ſpeciall appointment of God. Againe, it is alleadged, that God by expreſſe law, gaue leaue to the Iſraelites, to marry heatheniſh women, taken captiues in warre. Anſwer. That is a law onely of Toleration, without approbation: in which, God for the hardeneſſe of their hearts, permittes the euill, which cannot by pollicie be quite taken away. And this appeares by two things. Firſt, before the marriage, the woman by Gods appointment, muſt be deformed, by the cutting off her haire, by the growing of her nayles, by putting off the garments ments of her captiuity, and by mourning for her father and mother, for the space of a moneth: and the end of this was, to cause a dislike in the Israelites, of their intended marriages, or to signifie a chaunge of religion, at the least in pretence, in the partie espoused. The second example is of leagues, of mutuall aide and protection; which may not be contracted betweene beliewers and idolaters. Iehosephat for making this kind of league with Ahab, is thus reprooued. Wouldest thou helpe the wicked, and loue them that hate the Lord? therefore for this thing, the wrath of the Lord is vppon thee. 2.Chr.19.2. Againe, that which we may not doe, we may not couenant to doe: now we may not mutually giue and take aide and protection of idolaters. This tends to the dishonour of God; because it makes idolaters boast, that the people of God cannot stand without their aide. It is further an occasion of idolatry: and this league often infoldes the people of God, in the same plagues and iudgements with idolaters. It hath beene the decay both of Greece and Hungarie, that they haue heeretofore entred into leagues of amity with the Turks. It may be obiected, that Abraham made this couenant of protection with the Amorites, Aner, Eschol, Mamre: and that thereupon they ayded him in reskuing of Lot, and in the slaughter of the Kings. Gen.14. I answer. First, it may be they were beleeuers, imbracing the faith of Abraham: nothing can be shewed to the contrary. Secondly, if they were infidells, the couenant that was betweene them, was of peace onely: and they aided Abraham, not by request made by him, but by secret and special motion of God. Thirdly, the Fathers did sundry actions vpon bad custome, which God by law afterward redressed: and their examples may not be followed in all things. Lastly, I suppose that Abraham ioyned with them, as against a common aduersarie: and therefore, the protection they ministred to Abraham, was as necessary for themselues, as for him and his people.

Heere one exception must not be omitted. Put the case, that the husband is an idolater, and is content to dwel with his vnbelieuing wife: she then is to liue with him, not onely in the society of peace, but also in the societie of amity, by doing all duties of loue that concerne a wife, so far as may stand with good conscience. For the precept of Paul is, that marriage and marriage 1.Cor.7.14. duties, are to be preserued of the beleeuing party with an infidell, so be it the said infidell be content. It may be alleadged, that thus the beleeuer exposeth himselfe to danger of idolatry. I answer, no; because God defends them that call vppon him, who thrust not themselues into danger, but beare the danger and calamity into which they are fallen, attending vpon their callings. Againe, if the vnbeleeuing partie shall solicite the other, and vse all meanes, both faire and foule, to draw him, or her to idolatry, the beleeuing partie in this case, may goe aside for a time, and omit the dutie of marriage. For this is all one, as if the idolatrous and vnbeleeuing partie, should depart. For indeede, that party is said to depart, in whom the cause of departing is; as in the Church, hee is a schismaticke, in whom the cause of the schisme is, and not alwaies he that seperates. Secondly, it may be obiected, that a Christian may not become the member of a harlot, much lesse of an idolater; considering idolatry is a great sinne. I answer: the reason is not like. For the fornicatour consents to the fornication: and so doth not the beleeuing party, by dooing duties that pertaine to marriage, consent to the idolatry of the vnbeleeuing partie. And the fornicator willingly ioynes himselfe with an harlot; whereas the beleeuing partie, desires hee might be yoked with a beleeuer, and not with an infidell. Lastly, it may be obiected, If for adultery, diuorce may be made, why not for idolatry which is spirituall adulterie? I answer, that not any sinne by it selfe, as it is a sin, but as it is a sinne, breaking the troth and bond of marriage, is the proper cause of a diuorce, and not any kinde of idolatry; but the sinne of adultery breakes this troth.

Hitherto haue I shewed the meaning of this Commandement; Keepe your selues from idolls. Now I come to the reason of the Commandement, in the word Babes, or Little children. The worde [childe] in Scripture, is giuen to them that be any way inferior to others. And it is applied ten waies. First, they which come of others, in respect of blood and generation, are called children. It needs no proofe. Secondly, they are called children, which are in the right descending line. Christ saith to the Iewes: Your fathers eate Manna: and Iohn 6. this was about 1500. yeares after. Againe he saieth; You builde the tombes of the Prophets, which your fathers killed: and that was Luke 11.47.

1.Tim.5 4. at the leaſt 500. after. A widdow to her nephewes, is as a parent. Yea, they which deſcend in the line collaterall, are children, or as children. Thirdly, ſubiects be children. Dauid ſpeakes thus to Saul, the King my Father. Thus Abimelech is named father and King. Fourthly, they which ſucceed others in title or right of inheritance, are called children. Thus Ieconias that neuer had childe, is ſaid to beget Salathiel, becauſe Salathiel was the next of Dauids ſtocke, who therefore did ſucceede Ieconias, in the kingdome of Iuda. Fiftly, they who are guided by the counſell of others, are called children. Thus Ioſeph ſaith; God hath made me a father to Pharao. Sixtly, ſubiects are called children. The ſeruants of Naaman ſay vnto him; Father, if the Prophet had bidden thee doe a great thing. Seuenthly, younger men and women, in reſpect of their elders, are as children. Saint Paul ſaieth: Rebuke not an elder, but exhort him as a father. VIII. They which be in the tuition of others, are children. Chriſt commending his mother to Iohn, ſaith; Behold thy mother, behold thy ſonne. Iob ſaieth; hee was a father to the poore. IX. They which learne Arts inuented of others, are children. Thus Iubal is called the father of all that play on Harpes. Laſtly, ſchollers are called the ſonnes of the Prophets. Elizeus ſaith to Elias; My father, my father. And hearers are called children, in reſpect of their teachers. King Ioas ſaid to Elias; O my father, my father, the charet of Iſrael and horſemen. Paul ſaith to the Corinthians; Ye haue many teachers, but not many fathers: and to the Galathians; I haue begot you by the Goſpel. And in this place Iohn ſaith to all true beleeuers; my little children. And heereby he ſignifies his tender loue, and his fatherly care to the Catholike Church in generall, and to all in ſingular, that imbrace the faith of Chriſt: that the Commandement touching idolls, might take the better place, and be the more reſpected.

2.Sam.24.12. Ier.22.30. Matt.1.12 Gen.45.8. 2.King.5.13. 1.Tim.5.1. Iohn 19.26. Iob 29.16. Gen.4 21. 2.King 2.12. 2.Kings 13.14 2.Cor. 14.15. Gal.4.19.

Thus much of the reaſon. Now I doe earneſtly exhort and wiſh all perſons, that tender their owne ſaluation, to remember it, and to be doers of it to the end. And that they may the better be reſolued, let them firſt conſider the greatneſſe of the ſinne. The Prophet ſaieth; That diſobedience is as witchcraft, and tranſgreſſion as idolls. The greatneſſe heereof appeares in two things. Firſt, to erect any image to God, is to abolish his maieſty and glory. Paul ſaith; the Gentiles turned the glorie of the incorruptible God, into the ſimilitude of man and beaſt. Hee that ſhall goe about to repreſent the perſon or preſence of a mighty Monarch, by ſetting vp the image of any beaſt, as namely of an Ape, with a Scepter and a crowne, doth no doubt, greatly abuſe himſelfe, and diſgrace the ſaid Monarch: much more then is our heauenly king diſgraced, when men take vpon them to repreſent, either his maieſty, or his preſence, with the image and picture of any creature. Secondly, the worſhippe if idolls, is the worſhip, not of God, but of the diuell himſelfe: becauſe it is preſcribed by the diuell, according to his pleaſure, againſt the will of God. Againe, we are to conſider the foule attendants and companions that goe with the worſhip of idolls, namely, adulteries, and fornications. For in the iudgement of God, they are left to bodily fornication, that giue themſelues to that which is ſpirituall. Paul ſaith; that the Gentiles becauſe they diſhonoured God in idolls, were for this cauſe, giuen vp to the luſts of their owne hearts, vnto vncleanneſſe, to defile their owne bodies, and to commit ſinnes againſt nature. When the Iſraelites fell from God to idolls, oftentimes they fel to Sodomy. In Italy, for their idolatries, men are left to themſelues to permit the ſtews, & to abound (as the fame is) in whordomes and fornications. Thirdly, ſuch as worſhippe idolls, ſeuer themſelues from God and Chriſt, as I haue proued. Laſtly, the puniſhment of idolatry, is double. For the ſoule, a portion in the lake that burnes with fire and brimſtone: for the bodie, captiuitie or deſtruction. Thus ſaith the Lord; becauſe they haue prouoked me to ielouſie in them that are no Gods, I will alſo prouoke them to ielouſie in them that are no people. Thus in this laſt age, Horſemen from Euphrates: that is, a Saracens or Turkes, ſhall deſtroy them that worſhippe idolls of golde or ſiluer: that is, the idolaters of the Roman Church.

If any ſhall heere ſay, that they are not yet reſolued, that the Church of Rome is a worſhipper of idolls, let them conſider theſe reaſons that followe. The firſt is this.

Babylon is a worſhipper of idolls,
Rome is Babylon: Ergo
Rome is a worſhipper of idolls.

The maior is manifeſt. For Babylon is called the mother of fornications: Reu. 18. 5. and the dwelling place of diuells. verſe 2. by reaſon of her idolatries. The minor is alſo manifeſt. For Babylon is called, Reu. 18. 21.

21. A cittie that rules ouer the Kings of the earth; & that is Rome which was the ſeate of the Empire in the dayes of Iohn. Here anſwer is made, that Saint Iohn ſpeakes of heatheniſh Rome, after it had receiued the Goſpel. I anſwer, it is falſe: for Rome ruled by the Emperour, did not make the kings of the earth drinke the wine of her fornications: becauſe it let euerie nation and Countrie to his owne religion and deuotions. For this was the common errour of the heathen, to approoue of all religions, and to admit the ſects of all Philoſophers. Themiſtius the Philoſopher went about to perſwade Valens the Emperour that the varietie of ſects was pleaſing vnto God, while he was worſhipped in ſundrie ſortes. Leo ſaith thus: This Cittie not knowing the authour of her aduauncement, whenſhee ruled almoſt ouer all Nations, ſhe ſerued or gaue herſelfe to the errours of all Nations, and ſeemed to her ſelfe to haue taken vp a great height of religion, when ſhe refuſed no manner of falſehoode. Therefore heatheniſh Rome dranke of the wine of the nations, and did not cauſe the nations to drinke of her cuppe. This therfore is ſpoken and meant of Rome gouerned by the Pope. Againe, Reuelat. 13. 1. there a beaſt is riſing out of the ſea with ſeauen heades, and ten hornes, which by common conſent of interpreters is the Romane Empire: and the other beaſt verſ. 11. ariſing out of the earth with the voice of the dragon, and the hornes of the lambe, is the eſtate of the church of Rome gouerned by the Pope. For it doth all things that the other beaſt did, and that in his ſleights: and it giues a ſpirit to the image of the beaſt, becauſe it reuiues and puts in practiſe the dignitie, authoritie, and tyrannie of the Romane Emperours. Thus Irenæus of olde vnderſtood this chapter, who ſaith, that the number of the name of the beaſt is contained in the worde Lateinos, which ſignifieth a Latin or Roman. Abbat Ioachim in his commentarie vpon the Reuel. hath theſe words. a Some that carry a ſhew of the ſeat of God, that is, the Catholike Church, are made the ſeat of the beaſt, which is the kingdome of Antichriſt, raigning euery where in his members, from the beginning of the Church. Againe, We haue by Tradition from our fathers, that Rome is ſpiritually Babylon. Againe, the Marchants of the earth are Prieſts themſelues, who ſell prayers and Maſſes for b pence, making the houſe of prayer a place of marchandiſe. Againe, We know that not onely Biſhops and Prieſts, are intangled in the affaires of Babylon that they may growe rich: but alſo ſome Abbats, Monkes, and religious perſons, or rather, which ſeeme to be, and are not. Honorius ſignifies in plaine wordes, that the Pope and his Cleargie is the verie Babylon of the Apocalips. The ſumme of his wordes are theſe: Turne thee to the citizens of Babylon, and looke what ones they are, and by what ſtreete they goe. Behold her princes and iudges: for in them is the ſeate of the beaſt —. Turne to the Cleargie, and in them thou ſhalt ſee the Tent of the beaſt —. Beholde the Cloyſters of Monkes, and in them thou ſhalt ſee the Tabernacles of the beaſt —. Beholde the houſes of Nunnes, and thou ſhalt ſee in them a bed prepared for the beaſt —. Nowe then the concluſion muſt needes followe, That Rome gouerned by the Pope, is a worſhipper of Idolles. It pleaſeth ſome to auouch, that if the learned Papiſts and Proteſtants might conferre together, they ſhoulde be found to differ, not in ſubſtance, but only in circumſtances: but it is falſe which they ſay, vnleſſe by skill they be able to make idolatrie a circumſtance.

A ſecond reaſon. A thing fained in the minde by imagination, is an idoll. This is the expreſſe doctrine of Theodoret and Origen: of whome, not onely the Images of things fained, but alſo the thinges themſelues, as Titan, Sphinx, Centaurus, men with dogs heads, and ſuch like are called dogs.

In exod. q. 38. Hom. 8. in Exod.

Nowe I aſſume: But images, which the Church of Rome ſaieth are the Images of the true God, and of Chriſt, are indeed the images of things that are not. For there is no ſuch God that doth annex his preſence to painted or carued Images, that dooth heare and helpe ſuch as prey before them, more than any where elſe: that wil be worſhipped, in, at, and by images. If there be ſuch a God, hee hath either reuealed himſelfe, or not. If he haue reuealed himſelfe, let the promiſe of his preſence and of his hearing of vs at images be brought forth. Againe, let his commaundement binding vs to worſhippe him in images be ſhewed. And if neither (as I verily thinke) can be ſhewed, the worſhip it ſelfe is but a vaine thing. And the thing worſhipped is but a fiction of the braine.

Againe I aſſume: The Image of the virgine Mary, is the image of a thing that is not. For there is no ſuch mother of Chriſt, that is preſent with her image, and heareth men & women praying to her there. And there is no man vppon earth that can poſsibly by sufficient reason proove it to be: whereas for al our actions, specially for actions of religious worship, faith must be the ground.

The third reason. To turne the glorie of God into the image of a corruptible man, is idolatrie. This Paul prooues at large, Rom. 1.

Now the Papists represent God in the image of a man. And the learned among them defend it. I say (saith one) it is lawfull to paint the Father in the forme of an old man, and the holy Ghost in the forme of a doue. And such kind of paintings turne the glorie of God into the similitude of a corruptible man. Let Augustine speake in this case. We must not therefore thinke (saith he) that God the father is circumscribed as it were with an humane shape, that when we thinke of him a right or left side should come into our minde, or that which is said, that the father doth sit, we must not thinke to be done with the bowing of the legs, that we fall not into that sacrilege wherewith the Apostle curseth them that haue changed the glorie of the incorruptible God into the similitude of a corruptible man. For it is extreame wickednesse, that a Christian man should place such an image for God in the temple, much more is it wicked in his heart where the temple of God is indeed, if it be cleansed from earthly desire and errour. Furthermore, the Father neuer appeared in this forme, but the Sonne.

Bellar. de ima. l. 2. c. 8.

Aug. de Sym. & fide. c. 7.

The fourth reason. To inuocate a bruit creature, is Idolatrie. Now the Popish Church inuocates a bruit creature when they say, All haile, O Crosse, our onely hope in this time of the passion, increase righteousnesse to the godly, and giue pardon to guiltie persons. If any shall say these wordes are directed to Christ: I say againe they are spoken to the very wood of the crosse. For the words in the Hymne immediatly going before, are these: Blessed is that Crosse on whose armes the price of the world did hang, it was made a beame to weigh his bodie, and tooke the prey from hell.

In breuiario infra hebdom. 4. quadrag.

The sift reason. The worship of God that is deuised and taken vp by man, is indeede and effect Idolatrie: because it is a worship that God doth abhorre and detest: who wil precisely be worshipped according to his owne worde, without any addition, detraction, or change.

Deut 4 2. & 12. 32.

Now the worship of God in the Church of Rome, is deuised and taken vp by man. And this I declare in fiue particulars. The first is, the inuocation of Saints departed, of which I propound these conclusions. The first is, that for 350. yeeres after the death of Christ, there was no practise or acknowledgement of prayer to Saintes in the true Church of God. For till 200. yeeres after Christ, the intercession of Saintes was vtterly vnknowne: as appeares plainely by the writing of Irænеus, Iustine, Clement, Tertullian; and about the yeere of our Lord, 240. Origen beganne to broach the doctrine of the intercession of Saints: not as the publique doctrine of the church, but as his owne priuate coniecture. And after three hundred yeeres from Christ, the learned disputed against the Arrians on this manner: Christ is inuocated, therefore Christ is God. Which kinde of reasoning had bin vnfitte, if praier to Saints had then taken place.

Homil. 3. in Com. & in Iosu. c. 13.

2. Concl. Vpon the point of 400. years, Basil, Nyssen, Nazianzen gaue further occasion of prayer to the dead. For by a rhetoricall figure they vsed to speake to the dead, and as it were to talke with them after the manner of Orators. And these speeches of their may seeme to be prayers, but indeed they are no praiers, but wishes. For in the same manner they vsed to speake to the soules of damned men, as to the soule of Iulian, and to things without life, as to the Passeouer. Secondly, their speeches were directed to Saintes in doubtfull and wauering tearmes, to this effect: a Heare vs if there be in thee any care of vs, if there be any sense in thee. Thirdly, they supposed the Saints to be b present with them, to heare them when they speake vnto them.

3. Conclus. Till 500. yeeres after Christ were expired, inuocation of Saintes was not receiued into the publike Liturgie of the Church. After 400. yeeres Saint Augustine saieth of publike prayer: Wee doe not make gods of Martyres: they are named of the Priest, but no prayer is made vnto them. After 500. yeares Petrus Gnaphæus an heretike is saide to put inuocation of Saintes into the publike prayers of the Church. And Gregorie the great, about 600. yeeres after Christ brought prayers to the dead into the Letanies of the West church.

The second particular is touching Images of Saints: of which I set down foure conclusions.

1. Conclusion. There was no vse of Images among Christians, specially in their Churches, for 300. yeeres after Christ. The contrary cannot be shewed.

2. Conclusion. Solitarie or single Images of of God or Saints, were not allowed to be set vp in Churches for any vse of religion, till more then 400. yeares after Christ. And the contrarie cannot be shewed.

3. Conclusion. Images erected in Churches for Laie mens bookes, were not publikely allowed to be worshipped till after sixe hundred yeares. Gregorie the great, saith thus to Sirenus, And indeede because you forbad images to be worshipped, we altogither praised you, but that you haue broken them, we haue reprehended you I say, publikely; because sundrie priuate men, and particular Churches, after 400. yeares began religiously, or rather superstitiously to adore the wood of the crosse, and the peeces thereof: but this was then a particular and priuate act, not the act of the Catholike Church.

4. Conclusion. Adoration of images was neuer publikely authorized, till 789. yeares after Christ, in the second Councell of Nice. And in the writings of the fathers there is nothing for that religious worship of images which is more then veneration or reuerence, till about the former time. And this authorisement in that Councell wanted vniuersality. For shortly after a Synod at Frankford (in which Charles the greate, and the Legates of the Bishop of Rome were present) condemned the Councell of Nice, as heretical. Houeden an English historian saith well in this point. Charles (saith he) king of the Frankes, sent the booke of a Synod to Brytaine, directed to him from Constantinople. In which booke, alas, many things are are found verie inconuenient and contrarie to true faith, specially that it is confirmed by ioynt consent of almost all the Doctors of the East, being three hundred, or there about, Bishops, that Images are to be worshipped. Which thing the Church of God doth altogither accurse. And against which Albin writ an Epistle marueilously confirmed by the authoritie of the Scriptures, and brought it with the same booke to the king of the Franks, in the name of our Bishops and Princes.

Houed. in cõtinuatione Bedæ an. 662. & Ado Viennẽ sis in ann 791. Pseudosynodus quã Septimam Græci appellant, pro adorãdis imaginibus abdicata penitus.

The third particular is of religious worship. One Conclusion. The distinction of religious worship into Latria worship, and Dulia seruice, was not knowne and receiued into the Church till 400. yeares after Christ. Augustine was one of the first that vsed this distinction; yet in another sense. For he puts Latria for religious worship prescribed in the first table, and when he puts Dulia for more then ciuill worship, he flatly denies it to be due vnto Saints, as in these words of his, We honour Saints with charitie, and not with a seruice. Againe, Let it not be our religion the worshipping of dead men. And I would faine see the Authour within 500. years after Christ that ascribes Dulia to any meere creature, whẽ it signifies an higher worship then politike or ciuill honour.

a Dulia. De vera relig. c. 55.

The fourth particular is of the crucifix. Of which I set downe one conclusion: That Crucifixies were not in vse till 400. years after Christ. The single crosse was, I grant, but not the crosse with the image of Christ put thereto. The testimonies of Iustine, a Lactantius, b Minutius Fœlix, c Tertullian, d Chrysostome, are alleadged to the contrarie. But they indeed speake onely of the reall crucifix, that is, of Christ himselfe crucified vpon his owne proper crosse: and not of the formed crucifix. The book of visiting the sicke, that goes vnder Augustines name, mentions the painted crucifixe. But that is a knowne counterfeit of latter times. Metaphrastes reporteth that a Cristall Crosse with the image of Christ appeared to Procopius the Martyr, and that he was biddẽ to make the like of gold and siluer, which he caried about him, and obtained victorie against the Saracens. This testimonie of Metaphrastes is of no value, for he is but a fabler. Yet his testimony declares thus much, that in the daies of Diocletian, which was vpon the point of 300. yeares, Popish crucifixes were not in vse. Because Procopius made the crucifixe which he wore about him, vpon the speciall occasion of a reuelation. And it seemes that crucifixes were not publikely receiued in the Church till 700. yeares after Christ. For then the sixth Councell of Constantinople, whose Canons are not counterfeit, commandes that the image of Christ be set vp in the roome of Agnus dei.

The last particular, is touching the worship of Christ, and his Images. The first conclusion. The adoration of the Sacrament or of Christ after the Romane manner, in, at, and vnder the forme of bread was not knowne or vsed in the church of God, within eight hundred yeares after Christ. For Transubstantiation the ground of adoration, was not knowne or receyued of the learned, till after this time. Let them of the Romane religion studie till their heads and hearts ake, they shall neuer be able soundly to prooue the contrarie. And Honorius III. is saide to haue instituted this adoration about the yeare of our Lord, 1220.

The 2. Conclusion. The worship Latria or diuine honour, was not giuen by the learned any way to the image of Chriſt for a thouſand yeares after his aſcention, and vpward. This the Papiſts ſee and confeſſe. Catharin ſaith, Indeede none of the auncient (as farre as I could reade and marke) euer ſaid, that images are to be worſhipped with the worſhippe of Latria, but they all deteſted this kinde of ſpeaking. Againe, it is not found in anncient writers, that an Image (conſidered as an Image) is to be adored with Latria, but contrarwiſe, that it is not ſo to be adored. And we reade this often proteſted in the anſwers of the Biſhops of the ſeuenth Synod, and in the decree moſt manifeſtly, which I certainely beleeue neuer came to the handes of Thomas. Of the ſame opinion is Francis Swares the Ieſuite, who thinkes that Thomas neuer ſaw the ſeuenth Synode, or the ſecond councell of Nice.

Catharin. in cultu imag.

Vpon Thom.

Vpon this which hath bin ſaid, it appeares that ſundry maine points of religious worſhip hath beene deuiſed by men in the Church of Rome, and conſequently that their worſhippe is in effect idolatrie. For all this, put caſe, that the Roman worſhippe be no idolatrie: neuertheleſſe it is ſubiect to a poſsibilitie of being idolatrie, and therefore naught, and thus I reaſon.

The true worſhippe of God is not ſubiect to a poſsibility of being idolatry. For there is no poſsibilitie of darknes in light, no poſsibilitie of euill in goodneſſe. The worſhip of God in the Romane Church is ſubiect to a poſsibilie of Idolatrie. For it is poſsible that he which by ſignes manifeſts his preſence, and heeres them that pray before images, be the diuell himſelfe, and doe it by Satanicall operation. There is no ſuch likelihood in the Sacraments & word preached: becauſe they are founded in the inſtitution of God, and ſo are not Images, or worſhippe at them. Againe in the adoratiō of imeges, three caueats muſt be obſerued, as they teach. The firſt, that no confidence be placed in images: the ſecond, that we aske nothing of them: the third, that we doe not aſcribe any diuinity vnto them. Now it is a poſsible thing (nay it is not ordinarie) that the cōmon people omit theſe, or ſome of theſe cautions. Auguſt. ſaith, Who doth not worſhip or pray beholding an image, which is ſo affected, that he thinketh he is not heard of it, and hopeth that ſhall be performed by it, which he deſireth. Againe, the ſimilitude of a ſhape, and the counterfeit compoſition of lines doth lead, and with a certain weake and ſicke affection, doth rauiſh the weaker ſorts of mortall men.

in Pſa. 113. & Epiſt 49. ad Deo gratias.

Againe it is poſsible that the prieſt faile in this intētion, by wandring by thoughts whē he is in the conſecration of the Hoſt, or he may of bad purpoſe intend not to conſecrate: or he may of negligence omit ſome word or words of conſecration: and then there is no right conſecration: if no conſecration, no tranſubſtantiation: if no tranſubſtantiation. Chriſt is not adored but a peece of bread for the liuing God.

Againe, there is a poſsibilitie that ſome of them that be worſhipped for Saints in heauen, be no Saints, but damned in hell. And Hierom ſaid, We worſhip the bodies of many vpon earth, whoſe ſoules are tormented in hell. Sundrie images in the Church of Rome at the firſt, in all likelihoode were inuented to repreſent, not the perſons of men, but myſteries after the manner of Emblems. The figure which is called ſaint Margaret, deſtroying a dragon after ſhe was deuoured of it, in former times ſerued to repreſent the calling of the Church of the Gentiles, being gathered by the preaching of the Goſpel out of the bowels (as it were) of the diuell, of whom they were deuoured. S. George on horſe-backe was in former times a repreſentation of Chriſt our Sauiour, who vanquiſhed the diuell for the deliuerance of his Church. S. Chriſtopher, who was indeed a meere fiction, was in former times nothing elſe but a repreſentation of the life of a chriſtian man: as the verie name declares. For Chriſtophorus is one that bears the name of chriſt before mē. Now theſe and like pictures of myſteries, were in proceſſe of time reputed pictures of Saints; and are worſhipped at this day of many, as they haue beene heretofore, for the images of Saints indeede. To this I adde, that reliques are very often counterfeit: that the feaſt of the Aſſumption of the virgin Marie is of no better ſtampe. Becauſe there is no certaintie in hyſtorie to proone this aſſiumption. Thus much of the Idolatrie of our times.

Feretius de Trad. par. 3.

HAuing thus declared, what is meant by Idols, & how they be to be auoided, I muſt yee proced further. For it is the propertie of a diuine law, in forbidding any thing to command the contrarie: and therefore when Idols are forbidden in this text, the true worſhippe of God is commāded: & it is the very ſcope of this place to inioyne vs to preſerue our ſelues in the true worſhip of God. Of which dutie I will will speake a little, because it is of speciall weight & moment. That we may the better keepe our selues in the right worship of God, we must consider first, what is meant by the worship of god; and secondly, what are the spirituall heads and parts therof. That we may cõceiue aright what is meant by the worship or seruice of god, six points are distinctly to be considered. The first is the foundation of Gods worship. For they that would truly worship God, must lay downe a foundation thereof in their hearts; and that consisteth of two parts, the knowledge of God, and of our selues. Of the knowledge of God, the Isai 19.21. Prophet Esai speaketh thus. The Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day, and doe sacrifices and oblations, and shall vow vowes vnto the Lord. And Paul saith, Rom.10.14 How shall they call on him, of whome they haue not heard? If it be demanded, what knowledge of God is required, I answer, we must not onely know God as he is in himselfe, that is, the vnitie of the Godhead in the Trinitie of persons, with the properties and workes thereof: but we must know him as he is to vs, that is, our God, extẽding his mercy & his prouidence ouer vs. For the sense, or experimental knowledge of the fauour & goodnes of god, breeds in vs the true worship of God. Concerning our selues we must know two things. The first, what we are by nature, namely vile, wretched, and miserable sinners, vnable to do any good, prone to al euil, deseruing many thousand damnations. This knowledge of our misere is indeed no cause, that mooues vs to worship God, yet is it an occasion therof. Iohn 4. The woman of Samaria did no better then scorne Christ, till she was brought to a sight of her sinnes, and then afterward she reuerenced him as the Messias. Luke 15. The prodigall sonne, when he was touched with a feeling of his owne misery, came and yeelded himself in subiection to his father. Againe we must further know, what we are by grace, namely the children & seruants of God, and heires of the kingdome of heauen. And this knowledge is a notable inducement to the worship of God. For Rom.12.1. the mercies of God are they which moue men, to bring vnto God the true and reasonable seruice.

Vpon the former doctrine, two things offer themselues to be cõsidered, the sinne of our times, and our dutie. The sinne is Psal.14.2. noted by the Prophet, There is none that vnderstandeth, and seeketh after God. This we see by dayly experience. Men content themselues with that knowledge of God which nature affoordeth, and they indeauour not to know and acknowledge him as he hath reuealed himselfe in the written word, specially in the couenant of grace. And so great is the force of selfe-loue in most men, that they cannot abide to consider of themselues, as they are in themselues out of Christ. Thus must men present a worship vnto God, but it is without groũd or foundation. Now the dutie of all men is to study for the knowledge of God and of themselues; and to increase herein. For hence it is, that all godly men haue stirred vp themselues to duties pertaining to the honour of God. Dauid blesseth God, prai- 1.Chr.29.10, 11. seth him, and brings gifts and offerings to him, vpõ the knowledge he had, that kingdome, power, and glory, was Gods, & that all things were his. Daniel makes solemne Dan.9.5. praier and confession to God, because he considered him to be great and terrible, & to be a keeper of couenants with them that loue him. The ground of the nine latter commaundements is the first, Thou shalt haue no other gods before me. And the ground of this commaundement is a knowledge and faith that Iehouah is our God. And this appeares, because the words, I am Iehouah thy God, which &c. are closed vpon the first commandement, and shut vp with it in one and the same period in the Hebrew text. Moreouer when God is not knowne aright, he is not worshipped aright, but either the idols of our braine are worshipped, or deuills. Thus Paul saith Galat.4.8. that the Galatians, when they knew not God, worshipped them that are no gods by nature. For such as our knowledge is, such is our worship.

The second point is the Rule of worship: and that is, That nothing may goe vnder the name of the worshippe of God, which he hath not ordained in his owne word, and commanded to vs as his owne worship. For we are forbidden vnder pain of the curse of God, either to adde, or to Deut.12.8.32 take away any thing from the precepts of God in which he prescribes his owne worshippe. When the Iewes worshipped God after the deuised fashions of the Gentiles, though their meaning was to worship nothing but God, yet the text saith, they worshipped nothing but deuills. Againe, the Lord forbids vs in his worship, to folow after our owne hearts and eyes, or to walke in the ordinance of our forefathers, but onely in his commandements. Deut 12 17. Num.15.39. Ezech 20.18. Iiii 29.13.

maundements. And he holdes it as a vaine
Matt.15.9. thing, to teach his worshp and feare by the precepts of men. That we may worshp God with reasonable seruice, we must proone what is the good, acceptable, and perfect will of Rom.12.2. God. And those are good workes, indeede Ephe.2.10. acceptable to God, which he hath prepared
Col.2.22,23. for men to walke in. All voluntarie religion, and will-seruice, is vtterly condemned. Therefore nothing may goe vnder the name of Gods worshippe, but that which he prescribes. It is alledged to the contrarie, that when a worke is done without commaundement, so there be an intention to honour God, it is the worshp of God. I answer, it is false. For that any worke or action may be the worshp of God, foure things are required; the person or doer must be regenerate; the matter of the worke must be a thing commaunded; it must be done in faith: and then, in the intention of the minde, it must be directed to the honour of God. Secondly, the intention to honour God, is not alwaies good, vnlesse it be an intention to honour him, by yeelding obedience to that which he commandeth. Againe, it is alledged, that a worke done in loue to God, though there be no commandement thereof, is the worshp of God. I answer, that loue keepes it selfe to the word, and will of God: and things done without a word from God, are not of loue.
Gal.5.14. For loue is the fulfilling of the lawe. Thirdly, it is obiected, that vowes in the old testament were a part of the worshp of God, and that they were not commanded. I answer, though God did not binde all men by a commandement to make vowes; yet hath he testified in his word, that vowes were acceptable to him: for he prescribed the matter of vowes, and the manner of Mark.14.7. making, and the keeping of them. Furthermore, it is vrged, that Marie who anoynted Christ, had no commandement so to doe, and yet she did a worke acceptable to Christ. I answer, though she had no particular commandement, yet had she a generall. For the worke she did, was a confession of her faith and loue to Christ, and 1.Cor.9.18. that is commanded. Likewise Pauls example is vrged, who preached the Gospel freely, and looked for his reward of God: and yet he had no commandement so to doe. I answer, to take a stipend for preaching the Gospel, is in it selfe a thing indifferent, and may be done, or not done. Yet was it not a thing indifferent in the church of Corinth, by reason of the offece of many. And therefore Paul preached freely: and he could doe no otherwise, vnlesse he would haue abused (as he saith) his authoritie. For a thing indifferent in the case of skandall, ceaseth to be indifferent, and is a thing commanded. Lastly, some obiect, Luk. 10. 16. He which heareth you, heareth me. Therefore (say they) the very commandement of Pastours prescribe Gods worshp. I answer, first the place is properly to be vnderstood, not of all teachers, but of the Apostles. Secondly, if it be spoken of all teachers the words must be vnderstood with limitation: for thus is the Ministeriall commission, Teach them to observe all things Mat.28.18. which I haue commanded you. As Christ was sent of the father, so are the Ministers Ioh.10.22. sent of him: but he was sent to doe his fathers will: as my Father hath commanded Luke 14.31. me, so doe I.

Thus the truth of this rule is manifest: and we must lay it vp in our hearts as a treasure, and neuer suffer our selues to be depriued of it. For the vse of it is great. By it we may discerne the prophanenes of our times. All men can say, God must be worshipped: but when it comes to the point, what is the worshp wherewith they honour God? Surely, what they list themselues. Some worshp God, with their good meaning; some with their good dealings; some with the babbling of a fewe wordes, as namely of the Apostles Creed, and ten commandements for praiers. This seruice of God is very common: but alas, it is poore seruice. For the rule of diuine honour is not the will of him that honoureth, but the will of him which is honoured. Secondly, here we learne to detest the seruice and worshp which is perfourmed to God in the Church of Rome. For it containes many partes and points of will-worshp, hauing no warrant from God, either by commaundement or promise. Of this kind are the Sacraments of penance, confirmation, matrimonie, orders, and the last annointment: the consecration of the bodie of Christ by fiue wordes, For this is my bodie: the oblation and sacrifice of Christ in the Masse for the sinnes of the quicke and dead: the vowe of continencie, perpetuall pouertie, and of regular obedience: the religious distinction of meates, garments, times: the hallowing of ashes, palmes, bread, water, &c. for the driuing away of diuells, and for the health of the body and soule. For these and many other practises, let them bring forth the word of God,

God, if they can. They pleade for many things, that they haue the word of Traditions. I answer, that Traditions Ecclesiastical are no word of God; but the word of man. And traditions which are called Apostolicall, are eyther of no moment, or doubtfull. For how shall we know certenly, that they were the traditions of the Apostles, considering none hath said so, but some of the Fathers, whose testimonies are not sufficient, because they are subiect to errour?

The third poynt is the end, which God hath appoynted of all his worship: & that is, not to giue or adde glorie to God: for nothing can be added to absolute perfection. But the end is, to acknowledge, praise, and confesse, the infinite glory of GOD. Furthermore, the end of this acknowlegement or confession, is our happines & saluation, Iohn 17.2. This is eternall life, to know thee the onely true God —. Psal. 50. Call vpon mee in the day of trouble, and I will deliuer thee. Paul saith, Godlines is our gaine: and the reason is, because it hath the promises of this life, and the life to come. Vpon this wee must be admonished euermore to worship god, and that with all care and diligence; because the worship of God is not his benefit, but our benefit and saluation.

The fourth point is concerning apt and able persons to performe worship acceptable vnto God. And they are onely such as turne vnto God, and are renewed by the holy-Ghost. And the worship of God performed by any other persons, is not worship, but sinne, Prou. 15.8. The sacrifice of the wicked is an abhomination vnto the Lord. The Lord by the prophet Isai protesteth, that the oblations and sacrifices of the Iewes were an abhomination to him, and that he hated them, because their handes were full of blood. Againe he saith, That he which killes a bullocke is as he which killes a man, and that hee which offers a sheepe in sacrifice as hee which cuts off a dogges head; because of their vile abhominations. Iohn 9.31. God heareth no sinners. Whatsoeuer is not of faith, is sinne: whatsoeuer worship of God is performed by vnrepentant sinners, it is not of faith. Bicause they want that faith, without which there is no pleasing of God. He that turnes not to God, doth not acknowledge his owne guilt, hee that doth not acknowledge his guilt, doth neither acknowledge Gods iustice, nor his mercie: hee that doth not acknowledge the iustice and mercie of God, can not truely worshippe him: hee therefore that turnes not to God, can not vnfainedly worship him. If it be demaunded, how the worship of God should be a sinne in any man, considering it is commaunded: I answer, sinnes be of two sorts. The first is, when something is done that is flat contrary to the commaundement of God: the second is, when that is doone which God commaundeth, but not in that manner God commandeth. And thus the worship of God in wicked men is a sinne. Because, though they doe that which God commands, yet they doe it not as he commands. Againe, it may be saide, if the worship of God bee a sinne in the vnregenerate, then must not they be exhorted to the worship of God: because we may not exhort to sinne. I answer, that exhortations may not bee made for the dooing of anie thing that is a sinne of it selfe: nowe the worshippe of God is not a sinne of it selfe, but onely by accident; that is, because it is performed by vngodly persons, to whome beeing vncleane, all thinges are vncleane. Againe, vngodly men are not to be exhorted to the worshippe of God, but in meete and conuenient order. For first, they must bee admonished to turne vnto God, and then afterward to worship him.

Heere lette vs take notice of the ouersight of many, who liuing without reformation and amendment of life, thinke neuertheleſſe if they pray vnto God, heare his word, come to the Lordes Table, that they do great matters, and that the Lord is highly bound vnto them, whereas indeede they doe nothing elſe but offend him and prouoke him to anger: not because they worshippe GOD, but because they worshippe him without faith and repentance. Likewise their loue of GOD, their strong and liuely faith (of which they boast,) their confidence in Christ, are but fictions of the braine, so long as they are seuered from amendment of heart and life.

Heere againe we are taught, that if we indeede would serue and worshippe God, wee must first turne to him with all our hearts; yea continually make a renouation of our first conuersion, and seeke reconciliation with God and man, Marke 11.25. When yee shall stand and pray, forgiue. The beleeuing Corinthians, because they wanted this renued reconciliation, when they came to the Lordes Table, did eate iudgement to themselues.

It may here be demaunded, in what part the man regenerate worshipps God. I answer, in the whole man both bodie and soule, as Paul saith, Glorifie God in your bodies and in your spirits. 2 Cor. 6. 20. Yet there must some distinction and difference be obserued. For principally and properly God is worshipped in our spirit. Ioh. 4. 25. The true worshippers shall worshippe the father in spirit. Rom. 1. 9. Whome I serue in my spirit. 1. Pet. 3. 15. Sanctifie God in your hearts. By the spirit, I vnderstand the thought of the minde, the conscience, and the affections of the heart. For in these is the first and principal seate of diuine and spirituall worshippe. As for the bodie, it is but a secondarie instrument of the seruice of God. By this we may discerne the vanitie of Popish religion. For it consists for the most part, vpon externall & bodily rites, gestures, and ceremonies, borrowed, partly frō the Iewēs, and partly from the heathen: whereas the true religion of the newe Testament, hath but fewe prescribed ceremonies, & for the most part, is diuine and spirituall.

The fifth point is, concerning the particular thing or place to which the worshp of God is to be directed. And this rule must be remembred. The worshippe of God both inward and outwward must bee directed towards that thing, in which, and at which, God will be worshipped. Nowe God hath straightly bound the worshippe of the Sonne, and consequently of himselfe, to that masse and lumpe of humane nature, receiued into the vnitie of the second person. For this is the vniuersal commandement of God touching his Sonne Christ, He is thy Lord, and thou shalt worshippe him. And, Adore him all ye his angels. Therefore in euery place, in which wee know him to be bodily present, without any more adoe, we are by directing our bodies and minds vnto him according to the place in which he is, or abides, to doe him homage. For this finite and created masse of the manhood carries with it the adoration of the persō to euery place, in which we certainly know the said manhood to exist substantially. And it matters not whether it be seene with bodily eyes or no. For it is sufficient, if we be certaine, either by sense, or by the word of god of the bodily presence of Christ. By vertue of the former cōmandement, the wise men fal downe before the child Iesus & worship him, turning eyes & mindes to that part of the house in which they saw him present. The woman of Canaan comes & falls dwne at the feet of Christ, and worships him at the place in which he stoode. Thomas as soone as he knew that Christ stoode before him, he directs his speech vnto him & saies, My Lord and my God. Ioh. 20. 28. The disciples adore him in the mountain, in the aire, in the clouds, so long as they could see him: & when he was takē out of their sight, they still adored him, by directing minde, and gesture of bodie, not to the sunne, moone, starres, ayre, clowdes, much lesse to any erthly creature or place, but to the place of celestial hapines, which is aboue and beyond this visible world, into which he ascended bodily, where also Steuen worshipped him, and al the people of God euer since, directing hand & heart to heauen. As concerning the Arke of the couenant, the commaundement of God is, Exalt the Lorde your God, and fall downe before his foote stoole: for hee is holy. Psal. 99. 5. By means of this commaundement, the Iewes were bound to worship God by directing themselues towards the ark or merty-seate, euen as if they had seene God himselfe there visibly present. Now the manhood of Christ is the true Propitiatorie, and comes in the roome of the Arke of the couenaunt nowe in the time of the new testament. And further, seeing it is a part of Christ the Mediatour, God will rather be worshipped in it than at the arke of the couenant, and it carries with it the adoration and woorship of God to the place, in which it is known certenly to be more then the Arke. Furthermore, considering adoration is tied to the manhoode of the Sonne of God, and God in it is worshipped, now in the daies of the new Testament wee are not bound by any commandement to direct our worship toward any place or creature vpon earth: but on the contrarie, without reuerence or respect to this or that place to worship in spirit and truth, lifting vp heart and mind to heauen where our Redeemer is at the right hand of God. Iohn. 4.

The sixt and last point is, concerning the properties of the worshp of God, and they are three. The first is, that the worshp of God is Incommunicable. Isa. 42. 8. I will not giue my glorie to any other, nor my praise to grauen Images. Mathew 4. 10. Him onely shalt thou serue. It may bee obiected, that diuine adoration is giuen to the manhoode of Christ, which is a creature. I answer, that adoration or inuocation pertains and is to be giuen to whole Christ, least we shhuld seeme to diuide the person, and separate the natures. And yet a distinction must be made of the Godhead and manhoode. For the Godhead is the proper obiect, to which religious adoration is properly and simply directed, & so is not the manhood. For no creature is simply to be honoured with diuine adoration. Athanasius saith, God is to be adored in regard or respect of the Godhead. Ciril saith, Doe we adore Immanuel as b a man? God forbid. For this were a dotage, deceit, and errour. For in this we should nothing differ from them which worshippe the creature beyond the Creatour and maker. Againe, The Godhead in Christ is a nature to be adored, and the humanitie is the nature adoring. Neuertheless though Adoration be directed simply to the Godhead, yet is not the said Godhead to be adored without the flesh. Athanasius saith thus: When we are about to adore, we doe not separate the Word from the flesh. For we know the Word was made flesh. For who will say, Stand apart from the flesh that I may adore thee? Lastly, we are to hold that the very manhood of Christ, is to be adored of man and angels with religious adoration due to the sonne of God: in regard it is the manhoode of the Word, and is receiued into the vnitie of the second person. But how to be adored? not directly as the Godhead: but in c oblique manner by reason of the vnion with the Godhead. When subiects ciuilly worshippe their prince wearing a crowne and bearing a scepter: in this worshippe they doe not separate the prince from his crowne & scepter, but they honour the person directly, and the crowne and scepter only by consequent, namely as signes and testimonies of princely maiestie. And so is the manhoode adored in the person of the sonne, yet not properly and simply as the godhead (for that were damnable idolatry) but so farre forth as it is vnited to the said godhead of the sonne: not as a garment, which may be put off & on, but inseparably as a part of the second person: so as the Mediatour worshipped shalbe God-man or man-god in the vnity of one person. And the catholike Church hath accursed them which hold, that the flesh of Christ is not to be adored; considering it is the flesh of God: & that in one and the same adoration Christ is not to be adored with his flesh. Thomas the scooleman saith, The Adoration of Latria or diuine worship is not giuen to the humanitie in respect of it selfe, but in respect of the diuinitie to which it is vnited, according to which Christ is not lesse then the father. Heere by the way, let it be obserued, seeing Latria diuine worshippe, is giuen to the manhood of Christ, onely in respect of the personall vnion: that therefore the images of God and Christ, as crucifixes, are not to bee worshipped with Latria. For there is no vnion betweene them and God, but onely in the blinde conceit of man. Furthermore beside this religious oblique adoration, there is due to the manhood of Christ greater honour thē to any creature beside. For euen as he is man he hath receiued a name aboue all names, at which all things bowe in heauen and earth, Psal. 2.10. to wit, the name of a iudge and Gouernour of all things in heauen and earth, Math. 28. 18. in which respect we are commanded to kisse the sonne, Psal. 2.12.

Againe, if the worshippe of God be proper to him, and not to be giuen either to man or angel, it may bee demaunded, how angels and Saints in heauen are to be worshipped. I answer, whether they appeare vnto vs or not, a certaine generall kind of worshippe is to be giuen to them, & it consists of two parts; Commemoration, and Imitation. Commemoration is reuerend remembrance of their persons and vertues. Of this saith the virgin Marie in way of prophesie, All nations shall call me blessed. Luke 1.48. Of this commemoration we haue a notable example in the 11. chapter to the Heb. where the worthy deedes & vertues of the Saints of the olde and newe testament are rehearsed. Here two caueats must he obserued: first, that we fixe not our minds vpon the Saints, but lift them vp to God, by giuing thainkes to him for his mercies vpon them, and for their vertuous example towards vs. Thus the Church of Galatia glorified God for Paul. Galat. 1.23. Secondly, we must not keepe a memorie of Saints departed in hypocrisie, as the Pharisies did, who builded the tombes of the prophets, but despised their doctrine: and as the Papists do, who magnifie the Apostles, and persequute their doctrine. The second part of their honour is Imitation. And that this imitation may be worthie praise and commendation, fiue caueats must be remembred. First we may not imitate actions done vpon singular commandement; as for example, we may not imitate Abraham in offering his sonne Isaac. Secondly, we may not imitate actions done by extraordinarie and heroicall instinct,

Matt. 23 30.

Phil. 3. 17.

b That is, the manhood cōsidered apart from the godhead.

instinct. When the disciples would haue commanded the fire come downe from heauen vpon the Samaritans, as Elias did vpon the captaines with their fifties. Christ said, ye know not of what spirit ye are. Luke 9.54. Thirdly we must not imitate personall actions, as Peters walking on the waters. Fourthly we must not imitate their miracles: For they serued only for a time, to confirme the doctrine which they taught. Lastly wee must not followe them in their attire, gestures, infirmities of body, or vices: for this is but apish imitation, specially to imitate their fashions: but we must followe them in substantiall duties of the morall lawe. Paul saith, Follow me, as I follow Christ: 1.Cor.11.1. nowe he folowed Christ in morall obedience to God. And thus in a generall sort are Saints to be honoured.

Againe if Saints or Angels certainly appeare vnto vs, we may then worshippe them with bodily gesture, but it must bee remembred, that this gesture be altogither ciuill. For there is no other kind of honour due vnto them, but that which appertaines to princes and great personages. But when they appeare not to vs (as nowe in these last times) we may not worshippe them at all, either by gesture or speech.

The second propertie of the worshippe of God is, that it must be free and voluntarie, without all constraint & compulsiō, Psal.110.3. Thy people shall come willingly in the day of assembly. 2.Cor.8.12. If there be a readie minde, God accepts a man according to that which he hath, and not according to that which he hath not. This is the seruice of the kingdome of God: and earthly princes haue not the like. This seruice is not from nature, but from the spirit of grace: and therefore with Dauid we must pray to God to be established and guided by his free or voluntarie spirit.

The third propertie of the worshippe of God is, that it must be ioyned with honestie and comelinesse, 1.Tim.2.1. Pray for kings and princes that ye may liue in godlinesse and honestie. 2.Pet.1.5. Adde to your faith vertue. Where by honestie and vertue is meant, a graue, sober, decent, comely, modest behauior towards all men, and before all men. For this ciuill and vertuous honestie is the ornament of diuine worshippe, and therefore the common saying must not be despised, That good conscience, and good manners must goe together. The Lord condemnes all such as doe Psal.50.16. but take his worde in their mouthes, when they hate to be reformed in their liues.

Comelynesse is, when the worshippe of God is performed with meete and conuenient circumstances of time, place, person, 1.Cor.7.35, 36. and 14.40 gesture. Publike worshippe must be performed by publike persons, in publike places, and it must haue publike and solemne gesture. Priuate worshippe is to be giuen to God by priuate persons, in priuate places, with priuate gestures and signes. Secret worship must secretly be yeelded to God, and the signes thereof concealed frō the eies and hearing of men. Thus Nehemias praied in the presence of Assuerus, Nehem.2.4. And Anna before Elie the priest, 1.Sam.1.13. her lips moued onely, but her voice was not heard. Men therefore are deceiued that thinke the open Church the fitest place for the priuat & secret praiers which they are to make to God.

Vpon the former points of doctrine ioyntly cōsidered, a definition of the worshippe of God may be framed thus. The worshippe or seruice of God is, when vpō the right knowledge of god, we freely giue him the honour that is proper to him, in our hearts, according to his owne will.

Worshippe thus defined, must be consi- a Hier.ep.11. ad Riparium dered as a distinct thing from that honour which is called a Veneration. For worshippe properly belongs to persons, and veneration to things which appertaine to persons. And veneration is to haue a reuerent estimation of any thing, or to preserue and keepe it without hurt, as making store of it: and to vse it reuerently if it be to be vsed. In this sense Augustine saith, we De doctrina Christ lib.3. c.9.epist.146 worshippe or reuerence the baptisme of Christ. And in the canon lawe it is said; Let them diligently heare, and faithfully reuerence the words of God. And thus are all holy things of God worshipped, and all signes or remembrances of excellent things past. When Dauid fetched home the Arke and daunced before it, he gaue no worshippe to the Arke but veneration.

The worshippe of God is twofold, principall, or lesse principall. The Lord saith, I will mercie, not sacrifice, that is, rather Osea 6. mercie thē sacrifice. Where mercie is made the maine and principall worshippe of God, and sacrifice also is worshippe, but the accessarie or lesse principall.

The principall worshippe of God is a worke of God in vs, whereby we are made conformable to him in holines and goodnesse: and whereby his image is renewed or restored to vs. That this cōformitie with God

God is indeed the maine and proper worship of God, it appeares by these reasons. It is the commandement of God: Be ye merciful as your heauenly father is mercifull: Luke 6.36. and againe, Sanctifie your selues, and be ye holy, for I am holy. Leuit. 11.44. Now the intent of these commandements is, to set downe the main worship of God: as Saint Iames testifieth, Pure religion and vndefiled before God, is to visite the fatherlesse and widowes in their aduersitie, and to keepe himselfe vnspotted of the world. Iames 1.27. Againe Christ saith, The true worshippers worshippe God in spirite and truth. Iohn 4.24. Where by Spirit, is to be vnderstood, not only the heart, but also the spirituall renued motions thereof: or as Saint Paul saith, Loue out of a pure heart, good conscience, faith vnfained. 1. Tim. 1.5. And this appeares by the opposition: for Christ here opposeth Spirit, to the ceremoniall worship of the Iewes which was carnal, vpon a carnal commandement (as the holy Ghost speaketh:) because it stood in outward and bodily rites & actions which had no power to sanctifie. And by truth, is meant no sinceritie, but all such duties of ours, as were figured by Iewish types and ceremonies, namely and specially our mortification, viuification, and such like. Paul saith notably, He that serueth God in these things, that is, righteousnes, peace of conscience, and ioy in the holy Ghost, is acceptable to God. Rom. 14.18. And againe he saith, that our reasonable or spirituall seruice of God, is to dedicate our selues in bodie and soule to his honour. Euery man talkes of the seruing of God: but few there be that thinke of this seruice which stands in the conforming of our selues to the image of God, which is in iustice and holines.

This principall worship hath two properties. The first is Eternitie: for it begins in this life, and is perfected in the life to come. Because it is that euerlasting worship, wherewith angels and Saints that for euer worship God in heauen. And herein it differs from ceremonies and sacraments, which haue an end in this life. The second is, that it pleaseth God of it selfe, and that without sacraments, or ceremonies: so there be no contempt of them: as it was in the theefe vpon the crosse. And the reason is plaine. God is not onely a spirit or spirituall substance, but he is euery way infinite and hath sufficiencie of all perfection in himselfe. And therefore he takes no delight in any good thing that the creature can communicate to him: but his delight is in the communication of his own goodnesse to vs, and in all such duties whereby we conforme our selues to him and magnifie his goodnesse. Thus Paul saith, That God needes nothing: and therefore he is not worshipped with any thing made by the hads of ma. And the Lord saith by the Psalmist, that he doth not principally respect our gifts and our sacrifices: because, all things are his: but he respects praise & thanksgiuing. Acts 17.25. Psalme 50.8

The principall worship of God hath two parts: one is to yeeld subiection to him, the other to draw neere to him, and to cleaue vnto him. By the first we put a difference betweene our selues and God, by reason of the greatnes of his maiestie. By the other we make our selues one with him as with the fountaine of goodnes.

Subiection to God is, when we put away, and as it were banish from our selues our owne reason and will & make the wisdome of God to be our wisdome, and his will to be our will, euen then when it is against our will: by causing our will to be subiect to his will, and to depend vpon it. This will of God, to which we must be subiect, is reuealed, partly by the written word, in comandements, promises, threats, & partly by the euent of any thing: as when a man is sick, we know by the euent in that he is sick, it is the will of God he should be sick: nothing falls out without the will of the heauenly father. If it be alledged, that subiection is due vnto men: I answer, that the subiection due to God is absolute: first because it is to be giuen by the whole man in bodie and soule, and conscience: secondly because it is to be yeelded to him in all things without exception, whereas subiection to men must alwaies be in the Lord.

In subiection there be two things. The first is the foundation thereof, and that is, a knowledge, and faith, that God is our soueraigne Lord and King, and our iudge of infinite iustice, able to saue and to destroy bodie and soule. The second is, vpon this knowledge a Resignation of our selues to the pleasure of God. And that is againe in two things: when we suffer him to rule vs by his word: and when we suffer him to dispose of our bodies and soules, and all things that belong vnto vs; as shall make for his glorie and our good. This is the right subiection and right seruing of God. Take an example in Dauid, when he fled out of his kingdome beeing pursued by his sonne Absalon. Let him say that I please him not, behold, here I am, let him doe vnto me 2. Sam. 15.26.

Subiection to God is practised by three vertues, faith, adoration, feare. Faith is a subiection to the commandement of God, that bids vs beleeue him, and trust him in his word. Of this faith I haue spoken at large, when I shewed how we should liue by faith. Onely one thing I adde, that faith is the single eie of which our Sauiour speaketh, which giueth light of direction to all the actions of our hearts and liues. Adoration is, when we subiect our selues to the greatnes and maiestie of God. In it be two actions: the exaltation of God to the highest degree: and the abasing of our selues to the lowest degree. Thus Abraham in praier calls God his Lord, and himselfe dust and ashes. Thus Daniel in praier giues all glorie to God, to himselfe and the people, shame, and confusion of face. Thus the woman of Canan adores Christ by caling him Lord, & by acknowledging her selfe to be but a dogge.

Dan.7.

Feare is a subiection to all the threatnings and commaundementes of God. In feare, which is the worship of God, there are two things, the foundation & the propertie. The foundation is the knowledge of three things. The first is knowledge of the precepts of God, Deut.4.10. I will cause them to heare my woordes, that they may learne to feare me. The second is, knowledge of his threatnings and iudgements. The righteous (saith Dauid) shal see this, that is, the destruction of Doeg, and feare. The third is the knowledge and consideration of the presence of God. Cornelius is said to be a man fearing God: and the holy Ghost hath noted the ground of his feare in his owne words: We are here (saith he) in the presence of God, to heare all things which God hath commanded thee. The propertie of true feare is, to make vs in our hearts to stand in awe of God, and to feare, hate, and eschew the offence of God. Pro.8.13. The feare of God is to hate euill, pride, arrogancie, and the euill way. Exod.20.20. His feare must be before you that ye sinne not. If it be demanded, why we are to feare the offence of God: I answer, it is first of all to be feared for it selfe, because it is the offence of God; though there should no punishment insue: considering it is the greatest euill that can befall the creature, to offend the Creator. And in the second place it is feared for punishmēt. And that feare in which nothing is feared but punishment, is no worship of God.

Psalme 52.6.

Actes 10.2,33

Thus we see what true subiection to God is: now we are to be exhorted euermore to yeild this subiection vnto him. For first it is Gods commandement so to doe. Take my yoke vpon you, learne of me that I am meeke and lowly, and ye shall finde rest to your soules. Now this yoke is subiection to God in his precepts, and in his corrections. Secondly subiection is a thing of great excellencie. That we are subiect to God, it is not for his benefit, but ours. To be in this subiection, is to be in perfect libertie, and to haue the kingdome of God within vs. Thirdly, subiection is a matter of absolute necessitie. The deuils & damned spirits, will they, nill they, must yeild a subiection, and there is no way to auoide it. Let vs therefore willingly subiect our selues to God. Fourthly, to denie subiection, or to grudge thereat, is the propertie of a wicked man. Who is the Almightie, saith the wicked man, that we should serue or be subiect to him? Lastly the punishment of them, that will not be subiect, must be considered. These mine enemies, saith the sonne of God, that will not that I should raigne ouer them, bring them hither and slay them before me. And contrariwise subiection brings rest to our soules.

Iob 21.

The second part of the principall worship of God, is to cleaue vnto him: and that is to be knitte vnto him in heart without purpose of any seperation. Of this we haue commandement: Serue the Lord thy God, and cleaue vnto him. Likewise a promise: Draw neere vnto God and he will draw neere vnto you. Againe, The Lord is with you while ye be with him: if ye seeke him, he will be found of you: if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.

Deut.10.20

Iames 4.8.

2.Chron.15

Furthermore we cleaue vnto God by two vertues, Loue & Confidence. In Loue I consider two things; the foundation, and the properties. The foundation is the knowledge of the loue & mercies of God towards vs. 1.Ioh.4.17 We loue him because hee loued vs first. Psal.116. I loue the Lord because he hath heard my praier. And Psal. 31.24. Loue the Lord all ye saints, because he saueth them that be faithfull.

The properties of loue are two. The first is to maintaine an heauenly felowship and coniunction with God & Christ. For the nature of loue is to vnite it selfe as much as may be, to the thing loued. Againe in the want of this felowship, Loue makes vs desire and seeke it according to Gods will aboue all things in the world. The spouse of Christ, that is, the Church, or euery uery Christian soule saieth of Christ, I greatly desire to sit vnder the shadowe: and, I am sicke of loue: that is, I faint, because I do want that fellowship with Christ my head which I desire: I adde this clause [according to his will] for two causes. The first, because true loue seekes fellowshippe with GOD onely in such meanes as he hath appointed to communicate himselfe vnto vs, as the word preached, praier, sacraments; & not in visions, dreams, reuelations. The secõd is, because our loue, if it be without hypocrisie, doth communicate it selfe vnto God in things in which hee will be loued of vs; as namely in the person of our neighbour, and specially of the poore. For God will haue our neighbour, in respect of loue, to be in his roome and steade: and in the loue of our neighbour, with whome wee conuerse, will hee be loued of vs. Hence it is that Paul saith, That the loue of our neighbor is the fulfilling of the whole lawe.

Cant. 2. 3. 5

Galat. 5. 13.

The second propertie of loue is, to stir our mindes to a doing and fulfilling of the will of God. The nature of loue is to make vs accomplish the minde and will of him whome we loue. Christ saith, He that hath my commaundements, and doth them, is he that loueth mee. And Saint Iohn, This is the loue of GOD, that wee keepe his commaundements.

1. Iohn 5. 3.

The second vertue whereby wee cleaue vnto God, is Confidence: the foundation whereof is knowledge of the wisedome, goodnesse, iustice, and mercie of GOD; specially of his power and will in performing his promises. This we see in Abraham, who trusted God because hee was perswaded, as hee had promised, so he was able to performe. The propertie of confidence is, to cause vs to rest and depend vpon the bare and naked promise of GOD without meanes, and against meanes, and to quiet and pacifie our mindes in the will of GOD when it is come to passe. Thus Abraham depended vpon God for issue, when he was aged, and Sara barren, and when hee putte the knife to the throate of his only sonne Isaac. Iehosaphat, when the great army of the Ammonites and Moabites came against him, said in a liuely confidence, Lorde, we knowe not what to doe, but our eyes are towarde thee. And thus in time of daunger and distresse, to rest our selues on the worde of GOD, when we see neither helpe nor comfort, and haue nothing to stay our selues on, but the bare testimonie of GOD, is the right honouring and seruing of God.

2. Chro. 20. 12.

Besides the heades and poyntes of the worship of God before described seuerally, there is a certain mixed and compounded worshippe of God, when men in one and the same acte both yeelde subiection and cleaue vnto God. And that is done by foure things, Humilitie, Patience, Prayer, and Thankesgiuing.

Humilitie is, when in our heartes wee humble our selues before GOD. Of this the Prophet saieth: Hee will shew thee, O man, what is good, and what the Lorde requireth of thee, to doe iustice, to loue mercie, and to humble thy selfe, in walking before thy God. Of this wee haue a notable example in Manasses, who in tribulation prayed vnto God, and humbled himselfe exceedingly before the God of his fathers, and was heard and deliuered. In true humilitie there bee twoo things; the first is the glorifying and exalting of God; when wee doe wholly giue and ascribe vnto God, whatsoeuer we are, haue, or can doe that is truely good. The second is, Powertie of our Spirites, which shewes it selfe in three actions. The first is Annihilation (as some call it) & that is, when we in our hearts acknowledge, that wee are nothing in our selues, and of our selues, and that wee doe nothing that is truely good: nay, that we are most vile and wretched sinners, deseruing nothing but euerlasting perdition. The second is Despaire: not the despaire of the damned, but a good despaire, when wee are vtterly out of all hope of saluation, in respect of our owne strength, vertues, workes, or anie thing that we can possibly doe. The third action is, vppon the sense of our spirituall powertie, to giue out of our selues as beggars out of their houses, and to flie to the throne of grace, and to pleade nothing but mercie: yea meere mercie in all times both in life and death.

Micah 6. 8.

2. Chron. 33.

Thus we see what humilitie is, and how we are to humble our selues before God. Now I would perswade all men that desire truely to serue GOD, to take out the lesson which our Sauiour Christ teacheth, Learne to be meeke and humble, and, learne it of me. And there be many weighty reasons to moue vs to condescend to this counsell. First, humilitie is the way to obtaine heauenly wisedome, Psalme 25. 9. He teacheth the humble his way. Secondly, it maketh a blessed and happy alteration of our liues when it takes place in the heart. For it restraines, hatreds, griefes, and sorows, that com-commonly arise in the mindes of all men, becauſe others haue better gifts and callings than they haue. When Ioſhua was grieued that Eldad and Medad prophecied in the campe, humilitie made Moſes to Iohn 3.30. Chriſt increaſed, and hee decreaſed. Againe, humilitie makes vs not to ſcorne and condemne others, but to thincke better of others than of our ſelues: not to frette and chafe, but to be content, that others haue better gifts than wee, or better places, or callings: to giue honor cheerefully to all to whome any degree or meaſure of honor belongs: to be content with our own gifts, be they more, be they leſſe: and to be content with our owne eſtate and condition, & to range our ſelues within the compaſſe of our owne callings, and not to ſeek to be exalted: and to be content to be deſpiſed, when we ſee our ſelues deſpiſed, becauſe wee knowe our ſelues woorthie of contempt. Thirdly, humilitie is as it were an eſtate or condition in which we obtain the grace of God, and haue fellowſhippe with him, Luke 1. Hee fillet the hungry with good things. 1.Pet.5. He reſiſtes the proud and giues grace to the humble. Eſay 57.17. I dwell with him that is of a contrite and humble ſpirite, to reuiue the ſpirite of the humble, and to giue life to them that are of a contrite heart. Againe, 66.3. To him will I looke that is poore, and of a contrite ſpirite, and trembleth at my word. Laſtly, humilitie is the waie to eternall life. Chriſt humbled himſelfe; and Phil.2.8. therefore was hee exalted of his Father.

Matth.4.8. They that would enter into the kingdome of heauen muſt be conuerted, and become as little children in reſpect of humilitie. Wherefore let vs giue our ſelues nowe and euermore to ſerue our God in humbling our ſpirites before his Maieſtie. This is the right ſeruing of God: he reſpectes not the ſeruice of the multitude, which ſtands onely in the performance of certaine ceremonies, and is nothing but hip-labour.

In patience we muſt conſider firſt of all the ground: and that is faith and hope. By faith I vnderſtand that perſwaſion, whereby wee are aſſured that God is iuſt in his corrections: wiſe, impoſing them for good endes: and mercifull, not dealing with vs according to our deſerts. Saint Paul ſaith, that affliction bring foorth patience, not properly of themſelues, but becauſe they are ioyned with the ſenſe and apprehenſion of the loue of God ſhed abroad in their hearts Rom.5.

all of your faith bringeth forth patience, that is, faith exerciſed by afflictions, and prooued to be tru faith, cauſeth patience. Hope likewiſe is the ground of patience: becauſe when it is begun by faith, it is continued and preſerued by hope: which makes vs in our afflictions to looke for ſome eaſe, or end, or for euerlaſting life. And therefore
1. Theſ.1.3. patience is called the patience of hope. The propertie of patience is to mooue vs quietly & willingly to yeild ſubiection to the hand of God in all our afflictions to the very death, and to moderate our affections by the conſideration of the will and plea- Pſal.44.and ſelues vppon your bed, and be ſtill: againe, be ſilent to Iehoua. Nowe this is the ſilence of the heart, whereby without grudging, repining, or rebelling, men ſubiect their wils, and reſigne themſelues to the will of God in their aduerſities, and are well content therewith. And this is right patience; the deuill and his angels yeild ſubiection to God in their puniſhments, not freely vpon a conſideration of the will of God, but by conſtraint, becauſe they can no otherwiſe chooſe. The child of God in his afflictions yeelds himſelfe to the pleaſure of God, and will not ſeeke to be free from them, when he knowes it to be the will of God that he Phil.4.11.

In the Praier of the heart, diſtinguiſhed from vocall praier, I conſider two things. The firſt is the rule thereof, and that is the will of God: according to which we muſt aske whatsoeuer we aske. And therefore for euery petition we direct vnto God, we must haue, either commandement, or promise, or both. Secondly praier contains in it a double action of the heart. The first is, from touched and feeling hearts to present vnto God the honest desires and the godly sorrowes thereof. For these are before God liuely and reall requests. Dauid saith, Psal.10.17. The Lord heareth the desires of the poore. And Paul, Rom.8.26. the spirit maketh request for vs with grones that cannot be vttered. By honest desirs, I vnderstand the desire that we may glorifie the name of God, the desire that his kingdome may be erected in our hearts, the desire of obedience to his will, the desire that we may depend on his prouidence for the things of this life, the desire of mercie and forgiuenesse, and the desire of strength and the presence of God in temptations. By godly sorrowe, I meane griefe conceiued for want of the grace and blessings of God before named. The second action of the heart in praier, is by faith to depend on God, and to put our trust in him for the accomplishment of our honest desires. For we must aske in faith, and wauer not. By meanes Iames 1.7. of these two actions, praier is a 1 Sam.1.15 the powring out of the soule before God: and the b Psal.77.2. seeking of God, that is, of his fauour, prouidence, presence: and c 32.6,7. our flying vnto him for refuge.

In Thanksgiuing vnto God, there be two things. The first is a memorie, meditation, and serious acknowledgement of the blessings of God bestowed vpon vs, specially of our redemption by Christ. The second is, in way of thankfulnesse to God, Rom.12.1. to dedicate and consecrate our bodies and soules and all wee haue to diuine vses, that is, to the honour and seruice of God. This thing was figured in the sacrifices of the old law, which were first set before the altar, and so presented vnto God, and then afterward were offered vnto him. This dedication is made, when in the intention of our minds, and purpose of our hearts, and in all our affections, we giue vp and set our selues apart to the seruice of God, and this was first done in our baptisme, and is continually renewed in the Lords supper.

Thus haue I shewed the heads of the maine & principall worship of God. Now we are to be admonished to present vnto God the worship of our spirits in our faith, feare, loue, confidence, humilitie, patience, thankefulnesse of heart. For this cause we must labour to be renewed in the spirit of our mindes. It is neither circumcision nor vncircumcision, as Paul saieth; it is neither baptisme, nor the Lords Supper; it is neither preaching nor hearing that auaileth, nor the profession of the Gospell, but the new creation in a pure heart, good conscience, and faith vnfained, that is, the 1.Tim.1.5. spirituall seruice of God.

Thus much of the principall worship of God. The lesse-principall is the outward worshippe of God, standing in sundry exercises of godlinesse. Of outward worshippe twoo things must generally be considered. The first, though it bee the lesse principall, yet is it altogether necessarie. We are commanded to loue God with all our strength: and therefore loue must not onely be conceiued in minde, but also testified in the actions of the bodie. God created as well the bodie as the soule: Christ redeemed both bodie and soule: therefore saieth Paul, Glorifie God in your bo- 1.Cor.6.20. die, and in your spirite. Christ is an head to the whole man, as well in respect of body as soule. For this cause, not only soule, but also body, must stand in subiection to Christ. Paul saith, With the heart we beleeue to righteousnesse, and with the mouth wee make confession to saluation.

The worshippe of the bodie is called Adoration, which standes in the bowing of the knee, the bending or prostrating of the bodie, the lifting vp of hands or eyes. Heer it may be demanded, whether it may be giuen to any other thing than God, and howe farre forth. I aunswer thus: The gesture of adoration is properly a signification of reuerence and subiection. And therfore adoration may be yielded to them to whome reuerence, humiliation, obedience, or subiection is due. Now GODS pleasure is, that men shal be subiect, first of all to himselfe, and secondly to some of his creatures: but in a diuerse kind of subiection. The subiection which is due to God, is absolute, and for himselfe, first in regarde hee is soueraigne Lorde of our bodies and soules, and consciences: secondly in regard of the infinite excellencie of his Diuine attributes, especially that hee is the Authour and giuer of all good things; that hee heares and helpes men euery where calling vppon him in the secretes of their hearts. And the adoration that is done euen for the acknowledgement and signification of these things, is the adoration that is proper to God, and is therefore called diuine or religious adoration. And of it Christ saith, Thou shalt worshippe the Lorde thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue. The Angells refused this adoration, when it was giuen them. Daniel chose rather to be cast to the den of the Lyons, then to giue this kinde of worshippe to Darius, or at the least, to offer occasion to men to suspect the giuing of it.

Subiection likewise is due to the creatures that are set ouer vs, or about vs, by God; either by reason of greater gifts bestowed on them, or by reason of the office of gouernment which they beare. And this subiection is not absolute, but in part according to Gods will, and for God: that is, to signifie the reuerent regard we beare to the gifts of God, and the order which hee hath set among men. And the gesture of adoration doone to acknowledge and signifie these things, is called Ciuill Adoration. And according as the degrees of dignitie, by reason of diuersitie of giftes and offices are among men, so are the degrees of honor, and the signes of honor or reuerence in gesture, whereof the chiefe is the prostrating of the body. Vpon this ground it appeares to be the will of God, that men should yeeld subiection, and consequently adoration, only to creatures that are more excellent and worthy than himself. Therfore it is not the will of GOD, that man shall be subiect to vnreasonable creatures, and giue to them either ciuil or religious adoration, much lesse to images. Secondly, God wil not that we adore the wicked spirites being his enemies, adiudged to eternall pains, but that we hold them accursed, as God himselfe doth. Thirdly, good Angells, considering they excell men both in nature and gifts, were rightly honoured of the Patriarks when they appeard: but seeing they appeare not nowe, as they were wont heretofore, no adoration at all is to be giuen them. Lastly, ciuill or politicke adoration, or the bending of the bodie, without sinne or iniurie to God, is giuen to men that be in office, or excel in gifts: & oft times is due by the ordinaunce of God, and cannot without sin be omitted. Thus Abraham honoured the Hittites, Ioseph his brethren, Mephiboseth Dauid: & Paul saieth, Honour to whom honour belongeth. Of ciuill adoration two caueats must bee remembred: one, that it must not exceede the custome of the Countrey, where it is performed: the other, it must be doone as to a meere creature, though it be a Prince. If it exceed in either of these, it inclines to religious worshippe. Cornelius worshipped not Peter as though hee had beene a God by nature, for hee knew him to be a man: but he worshipped him as one that was by extraordinary grace exalted aboue the condition of men and angels, as thogh hee had beene more than a man, though not so much as God himselfe: and the adoration that is doone vnto him to signifie and acknowledge this condition of his, is disalowed of Peter himselfe. The worship that is done to the Pope, is ciuil adoration, inclining to religious honour, becaus the kissing of the foot is not giuen to any man or prince vpon earth beside: and it is giuen to him as hee is vicar of Christ, hauing power to make lawes, binding conscience, and to forgiue sinnes.

Gen. 23. & 43. 2. Sam. 9

The second point is, that the outward worshippe doth not please God of it selfe, but by meanes of the inward before described. Againe, it is spirituall, not by it selfe, becaus it stands in bodily actions, but by reason of the inward worshippe, whence it proceeds, and wherof it is a signe. Moreouer, being seuered from inward worship, it is worship in shew, and not worshippe in trueth. If the eye be euill, the whole bodie is darke. Christ biddes the Pharisies to wash the inside of the cup, and platter, and then all shall be cleane. To the vncleane their very minde and conscience, and all things else are vncleane. Matth. 6. 23 and 23. 26.

The outward worshippe of God, is eyther generall to all, or speciall to some. Worship common to all, is eyther church-seruice, or housholde seruice. Church-seruice is that which is performed publiklie in the Congregation of the people of God. The ground of this worshippe is, That we seperate, not only from Idols, but also ioyne our selues to the true church and people of God. For the church of God vpon earth is the Kingdome of Heauen, in which, righteousnes, peace of conscience, and ioy in the holy-ghost, with all blessings else, are to be found: and out of it is nothing to be found but shame and confusion. Againe, the Church of God vppon earth is as it were the suburbs of the citie of God, and the gate of heauen: and therefore entrance must be made into heauen, in and by the church. Hence it is that Luke saieth: And the Lorde added to the Church from day to day, such as shoulde bee saued. Acts 2. 47.

Church seruice stands in foure things, the doctrine of the apostles. (as Luke calleth Acte 2. it) fellowship, breaking of bread, & praier. By doctrine I vnderstand the hearing of Apostolicall doctrine preached, or the frequenting of sermons. Of it two things are to be taught, first the necessity, and the maner of hearing. The necessitie of this duetie appeares by sundrie reasons. First of all, the hearing of the word of God preached by the Ministerie of man, is an ordinance of God. The Israelites at Mount Sina say vnto Moses, Speake thou vnto vs, and we will heare thee: let not the Lord speake vnto vs lest we die. Exod. 20.19. To this request of theirs, the Lord yeeldes first his approbation, They haue spoken well: and then his Deut. 18.17. promise; I will raise them vp a prophet from among their brethren like vnto thee, and I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall verse 18. speake vnto them all that I shall commaund him. Indeede these words are spoken directly and principally of Christ: yet other Prophets and teachers must together with him be vnderstoode: because so much was Acts 3.22. the request of the Iewes. And if it be not so, I see not the reason of adding the words following, The Prophet which shall presume verse 19. to speake a word in my name, which I haue not commaunded, or to teach in the name of other gods, shall die. Because these things are not incident to Christ. Thus then (as I take it) the hearing and preaching of the word by man, was ordained and founded by God himselfe in Mount Sinai. This ordinance Christ renewed, when he said, The Scribes and Pharises sit in Moses chaire, Heare them.
Matth. 23.1. And that this ordinance must so continue to the end of the world, the prophet Isai teacheth, In the last daies the mountaine of Isai. 3. the house of the Lord shall be prepared in the toppe of the mountaines: ——— and many people shall goe and say, Come let vs goe vp to the mountaine of the Lord, to the house of the God of Iacob: and he will teach vs his waies, and we will walke in his pathes. Secondly, the preaching and hearing of the word of God is a common and vsuall meanes of God to beginne and to confirme faith and all graces of God that depend on faith, and consequently to worke our salvation. Rom. 1.16. The Gospel is the power of God to saluation to all that beleeue. v. 18. from faith to faith. And cap. 10. v. 14. How shall they call on him, in whome they haue not beleeued? and how shall they beleeue in him of whome they haue not heard? and how shall they heare without a preacher? 1.Cor. 1.21. It hath pleased God by the foolishnesse of preaching to saue them that beleeue. That we may be saued, we must haue a speciall faith: speciall faith requires a speciall word: and the written word beeing otherwise generall, is made speciall by application: and this application is effectually made by the ministerie of the worde: in which men called thereto, apply particularly to the consciences of their hearers the commaundements and the promises of God, and that in the name of God. By this it appeares of what weight and moment this ordinance of God is. Thirdly, vnlesse a man be borne anew by the holy ghost, he cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen: and the hearing of the word preached is the meanes of this newe birth. 1.Cor. 4. 15. In Christ Iesus I haue begotten you thorough the Gospell. Gal. 4.19. My little children of whome I trauell in birth againe vntill Christ be formed in you. And hereupon the word of God is called the immortall seed. The hearing therefore of the word is not (as many thinke) a matter of indifferencie. Fourthly, the hearing of the word is a note of seruice and subiection to God. Ioh. 8. 47. He that is of God heareth Gods word. And 10.17. My sheepe heare my voice and follow me. Fiftly, the want of the preaching and hearing of the word, is one of the great curses of God vpon earth. Salomon saith, Where vision faileth, the people are made naked. The greatest famine of all, saith the Prophet Amos, is the famine of Amos 8.11. hearing the word of God. Ose saith, The daies of visitation are come, the daies of recompence are come, Israel shall knowe it: but why? marke what followes: The Prophet is a foole: the man of the spirite is mad, for the multitude of their iniquities. Sixtly, the preaching of the word, is a meanes to beate downe the Kingdome of the diuell, and it is the key of the Kingdome of heauen. When the Disciples returned from preaching in Iudea: Christ saith; that Luke 10.18. hee saw Sathan fall downe from heauen like lightning. And promising to Peter authority to dispense the word, he saith; I will giue to thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen. Lastly, Matth. 16.19 it is the olde and auncient practise of the people of God to frequent and heare sermons. When the Sunamite craued leaue of her husband to goe to the Prophet, he

2.King 4.23 said, Wherefore wilt thou goe to day? it is neither newe moone nor Sabbath daie. Hence it appeares to be the auncient practise, to resort to the Prophets vpon Sabboth and other daies. And the Prophet Isai foretels what shall be the practise of men in the Isai.2. new testament, who shall say, Come, let vs go vp to the mountaine of the Lord, for he will teach vs his waies, and we will walke in his statutes.

To put the matter out of question, I will answer the principall obiections that are made against this ordinance of God: & they are made either by the heretickes called Enthusiastes, or by the common multitude. The Enthusiastes alleadge on this manner. First, say they: No creature can worke faith, and regenerate vs: the word preached is but a creature: for it is no more but a sound consisting of letters and syllables: and the vertue of it can doe no more but signifie to vs the will of God. I answer thus: The word preached and the right vse of it, must be distinguished. And the right vse of it is, when we vnderstand it, meditate thereon, endeauour to beleeue & to obey it. Nowe the word preached is of force, not simply, because it is preached & vttered, and the sound thereof comes to our eares; but because when it is preached, we heare it by the blessing of God, with docible, attentiue, and tractable hearts. And the word, when it is rightly vsed, is no principall cause of faith and regeneration, but only an instrument. And it is not an instrument, because it hath vertue in it to worke faith, and to regenerate, as a medicine hath to heale the bodie (for then it should be a naturall instrument) but it is an instrument in this respect, because when we heare and meditate on the word, God withall giues his spirit to worke that in vs which the word signifieth and testifieth, & to make vs not only to heare with our bodily eares, but also with the eares of our hearts, by yeelding subiection. The Lord Isai 59.21. saith, My spirit that is vpon thee, and my words which I haue put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth. Now by reason of this coniunction betweene the word and the spirit, in that the word by the senses conuaies to the minde that which the spirit workes in the heart: the preaching of the word is said to be an instrument of grace, and no otherwise. Secondly it is obiected, that the preaching of the word serues for the conuersion of the elect: and that no man knowes who be elect: wherevpon they say, that all exhortations to repentance are in vaine. I answer two things: the first, that the minister of the word in preaching is in the iudgement of charitie to presume that all his hearers be elect, leauing all secret iudgements to God. Thus Paul in his Epistles calles the Ephesians, Philippians, Thessalonians, &c. elect. The Ephes.1.4. 1. Thes.1.4. second is, that the word preached serues indeede principally for the calling and conuersion of the elect, but not only. For it serues also for the hardening of obstinate sinners, and for the taking of all excuse from them that are not elect. The Lord
Isai.9.10. saith to the Prophet Isai, Goe and say to this people, ye shall heare indeede, but ye shall not vnderstand: make the heart of this people fat, make their eares heauie, and shut their eies, lest they see with their eies, and heare with their eares, and vnderstand with their heartes, and conuert, and be healed them. And we may not maruaile at this, that the word should be the meanes of the conuersion of some, and an occasion of hardening others. For they which are hardened deserue to be hardened: and God will haue mercie on whome he will haue mercie. Thirdly, it is obiected, that they which are ordained to saluation, shal be saued, whether they heare the word preached, or no: and consequently that there is no such neede of hearing. I answer, it is false which is said. They which are ordained to life euerlasting cannot but heare the word. They which are ordained to the end, are likewise ordained to the meanes which tend to that end. Whome Rom.8.30. Actes 13.48. God hath predestinate, them he hath called. And as many as be ordained to eternall life, shall beleeue in Christ. In the counsell of God, the ordination of the meanes is as certaine as the ordination of the ende. The fourth obiection is this. The hearing of the word is vnprofitable without the spirit of God, which is not giuen to all: therefore we must waite till we receiue the spirit: and then afterward heare. By the like reason we might refuse, meate, drinke, apparell, and all means that serue to preserue life. For without the blessing of God, they are all vnprofitable: and therefore according to this wicked counsell, we should first of all waite till we feele the blessing of God in our bodies; and then afterwarde should we vse the meanes. And this were to commit murder. For we must vse the meanes first, and then in the meanes shal we find the blessing of God. Lastly, it is obiected, that the ministers of the new Testament are not ministers of the letter, that is, (as they say) of the written and vttered word. I answer, that by the letter we must vnderstand the bare lawe without the gospel: and it is so called because it was written by the finger of God in tables of stone. 1.Cor.3.6. Vers.7.

Obiections of the common people are many. First, say some, if Christ himselfe would preach, or an angell from heauen, we would heare, but seeing men like to our selues speake vnto vs, we care not so much for hearing. First of all, I answer, it is the ordinance of God that men should speake in his roome or stead, and that their doctrine shoud be accepted, as if the Lord himselfe spake. Luk. 10. 16, He that heareth you heareth me: he that despiseth you despiseth me. 2. Cor. 5. 20. We are imbassadours for Christ, as though God did beseech you through vs, we pray you in Christs stead, that ye be reconciled to God. Paul commends the Thessalonians, that they receiued his doctrine not as the word of man, but as the word of God: and he addes, that it was so indeede. 2.Thess.2.3. Againe it is the will of God that the treasure of his word, should be deliuered to vs in earthen vessels, that all glorie might be giuen to him. Lastly, it was the mind of some in Corinth, that they would heare none but Christ: and for this Paul condemnes them. Secondly, there be others that say, they can read the bible in their houses: and that there be the most perfect sermons of Christ and the Apostles: and hereupon they say, that they can as well serue God at home, as they which heare all the sermons in the world. To this I answer, first that the sermons of Christ though they be most perfect in themselues, yet are they not so profitable vnto vs, till they be explained and applied to our consciences in the ministerie of the word: as a loafe of the finest bread is vnfit for nourishment till it be quartered and shiued out vnto vs. Secondly the publike preaching of the word is a part of the publike seruice of God: as Paul testifieth saying, Whome I serue in the spirit in the Gospell of his sonne. Therefore men may not at their pleasure lie lolling at home, but they must ioyne themselues to the congregation and serue God in the Gospell of the sonne. Thirdly there be others that say, or at the least thinke, that they haue knowledge enough, there fore need not heare and frequent sermons. But such must vnderstand, that they know but in part: that the ministerie of the word serues to build vs vp till we become perfect men in Christ; and that is not till after this life: that the preaching of the word serues to teach not onely knowledge, but also practise of our knowledge: and in this latter respect all men must be hearers. Fourthly, some alleadge, that sermons be sometime erroneous, and consequently occasions of errours: and that there is no such thing, that comes by reading: therefore, say they, they will content themselues with reading. To this Paul answers, Dispise not prophesie. And whereas some might obiect, that Prophets teach falshoods oftentimes, he addes further in way of answer, Proue all things, hold that which is good. Againe, if by reason of the defects of teachers, preaching should be abolished, then reading both publikely and priuately, though it be an ordinance of God, should much more be abolished. For in reading there is sometimes mis-reading, sometimes no vnderstanding, sometimes mis-vnderstanding, sometimes mis-applying of the word read; and all these defects are helped by preaching. Fiftly, some say, that if they should frequent sermons, they should be accounted precise, and be mocked for their labour. But we must know, that whosoeuer is ashamed of Christ and of his word, the heauenly father will be ashamed of him in the day of iudgment. It was Nicodemus fault, not that he came to Christ, but that he came to him by night, beeing ashamed openly to professe himselfe to be a Disciple. Againe others say, that there is no good that comes by sermons: because they say, there is none worse then they that are common hearers of sermons. I answer, this badnesse is not the fault either of preaching or hearing, it is onely the fault of the persons that heare. There are none worse then such as be common frequenters of tauernes: and yet the buying, selling, and drinking of wine is not vnlawfull. Such as were hearers of the sermons of our Sauiour Christ, were of foure sorts; three of them badde, and one onely good. Lastly, some say they, wil prouide for their bodies, and leaue their soules to God. But the commandement of Christ is, Seeke first of all the kingdome of God and his righteousnesse. By this which hath beene said, it appeares, that we are all bound in conscience to frequent sermons so oft as 1.Cor.12.13. Eph.4.13. 2.Thess.5.20. Vers.21. Rom.1.9.

libertie, abilitie, and opportunitie serues: & that they greatly offend God, that seldome or neuer frequent the congregation, but giue themselues libertie for hearing to doe as they list: and such ought to be reformed by the authoritie of the magistrate.

Thus much of the necessitie of hearing: nowe followes the manner of hearing: In the right hearing of the word, two things are required. The first, that we yelde our selues in subiection to the word we heare: the second that we fixe our hearts vpon it. For God dealeth with vs in & by his word. And therefore the honour we doe to god, must be done with reuerence and respect to his word. Subiection to god must be yeilded in giuing subiection to his word: and our cleauing vnto God must be by fixing our hearts vpon his word. Subiection to the word is prescribed, when Paul saith, Let the word of God dwell in you plenteously. Col. 3.16. Nowe it dwels in vs, when we keepe it in memorie, and withall giue vnto it a soueraigntie & superioritie ouer vs, suffering our selues to be ruled by it. Subiection is yelded by faith, feare, humilitie.

Faith, is to giue credence to the whole word of God when we heare it, whether that which we heare be promise, commandement, or threat. For this Paul commends the Thessalonians, that they receiued the worde with much assurance. 1. Thess. 1.5. Without this faith, the word is but a dead letter. When the old Hebrewes heard the word it was not profitable vnto them, because it was not mixed with faith. Heb. 4.2.

Feare likewise in respect of the word which we heare, is required. It is the right feare of God, to feare God in his word: & to auoide the breach of it. The prophet Isai saith, that the Lord hath respect to them that are of a contrite heart, and tremble at his word. Isa. 66.2.

Humilitie in hearing is necessarie, that we may humble our selues before God, by meanes of the word we heare. In this regard Saint Iames bids vs receiue the word of God with meekenes. Iames 1. When Iosias heard the law reade, his heart melted within him, and he humbled himselfe. 2. King. 22.19. The Iewes at the sermon of Peter cried out, beeing pricked in their hearts. Men and brethren, what shall we doe to be saued? Act. 2.37.

To come to the second point. Our hearts are fixed on the word of God two waies. First when we make it our treasure by louing it aboue all things, & by placing our principall delight in it. Consider the example of Dauid: The lawe of thy mouth (saith he) is better vnto me then thousands of gold and siluer: and, Oh howe doe I loue thy lawe! it is my meditation continually. Psal. 119.72.97. And hee that will be a good hearer, and make any proceeding in the schoole of Christ, must in the true affection of his heart preferre the lawe of God aboue all earthly things whatsoeuer.

Againe, we fixe our hearts vpon the word, when we make it our stay and foundation, to build our selues vpon it. Thus Iude biddes vs build our selues to our most holy faith, That is, vpon the word of God beleeued. Iud. 20. The world, in which we liue, is like a troubled sea: in it we finde no stay or footing for our selues: therefore we must lift vp our hands to the word of God and make it our stay or foundation. It is a foundation two waies. First, of our actions. Thus Dauid said that the statutes of God are the men of his counsell. Psal. 119.24. When Rebecca felt two twinnes to striue in her wombe, she went straight to aske the Lord, that is the Prophet of the Lord. And the like must we doe for all our actions. Furthermore, the word and doctrine of saluation is the foundation of our comfort both in life and death. Remember (saith Dauid) the promise made to thy seruant, wherein thou hast caused me to trust: it is my comfort in my trouble. For thy promise hath quickened me. Psal. 119.49.50. Paul saith, that the hope we conceiue, is by patience and the cõfort of scriptures. Rom. 15.4. God hath made promise to his presence, fauour, aide, and protection in life & death, to them that trust in his worde: in this must we establish our hearts in all our sorowes and troubles, and against the feares of death and damnation.

Thus much of the first part of the publike worship of God in the hearing and frequenting of sermons: the second followes, namely, Fellowship.

Fellowship is a worke of mercie, standing in the releife of them that be in need. And it is an excellent part of the worship of God: as he himselfe testifieth. To doe good and to distribute forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased. Heb. 13.16. The almes of Cornelius did asced vp in the presence of God in heauen, as incense. Act. 10.4.

For the better vnderstanding of this fellowship, I will consider fiue things. Who must releeue? how releife must be giuen? and howe many waies? in what order?

der? and with what minde?

For the first, the Scripture makes two kinde of men, one that haue possessions, and are giuers: the other, such as be in need and are receiuers. And there is no third sort mentioned in the word: for all must either be giuers or receiuers. The man that gets his liuing with the labour of his hand, must labour for this end, that hee may haue to giue to him that needeth. The poore widdow cast her mite into the treasurie. Christ was poore, and yet he gaue almes. Such as could not bring vessels of gold to the building of the Tabernacle, yet, if they brought goates haire, and rammes skinnes, it was accepted. And they which are of any abilitie at all, be it neuer so small, should giue something, be it neuer so little, in regard that reliefe is the honouring and worshipping of God.

Eph 4.28. Luke 3.11. John 13.29.

For the second, How much? I answer, two things. First, that euery particular man must giue according to his abilitie, and, if neede require, beyond his abilitie. Paul commendeth the Macedonians for their liberalitie. For (saith hee) to their power (I beare record) yea, beyond their power, they were willing. And where he saith, beyond their abilitie, he sets downe a caueat afterward: Neither is it, that other men should be eased, and you grieued. The second point is, that euery Body or Church, yeeld a sufficiencie of releefe to their owne poore, and that from themselues, if it be possible: if not, by helpe from others. And this Paul teacheth, when hee requires, that Churches be not charged, to the end, that there may be sufficient for them that are widdowes indeede. And that there alwaies be a sufficiencie, three caueats must be obserued. The first, that they which can labour, must be forced to labour, and if they will not, they must not be releeued. This is the order that God hath set downe. Abilitie to labour in his kinde, is as good as land and reuenewes; and therefore the neglect of labour, is as much to the hurt of Church and Common-wealth, as the contempt of gold, siluer, land. Againe, the Lord requires, that men labour for this end, that they may eate their owne bread, and that (as much as possibly may be) nothing be wanting vnto them. The second is, that vaine and superfluous expences, in feasting, costly apparrell, and gaming, be cut off. For by these things, men disable themselues, to doe the good they ought to doe. The third is, that in extreame necessitie, when there is no other way of releefe, men must sell their goods, that the poore may be relieued. Thus must the commandement of Christ be vnderstood; Sell that which you haue, and giue almes. And the Psalme; The righteous hath dispersed and giuen to the poore. And in this case did they of Hierusalem sell their possessions, and giue to euery man, according as they had neede.

2 Cor. 8.3. Verse 13. 1 Tim. 5.16. 1 Thess. 3.10. 2 Thess. 3.12. Luke 12.33. Psal. 112.9. Acts 2.45.

Touching the third point, there be three waies of releeuing. The first is, the giuing and bestowing of any part of our owne goods, and this is commonly called Almes: and it is to be giuen for the releefe of such as want both possession & ability to helpe themselues by labour. The second is, Free-lending of goods or mony, to such as can liue of themselues in part, if they be thus helped. This dutie hath the Lord straightly commanded, in respect of the poore, that they borrow freely, and borrow sufficient. But alas, this worke of mercy, is little or nothing regarded. If there be hope of any thing to be lent, the rich presently seaze vpon it, with their interest: so as there is no place for the request of the poore. The third way of releefe is, to forgiue dues and debts to them that are fallen to decay, without their own default. Reade and consider the practise of Nehemias, ca. 5. verse 9.

Deut. 15.7. Luke 6.

The fourth point is, what order is to be vsed in releeuing. The answer is, that the poore may not be suffered to gather their alms from doore to doore by begging. For this is a proclamation to the world, of mens hardnesse of heart, and want of charitie, when releefe is not to be had, but by crying and calling. Againe, in the almes that is obtained by begging, no proportion is obserued: for the bold and instant begger gets all, and the rest haue nothing. Lastly, to suffer wandring and begging for releefe, is to set vp a schoole of idlenesse. For when it is knowne, that the poore may be suffered to begge, all thought of taking paines for a liuing by many, is laid aside, and begging is made an occupation, and beggars shall haue their apprentices, as men of trade, as it hath beene heeretofore. What then is the right order of dispensing releefe? I answer, that conuenient releefe must be collected, & accordingly diuided to the poore, by fit and able men. Among the Iewes, tithes & offerings to the poore, were brought into store-houses, and into the treasurie of the Temple: that they might afterward be diuided according to euery mans neede. Possessions sold to releeue the poore in the Primitiue Church, were laide downe at the Apostles feete. And the Apostles mooued by the spirit of God set downe this order; that wise and godly men, must be chosen to gather and dispence the releefe of the poore. By Gods prouidence, like order is established in this our Church and land: because it is the ordinance of God, all men must seeke to further it: and they that shall neglect their duty herein, wittingly and willingly, are not in this point, friendes of God and their country.

The last point is, with what minde must wee giue releefe? I answer. First, with a thankfull minde to God. For wee must consider, that God hath giuen Christ to vs: and hereupon in way of thankfulnesse, we must giue our selues, our bodies, soules, goods, and all wee haue to God for his honour and glory. And hauing thus dedicated and giuen our selues to God; then shall wee be able to giue part of our goods in way of releefe to the poore. Paul commends the Macedonians for their rich liberality. But what was the ground of it? 2.Cor.8.5 They gaue Their owne selues (saith he) first to the Lord, and after vnto vs by the will of God. After the conuersion of Tyrus, the merchandise and the gaine thereof, is sanctified to the Lord. Isai.23.18. And what is this? marke what the Prophet addeth: her marchandise shall not be laid vp and kept in store, but it shall be for them that dwel before the Lord, to eate sufficiently, and to haue durable clothing. Secondly, releefe must be giuen in loue; because the poore be our flesh. 2.Cor.13.3. If a man giue all his goods to the poore, and haue no loue, it is nothing, saith Saint Paul. Thirdly, in releefe, there must be pittie and compassion. The Prophet Isai saieth; Isa.58.10. Wee must plucke out our hearts to the hungry. And wee are commanded, to remember them that be in bonds; Heb.13.3. as though we were bound with them, and them that be in afflictions; as if we were afflicted with them. Fourthly, releefe must be giuen in simplicitie. Rom.12. He that distributeth in simplicitie. Now simplicitie is, when in this action, wee aime neither at profite, nor praise, but onely intend to please and obey God. To this purpose saith Christ, Math.6.3. that when we giue our almes, The left hand must not know what the right hand doth: because wee may not seeke to please our selues of men in our almes, but simply to approue our hearts to God. Fiftly, cheerefulnesse is required. The Lord loueth a cheerefull giuer. Paul bids rich men, that they be readie to distribute and communicate. 1.Tim.6.18. To this purpose Salomon saieth; Say not to thy neighbour, goe, and come againe to morrow, and I will giue it thee, if thou hast it now. Prou.3.28. And Iob saieth, that hee neuer restrained the desire of the poore, nor made the eye of the widdow to faile. Iob 31.16. The sixt thing required, is bountifulnesse, which the Lord commandeth, by bidding vs to open our hands to the poore: and promising plentifull reward. He that soweth in blessings: that is, plentifully, shall reape plentifully. Deut.15.11. The seauenth, is iustice, whereby we giue releefe of our owne. Mercie will not stand with iustice: and the Lord biddes vs deale our owne bread to the poore. 2.Cor.9.6. The last thing is, that releef must be giuen, not in hypocrisie, but in truth: 1.Ioh.3.18. Let vs not loue in word, neither in tongue onely, but in deede and truth. Isa.58.7. Saint Iames notes, it was a vaine thing to say to the hungry and naked, warme your selues, and fil your bellies, whenas things needefull, are not giuen them. Iam.2.16.

Thus much of releefe. Now wee are to be exhorted, to practise this dutie beforesaid, and that in the manner before prescribed. Inducements heereto are many. First, it is the commaundement of God, to giue releefe: and for the better inforcing heereof, hee hath added his promise; Blessed are the mercifull; for they shall obtaine mercie: Math.5.7. and his threat; There shall be iudgement mercilesse, to him that sheweth no mercie. Iam.2.13. Hereupon, the sentence of condemnation shall proceede, according to the neglect of workes of mercie: I was naked, and ye clothed me not; I was hungry, and yee fedde me not, &c. goe yee cursed into hell fire, prepared for the diuell and his angells. The second inducement to giue releefe, is from the excellencie of the worke, and that in sixe respects. First of all, releefe is the best kinde of thrift or husbandry that is: He that sowes plentifully, shall reape plentifully, saieth the Lord. 2.Cor.7. Where the poore are compared to ground, readie dressed and tilled to our hands, without any cost or labour on our parts: and our releefe, is seede cast vpon this ground: and for our paines in sowing of it, wee are promised by God, to reape the whole crop our selues. Secondly, giuing of alms, is not giuing, but lending, and that to the Lord, who in his good time, will returne the gift with increase. Prou.19.17. Thirdly, releefe is the best exchange that can be: for thereby, we change an earthly treasure, into Luke 12.33. to heauenly, as our Sauiour Christ saieth; Giue almes ——: and lay vp treasure in heauen. Fourthly, releese is a signe of Gods mercy to vs ward. Salomon saith, By mercy and truth, sinnes are forgiuen: that is, within our consciences, we know them to be forgiuen. And in this sense, Paul biddes rich men; lay vp a good foundation against the time to come: not because our saluation is founded on the workes of mercy; but because by them, we are to make our saluation sure and certaine vnto vs. Christ bids vs make friends of the mammon of iniquitie, that they may receiue vs into euerlasting Tabernacles: and this they doe, when they pray for men that are mercifull, and giue testimonie of them, that they are such as are to enter into the Kingdome of heauen. The mercie and bowells of compassion, that is in vs, is as it were a print and stampe of the mercy of God set in our hearts: and therefore, by the little sparke of mercy in vs, wee know the fulnesse of his mercy. Sixtly, by giuing releese, we come to a right vse of our goods: Giue almes, saieth Christ, and all things shall be cleane vnto you: that is, whereas you are giuen to couetousnesse, and oppression, repent heereof, and testifie your repentance by almes deedes: then shall this sinne of couetousnesse, be redressed, wherewith your liues are defiled, and ye shall likewise haue the pure vse of your goods, which now yee want. The Phisitian sometime speakes in like manner: Your disease comes of fulnesse, abstaine, or fast, and ye shall be well. Lastly, releese sometimes is a meanes of satisfaction to men. For restitution is a necessary worke of repentance. And when it is vncertaine, to whom restitution is due, by almes wee are to make a supply thereof. Thus Daniel saieth to Nabuchadnezzar, who had inriched himselfe by oppression; O King, breake off thy sinnes by mercy. Zacheus in his conuersion, restored fourefold for all his knowne oppressions and deceits, and because many of them were forgotten, or vnknowne, therefore in way of somerecompence, hee gaue halfe his goods to the poore. By the consideration of these, and many other excellencies of this worke, we are to stirre vp our selues to releese. The third inducement, is from examples. Christ beeing the fountaine of riches, became poore, to make his enemies rich. When the Merchants of Tyrus repented, they left off to hoard vp riches and gaine, according to their old manner, and dedicated them to holy vses, and part thereof to the poore. Like was the mercy of Iob, and the mercy of the beleeuers of the primitiue Church, who in the case of extreame necessitie, sold their goods, and gaue to euery man as hee had need.

To excuse the neglect of this dutie, men haue sundry shifts: some say, they are poore, and haue but little, and therefore they can giue no relieue. But such must know, that if there be a willing minde, a man is according to that hee hath, and not according to that he hath not. The widdowes mite, giuen of her penurie, was more respected of Christ, than the abundance of the rich. Others plead, that if they shall vse to giue relieue, they shall want themselues. I answer; no: for Salomon saieth, they that giue almes shall not want. And againe, though the goods we giue, seeme to be lost, and as it were, cast into the sea, yet shall they be found againe. Some againe say, they must spare for their children. I answer with Dauid; The righteous shall not be forsaken, nor their seede beg their bread. One man may, as Lazarus, but not both the righteous and their seede. Such as set their hearts to gather for their Children, withdraw themselues commonly, from releeuing the poore: and by this meanes, bring a curse vpon their own goods. And for the execution of this curse, some one or other of the posterity, riotously, makes hauocke of all. Some againe there are, that will giue no almes, because the poore are lewd, and wicked, and idle, and abuse their alms. I answer thus. When Paul had said, that idle persons which will not labour, must not eate, hee addes one thing further; that wee must not be weary of well doing. And though it so fall out, that the tongues of the poore curse vs, yet if we releeue them, their loynes (as Iob saith) shall blesse vs.

The third part of Church-seruice, is termed by Saint Luke, Breaking of bread. Whereby two things are signified, feasts of loue, which the first Christians obserued; and the vse of the Lords supper at the end thereof, which in the new Testament, as also baptisme, is a part of the seruice of God. And of it two things must be considered, the necessity, and the manner. The necessity of vsing the Lords Supper, according to the custome of the Church, whereof we are members, appeares, because it is a part of Gods worship, and because we are bound to it by commaundement; Let a man proone himselfe, and so eate of this bread, and drinke

Num.9.13. of this cuppe. In the old Testament, hee that had neglected to eate the Passeouer, hauing libertie and opportunitie so to doe, was cut off from the people of God. Now, looke what regard was had of the Passeouer in the old Testament; the same must be had of the Lords Supper in the new Testament.

By this which hath beene said, a double abuse is discouered. The first, that men depart the congregation in the time of the administration of Baptisme, as though it were no part of Gods worshippe, and nothing concerned them. The second is, that men take libertie to themselues, to receiue the Lords Supper, as oft and as seldome as they list; as though it were a thing indifferent, that might be done, or not done. They alleadge for themselues, that they are not in charitie, or that they are fallen into some one sinne or other: and therefore, if they should communicate, they shoud eate iudgement to themselues. I answer: if they be out of charitie, they should reconcile themselues to God and men, and being fallen into any sinne, they should renew their old repentance, without delay, and so come to the Lords Table: and by abstaining, they doe nothing else but double their sinne. For they continue in their old sinnes, and breake the commandement of God, touching the vse of the Sacrament.

The right manner of vsing the Lords Supper, stands in three things. The first, is the obseruing of the institution, without addition, detraction, or change. The second is, that the communicants must bring not onely a true faith, and the first initiall repentance, but also a renewing of them, both in respect of new and daily sinnes. The Corinthians, had both faith and repentance; yet because they failed in this point, of the renouation of their faith and repentance, they are said many of them, to be vnworthy receiuers, and to eate iudgement to themselues. The third thing is, that the Sacrament must be applied to his right end. And therefore it must be vsed, as a meanes to leade vs to Christ, as a means to confirme our faith in him, as a signe of thankefulnesse to God, as a meanes to increase loue among men. Thus is the Lords Supper euermore to be vsed. Hence it followes, that it is greatly prophaned and abused in the Church o Rome. For it is vsed only in one kinde, against the institution, and it is applied to superstition against the right end, in that it is made a meanes to conferre grace, and that by the very worke done.

The fourth part of Church-seruice is, publike prayer; at which all are to be present, and to assist in the congregation. For this as a due or a debt which wee owe vnto God: as Dauid saieth; Praise waiteth for thee in Syon, and to thee shall the vow be performed. Psal.65.1. To this hath God annexed the promise of his presence: If two or three be gathered together in my name, there am I in the middest of them. Math.18.20. The petition of an whole corporation ioyntly together, is more effectuall, than the petition of one single man: and so the prayer of the Congregation, is of greater force, than the prayers of priuate persons. In this regard Dauid saith; That the Tabernacles of God, are most amiable vnto him, and that hee had rather be a doore-keeper in the house of God, than dwell in the Tents of vngodlinesse. Psal.84.1. Zacharie foretelleth the practise of true beleeuers in the new Testament, saying: They that dwell in one Citie, shall goe to another, saying, vp, let vs goe and pray before the Lord, and seeke the Lord of Hosts: I will goe also. Zach.8.21. And this hath beene accordingly accomplished. For Christians of the primitiue Church, contented themselues with any place, so they might haue libertie to assemble themselues to pray vnto God. Acts 16.13.

The manner of our assisting in publike prayer, is this. Ministers in teaching are the mouth of God to the people: and in praying, they are the mouth of the people to God: and therefore must the people in feruent affection, lift vp their hearts vnto God, and in minde giue assent to the prayers, made in the name and behalfe of the Congregation, by their teachers: and for this cause it is, that wee are all to say Amen. Hence it appeares to be a fault, to depart the Congregation in the time of prayer, to sit & think nothing, as though we had no soule; to haue our mindes drowned in worldly affaires, and to be wandring to and fro. 1.Cor.14.

Thus we see the Church-seruice stands in the right manner of hearing the word, of praying, vsing the Sacraments, and workes of mercie. Hereupon many are to be aduertised, to amend and acknowledge their ignorance, who thinke that if they say the Beliefe, ten Commandements, and the Lords prayer, when they are in the congregation, God is serued and worshipped of them to the full, though otherwise, they profit little or nothing by the word, prayer, or Sacraments.

Thus much of Chuch ſeruice: now followes houſhold-ſeruice. Of it three things are to be conſidered. The firſt is, that of neceſsity in euery familie worſhip and ſeruice is to be directed vnto God. This is the commandement of God. Lift vp pure hands in euerie place: and therefore in the familie. Zachary foretelleth, that when God ſhall powre foorth the ſpirit of grace and prayer vppon men in the latter dayes, then euerie familie apart ſhall mourne for their ſinnes, whereby they haue crucified Chriſt. The place where Adams familie aſſembled, is called the face of God; becauſe there they prayed vnto God, and offered ſacrifice, and there likewiſe he teſtifieth his fauour and preſence to them. Ioſua ſaith, I and my houſholde will ſerue the Lord. Cornelius feared, that is, ſerued God with his whole houſhold. Paul ſaith, Priſcilla, and Aquila ſalute you, and the Church in their houſe. Now the Church is ſaid to be in their houſe, not only becauſe it was the place of the congregation, but becauſe in regard of Gods worſhippe, it was, as it were, a little Church. A familie cannot ſtand without the bleſsing and protection of God: and this bleſsing is annexed to the worſhip of God. For godlineſſe hath the promiſes of this life, and the life to come. Laſtly, the families in which God is not worſhipped, are no better then companies and conſpiracies of Atheiſts. For this is one property of an Atheiſt, not to call vpon God. Let all ſuch perſons marke this doctrine, that think it ſufficient, if they pray in the congregation.

1. Tim. 1. 8.

Gen. 4. 14.
Ioſu. 4. 15.
Act. 10. 2.
1. Cor. 16. 19.
Pſal. 14. 1.

Though it be thus neceſſarie (as we ſee) that God be worſhipped in euery familie apart: yet is the time, and place, and manner of this worſhip, left free to the Chriſtian wiſdome and diſcretion of men.

The ſecond point to be conſidered is concerning the parts of this worſhip, and they are two, inſtruction, and praier. Inſtruction ſtands in teaching, and learning, and it is called by Paul, the inſtruction and information of the Lord.

Ephe. 6. 9.

Inſtruction muſt be of three things. Firſt of the commaundements of God. Deut. 6. 6. Thou ſhalt rehearſe them continually to thy children. And whereas houſholders might alledge that their children and ſeruants are dull of conceit, and will not learn that which they are taught, the Lord giues a further charge to parents to vrge and repeate the commanndements. For the word tranſlated [to rehearſe] ſignifieth to ſharpen the commaundements vpon children, as men vſe to ſharpen a ſtake that it may enter into the ground. Again parents are commanded by God, to commaund their children, that they obſerue the wordes of the law. This was the commendation Abraham had, I know Abraham (ſaieth the Lord) that hee will commaund his ſonnes and his houſholde after him, that they keepe the way of the Lord to doe righteouſneſſe and iudgement.

Deuter. 32. 46
Gen. 18. 19

Secondly, there muſt be inſtruction in the familie concerning all ordinances of God. Thus the Iſraelites were commaunded to teach their children the meaning of the Paſſeouer, the meaning of the oblation of the firſt borne vnto God, the meaning of the twelue ſtones, that were taken out of Iordan and were erected in Gilgal.

Exod. 12. 26. and 13. 14
Ioſua 4. 21.

Thirdly, there muſt be inſtruction touching the works of God, whether they be iudgements or mercies. Parents are bidde by God to teach their ſons and their ſons ſonnes the things that they haue ſeene. Ezechias after his recouery from a deadly ſicknes, in way of thankfulnes ſaith, the father to the children ſhall declare thy trueth.

Deuter 4. 9
Eſay 38. 19

The ſecond part of houſhold ſeruice is priuate praier: of it I haue ſpoken before. Therefore I proceede. The third point to be conſidered, is concerning the perſon to whome belongeth the care and charge of houſhold ſeruice: and that is the maiſter of the familie. His office is twofold. The firſt is to prepare and fit his familie to the worſhip of God, whether publike or priuate. When Iacob was to worſhip God in Bethel, he cauſed his family to cleanſe themſelues. Iob calles his children, and ſanctifies them. Now this cleanſing or ſanctifying of the family ſtands in two things: the firſt is, to purge it of all open vices as much as may be: the ſecond, to cauſe euery perſon, at the leaſt outwardly, to walke in the wayes of God. King Ezechias, when the Prieſts & Leuites were negligent, and men of certaine Tribes were not prepared to receiue the Paſſeouer, he made a ſupplie of this want by his praier, and was heard. In the like caſe, like is the duty of the houſholder within his owne familie.

Gen. 35. 2.
Iob 1. 5.
1. Chron 30. 18, 20

That this may the better be effected, the charge of teaching and inſtructing is laide vpon euery maiſter of a family by expreſſe commandement, Thou ſhalt rehearſe them to thy children. Paul ſaieth, the wife muſt aske her husband at home: thereby ſig-nifying, that he must instruct and teach all persons in his familie. And in the second place, the wife is to do the like. Bathshabe Prou.31.1. instructeth Lemuel, that is, her sonne Salomon, Lais and Eunice bring vp Timothie

2.Tim.1.3. Mat.3.13. in the Scriptures of a childe. And that this teaching may not be in vaine, the master of Deut.32.46. Gen.18.19. a familie hath authoritie giuen him to cõmaund them whom he teacheth, to walke in the waies of God, as Abraham did. It is obiected, that if a master of a familie must teach and exhort, he must then doe the office of a Minister: for he can doe no more but teach and exhort. I answer, that teaching by the master of a family differs in kind from the teaching of the Minister, as the gouernment of the housholder from the gouernment of the Magistrate. For the housholder teacheth onely by the authoritie of a father or master: whereas Ministers of the worde teach and exhort by the authoritie and name of God: as Paul saith to Tit.2.15. Titus, Speake and exhort, and reproue with all authoritie. Secondly, ministers in teaching, are in the room and stead of Christ,
2.Cor.5.21. and beare his person as Ambassadours: hereupon they which heare them, heare Christ; and they that despise them, despise Christ: and hereupon they are called in speciall manner. Men of God, seruants of God: and it is not so with housholders in teaching and exhorting: for they beare onely the priuate persons of masters, fathers, husbands, when they teach. Thirdly teaching in the family, is but a preparation to publike teaching, that all persons may the better profit by the publike ministery. Lastly, priuate teaching depends on publike teaching, and must be ruled by it. For men may not teach at their pleasures, what they wil in their families, but such doctrine as they haue learned & receiued from the publike ministerie. And thus, albeit the matter of doctrine be one and the same in the house, and in the Church: yet is not the office of teaching one and the same.

Againe it is demaunded, seeing the master of a familie must teach them of his owne house, whether he is to doe it by himselfe in his owne person, or by a deputie. I answer, as much as possibly may be, he is in his owne person to performe this duetie; yet in the case, not of negligence, but of necessitie, when the familie is great, and he is not so able to teach, and is withal imployed in publike affaires, and therevpon oftentimes absent, he may haue his deputy to teach in his room. Thus Abraham performed the weightiest matter that concerned the establishment and continuance of his familie, not by himselfe, but by his steward: as namely, the choise of a wife for Gen 24.
his sonne Isaac.

The second office of the master of the familie is, to be the principall agent, doer, and directer in the worship of God within his familie. For this cause the fourth commandement is giuen first of all and principally to the maister of the familie: that he might see the Sabbath kept, and be a principall doer in all partes of Gods worship. The company of the Disciples were the housholde of Christ: and hee himselfe did administer all parts of Gods worship with Luke 22.15 them, and among them.

Thus housholders see their duety: and they must in the next place be admonished and exhorted with conscience to performe the same. Let the example of Moses be considered. Hee was to doe seruice to God and his countrey in Egypt, and when hee was nowe in his iourney in a certaine Exod.4.24.
Inne, the Lord withstoode him, and made as though he would haue killed him. But for what cause? Surely hee had not sanctified and purged his owne family: and that appeares, because he had not circumcised his child. Men in our dayes may looke for like iudgements, that liue in the like negligence.

The last kinde of worship is that which concerneth the person of euery particular man in his place and calling: and that is, to keepe and maintaine faith, that is, true religion, and hope of euerlasting life, and a cleere conscience before God and man. This is the right seruing of God, and not to babble a few wordes, either in the morning or euening, without vnderstãding or affection. Thus much Paul teacheth in his owne example. In the way (which some call Acts 24.14, 15,16 heresie) I worship the God of our forefathers, beleeuing all things written in the Lawe and the Prophets, hauing hope of the resurrection of the iust and vniust, and endeauouring to keepe a cleare conscience before God and men.

That this personall worshippe may bee performed & continued, two thinges must be practised. The first is, the priuate reading and searching of the Scriptures. This was the common practise of the Iewes: Search, or, yee search the Scriptures. The Iohn 5.
Scriptures are a light shining in a darke place: 2.Pet.1.19 we therefore must attend vnto them, while we are wandring in the light of this world; and we cannot attend vnto them, vnlesse

we reade them. The word of God is the Ephe.6. sword of the spirit: and there is no handling of this sword vnles we be well acquainted with it. Dauid a Prophet, did vse to reade Dan.9.2. and meditate in the Scriptures. Daniel taught by reuelation, did reade for al this, the prophet Ierem. Great is the neglect of this dutie in our daies. In many houses ye shall finde a faire paire of tables, but no Bible at all. Others cannot finde in their hearts to disburse so much money as will buie them a Bible: others take delight in reading of ballads, and idle discourses, and haue no mind to reade the scriptures. It is an euil signe. When the stomacke refuseth meates, it is sicke: and when there is no delight nor sauour in Gods word, it argues the wickednes of the heart. For the scripture is like spice, which, the more it is chafed and rubbed, the sweeter it is. And this negligence hath iudgements of God tending on it, Isa. 5.13. My people go into captiuitie, because they want knowledge. Prou. 28. 9. He that turnes his eare from hearing the law, his very prayer is abhominable.

The second meanes to maintaine faith, hope, good conscience, is priuate, or se- Gen.24 63. cret praier. Isaac went out in the euening Deut.9.18. to meditate or pray. Moses prayed fortie daies and fortie nights, for the children of 1.Sam.12.23. Israel. Samuel saith, God forbid that I should sinne against God, and cease to pray for you. Psl.55.18. &119. Dauid praied three times, and seuen times a day. Christ, who was not subiect to sinne Luke 6.12. as we are, went often apart and praied, and continued in praier whole nights. Paul in sundrie epistles calls vpon the faithfull for priuate praier, as when he bids them pray 1.Thes.5. continually.

It may be said, how shall we maintaine true faith, or religion, when by reason of manifold dissentions, we cannot tel which is the true religion. I answer, subiect your hearts and liues to God, aod obey him in all his commandements, and ye shall certainly know and be assured without faile of the true religion: for God reueales his Psal.25.14. couenants to the humble. And Christ saith, Iohn 7.17. If any will obey his fathers will, he shall know whether his doctrine be of God or no. Let this be remembred. For the way to the attainment of the trueth, is not inquired by subtill disputation, vnlesse humble obedience to God, go withall.

Furthermore, for the keeping of a good conscience, two things must be done. First we must euermore tend on the calling of God, that is, the dutie we owe to God and men, not daring at any time to goe out of the precincts of our callings. For this cause we must put a difference betweene duties that be necessarie, and such as are not necessarie to be done. The first must be done, and the second left vndone, that we be not busi-bodies in other mens matters.

The second thing is, that we must doe the offices and workes of our callings in good manner. For this cause first of all, they must be done in obedience to God, that is, with a minde and intention to please and obey God. Secondly they must be done in the name of Christ, that is, with Coloss.3.17. praier and thanksgiuing in the name of Christ. Thirdly, they must be done in faith because we must alwaies by our faith depend on God for the blessing and good successe of our labours. Fourthly, they must be done in loue to God and man: yea, all the religion we haue, all the grace and goodnes of our hearts, must shew it selfe in the workes of our particular callings. For looke what a man is in his particular place and calling, that he is indeed. Lastly, they must be done with patience. The good ground brings forth fruit with patience. And the reason is, because it is the will of God to exercise men with manifold miseries in euery estate and condition of life. And the works of our callings thus performed, are fruits of good conscience, and the seruice of God.

A TREATISE OF GODS FREE GRACE, AND MANS FREE-WILL.

Printed by IOHN LEGAT, Printer to the Vniuer-
sitie of CAMBRIDGE. 1605.

BRITISH MUSEUM

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPfull, Sir Edward Dennie, Knight.

Right Worshipfull, it is a thing most euident, that the present Religion of the Church of Rome, is an enemie to the grace of God, two waies. First, because it exalts the libertie of mans will, and extenuates the grace of God: and thus it doth in fiue respects. For first of all it teacheth, that naturall freewill of man, hath in it, not onely a passiue or potentiall, but also an actiue power, or imperfect strength in duties of godlinesse: and so much the lesse power is ascribed to the grace of God. This doctrine of theirs is flat against reason. For the wil of man in it selfe, is a naturall thing: and therefore it is neither fit nor able to effect any supernaturall action, (as all actions of godlinesse are) vnlesse it be first of all (as they say) elevated aboue his condition, by the impression of a supernaturall habite. And the Scripture is vtterly against this doctrine, when it saith: Ye were once darknesse, Eph. 5.8. We are not sufficient of our selues, to thinke any thing of our selues, 2. Cor. 3.5. The naturall man, [that is, he that wants the spirit of God] cannot perceiue the things of God, 1. Cor. 2.14. Ye were dead in sinnes and trespasses, Eph. 2.1. Without Christ, and without God in the world, v.12. Againe, Scripture saith further, that the heart of man is slow, Lu. 24.25. and vaine, Psal. 5.10. and hard that cannot repent, Rom. 2.5. and stonie, Ezech. 36.26. and that the Iewes were obstinate, their necke as an yron sinew, and their brow brasse, Isa. 48.4. and that it is God who giues eyes to see, and an heart to vnderstand, Deut. 29.4. By these testimonies it is manifest, that grace doth not onely helpe and assist our weake nature, but altogether change the peruerse qualitie thereof, and bring it from darknesse to light, Acts 28.18. and from death to life, Eph. 2.1. Which grace, whosoeuer doth not so farre forth acknowledge, neuer yet knew what the Gospel meant, neither did he euer consider the words of our Saiuour Christ: No man comes vnto me, vnlesse the Father draw him, Iohn 6.44. Prosper, the scholler of St. Augustine, hath a notable saying, which I meruell the Papists of our time doe not consider. We haue (saith hee) free will by nature, but for qualitie and condition, it must be changed by our Lord Iesus Christ.

Prosp. contra. Collat. c. 18. in fine.

Secondly, some of the Romish religion auouch, that the efficacie of Gods preuenting grace, depends vpon the co-operation of mans will: and they affirme, that the Counsell of Trent is of this minde: but then to the question of Paul. 1. Cor. 4.7. Who hath seperated thee? The answer may be made, I my selfe haue done it by mine owne will. And that shall be false which Paul teacheth, that beside posse-velle, the power of wel-willing, ipsum velle: that is, the act of wel-willing, is of God, Philip. 2.13. Others therefore place the efficacie of grace, in the congruitie of fit obiects and perswasions: as though it were sufficient to stirre vp the heart, and to incline the will in spirituall matters, and our weakenesse might be cured with so easie a medicine: but God is further said to soften the heart, Ezech. 26.26. to turne the heart, Luke 1.17. to open the heart, Acts 16.14. And because our hearts are euer hard, he wounds them, Cant. 4.9. hee circumciseth them, Deutr. 30.6. nay, hee bruiseth them, Ezech. 6.9. And when nothing will doe good at length, God is said to take away the stonie heart, Ezech. 11.19. to quicken them that are contrite, Isai. 57.15. Eph. 2.5. to giue a new heart, Eph. 4.23. Ezech. 36.26. nay, to create a new heart, Ephes. 2.10. and 4.28.

Molina de grat. & li. arb. q. 14. art. 13. disp. 12. Gratiæ auxilia, quòd efficacia sint, habet dependenter ab arbitrij libertate.

Thirdly, they giue vnto God in all contingent actions, a depending will, whereby God wills and determines nothing, but according as he fore-sees, that the will of man will determine it selfe. And thus to maintaine the supposed libertie of the will: that is, the indifferency and indeterminatenesse thereof, they deprime God of his honour and soueraignetie. For by this meanes, not God, but the will it selfe, is the first mouer and beginner of her owne actions. And there are euen of the Papists themselues, that condemne this doctrine as a conceit.

Shumel. sup. 1. Thom. q. 23. art. 3. disp. 8.

Fourthly, they teach, that the grace which makes vs acceptable and gratefull to God, stands in the inward gifts of the minde, specially in the gifts of charity. But this is most false which they teach: for charity is the fulfilling of the law. And Paul saieth, wee are not vnder the law, but vnder grace, Rom. 6.14. And againe, as many as are iustified by the law, are fallen from grace, Gal. 5.4. Now the grace that doth indeede make vs gratefull to God, is the free fauour and mercie of God, pardoning our sinnes in Christ, and accepting vs to eternall life, and not any qualitie in vs, as Paul signifies when he ſaith, we are ſaued, not according to our workes, but according to his purpoſe and grace, which is giuen to vs in Chriſt before all times. 2. Tim. 1. 9.

Laſtly, they teach, that the renewed will of man, by the generall direction and cooperation of God, can performe the duties of godlineſſe, without any ſpeciall helpe from God by new grace. But the Scripture ſpeakes otherwiſe. By the grace of God, I am that I am. I haue laboured, yet not I, but the grace of God which is with me, 1. Cor. 10. No man can ſay, that Ieſus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghoſt, 1. Cor. 12. 3. Without me ye can doe nothing, Iohn 15. 5. After ye beleeued, yee were ſealed with the ſpirit, Eph. 1. 17. Hee which hath begunne this good worke in you, will finiſh it vntill the day of Chriſt, Phil. 1. 6. That ye may abound with hope by the vertue of the ſpirit. Rom. 15. It is God that workes in you the will and the deede, Phil. 2. 13. Though the righteous fall, hee ſhall not be caſt off, for the Lord puts vnder his hand, Pſal. 37. 24. Incline my heart to thy teſtimonies: turne away mine eyes from beholding of vanity, and quicken me in thy way, Pſal. 119. 37. Teach me to doe thy will, becauſe thou art my God: let thy good ſpirit leade me in the land of righteouſneſſe, Pſal. 143. 10. Create in me a new heart, renew a right ſpirit in me——: and ſtabliſh me by thy free ſpirit, Pſal. 51. 12. draw me, and I wil runne after thee. By theſe and many other places it is euident, that God, after he hath indued vs with his ſpirit, doth not leaue vs to be guided by our ſelues, (for then we ſhould fall againe to our former miſerie) but he directs vs, hee lifts vs vp, he leades vs, he confirmes and ſuſtaines vs by the ſame grace, and by the ſame ſpirit, dwelling in vs, that walking in the way of his commandements, wee may at length attaine to euerlaſting happineſſe.

The ſecond way whereby the Papiſt ſhewes himſelfe to be an enemie of the grace of God is, that hee ioynes the merit of workes, as a Con-cauſe with the grace of God, in that which they call the ſecond iuſtification and in the procurement of eternall life: whereas on the contrary, Paul in the article of iuſtification, oppoſeth grace to works, yea to ſuch workes as are the gifts and fruits of the ſpirit. For Abraham did good workes, not by naturall free will, but by faith. Heb. 11. 8. And Paul oppoſeth iuſtifying grace to the workes of Abraham when he ſaith; to him that worketh, the wages is not imputed according to grace. And Tit. 3. 5. Not of the workes of righteouſneſſe, which we haue done, but of his mercy he ſaued vs, Rom. 11. 6. If by grace, then not of workes, or elſe were grace no more grace. Auguſtine ſaid well, that grace is no way grace, vnleſſe it be freely giuen euery way.

Thus then all things conſidered, it is the beſt to aſcribe all we haue or can doe that is good, wholy to the grace of God. Excellent is the ſpeech of Auguſtine: Onely hold this as a ſure point of godlineſſe, that no good thing can come either to the ſenſe or minde, or by any way conceiued, which is not of God. And Bernard: The Church ſhewes herſelfe to be full of grace, when ſhee giues all ſhe hath to grace, namely, by aſcribing to it both the firſt and laſt place. Otherwiſe, how is ſhe full of grace, if ſhe haue any thing which is not of grace? Againe, I tremble to thinke any thing mine owne, that I may be mine owne. This doctrine is the ſafeſt and the ſureſt, in reſpect of peace of conſcience, and the ſaluation of our ſoules. So much the Papiſts themſelues (betraying their owne cauſe) ſay and confeſſe. Bellarmine the Ieſuit ſaith; By reaſon of the vncertenty of our owne iuſtice, and for feare of falling into vaine glory, it a is the ſafeſt, to put our whole confidence in the alone mercy and goodneſſe of God. Caſſander in his booke called the Conſultation of Articles in queſtion, to Maximilian the Emperour, cites a ſaying of Benauenture, which is on this manner: It is the dutie of godly mindes, to aſcribe nothing to themſelues, but all to the grace of God. Hence it followes, that how much ſoeuer a man giues vnto grace, though in giuing many things to the grace of God, he take ſomething from the power of nature and free will, hee departs not from godlines: but when any thing is taken from the grace of God, and giuen to nature, which pertaines to grace, there may be ſome danger. Thus then to hold and maintaine iuſtification by faith, without works, and to aſcribe the whole worke of our conuerſation to God, without making any diuiſion betweene grace and nature, is the ſafeſt.

Theſe things I ſhew more at large in this Treatiſe following, which I now preſent to your Worſhip, as a ſmall teſtimony of mine humble dutie and loue: deſiring you to accept the minde of the giuer, and to peruſe it at your leaſure. And thus I commend your Worſhip, to the protection and grace of God in Chriſt.

Your Worſhips in the Lord,
William Perkins.

Ieruſalem, Ieruſalem, which killeſt the Prophets, and ſtoneſt them which are ſent to thee: how often would I haue gathered thy children together, as the hen gathereth her chickens vnder her wings, and ye would not?

Behold, your habitation ſhall be left vnto you deſolate.

THis whole chapter contains a Sermon that our Sauiour Chriſt made to the Iewes at Ieruſalem. It hath two parts. The firſt, is a reproofe of the Iewiſh Doctours, namely, the Scribes and Phariſes, for ſundry vices, from the beginning of the chapter, to the 36. verſ. The ſecond is, an Inuectiue againſt Ieruſalem, in the words I haue now read: Ieruſalem, Ieruſalem, which killeſt the Prophets, &c. In the Inuectiue, two things are to be conſidered, the rebellion of Ieruſalem in the 37. verſe, and the puniſhment of his ſinne, verſe 38.

Touching the rebellion it ſelfe, three things are ſet down, the place and perſons, in the words Ieruſalem, Ieruſalem: the degree & practiſe of rebellion, in theſe words; which killeſt the Prophets, &c. the manner and form of their rebellion, in theſe words; How oft would I haue gathered you, and ye would not!

According to the order of the Holy Ghoſt, firſt, I will begin with the place. It is a wonder that Ieruſalem, of al the places in the world, ſhould be charged with the height of rebellion againſt God. For it was the Citty of God, and had prerogatiues aboue all Cities in the world. Saint Paul hath noted ſeuen of them. The firſt is, that Rom. 9. 5. they were Iſraelites: that is, of the poſteritie of Iacob. The ſecond is, Adoption, in that they were reputed and called the children of God. The third is, that they had the glory of God: that is, the mercy-ſeate, the pledge of the preſence of God. The fourth is, the Couenants: that is, the two tables of the couenant. The fifth is, the giuing of the Law, namely, of the iudiciall and ceremoniall Law. The ſixth is, the worſhippe of God, the publike ſolemnity whereof, was tied to the Temple at Ieruſalem. The ſeuenth, that to them pertained the promiſes made to the Patriarks, touching the Meſsias. To theſe, the Prophet Micah addeth the eight priuiledge, that the firſt Church of the new Teſtament, ſhould be gathered in Ieruſalem, and that conſequently, the preaching of the Goſpel, ſhould paſſe thence to all nations. Now, for all theſe bleſsings and mercies, Chriſt our Sauiour cries out and complaines of Ieruſalems rebellion. And this is not the firſt time of his complaint. In the daies of the prophet Iſai, he ſaith; that when he had doone all that hee could doe for his vineyard, it broght forth nothing but wild grapes. By the Prophet Ezechiel, he ſets downe a long catalogue of his bleſsings to this people, and withal, a catalogue of their vnthankfulneſſe. Hence it appeares, that where God ſhewes the greateſt mercie, there oftentimes is the greateſt wickednes and vnthankfulneſſe. And this is partly verified in this land: for within the compaſſe of this forty yeares, we haue receiued great bleſsings from God, both for this life, and for the life to come, ſpecially, the Goſpel with peace & protection: and the like haue not bin ſeene in former ages: yet there was neuer more vnthankfulneſſe then now. For now commonly men are weary of the Goſpel, and beginne to decline from that which they haue bin: and the care to pleaſe God, and doe his will, is accounted but a curious preciſeneſſe of many.

Micah. 4. 2.

Ezech. 16. all

Secondly, hence it may be gathered, that God doth not tie the infallible aſsiſtance of his ſpirit, to any place or condition of men. If euer any city in the world had this priuiledge, it was Ieruſalem. But Ieruſalem, which was the ſeat and habitation of God, had not this priuiledge, becauſe it is heere charged with rebellion againſt God. No place therefore nor condition of men, hath it. It is alleadged, that God hath made a promiſe to the order of Prieſthood: the prieſts lippes ſhall preſerue knowledge, and they ſhall require the law at his mouth. I anſwer, that theſe wordes are not a promiſe, but a commandement. For ſometimes words of the future tenſe are put for words imperatiues, and therfore the ſenſe is this, the prieſts lips ſhall keepe, that is, let them keepe knowlege. Againe it is aleaged that we are commanded to heare the Scribes and Phariſes; becauſe they ſit in Moſes chaire. I anſwer that the Chaire of Moſes is not a place or ſeate, but the doctrine of Moſes: and to this doctrine, I graunt, the ſpirit of God is annexed, when it is truely taught and beleeued. Thirdly, it is alleadged, that God hath promiſed the ſpirit of truth, to leade men into all truth. Iohn 16. 13. I anſwer: that this promiſe doth not directly and abſolutely, concerne all beleeuers, or all Miniſters, but onely the Apoſtles, to whom it was made: and not to them for all times, and in all actions, but onely while they were in the execution of their apoſtolicall miniſterie, which ſtands in the founding of the Church of the new Teſtament, partly by publiſhing the Goſpel, and partly by writing the Scriptures of the new Teſtament. In a word, no Scripture can be brought to prooue, that God hath, doth, or will binde his ſpirit to any particular place or perſons. Heere then falls to the ground, three popiſh conceits. The firſt, though the members of the Catholike church may ſeuerally erre; yet they cannot erre, when they are togither in a generall Counſel, lawfully aſſembled. The ſecond, that the Pope cannot erre in his conſiſtory. The third, that perſonall ſucceſsion, is a marke of the Catholike Church: which neuertheleſſe, may be ſeuered from the ſpirit of God, as we ſee.

Where our Sauiour Chriſt vſeth a repetition, ſaying; O Ieruſalem, Ieruſalem; he doth three things therein. Firſt he ſignifies thereby, that he takes it for a wonder, and for a thing incredible, that the Iewes after ſo many bleſsings, ſhould be ſo exceedingly vnthankful. Secondly, he teſtifies heereby his owne deteſtation of their vnthankfulnes. Thirdly, by this repetition, he doth awake the Iewes, and ſtirre them vp to a ſerious conſideration & loathing of this their ſinne: and he doth (as it were) proclame the ſame vnto vs. And not without cauſe: for in vnthankfulneſſe, there be two greeuous ſinnes againſt God, falſe witneſſe bearing, and iniuſtice: falſe witnes bearing; becauſe the vnthankfull perſon denies in his heart, God to be the fountaine and giuer of the good things he hath, and he aſcribes them to his own wiſedome, goodneſſe, ſtrength, indeuour. Iniuſtice, becauſe he yeeldes not to God, the duties which hee owes vnto him for his bleſsings.

The ſecond point to be conſidered is, the degree of the Iewiſh rebellion. Dauid makes three degrees heereof. The firſt is, to walk in the counſel of the vngodly. The ſecond is, to ſtand in the way of ſinners. The third is, to ſit downe in the skorners chaire. And this is the very top of deſperate rebellion, and the ſinne of Ieruſalem. For when Chriſt ſaith [which killeſt the Prophets, and ſtoneſt them which are ſent vnto thee] he notes out three ſinnes in this City. Impenitency, wherby they perſeuered in their wicked waies, without hope of amendment: ſacrilegious and prophane contempt of God, and the meanes of their ſaluation: cruelty in ſhedding of blood. And by cruelty, I mean not one or two actions of cruelty, but an habite therein, and the cuſtome thereof: for the words are thus to be read; Ieruſalem killing the Prophets, and ſtoning them that are ſent to thee: where ſtoning and killing, ſignifie not one act, but a continuance and multiplication of acts: that is, a cuſtom in ſhedding of blood.

It may be demanded, how the Iewes ſhould grow to this height of wickednes. I anſwer thus. In euery actuall ſinne, there be foure things diſtinctly to be conſidered; the fault, which is the offence of God in any action: the guilt, or obligation, to puniſhment for the fault: the puniſhment it ſelfe, which is death: a blot or ſpot, ſet in the ſoule of him that ſinneth, & that by the fault or offence: and this blot is nothing elſe but a pronenes to the ſinne committed, or to any other ſin. In the ſinne of our firſt parents, beſides the fault, guilt, puniſhment, there followed a blot or deformitie in the ſoule, which was the loſſe of Gods image, and the diſpoſition of their hearts, to all manner of euills. Since the fall of Adam, he that commits an actuall offence, beſides the fault, guilt, puniſhment, imprints in his heart a new blot, & that is an increaſe of his naturall proneneſſe to ſinne; euen as the dropſi-man, the more he drinkes, the more he may, and by drinking he increaſeth his thirſt. Thus the Iewes by cuſtome in ſinning, attaine to an height in wickednes; becauſe euery act of offence, hath his blot, and the multiplication of acts offenſiue, is the continuall increaſe of the blot or blemiſh of the ſoule, till the light of nature be extinguiſhed, and men come to a reprobate ſenſe. This muſt be a warning to all men, to take heede leſt they commit any offence againſt God in thought, word, or deede, conſidering euery offence imprints a blot in the ſoule.

1. Culpa. 2. Reatus. 3. Pœna. 4. Macula.

Secondly it may be demanded, how Ieruſalem, grown to this height of rebellion, can truly be called the Holy Citie, or the City of the great King. I anſwer two waies. Firſt, there were many holy men and women in Iurie and Ieruſalem, that truly ſerued God, and wayted for the Kingdome of Chriſt, Math. 27. 53. and 5. 35.

as Ioseph, Marie, Zacharie, Elizabeth, Anna, Simeon, Nichodemus, Ioseph of Arimathea, and many other. Now a Church is named not of the greater, but of the better part, as an heap of corne is so called, though there be more chaffe than corne. Secondly I answer, that a people or church that haue forsaken GOD, remaines still a reputed Church, till God forsake them, as a wife committing adultery, remaines still a supposed wife, till her husband giue her the bill of diuorcement. Ierusalem indeede had forsaken God, but God had not forsaken Ierusalem. For there he preserued still the Temple, and his worship: yea, when Ierusalem had condemned & crucified Christ, St. Peter inspired by the holy Ghost, saith still; To you belong the promises, and to your children. And Ierusalem did not vtterly cease to be a city or Church of God, til they contracted and blasphemed the Apostolicall ministerie: for then, and not before, the Apostles withdrew themselues from the fellowship of the Iewes. Heere we see a depth of mercy in God: for though the Iewes for their parts, had deserued a thousand thousand times to be forsaken, yet God for his part, did not forsake them, but still pursued them with mercy. And we are taught hereby, not to giue any sentence of the persons of euil men. For though they forsake God, yet know we not whether God haue forsaken them or no.

Act 2.38.

In this example of Ierusalems rebellion, we learne many things. First in it, we may behold the vilenesse of mans nature, and our violent proneneſſe to sin. For the Iews went about to abolish & quench as much as they could, the doctrine of saluation; yea to quench it with blood, and which is more, with the blood of the Prophets: and this shewes, that man drinkes iniquity, as the fish drinkes in water.

Iob 15.16.

Secondly, in Ierusalem we may behold the desperate condition of the Church of Rome at this day. For it followes in rebellion; nay it goes beyond Ierusalem. If any man will indifferently consider, it will appeare, that by the whore of Babylon is meant, the present Church of Rome: and this whore is saide to be drunke with the blood of the Saints. The locusts out of the bottomles pit, go to the kings of the earth, to stirre them vp to war against the church of God. And these locusts are in all likelihood, swarms of monks, friars, & Iesuits of the church of Rome. And we haue found it by long and much experience, that they of the Roman Church, haue long thirsted for the blood of Prince & people in this land.

Apoc. 17.6.

Chap. 16.14.

Thirdly, we are heere taught to exercise our selues in the duties of meekenes, goodnes, peace to all men. The prophet Isai saith, that men in the Kingdome of Christ, shall not apply their swords and speares, to the hurt of any, as the Iewes heere do, but shall turne them to instruments of husbandry, as mattocks and sithes. Whereby is signified, that men truly regenerate, shal lay aside all purpose and minde of doing any hurt, and shall giue themselues to doe the good they can. Againe he saith, that the wolfe & the lamb shall dwell together, and that there shall be no hurt in all the holy mount of God. The diuell by the sin of our first parents, of men, made vs beasts, lions, wolues, tygres, beares, cockatrices: and Christ againe of beasts, hath made vs his lambs and sheep, in respect of meeknes and patience.

Isa. 2.4.

Chap. 11.v.19

Fourthly we are heere taught, not to oppose our selues against the Ministers of God, but without pride and fiercenesse, to yield subiection and obedience to their ministerie. Isai foretells, that in the Church of the new testament, a little child, that is, ministers, otherwise, weake & seely men, shall by their doctrine, rule & guide wolues, leopards, lyons, that is, fiery and cruell men by nature. Thy people (saieth the Lord) shall come willingly in the day of assembly: and, the sheepe of Christ heare his voyce and follow him.

Isa. 11.6.

Ioh. 10.28.

The Iewes arraigne & iudge the prophets that are sent vnto them: but we must suffer them in their ministerie, to arraigne and iudge vs, that wee be not iudged of the Lord. Againe, the Iewes kill their teachers; but we must permit our teachers after a sort to kill vs: for their ministery must be as it were, a sacrificing knife, to kil the old man in vs, that we may be an acceptable offring vnto God.

Rom. 15.16.

Lastly, Ministers of the word, must learne hence, not to be troubled, if they be hated and persecuted of men. For this befell the holy Prophets of God, and that in the City of Ierusalem.

The third point is, the manner or forme of their rebellion. In it I consider foure things. The will of God, against which the Iewes rebell, I would: the will of the Iewes rebelling, ye would not: the concord of both, I would, ye would not: the manner of Gods will. He wills their saluation in loue, I would haue gathered you as an hen gathereth her chickens: in patience, How oft would I? Before I come to handle these points in particular ticular, I will set down a generall preamble touching the nature of will.

Will, is a power of willing, nilling, choosing, refusing, suspending, which depends on reason. By power, I meane an abilitie or created facultie: & it is so properly in men and Angells: but in God only by analogy or proportion. Because his will is his essence or godhead indeed. Secondly, I say, it is a power of willing, &c. because to will, nill, choose, refuse, suspend: that is, neither to wil, nor to nil, are the proper effects of wil, whereby it is knowne and discerned. Lastly, I say, it depends on reason, because it is incident onely to natures reasonable; as God, Angells, men: and because, though it goe against good reason, yet is it not without reason altogether. When a man knows and approues that which is good, and yet doth the contrary; it is, because it seemes good to him to doe the contrary. And in euery act of wil, there are two things, Reason to guide, and Election to assent, or dissent.

Will hath his propertie, and that is the Liberty of the will, which is a freedome from compulsion or constraint, but not from all necessitie. Form compulsion, because compulsion and will be contrary, and where compulsion takes place, there will giues place, & wil constrained is no will. Neuertheless, will and necessity may stand together. God wills many things of absolute necessitie, as the eternall generation of the Sonne, the proceeding of the holy Ghost, the doing of iustice, & such like: & he wills them, with most perfect liberty of wil. The good angels wil their own happines, & the doing of iustice, and that of necessitie; for they cannot will to sinne, or to be in misery: and all this they will most freely. Nay, the necessitie of not sinning, is the glory & ornament of will, for he that doth good so as he cannot sinne, is more at liberty in doing good, than he that can doe either good or euill. When the creature is in that estate, that it willingly serues God, & cannot but serue God, then is our perfect libertie. Againe, the libertie of will, since the fall of man, is ioyned with a necessity of sinning; because it stands in bondage vnder sinne: in this respect, it is fitly termed of Augustine, the bond free-will. Wherefore we may not imagine in the will, a libertie which is a freedome from all necessitie. That this may the better appeare, let vs consider the kinds of necessitie. There is a simple or absolute necessitie, when a thing cannot possibly be otherwise: thus we say, there is a God, and he is righteous, &c. This necessitie stands not with the will of the creature; yet dooth it stand with Gods will; in whom an absolute necessity of holinesse & goodnes is ioyned, with absolute freedome of will. Againe, there is a necessity by violence or compulsion, & this aboliseth freedom and consent of wil. Thirdly, there is a necessity of infallibilitie, or of consequence, when something folowes necessarily vpon a supposed antecedent, as namely vpon the determination & decree of God. This necessity and freedome of will, may both stand together. For in the doing of a voluntary action, it is sufficiet that it proceed of iudgement, and haue his beginning from within the wil, though otherwise, in respect of Gods will, it be of vnchangeable necessity. The certenty of Gods decree, doth not abolish the consent of mans will, but rather order it, and mildly incline or draw it forth. And the thing that is directly contrary to freedome of will, is compulsion: because it aboliseth consent.

Trast. in Ioh. 53. de corrept. & grat. c. 13.

Gre. arim. l. 1. dist. 29. in fine ait sufficere ad rationem voluntarij si à scientia & voluntario committatur.

The liberty of will, stands in a double power. The first is, when it wills any thing of it owne selfe, to be apt and able to nill the same; and so on the contrarie: and it is called in schooles, the liberty of contradiction. The second is, when it wills any thing to be able to will another thing, or the contrary. As for example: when God willed the creation of the world, he could haue nilled the same: and when he willed the creation of one world, he could haue willed the creation of moe worlds. And this latter is called the liberty of contrariety.

Will by this liberty, is distinguished from the inclinations of naturall Agents, which alwaies shew themselues in the same manner. Put matter to the fire, it burns alwaies, and it cannot but burn. Cast vp a stone into the ayre, it falls down alwaies, and cannot but fall down. Secondly, will by this liberty, is distinguished from the appetite of beasts: for it follows sense, and in choosing or refusing, keepes alwaies one order. The sheepe flies the wolfe: and all sheepe doe so at all times & in all places. Bees gather hony, and they doe so alwaies, and in all places, and they can doe no otherwise. When the beast in the field chooseth one hearb, and refuseth another, there is a shew of liberty, yet no true liberty. For that which it chooseth or refuseth once, it chooseth or refuseth alwaies, in the same manner.

Thus much of the generall nature of will; now I come to the points in hand. The first first is to tuching the will of Christ. I would. According to the two natures of Christ: so be there two willes in him, the will of his godhead, and the will of his manhood. Some thinke that these wordes are meant of the will of his manhood. For they suppose him here to speake as the minister of circumcision, and consequently as a man. Rom. 15. 8. This I thinke is a trueth, but not all the trueth. Because the thing which he willeth, namely, the gathering of the Iewes by the ministerie of the Prophets, was begun and practised long before his incarnation. Wherefore (as I take it) here his diuine will is meant, or the will of his Godhead, which is also the will of the Father, and the holy Ghost.

This will is one and the same, as God is one: yet may it be distinguished on this manner. It is either the will of his good pleasure, or, his signifying will. The truth of this distinction we may see in earthly Princes, who beare the image of God. A king determines within himselfe according to his pleasure what shall be done in his kingdome, and what not: this is his will. Voluntas beneplaciti. Againe, he signifies some part of his secret pleasure to his subiects, as occasion shal be offered: and this is also his will. Voluntas signi. Euen so the pleasure of GOD within himselfe, and the significations thereof to his creature either in whole or in part, are his will.

The first is mentioned, Eph. 1. 5. where Paul saith the Ephesians were predestinate according to the good pleasure of his will. That it may be rightly conceiued of vs, I will set down 4. things. The first is, that this wil is Gods purpose or decree according to counsell. For in it these two concurre, his counsel, and his decree. His counsel sees al things, and all the causes of them: His decree determines what shall be done, and what vndone: and he determines according to his owne eternall counsell. Yet is not counsell a rule to his will. For there is nothing higher then his will, & his coũsell also is according to his will, which is goodnesse it selse. Eph. 1. 11. And therefore by Paul, Counsell is called, the Counsell of his will.

Secondly, in Gods will there is a Soueraigntie, that is, an absolute power, wherby he is Lord of all the actions that he willeth, willing of himselfe without dependance from any, without impediment or controlement, what he will, when he wil, and howe he will: Thus much is signified in the parable, May I not doe with mine owne as I will? And by Paul alledging Moses, I will haue mercie on whom I will haue mercie; teaching also, that we are at Gods pleasure, as clay at the pleasure of the potter. This must teach vs when we thinke or speake of Gods works and iudgements, to think & speake with modestie and sobrietie, with admiration, & reuerence, not daring to search into the reason of them, or thinke hardly of them, when they sound not with our reason, contenting our selues with this, that we know God to haue a Soueraigntie in his will, to wil at his pleasure, and his will to be good. Math. 20. Rom. 9.

The third point is, that the will of God is the beginning or first cause of all things without exception, and of al their motions and actiõs. And it is a beginning 2. waies. First, in regard of the existence or being of things: Secondly, in regard of their goodnes. That al things in particular haue their being from the will of God, as from the first efficent cause, I shew it thus. God is of that power, that nothing can come to passe which he nilleth, or which is vtterly against his will: therfore, what soeuer comes to passe, comes to passe, because he wills it, either simply, or in some part. A wise gouernour of a family, or of an army, hauing all things in his owne power, suffers nothing to be done without his will, and hee desires in the very smalest matters to haue a stroke, and nothing hinders his desire, but his owne weakenesse, which is not incident to the maiesty of God. God by an vnchangeable prescience, fore-sees all things that shall come to passe: and therefore by an vnchangeable will, hee willeth the being of them. For Gods fore-knowlege depends on his will. Not because God foresees things to come, therefore they come to passe: but because according to Gods will, they are to come to passe, therfore he foresees them. Indeed there is in God, a knowledge of thinges that posibly may bee, though they neuer be: and this knowledge goes before Gods decree. Yet the diuine knowledge of things that certainly shall be, followes the will and determination of God. To proceede further: In that God willeth the being of all things, he makes them to be. For his wil is operatiue, nor seuered from his power, but distinguished: and his willing of any thing is his doing of it: and therefore it pleaseth the holy ghost to signifie the will of God by an operatiue word or commandement: In the beginning God said, let there be this and that, and it was so: now this commanding word was his wil. Again, Man liues by euery word of god, that is, by any thing that God in his pleasure wils to be our food. Things in respect of being must haue dependance on the wil of God, or on themselues, or on some other thing. If they depend on themselues for their being, they are gods: if they depēd on any other thing without and beside God, that thing is god also. It remaines therfore that all things & acts in the world considered as acts, haue their being by a dependance on god as on the highest cause, or the cause of causes: this doctrine must be remēbred. For it is the foundation of true patience: when we consider, whatsoeuer comes to passe befals vs according to the will of god. Vpō this ground Iob armes himselfe to patience, & Dauid saith, I held my tongue and said nothing: because thou Lord didst it. Secondly, this doctrine is the meanes of all true cōfort, when we consider that all our afflictions are from the good pleasure of God. Thus did the primitiue church comfort it selfe, when it considered, that the Iewes, Herod, Pontius Pilat, & the rest, did nothing against Christ, but that the counsel of God had determined before to be done: and it must be our comfort, that we are predestinate to be made conformable to the image of Christ in afflictions.

Lib 1.27.
Psal.39.9.
Rom.8.29.
Phil.3.10.

Furthermore, the wil of god is the beginning of the goodnes of things. For a thing is not first good & then willed by god: but it is first willed by god, & thus it becomes good: this is a manifest truth, I wil not stād vpon it. It may here be demanded, whence the euil in the creature, namely sin, hath his beginning. I answer, It comes of the wil of the declining creature, & not frō the will of god: yet is it not without the wil of god. For thogh he wil not sin properly, because he hates it: yet doth he wil the being of it in the world. For in respect of the counsell of god, it is good that euil shuld be. And god wils the being of sin, a not because it is his wil to effect, produce, or giue a being to it, but because b his wil is to forsake his creature, & not to hinder the being of euil whē he may: & thus euil not hindred comes to passe. And whereas God foresaw it in his eternal counsel, & yet willed not to hinder it whē he might, in effect he wil ed the being of it in the world; though simply he wils it not. The last point is, that this wil of gods good pleasure being hidden from vs, is not the rule of our actiōs & of our faith. Moses saith, Secret things belong to the Lord our God, & things reuealed to vs and to our children. Hence it follows, that we do and may (with a submission) in our wils dissent frō this wil of God before it is knowne to vs, without sin. Paul would, by vertue of his Apostolical commission haue preached in Asia, and Bythinia, & God would not, because it is said the spirit withstood him: yet did not Paul sin herein. One good thing may differ frō another: & that which the creatures somtime willes without offence, God willeth otherwise by his most righteous pleasure. Samuel praies for Saul, otherwise then the secret pleasure of God was; but when the decree of God was reuealed to him, he then stayed his praying. Here sundry men are to be reproued that reason thus. If it be the will of God that I shall be saued, it shall so be, howsoeuer I liue: therfore I wil liue as I list: they make the secret will of God the rule of their liues, which should not be: because reuealed wil of god is the Law, or the only rule of things to be done and beleeued.

Deut.29.29.
1.Sam.16.1.

Thus we see what the will of Gods pleasure is. Now this will is not meant in this text, how oft wold I? For the pleasure of god cannot be withstood or resisted, Isa.46.10 My counsel shal stand, & I wil do al my pleasure. But the will here mentioned, may be resisted, and withstood, I would, you would not.

The signifying wil of God is, whē he reuealeth some part and portion of his pleasure, so far forth as it serues for the good of his creature, & the manifestation of his iustice or mercy: this signifying wil is not in deed the will of God properly, as the will of his good pleasure is, for it is the effect therof: yet may it truly be so tearmed. For as the effects of anger without the passion are called anger in God: so the sign & signification of his will, may be termed will.

This will is propounded sometimes more plainly, sometimes more darkly. It is propounded more plainly three waies, by his word, by his permissiō, by his operatiō.

His worde is his will, for so Paul saith, Proue what is the good will of God. And it is not his decree or pleasure, but his signifying will: because it serues to declare & manifest what is pleasing & acceptable vnto god, what is our dutie, & what he requires of vs, if we desire to come to life eternall. For this cause, both the law and the gospel and all the commandements, prohibitions, promises, & threatnings therof, are the signifying wil of God. For commandements signifie what we are to do: prohibitions,

what we are to leaue vndone: promiſes, what good he wil do vnto vs, threatnings, what pu miſhments are due to ſin. Furthermore by rea ſon of the word, the miniſterie and diſpenſa tion thereof is the ſignifying wil of God. For by it God ſignifies his pleaſure touching the ſaluation of men. Diuine permiſsion is like wiſe the ſignifying will of God. For by it he ſignifies that he will not hinder the being of the thing permitted; and conſequently that the thing permitted ſhall come to paſſe.

Thirdly, euery operation or worke of God ſignifies what God will haue done, and what muſt come to paſſe. For when a thing is done, we know thereby what is & was the pleaſure of God, conſidering nothing comes to paſſe without his will. When the ſignifying will is more darkly propounded, it is becauſe ſome things appertaining to the ſaid will, are con cealed. And by reaſon of this concealement, ſomtime there ſeemes to be a contrarietie be tweene the ſignifying wil, and the will of his good pleaſure: but indeed there is none. And the end why God doth ſo darkly ſignifie and propoũd his pleaſure, is not to hurt or deceiue but to procure the good of his creature. Exam ples of this kind, there be in ſcripturs 3. ſorts. Firſt of al, God ſometimes propounds a com mandemẽt to men, & conceals the end of the commandement. For the ends of diuine pre cepts are 3. one is Obedience, when God will haue the thing commanded, to be done preciſely as it is commanded: the other is Triall, when he wils not the thing commanded to be done abſolutely, but only wils to make triall of the loyaltie of his creature: the 3. is conuinc tion, when by cõmanding god intends to con uince his creature of diſobedience. Thus pa rents ſomtime giue precepts to their children, that muſt be don: & ſomtime again they giue a commandement, the doing wherof they in tend not, but only intend therby to make ex perience of the affection & duty of their chil dren. And ſometime one man cõmands ano ther only in way of cõuictiõ: as when the cre ditor ſaith to the bãkrupt, pay thy debt which he neuer looks for, & which peraduenture he minds to forgiue. Diuine precepts therefore be of three ſorts, precepts of obedience, as the commandement of the moral law, precepts of triall, and precepts of conuiction. Now when the ſignifying will of God is propounded in a precept, and the end of the precept is conceal ed, the pleaſure of God is darkely ſignified. god giues a commandement to Abraham, Of Gen 22.2. fer thine onely ſonne Iſaac. The end was onely to trie Abraham, and this end was concealed, till Verſ. 10. Abraham was in doing the fact, for then the angel of the lord ſtaied him & ſaid: Now I ſee Abraham fears God. And the very comman dement, Offer Iſaac, ſeems to be flat contrary to the wil of gods pleaſure or decree: for as it ap pears by the euent, Iſaac was not to be ſlaine: therfore the not ſlaying of Iſaac was decreed by God. Now then it may be ſaid, why ſhould God command any thing contrary to his de cree? I anſwer, there is an apparant contrarie tie, by reaſon the end of the commaundement was concealed; but indeede there is none. For as it was the decree of God that Iſaac ſhoulde not be offered: ſo alſo was it his decree, that Abraham ſhould be tried in offering of Iſaac. And with this decree dooth this commande ment accord. For it is a commaundement not ſo much of abſolute obedience as of triall, and therefore it is a fit and conuenient meanes to accompliſh the decree of God. The Lord by the hand of Moſes giues a commandement to Pharao, Let the people go: & yet the ſecret plea ſure and purpoſe of God was, that he ſhould not let them goe. Here is contrarietie in ſhew, but indeed none. For it was alſo the decree of GOD, to conuince Pharao of rebellion and hardneſſe of heart: and to this end ſerues this commandement; bicauſe properly according to gods intention it was a commandement of conuiction; though Pharao for his part was to accept of it as of a commaundement to be o beyed and accompliſhed.

By this doctrine the publike Miniſterie of the word receiues a iuſt defence. Some are of opinion, it is a meanes to delude the world: bi cauſe in it a commaundement is giuen to all without exception to repent and beleeue, and yet grace to repent & beleeue is not. But they are deceiued. For the commandement, Repent and beleeue, though in the intent of the Mini ſter it haue only one end, namely the ſaluatiõ of all, yet in the intention and counſell of god, it hath diuers ends. In them which be ordai ned to eternal life, it is a precept of obedience; becauſe GOD will enable them to doe that which he commandeth: in the reſt it is a com mandement of trial or conuiction, that to vn beleeuers their ſin might be diſcouered and all excuſe cut off. Thus when the precept is giuen to beleeue, & not the grace of faith, god dooth not delude, but reprooue and conuince men of vnbeliefe, and that in his iuſtice.

The ſecond example of the ſignifying wil of God darkely propounded, is, when God propounds his promiſes, concealing the ex ception or condition thereof, Geneſis chap ter 1. verſe 28. Yee ſhall rule ouer the fowles of the ayre, the fiſhes of the ſea, and the beaſtes of the earth. And of Ieruſalem the Lord ſaieth,

This

This is my reſt for euermore: theſe promiſes take no place now: and yet there is no contrarietie in Gods will, becauſe the ſaid promiſes muſt be vnderſtoode with their exception; vnleſſe ye fall from me, and prouoke mine anger by your ſinnes.

The third example is, when God propounds his threates, concealing the conditions and exceptions thereof. Iud. 10 13. I will, ſaith the Lord, deliuer you no more. And it was his pleaſure afterwarde to deliuer them againe and againe. Exod. 32. 10. Let me alone, that my wrath may waxe hote: for I will conſume them: and he ſpared them at the praier of Moſes, Ion. 3.4. Yet fortie dayes and Niniue ſhall be deſtroyed. For all this Niniue was ſpared, and not deſtroyed. We may not here ſo much as dreame of any change or vntruth in God. Ezec. 18.21. For all threatnings denounced, muſt be vnderſtoode with this clauſe, Except ye repent and returne vnto me. And this exception God conceales, that hee may the better terrifie the conſciences of men, and ſo prepare them to true repentance. Iſai. 38. 1. The Lord ſaith by the Prophet to Ezechias. Set thine houſe in order, for thou ſhalt die and not liue: and yet he liued fifteene yeeres after. Here God conceales his owne pleaſure, in lengthning the dayes of Ezechias, and ſignifies, what ſhall betide him in reſpect of nature, and the helpes thereof. In all theſe examples we may not ſurmiſe any fraud or double dealing in God. For he doth not ſpeake one thing, and minde an other, after the faſhion of hypocrites: but he conceales part of his will, and reueals part: and this he doth not for the hurt of any after the maner of the deceiuers, but for the good of men.

Thus much for the ſignifying will of God: now I come to the Text in hand. The words, I would haue gathered you, are not to be vnderſtoode of the decree of God, but of his ſignifying will, and namely of the miniſtery of the worde. For when God ſent his word to Hieruſalem by his Prophets, he thereby ſignified that it was his pleaſure and will to gather and conuert them. And he is ſaide to will the conuerſion of the Iewes in and by his worde, two wayes. Firſt, becauſe he approoued it as a good thing in it ſelfe, being agreeable to his goodneſſe and mercie. Secondly, becauſe he commaunded, and required it of them as a dutie of theirs, and as a thing neceſſarie to ſaluation. Some may happily ſay, it is a point of hard dealing, for God to command the Iewes to do that which they can not doe, and to complaine becauſe they are not gathered: and that a maſter might as well commaund his ſeruaunt to carry a mountaine vpon his backe, and complaine becauſe it is not doone. I anſwer thus: If a maiſter could giue to his ſeruant power and ability to carry a mountaine, hee might then command him to doe it: and if he ſhould by his owne default looſe this abilitie, the ſaid maiſter might ſtill commaund him and complaine, if hee did not the thing commaunded. And this is the caſe with God. For he gaue all men grace in our firſt parents to obey any of his commaundements: this grace in them wee haue caſt away, and doe not of our ſelues ſo much as deſire it of God: and God for his part is not bound to giue vs this grace againe. He therfore may iuſtly command vs to turne vnto him, though wee nowe bee vnable to turne.

If wee compare this text with Eſay 6.10. they may ſeeme to be contrarie. For heere Chriſt ſaieth, I would haue gathered you: there hee ſaieth, Harden them that be not gathered and conuerted. GOD therefore ſeemeth to will and not to will one and the ſame thing. Anſwer. There is but one will in God: yet dooth it not equally will all things, but in diuers reſpects it dooth will and nill the ſame thing. Hee willeth the conuerſion of Hieruſalem, in that hee approoueth it as a good thing in it ſelfe: in that hee commands it, and exhortes men to it: in that hee giues them all outwarde meanes of their conuerſion. Hee willes it not, in that hee didde not decree effectually to woorke their conuerſion. For GOD dooth approoue, and he may require many thinges, which neuertheleſſe for iuſt cauſes knowne to himſelfe, hee will not doe. The confirmation of the Angelles that fell, GOD approoued as a thing good in it ſelfe, yet didde hee not will to confirme them. A Iudge in compaſsion approoues and willes the life of a malefactor: and yet withall, hee willes the execution of iuſtice in his death. Euen ſo God ſometime willes that in his ſignifying will, which hee willes not in the will of his good pleaſure.

By this which hath beene ſaide, we learne, that where God erecteth the miniſterie of his worde, hee ſignifies thereby that his pleaſure is to gather men to ſaluation. In this regarde the prophet Eſay chapt. 49. verſe 22. ſaieth, that the preaching of the Goſpell, is a banner diſplayed, that all nations may come vnto it. All this is verified in this our Engliſh nation. For more than fortie yeeres hath GOD diſplayed this banner vnto vs, and more than fortie yeeres hath hee ſignified in the miniſterie of his woorde, that his will is to giue mercie and ſaluation vnto vs. Firſt therfore we owe vnto God all thankefulneſſe and praiſe for this endles mercy. Secondly, we are to reuerēce the miniſterie of the word, in as much as God ſignifies his good will vnto vs thereby, and we are in all obedience to ſubiect our ſelues to it: and for this cauſe we muſt ſuffer our ſelues to be conuerted and gathered by it. Subiects vſe to reuerence the letter of their Prince, how much more then muſt wee reuerence the letter of the liuing God, ſent vnto vs, that is, the miniſterie of the word, & conforme our ſelues to it? Thirdly, hence we may learne to foreſee our miſerable condition in this land. For though God for his part haue long ſignified his will vnto vs touching our euerlaſting good, yet there is no thing to be found in the moſt of vs, but a neglect or contempt of the Goſpel: and in moſt places men are wearie of it, as the Iſraelites were of Manna. What, wearie of the goodnes of God, that offers and proclames mercy vnto vs? Yea, verily. And the more weary we are of this, the more weary we are of our own happines, & cōſequently haſten to our owne perdition.

Secondly, it is to be obſerued, that the rebellion of Ieruſalem is againſt the ſignifying will of Chriſt, when he ſaith, I would, ye would not. And hence it followes that the ſignifying will of God is the rule of our obedience, and not the vnreuealed wil. And therfore ſo oft as God ſignifies vnto vs his will and pleaſure, we muſt yeeld our ſelues in obedience to it. Now God ſignifies his wil three waies (as I haue ſaid) by his commandements and prohibitions, by his permiſsion, and by his operation. Therefore when he commaunds, we muſt obey: when he forbids, we muſt alſo obey. Whē he permits any euill, we muſt be content. Laſtly, whē God doth any thing, & brings it to paſſe, he ſignifies his pleaſure, and we muſt obey. We are bidden to ſay, Thy will be done: and this is not only the wil reuealed in his word, but alſo his wil reuealed by any euent. For when any thing comes to paſſe, it comes to paſſe becauſe it was the will of God. Furthermore this ſignifying will muſt be the ſtay and ground of our patience and comfort. For when a thing is come to paſſe, the will of God is paſt vpon it, and he hath ſignified his pleaſure: As for example, when a man is ſlaine, the will of God is paſt vpon his life, and hee hath reuealed his pleaſure touching his death. Vpon this conſideratiō in al euents, are we to ſtay our mindes.

Thirdly, it appeares hence, what minde muſt be in the Miniſters and teachers of the word. They muſt put away all blinde reſpects of profit & praiſe, & ſimply with honeſt hearts applie themſelues and their miniſterie to this end, that they may gather a people to god, for that which is the mind of a miniſter in any buſines, the ſame muſt alſo be in the mind of the ſeruant: the mind of the maſter is here ſet downe, How oft would I haue gathered you?

Thus much of the will of God: now let vs come to the ſecond point, to conſider what is the will of man. That this may appeare, two things muſt be handled, the Nature of mans will, and the ſtrength ther- 1. Natura. 2. Vires.
of. Of the nature of will, I ſpake ſomething before generally, there is yet ſomewhat more to be added. The nature of mans wil may be gathered by the practiſe thereof. The practiſe of will ſtandes in fiue things, The firſt is the action of the mind, namely a conſideration of the thing to be done, and the end there of: the ſecond is Deliberation of the diuerſe meanes, whereby the foreſaid thing may be done: the third is, after deliberation a Determination what ſhall be done. The fourth action is proper to the wil, and that is Election, whereby the will vpon determination of the minde, chooſeth or refuſeth, that is, willeth what ſhall be done, what not. The fift is, that the wil in al her elections keepes & maintaines her libertie. Becauſe when it wills or nills any thing, it moues it ſelfe freely of it ſelfe to will or to nill, without any external cōpulſion: & when it wills any thing, it ſo wils as ſtil retaining a natural aptnes to nil the ſame: and when it wills any one particular thing, it remains ſtill apt not to wil it, but to will an other thing, or the contrarie.

Again, the wil of man muſt be diſtinguiſhed frō the power of man, whereby he doth any thing. Will & power in God are only diſtinguiſhed in our conceiuing, being indeed one and the ſame thing, namely the eſſence of God. And therefore what God can will, he can doe: what he willeth, he doth, & his willing of any thing, is his doing of it. It is not ſo in man, who can will that which he cannot do; as Paul ſaith, To wil is preſent with me, but I cānot do that which I would. Will therefore is one thing, and power to do the thing willed, another.

The ſecond thing to be handled, is the ſtrength of will, that is, what will can doe, what not; & how far it extends it ſelf. That this may appeare: Wil muſt be conſidered according to the foure eſtates of man, the eſtate of innocencie before the fall, the eſtate of corruption after the fall, the eſtate of regeneration after conuerſion, and the eſtate of glorie after this life.

In the eſtate of innocencie, the will of man is a power of willing either good or euill. For God gaue Adam a commandement, in which he forbad him to eate of the tree of knowledge of good and euill. Adam therefore could either keepe or breake this commandement. This reaſon holds not in vs ſince the fall, yet doth it hold in Adam. Becauſe with the commandement he receiued the power to obey: & that he could not obey, it appeared by the euent; becauſe he did not obey. Eccleſiaſtes ſaith, God made man righteous: there is the power to will that which is good: & they ſound out many inuentions: there is alſo a power to will that which is euill. Moſes ſaith to the Iſraelites, I ſet before you this day, life and death, bleſſing and curſing: therefore chooſe life, that thou and thy ſeede may liue. Theſe wordes are a ſentence of the law, telling what we ought to doe, and not what we can now doe, but what wee could do by the gift of creation before the fall. Here a difference of powers muſt be made: the power to wil that which is good was a gift put into Adams heart by God: and the power to will that which is euill, was in him before his fal, not a gift, but only a poſſibilitie to will euill, if he ſhould ceaſe to doe this dutie. And thus had he power to will both good and euill.

Eccle. 7. 9.

Deut. 30. 19.

In Adams wil there were two things, Libertie, and Mutabilitie. Libertie was twofold. The firſt is a libertie ſimply to will, or to nill, or to ſuſpend. And this is libertie of nature: becauſe it is founded in the nature of will, from which it can not poſsibly be ſeuered; and therefore it ſtill remaines in the damned ſpirits: becauſe, where this libertie is wanting, there is no will.

The ſecond libertie is a libertie of grace. which is a power to will or nill well, or to will that which is good, and to nill that which is euill. This libertie is founded, not in the nature, but in the goodneſſe of the wil. By goodnes I mean the holines of the will, which is the image of God. And here we muſt take heed of the opinion of ſome, who thinke that Adam was created and placed in ſuch a condition, in which hee was neither righteous, nor vnrighteous, but in a meane betweene both. But this is directly cõtrary to the Apoſtle, who ſaith, that man was created in righteouſnes and holines. And by this meane in the firſt inſtant of Adams creation, he wanted libertie of grace. Againe, by reaſon of this ſecond libertie, Adam had a further libertie from ſinne, and a libertie from miſerie.

Eph. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10.

The changeableneſſe of Adams wil appeares in this, that though it was created in goodneſſe, yet was it made changeably good. For ſuch was the goodneſſe and inclination of his will to obey God, as might be altered and changed by force of temptation. The cauſe of this mutabilitie muſt be conſidered, & it is this. That a creature righteous by creation may remain eternal and conſtantly righteous, two fauours or helpes of God are required: the a firſt is a Power to perſeuere in goodnes. Without this power the creature of it ſelfe ceaſeth to be good. The b ſecond is an act or deed, and that is the will to perſeuere, or perſeuerance it ſelfe. This alſo is required with the former, for God giues not onely the power, but alſo the will and the deed. and the creature doth not the good which it can doe, vnleſſe God cauſe it to doe the ſaid good, as he cauſeth it to be able to do good. Both theſe helpes the good Angels haue, and therefore they ſtand. And as for Adam, he receiued of God the firſt helpe and not the ſecond. For beſide the goodnes of his will he receiued of God a power conſtantly to perſeuere in goodnes, if he would: yet the act of perſeuerance was left to the choiſe and libertie of his owne will. We may behold the like in nature. God creates the eie, and puts into it the faculties of ſeeing, and withal, he addes to the eye neceſſarie helpe, by the light of the Sunne: as for the act of ſeeing, it is left to mans libertie: for he may ſee if he wil; and againe if he wil, he may ſhut his eyes. The phiſitian by art procures an appetite; this done, in the next place he prouides conuenient food; yet the act of eating is in the pleaſure of the patient. For he may eate if he will, and if he will he may abſtaine. And thus God gaue Adam the power to perſeuere in righteouſnes, but the will he left to himſelfe.

b 2. Actus perſeuerandi.

It may be ſaid, If Adam receiued power to doe good if he would, and not the wil to wil that he could, he then receiued not ſufficiẽt grace. I anſwer: he receiued ſufficiẽt for the perfection of his nature, for the full obedience of the will of God, and for the attainment of euerlaſting happineſſe, if he would would not be wanting to himselfe: but he receiued not sufficient grace for the causing of the immutabilitie of his nature: neither was it of necessitie to be giuen to a creature. A goldsmith intends to make a iewell of greatest value and price: he compoundes it of gold, pearle, and pretious stones: when he hath brought it to perfection, he doth not put this condition to it, that if it fall it shal not be brused or broken. And God created Adam in all perfection, and gaue him a power and abilitie to continue in the said perfection, if he would: yet did not he put vnto his nature this conditiō, that he should be vnchangeable & vnalterable, when it should be assailed by the force of outward temptation.

The vse of the former doctrine. In Adams example, we see the weaknes of the excellentest creature in it selfe without the grace of God. For Adam hauing power to preserue, could not for all this, acte or put in exequution the said power, without the further helpe of god. He could fall of himselfe, he could not stand or rise againe: he could not auoide the least euill, but as he was helped of God. We therefore beeing sinfull wretches, much more are to acknowledge our infirmitie, and to ascribe all we doe or can doe that is good, to the grace of god. Thus haue the godly alwaies done. The Iewes in their repentance say, Ierem. 31.18 Conuert thou me, and I will conuert. The spouse of Christ, Cant. 1.3. Draw vs and we will runne after thee. Dauid saith, Incline my heart to thy commandements, turne mine eyes from the beholding of vanity, and quicken me in thy precepts. Augustine saith, Giue that which thou commandest, and command what thou wilt. we are to God as the sicke man to his keeper, who saith, Take me vp, and I will rise: hold me, and I will stand. In regard of this our frailtie, it is the best for vs to denie our selues, and by faith to depend on the prouidence and mercie of God.

Againe, such as beleeue in Christ haue great cause to be thankful to God. For they haue the beginnings of further grace then euer Adam receiued. Hee receiued onelie the power to perseuere in his happie estate, if he himselfe would: but they that beleeue beside the power of perseuerance, receiue the will and the deede. Paul saith, worke your saluation with feare and trembling: and then he addes, Phil. 2.13. It is God that works in vs the will and the deede, whereby we run the race to eternall life.

Aug. de corrept. & grat. c. 11.

In the estate of corruption, two thiugs are to be considered of mans will, the first what it can doe, and howe neere it comes to the doing of a good worke. The second, what it cannot doe. For the declaration of the first, two things must be considered in corrupt wil; a libertie, & a possibilitie. The libertie is a certen freedom to will or nill, or to suspend. For this libertie is remaining since the fall of Adam, and is naturall to the will, frō which it can not possibly be seuered. This libertie is large, and sheweth it selfe in three kinds of actiōs; naturall, humane, ecclesiasticall. Naturall actions are such as are common to men and beasts, as to eate, drink, sleepe, smel, heare, taste, moue: common experience declares a freedome to will in all these actions.

Humane actions are such as are common to all men: and I may fitly reduce thē to three heads. The first is, the studie and practise of arts, trades occupations, and professions of all kindes. And that man hath freedome to will in all these, experience testifieth. The second is, the gouernment of societies, namely of families and common-welths. The lord saith to Cain of Abel, Gen. 4.7 his appetite shall be subiect to thee, that is, in freedome of thy will thou shalt rule ouer him, and his will shall be subiect to thine. Peter said to Ananias, that, the giuing or the not giuing of his lands was before he gaue them, in his owne libertie. Acts 5.4. And Paul saith, that the father 2. Cor. 7.37. hath the power of his owne will, to giue or not to giue his child in mariage, as he shal see occasiō. The third is the practise of ciuill vertue, iustice, temperance, libertie, chastitie. To this purpose Paul saith, that the Gentiles doe the thinges contained in the law, and that by nature. For outwardly to be chast, iust, bountiful, and so forth, is in the power of natural & corrupt wil. It may be said that these things are the gifts of the holy Ghost. I answer thus: the gifts of the holy Ghost are two-fold, gifts of restraint, and gifts of renouation. Gifts of restraint are such as serue only to keep in the corruption of nature & not to mortifie or abolish it. And they are common to all men both good and bad, & serue only to maintaine outward peace & comely order in the societies of men. Of this kinde are ciuill vertues. Gifts of renouation, are such graces of the holy Ghost, as serue not only to restraine the corruptiō of the inward man, but also to mortifie it in the roote, & to make a change ōf our sinful nature. Now vertues of this kinde, are only incident to such as are in Christ.

The third kinde of actions are Ecclesiasticall, namely such as pertaine to the outward duties of the worship of God. And there is also a Libertie of will in them. For corrupt and sinnefull man, hath power and
Rom. 1. 21 libertie to thinke of God, and to thinke many things of him, good in themselues:
2. Cor. 3. 14 power to reade and search the Scriptures:
Psal. 50. 16. Acts 17. 20 power to speake and talke of the word of God: power to come to the congregation and heare a sermon, as the Athenians did: power to conceue a zeale (I say not a good zeale, but only a zeale I say) for the maintenance of outward duties of religion. Paul
Rom. 10. 2. and 9. 31. Phil. 3. 6. saith, that the obstinate Iewes had a zeale of God, & were followers of the iustice of the Law; and that himselfe being a pharisie vnconuerted, was vnreproueable in respect of the Law of God. Thus farre can man proceede by the freedome of corrupt will: & the deuill by natural strength goes Iames 2. 19 somwhat further. For he is said to beleeue: and he conceues his faith, not by illumination of the spirit of God, as man doth, but by the remainders of the light of nature, and by the power which yet remaines in his corrupted will. For we may not suppose that since his fall, he is inlightned by the spirit of God in any thing.

Thus we see what is the libertie of corrupt will. We must yet further conceiue it to be ful of weaknes & imbecillitie, which I will expresse in three rules.

The first: that which the will can will, it cannot doe, vnlesse God will. Hereupon Saint Iames 4. 15 Iames bids vs say, we wil doe this or that, if God wil. And Paul wishing that he might
Rom. 15. 32 haue a prosperous iourney to Rome, addes this clause, By the will of God. Herod, Pon-Acts 4. 28. tius Pilate, and the Iewes, did nothing against Christ but that which the counsel of God had determined before to be done.

The second: That which the will can will, it cannot doo without the helpe of God: for in him we liue, mooue, and haue our beeing. This helpe is two-folde, Preseruation of the wil both for power and act, and the Direction thereof, whereby it is ordered and applied to the things it willeth.

The third: Often the will neither willeth nor doth the things it can will and doe, because it is hindred. It is hindered sometimes by the minde that misleades the will: sometimes againe by the worke of Satan. Thus Paul saith, that Satan hindred him from comming to Thessalonica.

The vse of this doctrine is twofold; first the libertie of the wil is the condemnatiō of the world. For in ciuill and Ecclesiasticall actions men doe not that which they can doe: so farre be the most from doing that which the Gospell requires, that they doe not that which nature can do. Some plead, that if they be ordained to saluation, they shall certenly be saued, otherwise not: and therefore they say they will leaue al to god, and liue as they list: but this shall be their condemnation, that they haue not liued according to ciuill vertue as they might, they come not to the Church, they search not the Scriptures, they heare not sermōs: in a word, they vse not the good meanes of saluation so farre as they are able to vse thē by the strength of nature.

Secondly the weakenesse of will in his libertie must teach vs to abate our pride, & to humble our selues: because we can not doe any thing, no not so much as mooue hand, foote, or finger without the helpe of God. Ieroboam, when he had stretched
1. Kings 13. 4 out his hand to lay hold on the Poophet, could not so much as pull it in againe. And this consideration must likewise mooue vs to be thankful to God, because the actions we doe, we doe by him.

The second thing to bee considered in the corrupt will, is e a Possibilitie of willing that which is good. This posibilitie is a certaine condition of the will, whereby it can will that which is good, after that God hath preuented vs with his grace. A stone is not of this nature, neither is the beast, because they are creatures vnreasonable, wanting both will and vnderstanding: and therefore no way capable of grace: whereas man in that he hath wil and vnderstanding hath a posibilitie of doing that which he can not doe. The fathers in this sense say, To be able to haue faith in nature, to haue faith indeede is grace. Aug. de præd. Sanct. ca. 4.

e Possibilitas non actiua sed passiua, vel potentia materiæ.

Hitherto I haue shewed what will can doe in the corrupt estate of man: now let vs see what it cannot doe. And because here the maine differences come to be considered, betweene vs and the Church of Rome; I wil first lay downe a sure ground, and then build vpon it: The ground is this: Though libertie of nature remaine, yet libertie of grace, that is, libertie to will well is lost, extinguished, abolished by the fall of Adam. I proue it thus. Libertie of grace is founded in the goodnes or integritie of the will: now this goodnes of the will is abolished by the fal of Adam: and therefore the libertie it selfe that is founded thereon.

That

giuing grace to obey the same; makes the commandements of the law (which otherwise are impossible) to be easie. Thus Paul hath expounded this text. Roman. 10. v. 8 wher he signifies, that sentences of the law must not legally, but euangelically be vnderstood of them that are in Christ, and fulfill the lawe by him.

The fourth obiection. When man is conuerted, he is not conuerted against his wil: for then God should deale with a man after the maner of a stone or a beast. Therefore hee which is conuerted, is conuerted with the consent of his own will. Ans. This consent is not of our selues, but of God. For as the conuersion is of god, so is the wil to be conuerted. Of this point, more afterward.

Vpon the grouud formerly deliuered, sundry questiõs of great moment are resolved. The first is, whether a natural man or an infidell, can by the freedome of his will, without faith, & without the help of god, do any work morally good, that is, a work in which there is no sin: they of the church of Rome for manie hundred yeares haue answered, yea: for they confidently teach, that a man pressed with no temptation, may without faith by the speciall help of God, and without it, by his owne strength so doe that which is morally good, that no sin at all be committed therein. Wee answer, No: and that vpon sufficient warrant. For such as the beginning of an actiõ is, such is the action it self: now the mind & wil of man are the beginnings of all their actions: and in them there is no ability to think or to wil that which is truly good, but a continual disposition to the contrarie. All actions therefore proceeding thence are onely & continually euill. Vpon this ground Paul saith, that to the vncleane, the vse of all things is vncleane: And Christ saieth, that an euill tree can not bring foorth good fruite. And, Whatsoeuer is not of faith, without exception, is sinne. To this doctrine always subscribed the Orthodox and antient Church. The Arausican councell saieth, It is from the gift of God, that wee keepe our feete from iniustice: And, that a man a doeth no good things, which God enables him not to doe. Cyprian saieth, All wee can doe is Gods. Hierome saieth, Without Christ euery vertue is but as a vice. Gregorie, If faith bee not first wrought in our heart, other thoues can not be good, though they seeme to be so. Augustine saith expressly, that all the workes of vnbeleeuers are sinnes: bicause whatsoeuer is not of faith, is sinne. And he saith thus of Pelagius the hereticke: Sometimes hee poised the power of the will with such equall weights in euen ballance, that hee might determine herein it auailed somewhat to cause vs not to sinne: which if it be so, there is no place reserued for the helpe of grace, without which, wee say free will hath no force at all in causing vs not to sinne. In this speech there are two things worthy obseruation. One, that (in Augustines iudgement) freewill of it selfe hath no force at all to cause man not to sinne. Of the same minde is the maister of the Sentences, who saith, that man before hee be repaired by grace, cannot but sinne; though the Schoole afterward, for the most part, dissent from him. The second, that it was the heresie of Pelagius to teach, that freewill SOMEVVHAT AVAYLETH to cause vs not to sinne. With this iumps the determination of the Councel of Trent, when it saith, Let him be accursed that saith, all workes done any way before iustification, are sinnes indeede. For thus it insinuates closely, that will, before the grace of iustification, partly holpt, and partly of it selfe, can do that which is good, at the least morally, as they speake. And this is the resolute sentence almost of all Papists. I doubt not therfore to auouch that the present religion of the Church of Rome renues, in part, the heresie of Pelagius, and in these last dayes propoundes it againe to the world with new varnish and fresh colours. To auoyde this charge, they answer the place of Augustine before aleadged thus. When Pelagius saith, the wil is of force not to sin, his meaning (say they) was, that wil was of force to cause vs neuer to sinne through the course of our liues. I answer againe; Augustine, who knew the meaning of Pelagius, speakes not onely of the life of man, but euen of particular actions, as appeares by these wordes: He that prayes, Leade vs not into temptation, prayes that he may not sinne, that is, that he may not do any euill. Vincentius Lyrinensis tooke this to be the heresie of Pelagius, that man by his owne freewil might do some good things. For these are his wordes: Who before that prophane Pelagius didde euer presume that the vertue of freewill was so great, that hee did not thinke the grace of God was necessarie for the helping of it in the doeing of good things according to euery act?

It is obiected to the contrarie, that infidells can doe things of the lawe which are good: & that they haue bin and are indued with many vertues, which are the giftes of God. Ans. Infidels may do things good in their kind, but they cannot doe them well:

bicause they apply them to wrong ends, as honour, profit, pleasure. And a good thing done to a wrong end, ceaseth to be good, and is euill in the doer. Againe, the vertues of the heathen, as they are of GOD, are good; yet as they are vsed, or rather abused of men, they are turned to sinnes.

It is aleadged, that wicked Pharao did a good worke, when he said, I haue sinned, the Lord is righteous, I and my people are sinners: pray for mee, &c. Answ. This confession is good in his kind, but not good in Pharao: bicause it proceeded not of loue to God, but of the feare of punishment; and it was made in hypocrisie, because afterward he hardned his heart. Exod. 19. 27.

Further it is alleadged, that Nabuchadnezzar a heathen man was rewarded of God for sacking of Tyrus: and that God would not haue rewarded him, if his work had bin a sinne. Ans. The reward was temporall; and he was rewarded for his labour onely, and not for the goodnesse thereof. Ezech. 29. 20.

Lastly, it may be obiected, that if we can not doe good workes by freedome of corrupt will, then all our actions, our eating, drinking, sleeping, buying, selling, and whatsoeuer we can do, is sin: and no sinne may be done, and therefore nothing must be done. Ans. Actions before named, incident to the life of man, are not sinnes of themselues: for then they might not be done at all; but they are sinnes only in respect of the manner of doing: because they are not done in obedience to God, and referred to him as to their right end, but by endes are propounded. And thus is the condition of euery man till he be conuerted, then he can doe nothing but sinne and displease God, euen then when the action is praise-woorthy before men.

The consideration of this doctrine serueth to correct the erroneous opinion of many, who thinke themselues in good case and highly in the fauour of God, because they are no theeues, murderers, blasphemers, adulterers, &c. But alas they are deceiued; there is matter enough of condemnation within them, though they be no outragious malefactors. For all they doe is sin before God, till they be renewed by grace. In eating, drinking, sleeping, buying, selling, in all they doe, they sinne. Not that eating, drinking, sleeping, buying, selling, are sinnes in themselues, but because they faile in the right manner of dooing these actions.

Secondly, in that wee can doe nothing but sinne till wee be regenerate, wee are taught to acknowledge our bondage vnder sinne and Satan: yea, we must labor to feele this bondage, and to grone vnder the burden of it. This being doone, wee must goe further yet, and with hungering and thirsting heartes seeke to the Mediatour Christ, who preacheth deliuerance to captiues, and withall giueth deliuerance from sinne, Sathan, hell, death, condemnation, to all such as with touched and bruised harts flie vnto him.

The second question is, whether a naturall man by the power of his wil may be able to resist & ouercom a temptation. The Papist answers, that he is able to ouercome lesser & easier temptations of himself; yea, and greater too, if he be helped by god: & that sundry temptations doe not exceede the strength of mans nature. But we are to hold, & we teach the contrary, that the wil of man since the fall of Adam cannot ouercome so much as the least temptation. Because the power whereby a temptation should be ouercome, is lost and abolished, that is, the power to nill that that is euill, & to will that that is good. And where is no power to resist, there can be no resistance. When wee pray to God, and say, Leade vs not into temptation, wee acknowledge that there is no temptation at all that we can of our selues withstand without the helpe of God. Peter bids vs Resist Satan our aduersarie: and he shewes the right meanes when he addes these words, Stedfast in faith. Bonauen. in 2. dist. 28. art. 2 & Thom. ib. Bellarm. de grat. & lib. arbit. li. 5. ca. 7. 1. Pet 5. 9.

It is obiected that a naturall man can eyther sin, or not sin. I answer, Tis true in regard of actions pertaining to outward gouernment, and in regard of open sins, murther, theft, adulterie, &c. yet not alwayes true, but onely at some times. For euen the righteous somtime fal into open offences. And though the naturall man occasioned to sin, abstaine from open offence, yet gets he no victorie. For though hee auoide the outward act, yet can he not auoid the wicked inclination of his heart. And the abstinence from outward sin, is not without sin. Because it proceedes from a person vnreconciled to God, it hath not his beginning from faith: againe, it is for by-respects, for the getting of praise, the auoiding of open shame, and not for the honour of God.

The third question is, whether an vnregenerate man by the power of his will can obserue the lawe, though not fully, yet in respect of the substance of the act. The doctrine of long time hath bin in schooles & church,

That the goodneſſe or integritie of the wil is loſt, I confirme it thus. That which we put on in our conuerſion, we want by nature: wee put on this goodneſſe in our conuerſion. For in it we put on the newe man created according to the Image of God in iuſtice and holines, as Paul ſaith. Againe, if al the motions and inclinations of the heart be euill, and onely euill, and continually euill, there is no goodnes in the heart: but the firſt is true, For the Lord ſaith, that he ſaw the frame of the thoughes of his heart to be onely euill continually. Paul makes three parts of mā in the eſtate of Innocencie, the bodie, the ſoule, and the ſpirit, that is, the image of God wrought by the ſpirit, beeing the ornament and glorie of both the former. Now ſince the fall, the ſpirit is turned to fleſh: for whatſoeuer is borne of fleſh is fleſh (ſaith Chriſt,) that is, wholy fleſh, and only fleſh: and the naturall diſpoſition of the fleſh is to luſt againſt the ſpirit; what goodneſſe then can be in the will? He that muſt enter into the kingdome of heauen muſt firſt be borne againe: now looke as it is in the firſt birth, ſo is it in the ſecond. In the firſt, an imperfect man is not made a perfect man, but that which is no man is made a man: euen ſo in the ſecond birth, he that is a ſinner & hath nothing in him to pleaſe God, is made iuſt & righteous. For regeneration is not in reſpect of the ſubſtāce of bodie or ſoule, nor in reſpect of the faculties of the ſoule, but only in reſpect of the goodnes thereof, which is a conformitie to the will of God. And if there be any part or portion thereof yet remaining, there cannot be a new birth, but only a repairing of that which is decaied with a cōfirmation and increaſe of it.

Gen.6.5.

1.Theſſ.5.23

Iob.3.36.

The ſecond reaſon. There is [a] no power or aptneſſe in the will corrupted to will that which is truly good. Therefore libertie of grace to will well is loſt. The minor I prooue thus. Ezech.36.26. A new heart alſo will I giue you, and a new ſpirit will I put within you, and I will take away the ſtonie heart out of your bodie, and I will giue you an heart of fleſh. Here two things are ſet downe diſtinctly. The firſt, that the newe and fleſhie heart is the gift of God, that is, an heart readie & apt to giue obedience. The ſecond, that there is in vs no aptnes or abilitie to receiue this gift of God: becauſe our hearts are ſtonie. God therefore giues the fleſhie heart, and the aptnes to receiue this gift by taking away the ſtonie heart. Chriſt ſaith, that none can come vnto him, vnleſſe the father Draw him. Now if there were in vs by nature the leaſt power or aptnes to come to Chriſt, then drawing were needeleſſe, (for that argues obſtinate rebellion) and it were ſufficient to ſuccour, helpe, and confirme the foreſaid power, without any more adoe. Saint Paul ſaith, that the wiſdome of the fleſh, that is, the beſt inclinations and motions of the minde of a naturall man, are not only enemies, but euen enmitie to God. Now in enmitie, there is nothing but hatred and contempt of God. And in the hatred of God, what inclinatiō or aptnes can there be to loue & obey him? Againe Paul ſaith, The naturall man is not capable of the thinges of God: for they are fooliſhnes to him: neither can he know them, for they are ſpiritually diſcerned. In the mind of a naturall man there be two things to be conſidered, the act, and the power of knowing and approouing that which is truly good. And here Paul giues his ſentence of both: of the act, that the minde cannot knowe the things of God: of the power, that the minde hath no capablenes or aptnes to acknowledge or approue thē; as a little veſſel hath no aptnes to receiue a great quantitie of liquor. Againe, we are not apt or ſufficient of our ſelues to thinke a good thought as of our ſelues, but our ſufficiencie is of God. Therefore nature corrupted wants abilitie ſo much as to thinke a good thought: much leſſe to will that which is good. Againe Paul tells the Epheſians, that they were dead in ſinnes and treſpaſſes. And this death or deadneſſe is not only in reſpect of the performance of that which is good, but alſo in regard of power to performe it. For if the leaſt power to doe good remaine ſince the fall, man is not dead as yet, but dying or drawing on: becauſe as yet ſome portion of ſpirituall life remaines. And if this be ſo, howe are we quickned together with Chriſt? and how is it a wonder, that the dead heare the voyce of Chriſt? Againe, Paul ſaith to the Epheſians, that they were once darknes but now are light in the Lord. Now in darknes there is no aptnes at all, either to giue, or to receiue light. But how were they made light? without any worke or cooperation of theirs: euen as in the creation light was taken, not from ſome other precedent beginnings of light, but out of darkenes, which cōferred nothing at all to the being of light.

The third reaſon: There is not only an Impotencie to good, but ſuch a forcible proneneſſe & diſpoſitiō to euil, as that we can doe nothing but ſinne. Ieremie ſaith, Ierem.17.9 that the heart of mā is wicked aboue all things, who can know it? Paul ſaith that the Romans Rom.6.20. were once ſeruants of ſinne, and free in reſpect of righteouſnes: and of himſelfe, that and 7. the law was ſpirituall, he carnall and ſould vnder ſinne. And of vnrepentant ſinners he 2.Tim.2.26. ſaith, that they are in the ſnare of the diuil according to his will. And this diſpoſition of which I ſpeake, is not to ſome few ſinnes, but to all ſinnes without exception: becauſe, as euery man takes of Adam the whole nature of man, euen ſo he takes the whole corruption of mans nature. And where this huge and hornble maſſe of corruption takes place, there all inclination & power to goodnes muſt needes giue place. It may be obiected, that if the will bee in bondage vnder ſinne, it hath loſt his libertie quite. I anſwer; not ſo: for both may ſtand together. The priſoner though hee haue loſt a great part of his liberty, yet hath he not loſt all: for within the priſon he may (as he will) either ſit, ſtand, lie, or walke. And though he which is captiue to ſin can do nothing but ſinne, yet may he in ſinning vſe his libertie: and in the diuers kinds of euils intēded, ſhew the freedome of his wil.

The fourth reaſon. All the goodnes we haue, and all we can do that is pleaſing to god, is wholly in ſcripture aſcribed to god. He that is the childe of God, is borne of Iohn 1.13. God: not of blood, that is, not of naturall generation: not of the will of the fleſh, that is, not of the power and inclinatiō of naturall will: not of the will of man, that is, the heroicall inclinatiō of excellent men. We are Epheſ.2.10 the workmanſhip of God created in Chriſt to good workes. Now the creature confers nothing to his creation, which is wholly from the Creator: becauſe to create is not to make ſomething of ſomething, but ſomething of nothing. Chriſt ſaith, without me ye can doe nothing. And the reaſon is there rendered; Becauſe Chriſt is the vine, & they which beleeue are vine branches: which branches, that they may bring forth good fruit, muſt firſt bee ſet into Chriſt & then draw their ſap, that is, power to doe good, from him.

Patrons of nature againſt the grace of God, alleadge foure ſpeciall reaſons for libertie of wil in moral acts, that is, in things and actions good according to the morall law. The firſt is this. God hath giuen ſundry commandements to man ſince his fall, ſome pertaining to the law, ſom to the goſpel, as cōmaundements to turne vnto God, to beleeue, to repent. And all commandemēts are giuen in vaine, vnles there be freedome of wil to doe them, or not to doe thē. I anſwer firſt, theſe commandements ſet not downe what we can doe, but what we ſhould doe: they ſignifie, not our abilitie, but our office & dutie, whereby we ſhould pleaſe god & come to ſaluation. And if the commandements be impoſsible, it is not Gods fault but ours: for they are not impoſsible as created but as corrupt nature. Secondly, though we can not will to doe that which God commands, yet are not his commandements idle. For they are the inſtruments and means of the ſpirit of God, whereby he effects in vs the good he commands.

The ſecond obiection. We are bound to giue vnto God an account of all our doings in the daie of iudgement, & this were not equall, vnleſſe we had power to will both good and euill. I anſwer, it ſufficeth to binde vs to a reckning, that once we had libertie in Adam to will either good or euill. And all men ſince the fall haue ſome meaſure of libertie of will: the wicked libertie in ſinne, the righteous libertie in duties of righteouſnes.

The third obiection from teſtimonies of Scripture. It is alleadged that the Samari- Luke 10. tane, which lay wounded between Iericho and Ieruſalem, is a figure of mankind halfe dead in ſinne. I anſwer, that in parables nothing may be gathered that is beſide the ſcope thereof: and the ſcope of this parable is nothing els, but to ſhew who is our neighbour. Againe, we graunt that libertie of will is not aboliſhed, but wounded: Becauſe though libertie of grace to wil wel be loſt, yet libertie of nature to will, ſtill remaines. Againe the words of Chriſt to the Angel of Laodicea are obiected. Behold I Reuel.3.20 ſtand at the doore and knock: if any man open, I will come in. Here (ſay ſome) to knock, is the worke of grace, and to open, the work of free-will. I anſwer, that the words, (if any man open) are conditionall: and therefore determine nothing of power of will either to or fro. Againe, the words ſet not downe what the angell is able to doe, but what his office is, and what he can doe by grace. Furthermore the place of Deuteronomie is obiected. The word which I com- Deut.30.14 maund thee, is neere thee that thou mayeſt doe it. But in theſe wordes Moſes ſets downe, what the Iſraelies can doe by the grace of a Mediator, who fulfilling the law for vs, & giuing be conuerted, goes before the act of God, whereby he turnes vs to himselfe: and that otherwise, wee are conuerted without our consent, and that God workes vpon vs as vpon a blocke or stone. Answer. In respect of time they are both done together; but in respect of order of nature, first the will begunnes to be turned of God, before it can will to be turned. For euery cause is before his effect, if not in time, yet in prioritie of nature. The will conuerted, so soone as God hath begunne to renew it, wils to be renewed: and it could not will the conuersion of it selfe, vnlesse it had formerly tasted the goodnesse thereof. And though we first feele the desire to be conuerted before the grace of conuersion, it is nothing: for sometimes we perceiue the effect before the cause: as we see the light of the sun before the sunne: and we see the light of a candle in a house before we see the candle. Therefore to will to be regenerate may be the effect of regeneration begunne, though it first of all appeare. For the better clearing of this our doctrine, I will propound two other questions.

The first, whether the wil of man by his naturall strength, be any cause of his owne conuersion. The answer of the Papists is, that the will is a cause with the grace of God: and that both togither worke our conuersion; grace as the principall, will as the lesse principall, and both as causes formally. But we teach and hold (as the truth is) that will in the Act of working effecting, producing of our conuersion or regeneration, is no cause at all, but in it selfe considered, a meere patient or subiect to receiue the grace of conuersion giuen and wrought by God. It is absurd to thinke, that a creature should be a cause of his creation, or a dead man of his quickening. Therefore (as I thinke) the doctrine of them that teach, that there are three efficient causes of mans conuersion, Gods spirit, Gods word, mans will, hath his defect. The spirit is the principall cause, the word in his right vse is the means or instrument, whereby the operation of the spirit is effectuall. And for the will of man, it standes onely as a patient or obiect of diuine operation. It is alleadged, that men which repent, are worthie praise therefore: and this cannot well be, vnlesse repentance proceede from freedome of will. I answer: repentance is praised, because it is a thing that pleaseth God, and in that respect praiseworthy: & the repentant person is praised, not because he is the cause of his owne repentance, but because hee repents being thereto inabled by the mercie of God.

Bellarm. de gra. & lib. arb. l. 6. c. 15. Sect. 10.

The second question is, whether the conuersion of a sinner be in the power of mans will any way. The answer of the Papist is, that our regeneration and conuersion is in parte in the power of mans will: so as the will stirred vp can either apply it selfe to the grace of God, or reiect the same. Contrariwise we teach, that regeneration is not within the power of mans wil, but that it wholy dependeth on the will of God: and that when GOD will conuert and renew vs, though will for his own nature be apt to resist, yet in respect of Gods vnchangeable will, and in respect of the efficacie of his inward operatiō, it cannot resist and repell the worke of God. For when God himselfe workes any thing, his work cannot be resisted. For his woorking of a thing is only to wil it to be, and his wil can not be resisted. Now in mans conuersion, he workes the will, and he workes the deede: and he causeth men to walke in his commandements. Resistance therefore can not be made. Secondly, the Scripture euery where teaches, that our conuersion and saluation whollie depends on Gods will, and not on the wil of man. Of the distinction of man, and man in the matter of saluation, Paul alledgeth the testimonie of Moses, It is neyther in him, that willeth, nor in him, that runneth, but in God that sheweth mercie. Our Sauiour Christ teacheth that the secrets of the kingdome of God are reuealed to some, and to others concealed, because the pleasure of God is so: and bicause this gift of vnderstanding is giuen to some, and not to others. Our conuersion is termed a new generation and a new creation: for this cause it can not depend on the wil of man at al, bicause a creature hath not his creation or generation in his owne wil, so as he may either accept or refuse it. And it is a great ouershadowing of Gods grace, to make the hauing, or the not hauing of it, to bee in the choise of mans will. But the text in hand is obiected. When Christ would haue conuerted Ierusalem, they resisted and would not. I answer, There is a double worke of God. One is, outwardly in the worde and Sacraments to offer grace: and this indeed may be resisted. Of this Christ speaks here when he saith, they would not: and Stephen when he saith, they resisted the holy-ghost. The Lord saith, Gen. 6. 2. My spirit shall not alway strive with man: and Peter applies this striuing uing of Noahs miniſtery ſaying, that Chriſt went in ſpirit and preached, 1. Pet. 3. 19. The ſecond is, when God inwardly by his ſpirite, turnes, renews, ſanctifies the whole man, and this worke cannot be reſiſted by the will of man; no more than Lazarus could reſiſt the worke of Chriſt, when hee was raiſed from the dead. If it be ſaide, that this doctrine aboliſheth liberty, becauſe it cannot chooſe & refuſe the grace of God: I anſwer, the Angells of God, which will good and cannot will euill, haue neuertheleſſe perfect libertie of will. And it is greater perfection of libertie freely and onelie to will that which is good, than to be able to will both good and euill. He is at more libertie, that cannot be a ſeruant, then he which may be either a free man or a ſeruant. And a neceſsity of yielding to the wil of God is no hurt to our will. For it is a ſpecial liberty, to wil that which God wils and nothing els. By al this which hath bin ſaid, it appeares what is the difference betweene vs, and the Church of Rome in the point of freewil. They ſay, liberty of grace to will well is onely weakned, diminiſhed, and held captiue by ſinne: we ſay it is quite loſt and aboliſhed by the fall of Adam.

Againe, by the former doctrine, the cõmon queſtion is eaſily anſwered: namely wherein lieth the efficacie of Gods grace. a Some Papiſts anſwer that it lies ordinarily in the free conſent and co-operation of freewill ioyned with grace. And this ſeems directly to be the opinion of the Councell of Trent. But b this is much derogatorie to the diuine grace of God to place the c efficacie thereof in mans will: and it miniſters much matter of d boaſting vnto men. Others place the efficacie of grace in the congruitie of the obiect, e that is, in morall perſwaſions which God knowes to be apt and fitte to moue and allure the will according to the condition thereof, euen as a beaſt is mooued by the ſight of a bottle of hay. But there is no efficacie in theſe perſwaſions preſented to the minde: becauſe the wil lies in thraldom & bondage vnder ſinne and Sathan. And the will muſt not onelie bee helpt, but alſo be deliuered from this bondage, before any perſwaſions can moue it. Lumbard in his time much declined from the purity of the former daies: & yet he is farre founder then the Ieſuites of our daies. For he ſaith thus: Freewil now is hindered by the lawe of the fleſh from doing good, and ſtirred vp to euill, ſo as it can not will and doe good, vnleſſe it be deliuered and helped by grace. Wee leauing the Papiſtes in their diſſentions, place the efficacie of grace in the grace it ſelfe. For ſaith Chriſt, Euerie man that hath heard and learned of the father, comes vnto me. Againe, we place it in this, that God addes the ſecond grace to the firſt. For hauing giuen the power, he ſtaies not there, but proceedes further and giues the will, and with the wil, the deede. And thus is the grace of God effectuall.

Nifi per gratiam liberum & adiuuetur.

Iohn 6. 45.

The conſideration and vſe of this & the former doctrines, is of great conſequent. For if libertie of grace be loſt, great is the neceſsity of our redemption by Chriſt, and great is the excellencie thereof. Secondly, this doctrine cuts off the excuſe of all ſin: for though wee ſinne neceſſarily, becauſe libertie of grace is loſt: yet we ſinne freely, becauſe libertie in euill remaines. Thirdly, it appeares hence, that man of himſelfe can not haue or retaine any goodneſſe, but that which GOD giueth and preſerueth in vs. This thing muſt moue vs to pray earneſtly for the grace wee want: and to giue hearty thanks for the graces we haue. Fourthly, we are taught deeply to humble our ſelues for the loſſe of our libertie, and for the bondage vnder ſinne: and to pray inſtantly for deliuerance by Chriſt. Fiftly, ſeeing of our ſelues wee can not preuaile againſt the leaſt temptation, wee muſt pray to bee guided and aſsiſted continually by God. Laſtly, ſeeing our conuerſion dependeth on Gods mercie, and not on our will, wee are taught to deny our owne willes, wiſedome, power, and to aſcribe our iuſtification and ſaluation wholly and onely to God.

The third eſtate of man, is the eſtate of regeneration: in which the will hath power to will, partly that which is good, and partly that which is euil, as daily experiẽce declareth in the liues of iuſt men. And the reaſon is, becauſe the wil of man renewed, hath in it a three-fold libertie. The firſt is, the libertie of nature, to will, or nill which is in all men. The ſecond is, libertie of ſinne, whereby the will, when it willeth any euil, willeth it freely. And this libertie is diminiſhed according to the meaſure of grace, which god beſtoweth. The third is, libertie of grace to will that which pleaſeth God, & it is reſtored in part in regeneration: ſo far forth as libertie to ſinne is diminiſhed.

Church, that he can: and the doctrine of all Papists at this day is, that he can if he be helped by God: and that by his owne strength, he may keepe all the morall precepts so as no sinne be committed, o for some short space of time. But the truth is, he can not. For if we graunt & suppose an action, we must presuppose the ground and beginning thereof. Now the integritie or sanitie of wil, whereby it was able to wil that which is good, is the ground of a good act, and it is lost: & therefore there can be no keeping of the law in respect of substance. The substance of the first table is, to loue God with all the heart, soule, strength: and the substance of all negatiue commandements is, Thou shalt not lust. And the naturall wil cannot possibly reach to the doing of these. It is alleadged, that a naturall man may giue almes and doe iustice to others, and such like. I answer, in the substance of any duty commanded there be two things, the act to be done, and the manner of doing it: and that is to doe it in faith, with a minde to obey God, and to intend his honour thereby. And this manner of doing a worke is the forme of euery worke, that makes it to be good indeede: and without it, workes commanded in the law, are but as a bodie without life or soule, or as matter without forme. Wil therefore is vnable to obserue any one commandement, or so much as any one worke of a commandement in his owne intire substance.

Luther.

And it must be remembred as a maine ground, that the law beside external duties requires inward obedience, in knowledge of God and his will, in faith, hope, loue, patience, and the subiection of our thoughts, wills, and affections to the wil of God. In respect of this inward and spiritual obedience, the holy Ghost saith, the law is impossible, Rom. 8. 3. and that the wisdome of the flesh cannot be subiect to the law of God, v. 7. that this is the yoake, which neither we nor our fathers could beare. Act. 15. 10.

Angu. de haref. c. 88. Innocent. ep. 93. apud Augustin.

Againe, it was the heresie of Pelagius, that a man by the strength of his own free-will may keepe all the commandements of God, though (as they say) he doth it somewhat hardly. And the Papists are not farre from this when they say, that man by naturall strength may keepe the whole law for some little time.

The fourth question is, whether naturall corrupted will can any way prepare and dispose it selfe to his owne conuersion and iustification: that is, take away the impediments and make himselfe apt and capable of his iustification. The b doctrine hath beene for diuers hundreds of yeares that will can doe it: and the doctrine of the Papists now is, that the wil, so it be stirred vp by God, can doe it. But the certen truth is, that will cannot. The conuersion of a sinner is a creation: and no creature can prepare it selfe to his owne creation. That very thing, c whereby a man should prepare himselfe to any good dutie, is lost by Adams fall: and therefore the worke of preparation is Gods and not ours; vnlesse it be possible for a man, dead in his sinnes to prepare himselfe to his owne spirituall viuification: by nature we are seruants of sinne, and our libertie beginnes in our iustification. Therefore before we are iustified, we cannot so much as will that which is good. Indeed the Israelites prepared their hearts to seeke the Lord: and Ezra prepared his heart to seeke the law of the Lord. But this was the worke of men regenerate, whereby they renewed in themselues the purpose of obeying God and of perseuering in duties of godlines.

c Libertie of grace.

1. Sam. 7. Ezra 7. 10.

The fifth and the principall question of all is, whether a naturall man can will his owne conuersion or regeneration. The learned among the Papists teach on this manner. d That wil alone by it selfe cannot: yet that will can, if it be preuented and stirred vp by some good cogitation cast into the minde and some good desire stirred vp in the heart, and be withall helped and directed by god. They vse to open their minds by these comparisons. The eye in darknes sees nothing, and is as it were without the faculty of seeing: yea if an obiect be set before the eye, and light be brought in, then can it see. Againe, a man lies asleepe in a dungeon, & he doth not so much as think of comming forth: yet let a man come and call him, and reach downe a corde vnto him, he will then awake, take hold of the corde, put vnder his arme holes, as Ierome did, and hang thereupon. And being thus holped, he both can and doth come forth of the dungeon. The doctrine we teach is the plaine contrarie, That will before it be turned & conuerted cannot so much as will his owne conuersion. This follows vpon the former ground: for the power to wil that that is truly good, is lost: a power to wil our conuersion, is a power to wil that which is good: therefore the power to will our own conuersion, is lost. Beside preuenting and exciting motions that ſerue to ſtirre vp and helpe the will, there is further required, that the wil be regenerate, before it can wil that which is good: and without this gift of regeneration (which is the true preuenting grace) all externall motions and excitatiõs to that which is good, are of no effect. For the cauſe muſt goe before the effect. Now that the will may affect & doe that which is good, the cauſe is the regeneration thereof: in which is giuen to the will, not only a new action, whereby it wils wel, but alſo a new qualitie, whereby it is able and can will wel. And this abilitie of willing wel, goes before the acte of good will, as the cauſe before the effect. When a man is dead, chafe him, and rubbe him, put aqua vite into him to warme him at the heart: when this is done, take him by the hand, plucke him vp, and bid him walke: for all this, he wil not ſtirre the leaſt ioynt, neither can he. All chafing and rubbing, al ſpeech and perſwaſion, and all helps in the world be in vaine, vnles the ſoule be reſtored to the bodie: Euen ſo, no perſwaſion offered to the minde, nor good deſires to the wil, are of any moment, til the image of God ſtanding in holines, which is a conformitie with the wil of God, and the very ſoule of our ſoules begin to be reſtored. Nay, the minde is vncapable of any good thought, and the wil of a good deſire, til God once againe create in them a new qualitie or propertie of holineſſe, that the minde in thinking may thinke wel, and the wil in willing may wil wel, or, wil that which is good. For though it be the nature of the wil, to wil or nil, yet the power and formal beginning of wel-willing is the integritie or goodnes of the wil. It is obiected, that the wil to accept and receiue grace, is in vs before grace be receiued. I anſwer thus, the firſt act of wil, whereby the wil in his regeneration begins to aſſent vnto god, & begins to wil to be conuerted, is indeed the worke of the wil, (becauſe it is the wil that willeth) yet doth it not ariſe of the natural ſtrẽgth of the wil, but from the grace of God, that renueth it. For, to wil to be regenerate, is the effect and teſtimonie of regeneration begun. Paul handling the point of the predeſtination and iuſtification of a ſinner, compares God to a potter, and vs to clay. Now the clay, before it is framed to a veſſel of honour, and while it is in framing, is meerely paſsiue, & doth nothing at all for the framing of it ſelfe. When a man is to be regenerate, God takes away the ſtonie heart, that is by nature diſobedient and altogether vnapt to obey: and he giues a fleſhie hart, that is pliable & flexible to obedience. Now to wil to be conuerted, is a good thing, and one point of true obedience: and therefore it proceedes not from the heart of man, till it be mollified and framed by God to that which is good. Ezech. 36.

What haſt thou, ſaith Paul, that thou haſt not receiued? and if thou haſt receiued it, why doſt thou boaſt? Now, if to wil to be healed were of vs, we haue matter of boaſting in our ſelues. Againe he ſaith, we are not ſufficient or able to thinke a good thought as of our ſelues, but our ſufficiencie is of God: much leſſe then can we of our ſelues wil or deſire to be regenerate. The health and life of the ſoule is of God, who raiſeth vs from death to life: now to wil to be healed, & to wil to liue vnto god, is the beginning of health and life. A certaine Councel ſaith, If any man doe auouch, that God doth expect our will, that it may be purged from ſinne: and doth not confeſſe that it is the operation of the ſpirit of God in vs, that doth make vs to will to be purged, he reſiſts the holy Ghoſt, ſaying by Salomon, The will is prepared of God. Auguſtine ſaith, It is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercie, that all may be giuen to God, who both prepares the will of man to be holped, and helpes it being prepared: who preuents him that willeth that he may will, and followes him with helpe that willeth, that he will not in vaine. They which are bodily ſicke, can wil to be healed before they begin to be healed: becauſe they be aliue: but they which are ſpiritually ſick in ſinne before their conuerſion, are dead in their ſinne: and therefore they can neither thinke, nor wil, nor deſire their cõuerſion. When Chriſt was about to cure a ſicke man, he mooues this queſtion to him, Wilt thou be healed? & ſo when God is about the worke of regeneration in any man, he inwardly mooues the queſtion in the heart, whether he wil be regenerate or no: and by this meanes ſtirres vp a deſire to be regenerate. If any man thinke, that by this doctrine, men are regenerate againſt their wils: I anſwer, when God beginnes to regenerate vs, he makes vs then willing, being otherwiſe by nature vnwilling: & thus he regenerates vs, not againſt our wils, but with our wils; yet ſo, as the willingnes to be regenerate is not of vs, but of God. It may be alleadged further, that the Acte of the will whereby it wills to Conci. Arauſ. ca. 4. Auguſt. in Enchirid. Iohn 5. 6.

And becauſe theſe three alwayes remayne in the wil to the death, therefore ſometime it willeth well, ſometime euill, ſometime both: and in the beſt actions we do, there is a mixture: bicauſe they are not perfectly good for the time of this life, but partly good and partely euill.

That this power of the wil may the better appeare, I will propound foure queſtions. The firſt is, whether the will preuented or renewed, haue any ſtroke, action, or operation in the firſt regeneration of a ſinner. I anſwer; In the renouation or conuerſion of a ſinner I conſider two things. Firſt, the beginning or ground therof, and that is the ſetting or imprinting of the new qualities and inclinations in the mind, wil, affections of the hart. And this is the intire or meere work of God, in vs, and vpon vs; and we in it are meerely paſſiue or actiue. The ſecõd is the euidence of the former in new and ſpirituall actions, as namely in thinking, willing, and deſiring that that is good. Now theſe actions are woorkes of God in and by mans will: and mans will is not only a ſubiect of them, but alſo an inſtrumẽt. A Subiect, in that God is the firſt & principall worker of theſe workes in the will. An inſtrument, bicauſe it pleaſeth God to vſe the will, and to mooue it by his grace for the acting and effecting of the thinges which hee appointeth. And thus the wil is not meerely paſsiue, but paſſiue and actiue both: firſt paſsiue, and then actiue. For being acted and mooued by God, who workes the will and the deede, it alſo acteth and mooueth. And we doe not vtterly deny the co-operation of mans will with Gods grace. It is neceſſarie indeede that God firſt regenerate vs, and make vs his children and new creatures. And in this thing wee doe not co-worke with GOD, but ſtand as patients, that God may worke vpon vs, and reforme vs, euen in the ſame maner, as when hee made vs in the beginning without any helpe of ours. Yet, after our regeneration, by Faith we are brought from life to death, & to wil is preſent with vs, though in weake meaſure by reaſon of the remainders of corruption: & then we begin to be co-workers with the grace of God, mooued to will, and ſo indeede willing that which is good. In this ſenſe haue the learned ſaide, that which is repaired in vs, is not repaired without vs: and, that God in them whome he calles, prepares the will that it may be a receiuer and handmaide of his giftes.

Proſper. cont. Collat. 12. De voc. Gent. lib. 2. c. 29

The ſame anſwer, in effect, I propound another way. In the worke of our regeneration, three graces be required, the preuenting grace, the working grace, and the co-working grace. The preuenting grace is, when God of his mercie ſets and imprints in the minde a new light, in the will a new qualitie or inclination, in the heart new affections. The working grace is, when God giues to the will the acte of well-willing, namely, a the will to beleeue, the will to repent, the will to obey God in his worde. The co-working grace is, when God giueth the deede to the wil, that is, the exercise & practiſe of faith and repentaunce. The firſt giues the power of doing good; the ſecond the will; the third the deede: and all three together make the worke of regeneration. Now the will of man in reſpect of operation, concurreth not with Gods preuenting grace, but is merely patient as a ſubiect to receiue grace. For it is the proper work of God, to ſet or imprint a new faculty or inclination of the will, and that without any action of the ſaid will. Neuertheleſſe the will beeing once renewed and preuented, concurreth by his operation with the working and co-working grace of God. For the will being mooued by grace, willeth and dooth indeede that whereto it is moued. And the will to obey God, or to performe any like duetie, proceedes ioyntly from two cauſes. From grace; in that it mooueth and cauſeth the wil to will to beleeue. From the will of man; in that being preuented and moued by God, it willes to beleeue, or to doe any like duty. And therfore the antient ſaying hath his truth, Hee that made thee without thee, dooth not regenerate or ſaue thee without thee. Becauſe our conuerſion is not without the motion and conſent of will, as our creation was. And that we do not miſ-take in this poynt, the order that is betweene mans wil and Gods grace, muſt here againe be remembred. In reſpect of time they are both together, and cõcurre in the very firſt moment of our regeneratiõ: in reſpect of the order of nature, the will doth not firſt begin that which is good, and then after borrowe aide from grace: but grace preuents, renewes, and moues the will, and then the will moued or changed, willes to be conuerted and to be healed in the firſt inſtant of conuerſion.

This operation of the wil, to will to beleeue, to will to repent and to obey, is the leaſt grace and ſigne of Gods fauour: (for nothing can be leſſe than to will to doe that which is good:) yet is it of great and excellent excellent price. For it hath the promise of God annexed to it. The Prophet saith to the rebellious Israelites, Wash, and make you cleane ——— cease to doe euill, learne to doe well. Now they might peraduenture say, Alas, we cannot wash our selues: he therfore addes, If ye will and obey, that is, if yee doe but will to be cleansed, and testifie this will by your endeauour to obey, yee shall eate the good things of the land. And Christ saith, that the heauenly Father giueth the holy Ghost to them that desire him. And to them that are in Christ God accepts this Acte of good will for the deede it selfe. Marke the comforte that flowes from this doctrine. The full obedience to the law of God is impossible to al men, except Christ in this life; yea to them which are conuerted and sanctified, and greatly desire the fulfilling of the law in themselues: & therfore no man can be iustified by it before God, and obtaine saluation thereby. Neuertheless faith in Christ and repentaunce is so farre forth possible, to all that wil and haue a desire, that whosoeuer doe but will in earnest to beleeue and to be conuerted, do in deede beleeue, and are conuerted, & please God, and shall not perish eternally, though the beginning of faith and conuersion be weake, so it be in trueth and not counterfet. And yet such is the naughtines of our nature, that faith and conuersion is impossible vnto vs, vnlesse of the singular mercy of God, it be stirred vp in the hearts of the Elect by his holy spirite. In this respect Christ saith, Matth. 11. My yoke is easie, and my burden light. And againe, His commandements are not grieuous. It may be obiected, that the will and desire of renouation and reconciliation with God, may be where there is a minde and purpose to sinne, and where is no true hatred and detestation of iniquitie. Ans. The serious and instant will or desire to beleeue in Christ, and to repent, includes in it the hatred of sinne, and the purpose of not sinning. For he that truly desires to beleeue doth so: because he detests his vnbeleefe: and hee that desires to repent, doth so, because he hates his own euill wayes, and purposeth to sin no more.

Isai 1.16.

Verse 19.

Luke 11.13

Faith and repentance are possible to all that will in earnest.

The second question is, whether the wil, after it is renewed, be able to cause & bring forth good workes of it selfe, or no? I answer two things. The first, that wil can not, vnlesse God further giue a double grace. The one is Assisting grace: & it stands in three actions, preseruation, confirmation, protection. Preseruation is, whereby GOD continueth the being of the will renewed. For that which is good, doth not continue good the least moment, vnlesse God make it to continue. Confirmation is, when God fixeth the mind in that which is good, and causeth the will constantly to followe the good inclination thereof, it beeing otherwise mutable and apt to decline. Protection is, wherby God defends his grace in vs against the violence of temptation. Of this he saith to Peter, Sathan hath desired to sift you, but I haue prayed for thee that thy faith faile not. And God promiseth that he will not suffer the faithful to be tempted aboue that they are able to beare. The second grace may be called, Exciting grace, whereby God mooues and stirres vppe the will, that it may indeede will and doe the good to be doone. And this grace is ordinarily required to the effecting of euerie good worke. Dauids will was exceedingly renued by the holy-Ghost, yet he praies stil, Incline mine heart vnto thy testimonies. The Christian soule, that is already drawne to Christ, prayeth still, Draw me, and wee will runne after thee. Paul saieth, they which are the children of God, are guided, mooued, or stirred by the Spirite of God. Againe, hee saith of the Philippians, after they were renewed and wrought their owne saluation with feare and trembling, that God did stil worke in them beside the power, the Acte of willing and of dooing that which is good. And he workes the will, by mooving it to will and to doe indeede, that which it can will and do. And this mouing cause, is the good wil of God. It may not seem strange, that I say new grace is required to stirre vp the will to the doing of euery new worke. For grace in the will is like a fire of greene wood, which hardly burns, and continues not to burne, vnlesse it be continually stirred vp and blowed: euen so the good inclination of the will, because it is ioyned, nay mixed with contrarie corruption that presseth downe, tempteth, inticeth, and draweth away the will from God, and all goodnesse, hath need continually to be excited, stirred, and mooued. The man regenerate is able to pray to God, yet can hee not pray somtime by reason of the weight of corruption, vnlesse the spirite helpe to beare the infirmities of nature, and make request in vs by stirring and mooving vs to make request. The doctrine of the antient Church hath beene, that new grace is to bee giuen to the doing of euery good acte.

And,

And, that we do not that good which we can doe, vnlesse God make vs doe it, as he made vs able to doe it. This doctrine must the rather be remembred, because the streame of Popish doctrine, runs another way: by teaching that our wills assisted by grace, can doe good, without the concurrence of new grace to excite & stir vp the will. Indeede, for the doing of naturall actions, the generall co-operation of God sufficeth: but to the effecting of actions supernaturall, the speciall helpe of God is required. A child that can goe vp and down in an euen floore, being staied by the mothers hand, for all this it cannot goe vp a paire of staires, vnlesse it be lifted at euery steppe. Like is the case of the children of God, in things which concerne the kingdome of heauen.

Rard. Tapper. Bell. de grat. & l. arbit. l. 6. c. 15.

The second part of the answer is, that when renewed will doth a good worke, it doth it not perfectly. To will (saith Paul) is present with me, but I cannot performe the good I would: that is, I cannot perfectly doe it as I would. It may be obiected thus: The workes of God are perfect: good workes done by vs, are workes of God: therefore they are perfect. Answer, to the maior or first part of the reason: it is true of such works as are works of God alone, and not of such as are workes ioyntly both of God and man, God being the principall agent, and man the instrument. For then the worke done, takes vnto it the qualitie and condition of man, considering it proceeds from God, through the sinfull minde and wil of man. The Scriuener, when he writes by himself, he writes a perfit hand: but when a learner and he write both together, he taking the learners hand into his owne, then that which is written, will carry the imperfection of the learner. Like is the case in all such workes as are from God in and by vs.

Rom. 7. 18.

The third question is, whether the reliques of corruption, be of that force in sinning, that they can vtterly quench the spirit of God in the renewed wil. The answer is, that corruption remaining, is of it selfe apt to doe it: and the grace of Gods spirit, is apt to be extinguished, because of it selfe it is mutable: neuertheles it wholly and vtterly cannot be lost, for foure causes. The first is, the promise of God in the couenant of grace, I will put my feare into their hearts, that they shal not depart from me: and this promise particularly, belongs to all them that truly beleeue, because it is the promise of the Euangelicall couenant. The second is, the intercession of Christ in the behalfe of all the elect. Christ saith to Peter, Sathan hath desired to sift you as wheate, but I haue prayed for thee Peter that thy faith fail not. And this he did especially, in that solemne prayer made, Ioh. 17. in which he prayed not onely for Peter, but for all the Apostles, and for all that did or should beleeue in him. The third cause is the omnipotent power of God in preseruing all the that are in Christ. No man (saith Christ) taketh my sheepe forth of my hand. And marke the reason: my father is greater then all. The last cause is the efficacie of Gods spirit. S. Iohn saith, that the seede of God remaines in him that is borne anew: and that this seede keepes him that he neither doth nor can sinne in two respects. First, if he sinne, yet he sinnes not with full consent of will. For he hates and nils in part the euil which he willeth. Secondly, if by humane frailtie he fall, he makes not a trade of sinne, neither doth he keepe a course in wickednes, but the seede of grace remaining within, causeth him to returne to God, and to recouer himselfe by new repentance.

Luke 22.

Ioh. 10. 28.

Rom. 7. 19.

The last question is, whether the renewed will, can of it selfe perseuere in doing good. I answer: that our perseuerance depends and proceedes onely from the will of God. That we may perseuer two things are required: the power to perseuer, and the will of perseuerance: and both these being good things, are of God. Because euery good giuing, and euery good gift is from aboue, and commeth down from the Father of lights.

Iam. 1. 17.

This former doctrine is of great vse. In that the new birth and regeneration of a sinner, is not without the motion of his owne will: wee are taught, that we must, if we desire our owne saluation, vse the good meanes, and striue against our owne corruptions, and endeauour earnestly, by asking, seeking, knocking. It wil be said, that faith, repentance, and the rest, are all gifts of God. I answer: there is no vertue or gift of God in vs, without our wills: & in euery good act, Gods grace, and mans will, concurre: Gods grace as the principall cause; mans will renewed, as the instrument of God. And therefore, in all good things, industrie, and labour, and inuocation on our parts is required.

Ier. 32. 40.

Secondly, this doctrine ministers true comfort to all true seruants of God. For, if when they vse the good meanes of saluation, the word, praier, ſacraments, the wil lie not dead, but begin to oppoſe it ſelf againſt vnbeleefe, and other corruptions, & withall, doe but ſo much as will to beleeue, will to repent, will to be turned to God, they haue begun to turne vnto God, and God hath begunne to regenerate them: ſo be it, this will in them to doe the good they ought to doe, be in good earneſt, vnfained, and they withall, be carefull to cheriſh this little graine, till it come to a bigger quantitie.

Thirdly, ſeeing to euery new act that pleaſeth God, new grace is required, wee are taught not to preſume of our own wiſedome, will, and ſtrength; nor to glory in any thing we doe, but alwaies to acknowledge our owne impotency, and in euery good thing we doe, to giue all the glory to God: and to be watchful in praier continually, becauſe we ſtand by grace ſo long as we ſtand: and hauing done our worke, we do not the ſecond, but by a continued ſupply of new grace.

Laſtly, ſeeing Gods preuenting and working grace turnes our wils, & makes them, of vnwilling, moſt willing wills, all our obedience muſt be voluntary, & come from ſuch freeneſſe of will, as if there were no bond in the law of God, to force and compell vs thereto. The people of God, that are turned and guided by the free ſpirit of God, muſt be a voluntary people, and with all alacritie and cheerefulnes, do the duties that pertaine to them of a ready minde, euen as if there were neither heauen nor hell, iudge nor iudgement after this life. The ſpirit of life that is in Chriſt, muſt be a law vnto them.

Rom. 8.2.

The laſt eſtate is, the eſtate of glorification after this life. In this eſtate the liberty of will is, a certaine freedom, onely to will that which is good & pleaſing vnto God. For it is the continuall voice (as it were) & cry of the glorified will; I doe no euill, and I will not doe it: I doe that which is good, and I will doe it. And this indeede is the perfect liberty, in which mans will is conformed to the Free-will of God and good Angells, who will onely that which is good, and cannot will that which is euill.

By this which hath bin ſaid, it appeares, that the wordes of the text in hand [and ye would not] are ſpoken of the wil of man, according to the eſtate of corruption. For the voyce of the regenerate will is, I doe that which is euill, but I would not doe it: I doe that which is good, but I cannot do it as I would. And the voice of the corrupted will is, I doe that which is euill, and I will do it: I do not that which is good, and I will not doe it. And this laſt voice is plainely expreſſed in theſe words, And ye would not.

The third point comes now to be conſidered, namely, the harmony or conſent of both wills. For the words are, I would, ye would not. Heere it may iuſtly be demanded, whether there be an harmony or conſent betweene Gods will, and mans will, and how it ſtands with this text. I anſwer: there is an excellent harmony: and generally it ſtands in this, that Gods will hath a ſoueraigne Lordſhip ouer the will of man, and mans will ſtands ſubiect to it abſolutely, and ſimply depends vpon it. And by this meanes, where man hath a will, God hath an antecedent will; and where mans will hath any ſtroke or action, there Gods will formerly had his ſtroke and action.

Furthermore, mans will depends on Gods will in reſpect of three things, namely, Suſtentation, Determination, Ordination, or gouernment. It depends on the will of God, in reſpect of ſuſtentation; becauſe man for his nature, ſtrength, and all his motions, depends on the will of God, and could not haue being for the ſpace of one moment, vnleſſe it were vpholden by God. It may be obiected, that if God ſuſtaine the will which is ſinfull, he ſuſtaines not onely the will, but alſo the ſinne thereof. Anſwer. God ſuſtaines nature, and not the ſinne of nature: and therefore, hee onely ſuſtaines will as will, and not as it is corrupt or ſinfull will. The like we ſee in nature: when a man halts in walking, the motion of the body is from the ſoule, and is preſerued by it: but the halting which goes with the motion and diſorders it, is not from the ſoule, neyther hath it his preſeruation thence, but from a defect in the leg or foot. By this wee are taught to acknowledge the endleſſe long-ſuffering of God, who ſuſtaines the members of our bodies, our ſoules, the faculties & actions thereof, euen in the works, in which men offend and diſhonour him. Secondly, we are taught to acknowledge the vile abhomination of euery ſinne: for we ſinne in the very hands of God, ſuſtaining and preſeruing vs: and in the very actions, which wee could not doe, vnleſſe we were ſuſtained by him, we offend him and prouoke him to anger againſt vs.

Secondly, mans will depends on Gods will, in reſpect of determination: becauſe

we

we neither can or doe will any thing without the wil of God. A sparrow, sais Christ, lights not on the ground, without the heauenly father: that is, without his decree or will. The malicious and wicked will of the Iewes, could not so much as will; much lesse doe any thing against Christ, but that which the hand and counsell of God, had determined to be done. Moreouer, God determines the will two wayes. In good things, he inwardly mooues and inclines the will to the willing, and doing of the good it willeth. For in that, Gods will is the first cause of all good things, mans wil depends on it, in respect of vertue, in respect of application, and in respect of order of working. In respect of vertue, because the vertue of second causes, proceed from the first. In respect of application; because God vseth the wil of man, as an instrument of his own will, and hee applieth it to the dooing of things which he intendeth, euen as the carpenter vseth, moueth, & applieth his tooles. In respect of order of working: bt cause alwaies the first cause begins the worke, and the second moues not without the first. Vpon this ground it followes, that the good things which man willeth, he so willeth, because God first willed them. And therfore Paul saith; that good works are prepared of God, for vs to walke in: and this preparation is made, because God decrees and determines with himselfe, the doing of all works to be done.

Mat. 10.29.

Acts 4.28.

Thom. 1. part. q. 105. art. 5.

Ephe. 2.10.

In euill things, the determination of God is, [b] to will not to hinder them as he may. Vpon this will in God, followes sinne in the will of man, as a consequent, not as an effect. As a consequent, because when God suspends or withdrawes sustentation and gouernment from the will, it cannot of it selfe, but will amisse; as the staffe in my hand presently falls, when I doe but pull backe my hand. To auoide euill is good: and therefore we cannot auoid the least euill, vnlesse God make vs able to auoide it. And [c] euill is not the effect of Gods will; because God puts nothing into mans will, to cause it to will amisse: but he onely causes to conferre vnto it helpe and direction, which he is not bound to conferre.

c Voluntas permissiua efficax nō quoad productionem, sed quoad dilationem.

Heere long & tedious disputes are made by many, touching the concorde of Gods decree, and the libertie of mans will. And it is alledged, that mans wil looseth his libertie, and ceaseth indeede to be wil, if it stand subiect to the necessary and vnchangeable decree of God. I answer. First, that when the will of man determines in it selfe to one thing, it doth not loose his libertie: much more then may the liberty of will stand with the determination of God. Secondly, Gods decree doth not abolish libertie, but onely moderate and order it: by [a] inclining the will in milde and easie manner with fit and conuenient obiects, and that according to the condition of the will. That Christ should die when he died, it was necessary in respect of Gods decree: yet if we respect the constitution of his nature, he might still haue prolonged his dais: and if we consider the will of Christ, he died most freely & willingly. Otherwise, his death had been no satisfaction for sin. God himselfe dooth some things of an absolute necessity, and yet with perfect freedom of will: now then if absolute necessity do not abolish freedome of will; much lesse shall conditional necessity, depending on Gods decree, doe it. Lastly, the decree of God, establisheth the liberty of will. For his determination is, that the Agencie of second causes, shall be according to their condition; so as naturall causes, shal work naturally; free causes, freely; necessary causes, necessarily; contingent causes, in contingent and variable sort. And therefore the necessary decree of God is, that man shall will this, or that, not necessarily in respect of himselfe, but freely.

a Suauiter inclinando.

Thirdly, mans wil depends on Gods wil, in respect of gouernment. This gouernment is of two sorts. First, he gouerns the wills of the righteous, by working his own good worke in them, & by them. In them, because he moues and inclines them by his spirit. By them; because they are holy instruments of his will.

Secondly, he gouerns the wills of the wicked and vngodly, by six actions. The first is, permission, when God withdrawes his grace from the will, not inlightning the minde, nor inclining the will, but leauing it to it selfe; as when a man giues the reine to a wilde horse. The second is, a deliuery of the will to Sathan; & that is, when God giues the diuell liberty to tempt, assault, and vex the will of man, being left to it selfe. And this thing is incident to obstinate sinners; and we pray against it in these words; Lead vs not into temptation. The third action is, a ceasing to restraine corruption of will, either in whole, or in part; as when he restraines all sinnes saue one, or hauing restrained for a time, for the punishment of former sinne, hee omits restraint, permitting man to the luſts of his owne heart. The fourth action is, the bending, mooning, or inclining of the wicked will. And this God doth not by inward inſpiration (for then he ſhould be the cauſe of ſinne) but by preſenting to the mind and will, obiects good, or at the leaſt, indifferent in themſelues: vpon which obiects, the will takes occaſion to be more wilfull, obſtinate, and rebellious, not moued thereto by God, but freely mouing it ſelfe. The heat of the ſtomacke in the winter ſeaſon, is increaſed, not by the heate of things taken inwardly, but by the cold of the ayre, euery way compaſsing the body. An vnbroken horſe being ſpurd, becauſe he goes out of order; he flings out, and caſts his rider. And thus the ſinfull will of man, vrged by commandements, threatnings, iudgements: allured by promiſes and bleſſings, growes more ſinfull and wicked.

1. Tim. 3. last; 1. Cor. 5.

Rom. 7. 8. 13. Paul ſaieth; that ſinne tooke occaſion vpon the good Commandements of God, to reuiue and to be ſinfull out of meaſure. Dauid ſaith; that Pſal. 105. 25. God moued the hearts of the Ægyptians, to hate his people. But how? He bleſſed the Iſraelites exceedingly, more than the Ægyptians. And vpon this worke of God, they tooke occaſion to enuy and to hate the Iſraelites.

The fift action is, ordination, whereby God vſeth well, the wickedneſſe of the wil of man, and directeth it againſt the nature thereof to good ends, euen as the learned Phyſitian, ſometime of poyſon makes a remedie. In this ſenſe, Aſſur is called the rod of his indignation: and the Medes and Perſians, his ſanctified ones. The Iewes in the Iſa. 10. 5. & and 13. 3. crucifying of Chriſt, willed and minded, nothing but his death and deſtruction; yet God willed, and by them, wrought the redemption of mankinde. Hee workes his owne good worke by mans will, as by an actiue inſtrument, and withal, he leaues the wil to it ſelfe, to worke his own euil worke. The laſt action of God is, when a man is going on in his owne wickednes, he turnes him vnto himſelfe, of his exceeding mercie: and ſometimes againe, he opens a way, that that perſon, who of himſelfe runnes into wickednes, may ruſh headlong to his own deſtruction, for the further execution of diuine iuſtice: as when an houſe is falling, the owner thereof, will not vnder-prop it, neither will he puſh it downe: but he takes all impediments, and digs away the earth round about it, not touching the foundation, that when it falls, it may fall downe right.

Thus we ſee briefly, the harmonie of mans will and Gods will: now let vs come to the vſe, which is manifold. Firſt of all, by the former doctrine, we are brought to a right vnderſtanding of many places of Scripture. The Lord ſaith of Pharao, I will harden his heart. And this he is ſaid to doe, Exod. 4. not becauſe he ſets and imprints hardneſſe in his heart; but becauſe by ſundry actions, he orders and gouerns his wicked will: and they are foure. Firſt he permits Pharao to his owne will: ſecondly he leaues him to the malice of the diuel, and the luſts of his owne heart: thirdly, hee vrges him with a commandement, to let the people goe. And Pharao the more he is vrged, the ſtiffer and ſtubburner he is, and the more he rebells againſt God; whereas he ought indeede to haue beene the more obedient. Laſtly, God vſeth the hardnes of Pharaos heart, to the manifeſtation of his owne iuſtice and iudgement: and therefore he opens him a way, that he may run headlong to his own deſtruction. In this manner, and no otherwiſe, are the places to be vnderſtood, when the Scripture ſaith; that God 1. Reg. 22. 23. put a lying ſpirit into the mouthes of the prophets of Ahab: that, if a prophet be deceiued, the Lord Ezech. 14. 9. deceiued him: that he giues vp men to reprobate Rom. 1. 28. mindes: that he ſends ſtrong illuſions to beleeue 2. Theſ. 2. 11. lies. In the booke of Samuel it is ſaide; the Lord commanded Shemi to curſe Dauid: becauſe 2. Sam. 16. 10. about this curſing, there is a twofold action in God. One, that he reſtraines the wicked heart of Shemi, in reſpect of all other ſinne, and not in reſpect of this ſinne of railing, to which God leaues them. The ſecond, he vſeth him as an inſtrument to correct and to humble Dauid. And thus likewiſe muſt the places be vnderſtood, when it is ſaid; that God deliuered the wiues of Dauid, to Abſolon, and that hee ſtired vp Dauid to number 2. Sam. 12. 11. and 24. 1. the people. Laſtly, Ioſeph ſaith; that the Lord ſent him into Egypt: and that for two cauſes. One; becauſe when his brethren were about to make him away, God by his prouidence, cauſed Merchants to paſſe by in their ſight, whereupon, they tooke occaſion to ſell him into Ægypt. The ſecond, becauſe God diſpoſed this fact of theirs, to the good of Iacob & his family, in time to come. And thus are all like places of Scripture to be vnderſtood.

Againe, ſome ſchoole-Diuines, following Damaſcen, make and aſcribe to God, an applied or depending will, on this manner. God for his part, would haue all men without exception to be ſaued: why then are they not saued? They themselues will not. And because they will not, God therefore chooseth some, & refuseth others. But according to the former doctrine, I take this kind of applied wil, to be an inuention of mans brain. For the contrary is the truth, namely, that mans will wholly depends on the wil of God. That vessels be, som of honor, some of dishonor; it is not in the power of the clay, but in the will of the potter. The first cause orders the second, and not the second the first. To make Gods wil depend on mans will, is to put God out of his throne of maiesty, and to set the creature in his roome. Others set forth the depending will of God in this manner. God (say they) decrees nothing in particular, of things that are casuall and contingent: but he fore-sees within himselfe, what the will of the creature will doe or not doe, when things are thus, or thus ordered: and vpon this foresight, he consequently determines what shall be done. But this opinion, as it giues vnto God a common or general prouidence, so it takes away the certen determination of God, touching all particular euents. And it is absurd to thinke, that God should foresee the future acts of mans free-will, whenas yet he hath determined nothing: for things that shall be, are therefore to come to passe, because God by decree hath determined their being. And therefore, the forekhowledge of things that shal be, followes the decree of God. And if Gods decree, presuppose mans willing of this or that, and thereupon determine, how shall that speech of the Lord stand; I will cause them to walke in my statutes? For hereby is signified, that God doth not attend on the wil of man, but brings mans wil in subiection to himselfe. And therefore this attending will, ascribed to God, is improued euen of the Papists themselues.

are

Ezech. 36. 26.

Shumel in 1. Thom. q. 16. art. 6.

Thirdly, in that mans wil stands subiect absolutely to the plesure of God, our dutie is, to yeelde voluntary subiection to him in all things, when his will is made manifest vnto vs.

Lastly, this doctrine of the consent and concurrence of mans will, and Gods will, must be the stay and ground of our patience and comfort. For there is no calamitie or misery, that betides vs by, and from the will of man, without the will of God. The creature can wil nothing against vs, vnlesse it be first the wil of God: and it can do neither more nor lesse, than God will. The diuel could not touch Iob without leaue, and he could not enter into the heird of swine without leaue. Vpon this ground Dauid speakes to this effect; Let Shemi curse, for he curseth, because the Lord bids him doe so. Ioseph comforts himselfe and his brethren in this, that not they so much as the Lord, sent him into Ægypt.

As there is an Harmony between Gods will and mans will; so there is a dissent betweene mans will and Gods word, or his signifying will, as appeares by the text in hand. a Schoolmen vpon this dissent, make a distinction of Gods grace, into sufficient and effectuall. Sufficient they call that, whereby a man may be saued, if he wil not be wanting to himselfe. Effectuall, whereby a man is indeede saued. The first, (they say) is giuen to all men, at one time or another: the second is not. And this distinction of grace, they gather on this manner. When Christ would haue gathered the Iewes, they would not: therefore they had not effectual grace: and because they would not, they are blamed and rebuked by Christ. therefore (saith the Papist) God gaue them sufficient grace to be conuerted, if they would: els could he not haue blamed them. I answer: this proues, that once God gaue them sufficient grace to obey any commandement of his, namely, in the creation: but hence cannot be gathered, that when God called the Iewes by his word, that then, then I say, he gaue them sufficient grace. Secondly it is obiected, that God did all that might be done to his Vine, to make it bring forth good fruite; and yet for all this, it brought foorth nothing but wilde grapes: therefore it is said; there must needs be a grace sufficient to saluation, which is not effectuall. I answer: God did that to his vineyard, that was sufficient to make a good vine bring foorth fruit, (and that is the meaning of the place in Isai) though not sufficient to change the nature of an euill vine, and to make it a good vine. It is vrged, that the Lord saith; hee wayted for grapes: which he would not haue done; vnlesse there had beene hope, by reason of sufficient grace giuen. I answer againe: that the Lord waited for fruit, not because God then gaue them sufficient grace, when he waited, but because the Church of the Iewes, was in shew and pretence a good vine, and thereby gaue hope of good fruit. Thirdly it is obiected, that Adam receiued sufficient grace: and that hee had not effectuall grace, because he fell. I answer: Adam had sufficient to the perfection of a creature, but not ſufficient to vnchangeable perſeuerance, ſpecially, if he ſhould be aſſaulted by temptation. Likewiſe he had grace effectuall, in reſpect of righteouſnes and happineſſe, but not in reſpect of perſeuerance in both. Grace in him ſo far forth, as it was ſufficient to happines: it was alſo effectuall. Laſtly, it is obiected, that God forſakes no man, till he firſt forſake God: and therefore, that God for his part, giues grace ſufficient to ſaluation. Anſ. There is a double kinde of forſaking in God: one is for triall, the other for puniſhment. The forſaking, which is for trialls ſake, goes before mans ſin, in which he forſakes God. In this regard, Adam was for order of nature, firſt forſaken of God, before he forſooke God. The forſaking which is for puniſhment, alwaies followes after ſinne: and of this muſt the rule be vnderſtood, that they which are forſaken of God, did firſt forſake God. Now the truth which we are to hold in this point, is thus much. There is a grace which is ſufficient to the conuiction of a ſinner, which is not effectuall to ſaluation: and againe, there is a grace which is ſufficient to the leading of a ciuill life, which is not effectuall to ſaluation: yet the grace which is indeede ſufficient to ſaluation, is alſo effectuall; namely, the gift of regeneration, in which God giues, not only the power to be conuerted, but alſo the will and the deede.

Thus much of the Harmony: now comes the fourth point to be conſidered, namely, in what manner Chriſt willed the conuerſion of Ieruſalem. He willed it firſt, in Loue, ſecondly, in Patience. His loue is ſet forth by two things. The firſt, albeit he was God, full of maieſty, and we vile wretches, his enemies by nature, yet was he content to take vpon him, a vile and baſe condition, to be vnto the Iewes as an hen. The ſecond was, that he takes vnto him, the faſhions, the diſpoſition and tender affection of the hen to her young ones.

That all this may the better be conceiued, three queſtions are to be propounded. The firſt is, whether there be ſuch an affection of loue in God, as is in man & beaſt? I anſwer: that affections of the creature, are not properly incident vnto God, becauſe they make many changes, and God is without change. And therefore all affections, and the loue that is is in man and beaſt, is aſcribed to God by figure: and that for two cauſes. Firſt, becauſe there is in God, an vnchangeable nature, that is well pleaſed with euery good thing, and a will that ſeriouſly willeth the preſeruation of euerie good thing: and of this nature and will of God, the beſt loue in the creature, is but a light ſhadow. Secondly, the affection of loue is aſcribed to God; becauſe hee doth the ſame things that loue makes the creature doe: becauſe he beſtoweth bleſsings and benefits vpon his creature, as the louer doth on the perſon loued. In this ſort are all other affections aſcribed to God, and no otherwiſe.

The ſecond queſtion is, whether there be in God, an hatred of his creatures: for God is compared to the hen which loueth all her young ones. Anſ. If hatred be taken for a paſsion incident to man, it is not incident to God: if it be taken for a worke of Gods prouidence and iuſtice, it is in God: and that in three reſpects. Firſt of all, in Scripture, Hatred ſometime ſignifies a deniall of loue and mercie: as when it is ſaid; that he which will follow Chriſt, muſt hate father and mother: that is, neglect them, or not loue them in reſpect of Chriſt. In this ſenſe, hatred agrees vnto God. For hee is ſaid to loue Iacob, and to hate Eſau; that is, not to loue Eſau with that loue wherewith he loued Iacob. Againe, there is in God a nature that abhorreth & deteſteth iniquitie: thus ſaith the Pſalmiſt; that God loueth righteouſneſſe, and hateth iniquitie. And thus God hates man, not ſimply, becauſe he is the handiworke of God, but becauſe he is a ſinner, and by reaſon of the worke of the diuell in man, namely, ſinne, which is ſimply hated of God. Thirdly, God plagueth and puniſheth offenders, & in this regard, he is ſaid to hate them. Thus ſaith Dauid; that God hates the workers of iniquitie, and deſtroies them that ſpeake lies. By this which hath beene ſaid, it appeares that there be two degrees of hatred in God: one is Negatiue, when God as an abſolute Lord, beſtowes his ſpecial loue on ſome, and denies it vnto others, bicauſe his pleaſure is ſo: the ſecond is Poſitiue, when he hates and deteſts his creature: and this ſecond alwaies followes ſinne, aud is euer for ſinne: but the other goes before ſinne. And whereas it is ſaid in this text, that God is as the hen that loueth al her chickens, and gathereth them all togither; it muſt be vnderſtood, that our ſauiour Chriſt heere ſets down his dealing, not with all his creatures, and with al mankinde; but onely his dealing toward his owne Church, in which he calleth all outwardly, by the ſound of his word, and receiues all outwardly into the couenant. By this this which hath beene ſaid, we are taught, after the example of God, to hate and deteſt iniquitie: and yet alwaies to make difference between the perſon and the ſinne.

The third queſtion is, in what thing is Chriſt as an hen to his church? Anſ. In temporall bleſsings and deliuerances: in afflictions & manifold corrections: but ſpecially and principally in his word publiſhed in the miniſterie of the Prophets. For it is the wing which he ſpred ouer his people: and it is the voice whereby he called, and (as it were) clocked them vnto him.

Thus we ſee the meaning of the ſimilitude, that Chriſt would haue gathered Ieruſalem as the hen gathereth her chickens: now followes the vſe. By this we ſee the tender loue of god to this church & land. For it hath pleaſed him to propound vnto vs the Goſpel of ſaluation, and that now more then 40. yeares. And in ſo doing he hath offred long to imbrace vs in the arms of his mercie: and in ſpreading his wing ouer vs, to become our God & our Sauiour: for this tender loue, our harts muſt be filled with loue to Chriſt, and our mouths with praiſe. Againe, we learne hence, that the goſpel brings al other bleſsings of god with it. For God in it cõmunicates his own ſelfe vnto vs, as the hen to her yong ones. The kingdom of god brings al things elſe with it that may ſerue for the good of mã: and where the goſpel is embraced, there is gods kingdome. The peace & protection of this Church and land, wherby we haue bin preſerued from being a prey to our enemies, comes by meanes of the goſpel of life. Therfore fooliſh and falſe is the cõceit of ſundry popiſh perſons, that ſay there was neuer ſuch plẽty in the world, as whẽ the old learning (as they ſay) or old religiõ was. Secondly, by this we are aduertiſed, if we would haue all neceſſary bleſsings for this life, firſt of al to embrace the goſpel of Chriſt. Thirdly, if Chriſt take vnto him the diſpoſitiõ of the hen: we likewiſe muſt take vnto vs the diſpoſition of the chicken in reſpect of Chriſt, & that in three things. Firſt, we muſt ſuffer our ſelues to be gathered to Chriſt, that is, to be turned vnto him from all our ſinnes, to beleeue in him, to be of the ſame mind & diſpoſition with him, to ſuffer him to quicken vs with his heauenly and ſpiritual life, as the henne cheriſheth her chickens by ſitting on them. Secondly, we muſt attend vpon the word & will of Chriſt, as the chicken vpon the call of the hen: and ſuffer him to rule vs both in hart and life, for all things. The third thing is, that we muſt depend on the ſweete and mercifull promiſes of Chriſt, and ſhrowde our ſelues vnder his wing againſt hell, Sathan, death, damnation. And verily al ſuch among vs, who are not careful to perform theſe 3. things to Chriſt, are no better then monſtrous rebels, cõſidering he hath in his mercifull and tender loue, ſought to win vs to himſelfe for theſe fortie yeeres.

Thus much of the loue of Chriſt: now I come to his patience in theſe words: How often would I? The meaning whereof is this; you haue continually from time to time prouoked me by your ſinnes: yet did I not withdraw my loue from you, but ſent my Prophets from time to time vnto you, to call you and gather you vnto me. And this patience of God is heere expreſſed to aggrauate the rebellion of Ieruſalem. I will therefore ſpeake a little of it. And firſt it may be demanded, whether the vertue of patience that is in men, be alſo in God. I anſwer, properly it is not. For where this kinde of patience is, there is paſsion and ſufferance: now God is not ſubiect to any paſsion or ſufferance, becauſe his nature is vnchangeable. Again, that which is in god properly, is in him eternally: this patience is not in him eternally, but for the time of the cõtinuance of this world. Neuertheles, Scripture aſcribes this patience to God for two cauſes. The firſt is, becauſe there is in God an infinite goodneſſe of will and nature, wherby he neuer ſimply wils the perdition or deſtruction of any creature. Ezechiel ſaith, God wills not, that is, takes no delight in the death of a ſinner. And whereas it is ſaide, that vengeance is Gods, and he will repay, it muſt be thus taken, that God in reuenge dooth not abſolutely intend to deſtroy, but onely to execute iuſtice in the puniſhment of ſinne. It may be obiected, that God is ſaid, to make veſſells of wrath prepared to deſtruction. I anſwer, this place muſt circumſpectly & warily be vnderſtood, & I take the meaning of it to be this, that god maks veſſels of wrath, or veſſels for wrath by his wil and decree, whereby he decrees to paſſe by ſome and to forſake them in reſpect of his loue and mercy. And this act of God in paſsing by, and in forſaking of men, is as it were, to ſet them apart to become veſſels of wrath. And thogh God in ſecret & iuſt iudgement do this, yet he neuer fills any of theſe veſſels with his wrath, vntill they haue beene tainted with iniquitie: and though they be prepared to de-ſtruction, yet they are neuer indeede deſtroyed but for their ſinnes. Thus then, by reaſon of this excellent and incomprehenſible goodneſſe of God, whereof the vertue of patience is but a ſhadow, God is ſaid to be patient.

The ſecond cauſe, why God is ſaid to be patient, is, becauſe he doth the ſame things that patient men doe. Firſt, he inuites men to repẽtance: ſecondly, he promiſeth pardon: thirdly, he defers puniſhmẽt: fourthly, at the firſt he only inflicts leſſe puniſhments, when they doe no good he inflicts greater: and laſtly, when there is no hope of amendment, hee inflicts euerlaſting death and deſtruction.

The end of Gods patience is two-fold: one, that the Elect of God may be gathered and called: the other, that all excuſe might be taken from the vngodly. Rom.9.22.

The patience of God is either vniuerſal, or particular. Vniuerſal, which pertains to al men. The decree of diuine iuſtice was ſet downe to Adam, and in him to all mankind; When thou ſhalt eate of the forbidden fruit, in dying thou ſhalt DIE, that is, preſently die the firſt and ſecond death. Gen.2.17. Dathan and Abiram, preſently vpon their rebellion, went down into the earth quick. Num.16.3. The captaines with their fifties, were preſently vpon their comming to Elias, deſtroyed with fire from heauen. 1.Reg.1.10. And ſo oft as any man ſinnes, he deſerues preſent deſtruction: and ſo many ſinnes as we haue committed, ſo many damnations haue we deſerued. Here it may be demanded, why God doth not execute his decree accordingly. I anſwer, god in iuſtice remembers mercie, yea his iuſtice giues place to mercie. For there is another decree of mercie, which he wil haue as well to be accompliſhed as the decree of iuſtice, and that is, The ſeede of the woman ſhall bruiſe the ſerpents head. Pſal.2.8. Againe, Aske of me, and I will giue thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the endes of the earth for thy poſſeſſion. That mercie then may be ſhewed vpon mankind, iuſtice is executed in great patience by certain degrees. And this patience pertains to all men without exception, that come of Adam by generation.

Speciall patience is that which concerns particular men or Countries. Thus God ſpared the old world 120. years before he ſent the flood: he ſpared the Amorites till their iniquities were full: he ſpared the Egyptians 400. yeares. He deferred the puniſhment of the idolatrie of Iſrael 390. Ezech.45. yeeres, & then he puniſhed it with ſeuenty yeeres captiuitie. Hee winked at the ignorance of the Gentiles 4000. yeeres. Antichriſt ſhall not vtterly be deſtroyed till the comming of Chriſt. When men blaſpheme God and Chriſt, ſwearing, wounds, blood, heart, ſides, nailes, life; if they had their deſert, they ſhould deſcend to hell quicke, & that preſently: but God forbeares them, and ſundry ſuch perſons are vouchſafed the grace of true repentance. The verie leaſt offendour vpon earth is partaker of the great patience of God. For he ſuſtaines the members of our bodies, the powers and motions of the ſoule in ſuch actions in which we offend him. And no creatur can ſufficiently conſider the greatneſſe of this long-ſuffering.

The vſe to be made of the patience of God followes. Firſt it ſerueth to teach all men to turne to God by true repentaunce, Rom.2.4. Deſpiſeſt thou the patience and long ſuffering of God, knowing that the goodneſſe of God leades them to repentance, 2.Pet.3.9. God is patient towardes vs, and woulde haue no man to periſh, but would haue all men to come to repentaunce. To come more neere vnto our ſelues and this Engliſh nation. Now is the day of our viſitation, and hath beene for the ſpace of theſe fortie yeeres and more, in which God in great patience hath continually called vpon vs, knocking at the doore of our hearts, and ſtretched out the armes of his mercie vnto vs. Wherfore the common dutie of all Engliſh people is, to turne vnto God with all their heartes according to all the lawe of God, as it is ſaid of Ioſias. And that this duety may indeed be practiſed, I wil vſe certain reaſons, that may ſerue to ſtirre vppe our dead mindes. Firſt, the time of the continuaunce of the patience of God is hidden and vnknowne vnto vs. And herevpon, whẽ men abuſing the patience of God ſhal ſay, peace, peace, then, then ſhall come ſodaine deſtruction, as trauaile vpon a woman. 1.Theſ.5.3. Ephes.5.15. 2.Pet.3.12. And therefore the time is to be redeemed, and as S. Peter ſaieth; we muſt watch, and make haſte for the comming of the Lord. Secondly, the greater the patience of God is & hath bin, the greater ſhall his anger be. A blow, the longer it is in comming, the greater it is. Yea the very wrath of GOD in it ſelfe is moſt horrible. The wrath of a lion, of a Prince, yea the wrath of al creatures to the wrath of God, is but a droppe of water to the whole ſea. At his indignation the very mountaines melt; the heauens and the elements Mich.1.

ments ſhall melt at his comming : much more ſhal our rocke & ſtony hearts melt. Thirdly, God hath his treaſury and ſtore-houſes for iudgement : and they which go on in their ſinnes from day to day fill this treaſurie of God, with wrath and iudgements againſt the day of wrath. And whē men turn hartily from their euil waies, this treaſurie is emptied, as appeares by the example of the Niniuites. Wherefore let vs al from the higheſt to the loweſt bethinke our ſelues what euill we haue done, and how we haue abuſed the merciful patience of God, & make ſpeed to turne vnto God and Chriſt our mercifull Sauiour. Some will ſay, we abuſe not Gods patience; we haue repented long agoe. I anſwer, the number of them that truly turne vnto god in their hearts, is but ſmal, in compariſon, euen as the gleaning is to the whole harueſt. It will be ſaid again, we are not as the Iewes, that denie Ieſus Chriſt to bee the Meſsias. I anſwer : we confeſſe Chriſt in word, but there is a great multitude among vs, that denie him in their deeds & naughtie liues. For to omit the ſinnes of the ſecond table, there be fiue notorious ſinnes that are common among vs. Wilfull ignorance, in that men haue little or no care to know God, and to know the way of life. The ſecond is, the prophane contempt of the Goſpel. For now the obedience to this bleſſed doctrine of life, yea, the verie ſhew of it is in common reputation, Preciſenes. And nowadayes vnder this name the profeſsion of the Goſpel comes otherwhiles vpon the ſtage to help to make vp the play, and to miniſter matter of mirth. Vpon this we may iuſtly feare the Goſpel is going from vs. The third ſinne is worldlineſſe, which raignes and beares ſway in all places, as though there were no other world, and as though heauen were vpon earth. The fourth ſinne of our daies is luke-warmeneſſe. For commonly men are not loſt in themſelues that they might be found of Chriſt, they feele not their owne pouertie, they know not in what need they ſtand of the blood of Chriſt; & therfore they make profeſsion of the faith formally, not ſeriouſly, onely becauſe they are forced ſo to do by the good lawes of a good prince. The laſt ſinne is Hypocriſie, for all among vs come to the Lords table, and thereby enter into the higheſt degree of Chriſtianity that can be vpon earth: for therby they make profeſsion that they are vnited to Chriſt, and haue fellowſhip with him, & grow vp therein. And yet the moſt being departed from this holy Sacrament, take libertie to liue as they liſt, diſpiſing al others that will not ſay and do as they do. Theſe and many other, are the common fruits of all our Engliſh vineyard. It ſtands vs all in hand to pray vnto God, that he wold blow vpō his vineyard; that we may bring foorth better fruit, and preuent the iudgements that otherwiſe is like to fall.

Ier. 2. 5.

Cant. 4. 16.

Secondly, in that God is ſo patient towardes vs we are taught to exerciſe our ſelues in patiēce in reſpect of god whē we are afflicted & corrected by him. For whē he layes his hand vpon vs, we may not be angrie, fret, chafe, and rage, but quiet our hearts in his will, though the Croſſe bee grieuous for meaſure, and long for continuance. This patience to God-ward is termed in ſcripture by an excellent name, The Silence of the heart, whereby the heart without repining ſubiects it ſelfe to the wil of God in al things. Pſal. 4. 4. Examine your hearts vpon your bed, and be ſtill. And 37. 7. Be ſilent to Iehoua.

Thirdly, if God be thus patient towards mē, we again muſt be patient one towards another : as Paul ſaith, forbeare one another, and forgiue one another, as God for Chriſts ſake forgaue you. The faith of the mercifull patiēce of god cannot but breed and bring foorth in vs patience and long ſuffering, in regard of anger and reuenge.

Ephe. 4. 32. Col. 3. 12.

Laſtly, in that God calls vs to ſaluation with great patience, we muſt ſuffer our ſelues to be calld & run the race of our ſaluation with like patience. We muſt heare the word, and bring forth fruit with patience. We muſt pray without fainting, and without taking repulſe as the womā of Ganaan did : and therefore with patience. Our hope muſt be by patience & then comfort of the ſcriptures. In a word, we cannot obtaine the promiſes without patience.

Luk. 8. Mat. 15. Rom. 15 3. Heb. 10. 36.

The fift and laſt point to bee conſidered is, what is meant by the children of Hieruſalem. I anſwer it thus. Children in Scripture are taken 4. wayes. Firſt, ſome are children by generation: of them reade Luke the 3. chapter, where a long genealogie is ſet downe from Adam to Chriſt. Secondly, ſome are called children by adoption without generation. Michal that neuer bare child to her death, is ſaid to beare fiue to Adriel: becauſe ſhe did adopt his childrē, & bring thē vp as her own. Third ly, ſome are called children in regard of legall ſucceſſion, in title to this or that thing.

2. Sam. 6. 13. num 21. 8.

Thus

Thus Zedechias, who indeed was vncle to 2.Kin.24.17. Iehoakim, is ſaid to be the ſonne of Iehoa-
2.Chro.3.10. kim, becauſe he did ſucceed Iehoakim, (as being the next of the blood) in the kingdome. Ieconias or Conias was childleſſe, &
Iere.23.30. yet he is ſaid to to beget Salathiel; becauſe
Math.1.12. Salathiel, was to ſucceed him in the kingdome of Iuda, in that he was the next of Dauids houſe. Laſtly, men, in that they appertaine to any thing or place, as children doe to their parents, are called children thereof. Thus men are called children of light, of darkeneſſe, of ſinne, of wrath. Thus Ieruſalem is called the daughter of Sion. And in this text citizens, the inhabitants of Hieruſalem, are called the children thereof.

Thus much of the Rebellion of Ieruſalem: now followes the puniſhment in theſe wordes: Behold, your habitation ſhall be left vnto you deſolate: or thus, your houſe, that is, both citie and temple (as it is in the next chapter) ſhall be left vnto you as a wilderneſſe.

Here we muſt firſt obſerue, that the puniſhment of Ieruſalems rebellion is a decreed deſolation both of citie and Temple. And the right conſideration of it is of great vſe. For this deſolation is as it were a looking glaſſe to this our Engliſh nation, in which we may ſee our future condition; except we repent of our vnthankfulneſſe to God for his mercies, and ſhew better fruits of the Goſpel, then commonly wee doe. The old world litle regarded the miniſterie of Noah the preacher of righteouſnes, and was deſtroyed by an vniuerſal Iſai 60.12. flood. It is a generall decree of God, The Gentiles and kingdomes that will not ſerue thee, ſhall periſh, and be vtterly deſtroyed. If God ſpare not the naturall braunches, he will much leſſe ſpare vs that are but wild branches, if we neglect and lightly eſteeme the Goſpel of life, as men euery where commonly doe.

Secondly, the deſolation of Hieruſalem may be a glaſſe to euerie one of vs, who in theſe dayes of Gods merciful viſitation, ſet the miniſtery of the Goſpel at naught, or lightly reſpects it; for vnleſſe ſuch perſons amend, and that betime, vtter deſolation will befall both them and their families, Pſal.73.27. god hath paſſed his ſentence, they that withdraw themſelues from God ſhall periſh. Now they withdraw themſelues from God, that cannot abide to haue fellowſhip with him in his word, and to bring themſelues in ſubiection thereto. Thirdly, it appeares hence by the contrary, that the ſtabilitie of all kingdomes ſtands in the obedience of the Goſpel of Chriſt: for Gods kingdome is moſt ſure and ſtable, againſt which nothing can preuaile. And when the Goſpel is obeyed in any kingdom, it is (as it were) founded in the kingdome of God.

Moreouer, this deſolation is both perpetuall, and terrible: it is perpetuall, that is, to the laſt iudgement. For Hieruſalem muſt be trod vnder foote, till the time of the Luk.21.24,25
Gentiles be fulfilled, and this is, till there be ſignes in the Sunne and Moone, and the powers of heauen be ſhaken, and that is immediately before the laſt iudgement. Hence I gather, that there is no Cittie of Hieruſalem, nor Temple now ſtanding. It wil be ſaid, that ſince the deſtruction thereof they might haue beene reedified. I anſwer, by reaſon of this curſe of God, it cannot ſo be. Three hūdred & 30. years after Ruffin.Iuſt.
the death of Chriſt, the Iewes by the leaue L.10.38. and helpe of Iulian the Emperour, went about to build againe their temple and citie, but their worke was ouerthrowne, and they hindred by thunder and lightning, and earthquakes, and many of them ſlaine thereby. Againe, it may be ſaid, that there is a citie now ſtanding that is called Hieruſalem. I anſwer, it is either Hieruſalrm in his ruines, or the citie Bethara, fenſed & walled by Elius Adrianus. Secondly, by this it appeares, that the warres that were made heretofore for the recouerie of the Holy land, and of Hieruſalem, were in vaine. This enterpriſe was the pollicie of the Pope, that he might the better ſeate himſelfe in Europe. And there was litle good to bee looked for in the place that God had accurſed with perpetual deſolation. Thirdly, by this it appeares, that pilgrimages made to the Holy land, are ſuperſtitious. And laſtly, I gather hence, that Antichriſt ſhall not raigne in the Temple at Ieruſalem. This is but a Popiſh fiction. For how is it poſsible for him to ſit in a Temple that is vtterly deſtroyed, in ſuch ſort, that ſtone doth not lie vpon ſtone? It Reu.11.8.
is obiected, that antichriſt ſhal deſtroy the two Prophets of God in the Citie in which Chriſt was crucified. I anſwer, Chriſt is as Acts 9.8.
well crucified in his members, as in his own perſon: and thus he was, and is ſtill crucified in Rome: and in reſpect of his members more crucified in Rome then in Ieruſalem.

Againe, this deſolation was moſt terrible, and the tribulation thereof ſo great, that that the like was neuer ſince the begin-Math.24.21. ning of the world. Hiſtories written therof declare as much. For the citie was at the firſt beſieged by the army of Titus Veſpaſianus, called, the abhomination of deſolation, and it was withall compaſſed with a wall that had 13. caſtles in it, to cõmand the whole citie. In the time of the ſiege, the Iewes were oppreſſed with a grieuous famine: in which their food was, old ſhooes, old leather, old hay, & the dung of beaſts. There died, partly of the ſword, and partly of the famine, eleuen hundred thouſand of the poorer ſort: two thouſand in one night were imbowelled: ſixe thouſand were burned in a porch of the temple: the whole citie was ſacked and burnt, and laid leuell to the ground: and ninetie ſeauen thouſand taken captiues, & to be applied to baſe & miſerable ſeruice. This horrible deſolation muſt teach vs to dread & feare God, and to yeeld vnfained ſubiection to Pſal.2.12. Chriſt. And as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, to kiſſe the Sonne leſt he be angrie, and we periſh in the way, when his wrath ſhall ſuddainely burne.

Touching this deſolation there be three things done by Chriſt. Firſt, he determins it, ſaying, Your houſe ſhall be left vnto you deſolate. Hence I gather, that there is a prouidence of God, touching things that come to paſſe. That is one point. The ſecond is, that the diſpoſition of kingdomes, for the Ezra.1.2. beginning, continuance, & end is of God. The God of heauen (ſaith Cyrus) hath giuen me all the kingdomes of the world. And Daniel to Nabuchadnezzar, The God of heauen
Dan.2.37. hath giuen thee kingdome, power, and glorie. And the hand writing vpon the wal in the ſight of Baltaſher was to this effect, Thy Dan.5.26. kingdome is numbred, for continuance of yeares: it is weighed, and found light in reſpect of the ſinnes of the people: & it is deuided to the Medes & Perſians. This muſt teach all good ſubiects in England, to lift vp their hearts to God, for the continuance of peace and protection to this Church & land.

Secondly, Chriſt reueales the deſolation of Ieruſalem, and that certainly: yea, he determines the very particular time. This generation (ſaith he) ſhall not paſſe till all theſe things be fulfilled. Math.24.34. And according to this reuelation and prediction of Chriſt, al things came to paſſe. For within the compaſſe of 40. yeeres after it was deſtroyed. Hence I gather, that this goſpel of Mathew & the reſt, are the very word of God, on this maner. That which foretells particular things to come certenly and truly, is of God: but the Goſpelles foretell particular thinges to come certenly and truly, as in this place we ſee: therefore it is of God.

Thirdly & laſtly, Chriſt labors to bring the Iews to a ſerious conſideration of their puniſhment, when he ſaieth, Behold. For he doth as it were take them by the hand, and bring them to a preſent view of their miſery. And thus he hath alwaies dealt with his people from the beginning. Yea thus hee dealt with Adam before his fall, when hee ſaide, If thou eate the forbidden fruite, in dying thou ſhalt die. This ſerious conſideration of deſerued puniſhments, is of great vſe. It is Amos.4.12 an occaſion of repentance to man. It is a means, if not of repentance, yet of reſtraint of open vices. Againe, the conſideration of euerlaſting puniſhments, is a meanes to make vs patiently beare leſſer Croſſes that befall vs in this life. And therefore it were to be wiſhed, that men nowadayes would ſeriouſly ſpeake & think of hell, and of the paines thereof. For then there woulde bee more amendment than there is. But this good is hindered, partly by blindeneſſe of Iſai 28.18. minde, and partely by falſe imaginations, that the iudgements and puniſhments of God may eaſily be eſcaped.

Deo Gloria.

TO THE WORSHIPFVLL
Maſter Robert Taillor Eſquire, one of the Tellers in her Maieſties Exchequer, my very good friend.

EXperience teacheth, and it is a true Concluſion propounded and prooued in the Scriptures of the old and newe Teſtament, that as God in the beginning by his omnipotent power eſtabliſhed the whole frame of the heauens and the earth, ſo he hath, in his wiſdome directed them, and all things contained in them, vnto one maine ende, the manifeſtation of his glorie. Wherevnto, though euery thing created, by his appointment, according to the lawe of creation, and the principles of it owne entire nature is, and ought to be referred; yet amongſt the workes of God, ſome doe more principally and directly make for that purpoſe, as namely Man, whome God hath indued with the gifts of vnderſtanding and knowledge, and in whome he hath ingrauen his own image in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe. Now if the Queſtion be, howe man beeing fallen from that integritie wherein he was created, and hauing brought a confuſion vpon the whole world by the fall, ſhould yet be fitted and framed for ſuch an end: The anſwer is, that God who is able to drawe light out of darkneſſe, and to rectifie things that are confounded, hath in great wiſedome, ſet an order in mankind, which by certaine degrees tendeth directly to the advancement of his owne glorie. For in the firſt place, he would haue man to acknowledge him his ſoueraigne Lord, and to ſerue him immediately in the duties of faith and obedience. Secondly, it is his will that man beeing made a ſociable creature, apt to converſe with his owne kinde, ſhould do ſeruice vnto himſelfe, by ſeruing of man in the duties of loue. Thirdly, he would not that men conuerſing each with other ſhould be as wandring Rechabites, tied to no certaine place or calling; and therefore bindeth all men, both by ſpeciall aſſignment vnto Adam in his innocencie, and by particular commandement to him and all his poſteritie, to be confined within ſome certaine ſtate and condition of life, in the familie in the Common wealth, or in the Church. Laſtly, that man ſhould vſe the place and office aſſigned vnto him by God, in a holy manner, performing the duties annexed vnto it in faith and obedience, and eſchewing thoſe vices that vſually attend vpon it, with all care and circumſpection. In this manner, hath God diſpoſed the whole eſtate of mankind, for the accompliſhment of the aforeſaid end, the honour and glorie of his name.

Gen. 3. 19.

Againſt this order, doe offend at this day two ſorts of men. The firſt, are ſuch as liue in the boſome of the Church, and are not ranged within the compaſſe of any calling or condition of life, wherein they might gaine glorie vnto God, or good vnto mē. Vnder theſe are comprehended all Popiſh Votaries, as Monkes, Friers, &c. who haue beene iuſtly condemned of auntient times for theeues and robbers, becauſe liuing apart from the common ſocieties of men, they are neither the members of any bodie, nor maintainers of any of the three ſtates before named. And to them may be referred all wandring and ſtraggling perſons who hauing no ſetled place of abode, and being neither members of any ciuill ſociety, nor annexed to any particular Church, haue no perſonall calling wherein to liue, and therefore cannot either glorifie their Creatour, or doe the leaſt good vnto men. The liues of theſe perſons are ſo much the more odious, becauſe they are like the vnprofitable drone, that bringeth nothing into the hiue, and yet feedes of the honie, that is brought in by the labours of others. Another ſort of men are they, who indeede are called vnto ſome certaine condition and trade of life, wherein they doe walke, and yeild ſome benefit vnto others; and yet they are greatly to be blamed, in reſpect of their want in the right vſe and exerciſe of their callings. For though they may be skilfull and expert in their kinde, yet they erre in the maine point, in that they doe not practiſe their perſonall callings in, and with the generall, Whreas on the contrarie the principall ſcope of their liues, ought to be honouring of God in the ſeruice of men; and the rule of direction for the attainment of that ende, is nothing elſe, but a conſtant performance of the duties of the morall Lawe, in that very calling where-wherein they be placed.

A remedie for theſe and ſundry more corruptions, incident vnto the liues of men, as alſo a warning to thoſe that offend in this kind, the Author heereof, whoſe memorie is bleſſed, hath preſented vnto our view, in the diſcourſe following: wherein are handled at large, out of the word of God, the differences and right vſe of al callings whatſoeuer. In publiſhing whereof, I haue thought good to make choice of your Worſhip, to whoſe protection, I might commend the ſame, and that vpon theſe conſiderations. Firſt, becauſe you are, and haue beene an antient fauourer and well-willer to learning and learned men, whereof amongſt the reſt, our Colledge hath alredie had very ſufficient teſtimonie; forwhich it doth acknowledge you, by the name of a louing and liberall Benefactour. Secondly, for that (in my knowledge) you were very louingly affected vnto the Author of this treatiſe whilſt he liued, hauing alwaies reuerent opinion of his gifts, and wiſhing him incouragement in all his proceedings. Beſide theſe reſpects, it is my deſire by this dedication, to giue vnto you ſome teſtimonie of a thankfull minde, for your loue and kindneſſe towards me. And thus crauing your acceptation heereof, I take my leaue, and commend you, with all your affaires, to the grace and fauour of God. Cambridge Febr. 16. 1602.

1. Cor. 7. verſ. 20.

Let euery man abide in that calling, wherein hee was called.

FRom the 17. verſe of this chapter, to the 25. there are two queſtions handled. First, whether a man being called to Chriſtianitie, vncircumciſed, muſt be circumciſed after his calling. The ſecond is, whether being a bondman when he is called, he muſt then leaue his calling. Now the ſumme of the Apoſtles anſwer to them both, is laid downe in this verſe as if he ſhould ſay, let euery man continue in that calling, wherein he was called vnto Chriſt: that is, wherein he walked and liued: when it pleaſed God by the miniſtery of his Goſpel, to call him vnto the profeſsion of chriſtian religion. The cauſe why I haue choſen to ſpeake of theſe words is, becauſe I meane to intreat of this point of vocation or calling; conſidering few men rightly know how to liue and goe on in their callings, ſo as they may pleaſe God. Therfore to proceede in order, in ſpeaking of this point: First I will ſhew what Vocation or Calling is. Secondly, I will ſet downe the parts and kindes thereof. Thirdly, the holy and lawfull vſe of euery mans particular calling: all which, are in ſome ſort touched in the words of my text.

For the firſt: A vocation or calling, is a certaine kinde of life, ordained and impoſed on man by God, for the common good. First of all I ſay, it is a certaine condition or kinde of life: that is, a certaine manner of leading our liues in this world. For example, the life of a King is to ſpend his time in the gouerning of his ſubiects, and that is his calling: and the life of a ſubiect is to liue in obedience to the Magiſtrate, and that is his calling. The ſtate and condition of a Miniſter is, to lead his life in preaching of the Goſpel and word of God, and that is his calling. A maſter of a familie is, to leade his life in the gouernment of his family, and that is his calling. In a word, that particular and honeſt manner of conuerſation, whereunto euery man is called and ſet apart, that is (I ſay) his calling.

Now in euery calling we muſt conſider two cauſes. First, the efficient and Author thereof. Secondly, the finall and proper end. The author of euery calling, is God himſelfe: and therefore Paul ſaith, As God hath called euery man, ſo let him walke. verſ. 17. And for this cauſe, the order and manner of liuing in this world, is called a Vocation, becauſe euery man is to liue as he is called of God. For looke as in the campe, the Generall appointeth to euery man his place and ſtanding; one place for the horſeman, and another for the footeman, and to euery particular ſouldier likewiſe, his office and ſtanding, in which he is to abide againſt the enemie, and therein to liue and die: euen ſo is it in humane ſocieties: God is the General, appointing to euery man, his particular calling, and as it were, his ſtanding: and in that calling, he aſſignes vnto him his particular office; in performance whereof he is to liue and die. And as in a campe, no ſouldier can depart his ſtanding, without the leaue of the generall; no more may any man leaue his calling, except he receiue his liberty from God. Againe, in a clock, made by the Art and handy-worke of man, there be many wheeles, and euery one hath his ſeuerall motion, ſome turne this way, ſome that way, ſome goe ſoftly, ſome apace: and they are all ordered by the motion of the watch. Behold here a notable reſemblance of Gods ſpeciall prouidence ouer mankinde, which is the watch of the great world, allotting to euery man his motion and calling: and in that calling, his particular office and function. Therefore it is true that I ſay, that God himſelfe is the author and beginning of callings.

This ouerthroweth the heatheniſh opinion of men, which thinke, that the particular condition & state of man in this life comes by chance, or by the bare will and pleasure of man himselfe. Secondly, by this which hath been said, we learne, that many perswading themselues of their callings, haue for all this, no calling at all. As for example, such as liue by vsurie, by carding, & dicing, by maintaining houses of gaming, by plaies, and such like: for God is the author of euery lawfull calling: but these, and all such miserable courses of liuing, are eyther against the word of God, or else are not grounded thereupon. And therefore, are no callings or vocations, but auocations from God and his waies.

Now, as God is the author of euery calling, so he hath two actions therein. First, he ordaineth the calling it selfe. And secondly, he imposeth it on man called: and therefore I say; vocation is a certaine kinde of life, ordained and imposed by God. For the first, God ordaineth a calling, when he prescribeth and commandeth the same, in, and by his word: and those callings and states of life, which haue no warrant from Gods word, are vnlawful. Now God in his word, ordaineth callings two waies. First, by commanding and prescribing them particularly, as he doth the most weighty callings in the family, Church, or Common-wealth. Secondly, by appointing & setting downe certaine lawes and commandements generally; whereby we may easily gather, that he doth either approue, or not approue of them, though they be not particularly prescribed in the word.

The second action of God, which is the Impositions of callings, is, when hee doth particularly set apart any man, to any particular calling: and this must be vnderstood of al callings in the world. Now god doth this two waies. First, by himselfe immediately, without the helpe of any creature. Thus in the beginning, was Adam called and appointed to dresse the garden of Eden. Thus Abraham was called from the idolatry of his forefathers, and receiued into the couenant of grace. Thus was Moses called to be a Prince ouer the Israelites, to guide them out of Ægypt, into the promised land. And in the new Testament, thus were the Apostles called to preach the gospel. Secondly, God calleth mediately by means, which be of two sorts: men, angels: by an Angell was Philip, being a Deacon, called to be an Euangelist: and the set or appointed callings in Church, and common-wealth, are ordinarily disposed by men, who are in this matter the instruments of God. And therefore men lawfully called by them, are truely called of God. Thus the Elders of Ephesus, called by the Apostles and the rest of the Church, are saide to be called by the holy Ghost. And thus we see how God is the author of euery calling.

Acts 20. verse 28.

The finall cause or end of euery calling, I note in the last wordes of the description; For the common good: that is, for the benefit and good estate of mankinde. In mans body there be sundry parts & members, and euery one hath his seuerall vse and office, which it performeth, not for it selfe, but for the good of the whole body; as the office of the eye, is to see, the eare to heare, and the foote to goe. Now all societies of men, are bodies; a family is a body, and so is euerie particular Church a body, and the Common-wealth also: and in these bodies, there be seuerall members, which are men walking in seuerall callings and offices, the execution whereof, must tend to the happie and good estate of the rest; yea, of all men euery where, as much as possible is. The common good of men stands in this, not only that they liue, but that they liue well, in righteousnesse and holinesse, and consequently, in true happinesse. And for the attainement heereunto, God hath ordained and disposed all callings, and in his prouidence, designed the persons to beare them. Heere then we must in generall know, that he abuseth his caling, whosoeuer he be that against the end thereof, imploies it for himselfe, seeking wholly his owne, and not the common good. And that common sayings; Euery man for himselfe, and God for vs all; is wicked, and is directed against the end of euery calling, or honest kinde of life.

Thus much of the description of Vocation in generall. Now before I come particularly to intreate of the speciall kinds of callings, there are two generall rules to be learned of all, which belong to euery calling.

The first: whatsoeuer any man enterprizeth, or dooth, eyther in word, or deede, he must doe it by vertue of his calling, and hee must keepe himselfe within the compasse, limits, or precincts thereof. This rule is laide downe in these words of the Apostle; Let euery man abide in that calling, wherein hee was called: the drift whereof is, to binde men to their callings, and to teach them to performe all their actions by warrant thereof. It is said, Heb. 11.6. Without faith it is impossible to please God: and whatsoeuer is not of faith, is sin. Now whatsoeuer is not done within the compasse of a calling, is not of faith, because a man must first haue some warrant & word of God to assure him of his calling, to doe this or that thing, before he can doe it in faith. When the two brethren that stroue about their inheritance came to Christ, & willed him to make agreement betweene them, Christ answered, Who made me a iudge or diuider betweene you? as if he should say, it is not within the compasse of my calling: for I came to accõplish the worke of mans redemption, & not to diuide inheritances: hereby giuing vs to vnderstand, that euery thing to be done must be done by warrant of some calling: and so long as men keepe thẽselues in their callings, they haue a promise of protection from God, Psal. 91. He shall giue his Angels charge ouer thee, to keepe thee in all thy wayes; that is, so long as thou keepest thy selfe within the wayes of thy calling, so long shall my Angels preserue thee. The example of Dauid is worthy our consideration, for he depẽding on the prouidence of God, & walking in his calling, had the protection of God, when Saul smote twise at him with a speare: when he was made captaine of a thousand that he might be slain of the Philistims: when Michol was promised to be his wife for an hundred foreskins of the Philistims: when Saul commanded his owne seruants to kil him: when he smote againe at him with a speare: when he sought to take him in his owne house: when he folowed him to Naioth in Ramah: when he was absent frõ the solemn feast made by Saul: whẽ the priests of Nob were slain 85. persons, and all the inhabitants of the place: when Saul persecuted him in the desart of Mahon. Contrariwise, whẽ any man is without the cõpasse of his calling, he is out of the way, and by this means he bereaues himself of the protection of the Almighty, and lies open and naked to al the punishments & plagues of God. And if we marke it well, the word of God shews euidẽtly to what dangers they are subiect that do any thing either without or against their callings. Sãsons strẽgth lay not in his hair (as men cõmonly think) but because he went out of his calling, by breaking the vowe of a Nazarite, when he gaue occasion to Dalilah to cut off his haire, therfore he lost his strength, for God promised strength, but with a commandement, that hee should be a Nazarite to the end, Iudg. 13.5. When Saul was commanded to slay the Amalekites, against his calling he spared Agag vpon a foolish pittie, and the best things; and thereupon Samuel reproued him of rebellion against God, which was as the sinne of witch-craft, and for this very cause was he reiected of God for being King ouer Israel. Ionas beeing called to preach at Niniue, went about by flight to shake off the calling of God, but when he comes to the Sea, he is tossed by a tempest, and cast out of the shippe, and swallowed by a fish that God had prepared for this purpose. When Peter beyond the limites of his calling woulde needes warme him at the high Priestes fire, it cost him the breach of his conscience; for at the verie voyce of a Damosell hee denyed Christ with cursing and banning. And the Exorcists in the Acts, that without sufficient calling tooke on them to coniure euill spirites in the name of Iesus, were ouercome by the same spirits, and were faine to flie away naked and wounded. In a word, looke what iudgements befall men, marke well the time and circumstaunce thereof, it shall be found, that they are cast vppon them by the hand of GOD when they are foorth of their callings, which GOD hath prescribed them to keepe. Therefore this must be alwayes remembred and practised carefully, that wee doe take nothing in hand; vnlesse wee haue first ranged our selues within the precinctes of our callings.

Luke 12.

1. Sam. 15.

Acts 19.

The second generall rule which must bee remembred in this: That, Euery man must doe the duties of his calling with diligence: and therfore Salomon saieth, Whatsoeuer is in thine hand to doe, doe with all thy power. Saint Paul bidds him that ruleth, rule with dilligence, and euery man to wait on his office, Rom. 12.8. And Ieremy 48.10. saith, Cursed is hee that doeth the worke of the Lorde negligently. That which Christ saieth of the worke of our redemption, It is meate and drinke for mee to doe my Fathers will: The same must euery man say in like sorte of his particular calling. Of this diligence there be two reasons: first of all, the ende why God bestowes his giftes vppon vs, is, that they might be employed in his seruice, and to his glorie, and that in this life. Therefore Paul saieth, Redeeme the time: and Christ, Walke while yee haue light: And againe, I must doe his worke while it is day: For wee see trades men and Trauel-lers rise earely to their busines, lest night ouertake them. Secondly, to them which imploy their gifts, more is giuen, and from them which imploy them not, is taken that which they haue: and labour in a calling is as precious as golde or siluer. Hereupon he that maimes a man, and disables him to doe the worke of his calling, by Gods law is bound to giue him the value of his labour, Exod. 21. 19. And to like purpose our people haue a common saying, that an Occupation is as good as land, because land may be lost, but skill and labour in good occupation is profitable to the end, because it will helpe at a neede when land and all things faile. And on the other side, wee must take heede of two damnable sinnes that are contrarie to this diligence. The first is idlenesse, whereby the duties of our callings, and the occasions of glorifying God, are neglected, or omitted. The second is Slouthfulnesse, whereby they are performed slackely and carelesly. God in the Parable of the husbandman, calls them that are idle into his vineyard, saying, Why stand ye idle all the day? Matth. 20. And the seruant that had receiued but one talent, is called an euill seruant, because he was slouthfull in the vse of it: for so it is saide, Thou euill seruant and slouthfull. Math. 25. 26. S. Paul giueth this rule to the Thessalonians. He that will not labour, must not eate: yea, such a one he would haue to be noted by a letter, as walking inordinately. And by this he sheweth, that slouth and negligence in the duties of our callings, are a disorder against that comely order which God hath set in the societies of mankinde, both in Church and Common-wealth. And indeede, Idlenesse and slouth are the causes of manie damnable sinnes. The idle body, and the idle braine is the shoppe of the diuell. The sea, if it mooued not, could not but putrifie: and the bodie, if it be not stirred and mooued, breedeth diseases. Now the idle & slouthful person is a sea of corruption; and when he is most idle, Sathan is least idle; for then he is most busie to draw him to manifolde sinnes.

2. Thes. 3. 6.

Thus much of the two generall rules. Now follow the parts and kinds of Vocations: and they are of two sorts; Generall, or Particular. The Generall calling is the calling of Christianitie, which is common to all that liue in the Church of God. The Particular, is that speciall calling that belongs to some particular men: as the calling of a Magistrate, the calling of a Minister, the calling of a Maister, of a father, of a child, of a seruant, of a subiect, or anie other calling that is common to all. And Paule acknowledgeth this distinction of Callings, when hee saieth, Let euery man abide in that calling wherein he is called; that is, in that particular and personall Calling, in which hee was called to be a Christian. Of these two in order.

The generall Calling is that whereby a man is caled out of the world to be a child of God, a member of Christ, and heire of the kingdome of heauen. This Calling belongs to euery one within the compasse of the Church, not anie one excepted. Heere I haue iust occasion to make a long discourse touching the calling of men to Christ and christian Religion, but I will onelie touch the mayne dueties thereof, which are especially foure. The first is the inuocation of the name of God in Christ: whenas Saul gotte Letters from the high Priests to persecute the Church, it is sayde by Saint Luke, that he receiued authoritie to binde all that call vppon the name of GOD. Paul writing to the Church of Corinth, calleth the members thereof Saintes, and such as call on the name of the Lord Iesus. By both which places the holie Ghost would giue vs to vnderstand, that Inuocation is a maine duety which euery Christian man is to performe continually; and it containes both prayer and thanksgiuing in the name and mediation of Iesus Christ. And indeede by this action a christian is distinguished and seuered from all other sorts of men in the world, that pretend deuotion or religion. By this it appeareth, howsoeuer all men doe desire to beare this name, and take vnto them this general calling, yet very few are indeede true and sound Christians: for not one of an hundred can rightly inuocate the name of God, though they can indeede repeate the words of praier, yet they want the spirit of grace, and supplications, whereby they should aske grace in the name of Christ, and giue thankes for benefites receiued. Thus many bearing in shew the name of Christ, want the power therof. Nay which is more, not to call on the name of God is made by the Prophet Dauid, the note and marke of an Atheist that saith in his heart, there is no God, Psal. 14. 9.

Acts 9. 14.

1. Corint. 1.

The second duty is, as much as possibly wee can, to further the good estate of the true Church of God. It is indeede principally pally the dutie of the minister, and yet generally it appertaines to all: for as in mans bodie, the eye by seeing, the eare by hearing, the tongue by speaking, and euerie part by his proper office doth further the good of the whole bodie: Euen so all that are called to be members of Christ, must, as much as in them lieth, procure the good of the whole mysticall bodie of Christ. Dauid in the name of the whole Church, saith, I will procure thy wealth, and pray for the peace of Ierusalem, they shall prosper that loue thee. And after he had humbled himself for the two grieuous sinnes of adulterie and murder, in the ende he prayes to God, to build the walles of Ierusalem. For the building of the tabernacle, the Iewes brought free-will offerings according to their abilitie. Some brought gold and precious stones, others siluer and silke, and such as had no better thing, brought rams skinnes, and badgers skinnes: euen so in the building of Gods Church his spiritual tabernacle, euerie Christian must bring a free-will offering, he must doe something euen to the vtmost of his power, to the building of Gods Church, though his seruice be but meane. Though men (as I haue said) fondly imagine, that this dutie is proper to the Ministers of the word; yet the truth is, it belongs, not onely vnto them, but to euerie one that professeth himselfe to be a member of the bodie of Christ: in which respect he must, so much as hee can, procure and further the good of the whole.

Psal. 52.

Here then we are to consider the means whereby this dutie may be done. They are especially three. The first is praier, not onely for our selues, but for the good estate of the whole Church of God on earth. To this effect spake Christ to his Disciples, when he saw the Iewes like scattered sheepe without a shepheard, Pray to the Lord of the harvest, that he would thrust foorth labourers into the harvest. And in that praier, commonly called the Lords praier, we are taught to say, Let thy kingdome come: where by kingdome is not onely meant the kingdome of glorie in heauen, but the kingdome of grace, which is the happie and blessed condition of Gods Church on earth. And therefore Paul biddeth the Thessalonians pray that Gods word may haue free passage & be glorified, 2. Thes. 3.1.

Mat. 9.38.

The second meanes is the worke of edification, which Paul inioynes the Thessalonians: Edifie one another, 1. Thess. 5. 11. And S. Iude, v. 20. Edifie your selues vpon your most holy faith. The Church of God is a temple made without hands, the foundation is Christ; and euery member of Christ with all that appertaine to Gods election are liuing stones: the builders of this temple principally, are Pastours and teachers, and not onely they, but all Christian persons generally. The cause stands here as it did in the building of the materiall temple, the principall builders wherof were such as cut and laid stones, and wrought curious workes; besides whom, there were many others, which though they could neither cut nor frame, yet did they further the buildings, either by carrying of burdens, or making of morter: euen so in the building of gods spiritual church, though all cannot square stones like Masons, nor build as the Minister doth, yet all without exception pertaining to the Church of God, must put their helping hands to further this building. And this may be done two wayes: first by vsing all good meanes, whereby we may draw our kindred, friends, and neighbours to the loue and obedience of true religion. This dutie Paul propounded to the Corinthians in his owne example, saying, that he pleased all men in all things, not seeking his owne profit, but the profit of many that they might be saued. 1. Cor. 10. 33. Secondly, this thing is done by confirming those which are called, by often admonitions, exhortations, consolations, and all other like duties that serue to this end. And by these duties may the meanest person in the Church of God, build or edifie.

Here I may iustly complaine of the neglect of this dutie: for the case stands thus in this barren and fruitlesse age of the world: men are so farre from duties of edification, that they vse all meanes, rather to pul downe then to build. For he that giues himselfe but to learne the duties of religion, and in some sort to liue accordingly, is made a signe and a by-ward among the common people, and also a wonder. And this shewes, that the practise of this dutie of Edification lies dead, wherto neuertheless we are bound, by vertue of a generall calling.

The third meanes of furthering the good of Gods Church, is, to conferre the temporal blessings that God hath bestowed on vs, according to our abilitie, to the good thereof. Honour God with thy riches, Prou. 3. 9. saith ſaith Salomon, and that is done eſpecially, whē they are imploied to the maintaining & furthering of true religion, & the worſhip of God. There be other endes for which God hath giuen riches, but this of all is the principall. Yet alas, this dutie is but ſlenderly practiſed of ſuch as carry the name of Chriſt: for many of the richer ſort ſpēd a great part of their increaſe vpō hawkes, bulles, beares, dogges, or riotouſly diſpēd the ſame in ſporting or gaming: and thus diſable themſelues to doe that good they ſhould vnto the Church of God. And the meaner ſort now adaies ſpend that they get in fine apparell, and good cheare: and by this means the houſe of God is leſſe regarded: for euery common man nowadaies muſt be as a gentleman, and it is hard ſometimes for a ſtranger to diſcern the maſter from the ſeruant: and there is ſuch exceſſe in all degrees, that now for dayly attire, the nobleſt are the plaineſt. To this duty I may alſo adde, that euerie Chriſtian parent, by vertue of his generall calling, is to dedicate ſome of his male children, as much as poſſible is, to the ſeruice of the miniſterie; if ſo be they haue gifts and inclinations of nature fit for that calling. And in this caſe the example of Anna may be a good direction for vs to follow, who did before-hand conſecrate Samuel her firſt born to the Lord. By this meanes the Miniſterie ſhall be continued, Gods Church and religion maintained, and his Goſpel publiſhed from age to age to the end of the world.

The third generall dutie of Chriſtianitie, is, that euery man ſhould become a ſeruant to his brother in all the duties of loue. A Chriſtian is the freeſt of all men in the world. For in that reſpect he is the child of God in Chriſt, he is truly freed from hell, death, and condemnation, yea, and in part from ſinne & Sathan, and that in this life: and yet for al this, he muſt be a ſeruant vnto euery man. But how? By all the duties of loue, as occaſion ſhall be offered, and that for the common good of all men. Marke well the words of S. Paul. Though I bee free from all men, yet haue I made my ſelfe ſeruant to all, that I might winne the more. If it be ſaid, this dutie appertaines to an Apoſtle, I anſwer, that Paul inioins it indifferently to euery man. Gal. 5.13. Doe yee ſervice one to another in loue. And for this cauſe the ſeruants of God are ſaid to be trees of righteouſneſſe, whoſe leaues ſerue for medicine, and their fruit for meate, not for themſelues, but for others. Let vs therfore in the feare of God bee carefull to learne this dutie: for the practiſe of it is the ſpeciall ornament of Chriſts holy Goſpell.

1. Cor 9.19.

The laſt generall dutie is ſet downe by S. Paul, Eph. 4.1. Walke worthy that calling wherein God hath called you. Againe, he biddeth ſeruants ſo to carrie themſelues toward their maſters, that they may adorne the goſpel of God in al things: and he ſets downe in the wordes following, how men may adorne religion by their profeſsion: namely, by denying vngodlineſſe and worldly luſts, by liuing ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent world. In a word, this calling of Chriſtianitie is the moſt excellent calling in the world, and he walketh worthy the ſame that keepeth a good conſcience before God, and is vnblameable before all men.

Tit. 2.3.

This duty I commend to the meditation and practiſe of all men whatſoeuer; wee were once baptized, and therein gaue vp our names to God, and Chriſt; and wee are content to heare the word, and receiue the Supper of the Lord as a pledge of his mercy and loue. We muſt therefore walke as they to whom the mercie and loue of God pertaines. Chriſt pronounceth a woe to them that giue offence. Matth. 18.7. And indeede it were better for any man to bee as farre vnder the earth, as he is aboue it, then by a badde and looſe converſation to ſlaunder the name of God, whoſe profeſſed ſeruant he is: & as Chriſt ſaith, It were better a millſtone were hanged about his necke, and he were throwne into the bottom of the Sea. As Dauid prayed, Lord take from me rebuke and ſhame, which I do feare, becauſe thy iudgements are good: ſo muſt we pray, Lord take from me rebuke & ſhame, for thy Goſpell is good. And that we may euermore walke worthie of this calling, we firſt of all muſt depend by faith on the prouidence and mercie of god at al times. Secondly, we muſt dayly turne vnto him, by a continual renuing of our repentance. Thirdly, we muſt endeuour to performe new obedience in reſpect of all his commandements.

Pſal. 119.39.

Thus much of the generall calling common to al men as they are Chriſtians. Now followeth the ſecond kind of calling, and that is Perſonall. A Perſonal calling is the execution of ſome particular office, ariſing of that diſtinction which God makes betweene man and man in euery ſocietie.

First

First I say it is the execution of some particular office: as for example, the calling of a magistrate is to execute the office of gouernment ouer his subiects: the office of a minister to execute the dutie of teaching his people: the calling of a master is to execute the office of authoritie and gouernment ouer his seruants: the office of a Physitian is, to put in practise the good meanes whereby life and health are preserued. In a word, in euery estate the practise and execution of that particular office, wherein any man is placed, is his personall calling.

Secondly I adde, that it ariseth from that distinction which God maketh betweene man and man in euery societie, to shew what is the foundation and ground of all personall callings. And it is a point to be considered of vs, which I thus explaine: God in his word hath ordained the society of man with man, partly in the commonwealth, partly in the Church, and partly in the familie: and it is not the will of God that man should liue and conuerse alone by himselfe, Now for the maintaining of societie, he hath ordained a certaine bond to linke men together, which S. Paul calleth the band of peace, and the bond of perfection, namely loue. And howsoeuer he hath ordained societies, and the bond of them all, yet hath he appointed that there should stil remaine a distinction betweene man and man, not onely in regard of person, but also in other respects: for as the whole bodie is not the hand, nor the foote, nor the eie, but the hand one part, the foote another, and the eye another: and howsoeuer in the bodie one part is linked to another, yet there is a distinction betwixt the members, whereby it commeth to passe, that the hand is the hand, not the foote: and the foote, the foote, not the hand, nor the eye: so is it in societies, there is a distinction in the members thereof, and that in two respects: first in regard of the inward gifts which God bestoweth on euery man, giuing to seuerall men seuerall gifts according to his good pleasure. Of this distinction in regard of inward gifts, Paul intreates at large, 1. Cor. 12. through the whole chapter, where he sheweth the diuersitie of gifts that God bestowes on his Church, and so proportionally in euery societie, Now looke as the inward gifts of men are seuered, so are the persons distinguished in their societies accordingly. Secondly, persons are dinguished by order, whereby God hath appointed that in euery societie one person should bee aboue or vnder another; not making all equall, as though the bodie should be all head and nothing else: but euen in degree and order, he hath set a distinction, that one should be aboue another. And by reason of this distinction of men, partly in respect of gifts, partly in respect of order, come personall callings. For if all men had the same gifts, and all were in the same degree and order then should all haue one and the same calling: but in as much as God giueth diuersitie of gifts inwardly, and distinction of order outwardly, hence proceede diuersitie of personall callings; and therefore I added that personall callings arise from that distinctio which God maketh betweene man & man in euery society. And thus we see what is a personal calling. Now before I come to entreat of the parts thereof, there be other general rules to be learned which concerne all personal callings whatsoeuer. Rom. 13. 1. Pet. 2.

I. Rule. Euery person of euery degree, state, sexe, or condition without exception, must haue some personal and particular calling to walke in. This appeareth plainly by the whole word of God. Adam so soone as he was created, euen in his integritie had a personal calling assigned him by God: which was to dresse & keepe the garden. And after Adams fall, the Lord giueth a particular commandement to him and all his posteritie, which bindeth all men to walke in some calling, either in the Church or Commonwealth, saying, In the sweat of thy browes shalt thou eate thy bread. Againe in the renewing of the lawe in Mount Sinai, the fourth commaundement doth not onely permit labour on sixe daies, but also inioynes the same (as I take it) to vs all. For Gods example is there propounded for vs to follow, that as he rested the seauenth day, so must also we: and consequently, as he spent sixe daies in the worke of creation, so should we in our personal callings. And S. Paul giueth this rule, Let him that stole, steale no more but let him rather worke with his hands the thing that good is, that he may haue to giue him that needeth. Christ the head of men, liued with Ioseph in the calling of a Carpenter, till the time of his baptisme, and hereupon it was that the Iewes said, Is not this the carpenter the sonne of Marie? and after he was baptised, and was as it were solemnly admitted into the office of a Mediatour, the worke of our redempti- Gen. 3. 19. Eph. 4. 28. Mark 6. Iustin. contra Tryph.

on was then his calling, in which he both liued and died. Yea the angels of God haue their particular callings, in that they doe his commandements in obeying the voice of his word. And therefore all that descend of Adam must needes haue some calling to walke in; either publike, or priuate, whether it be in the church, or commonwealth, or familie. Psal.103.20.

Hence we may learne sundrie points of instruction; first of all that it is a foule disorder in any Cómonwealth, that there should be suffered rogues, beggats, vagabonds; for such kind of persons commonly are of no ciuil societie or corporation, nor of any particular Church: and are as rotten legges, and armes, that droppe from the bodie. Againe, to wander vp and downe from yeare to yeare to this ende, to seeke and procure bodily maintenance, is no calling, but the life of a beast: and consequently a condition or state of life flatte against the rule; That euery one must haue a particular calling. And therefore the statute made the last Parliament for the restraining of beggars and rogues is an excellent statute, and beeing in substance the very lawe of God, is neuer to be repealed. Anno.39.

Againe, hereby is ouerthrowne the condition of Monkes & Friers: who challenge to themselues that they liue in a state of perfection, because they liue apart from the societies of men in fasting and praier: but contrariwise, this Monkish kinde of liuing is damnable; for besides the generall duties of fasting and praier, which appertaine to al Christians, euery man must haue a particular and personal calling, that he may be a good and profitable member of some societie and bodie. And the auncient Church condemned all monkes for theeues & robbers, that besides the generall duties of praier and fasting, did not withal imploy themselues in some other calling for their better maintenance.

Thirdy we learne by this, that miserable and damnable is the state of those that being enriched with great liuings and reuenewes, doe spende their daies in eating and drinking, in sports and pastimes, not imploying themselues in seruice for Church or Commonwealth. It may be happily thought, that such gentlemen haue happie liues; but it is farre otherwise: considering euery one, rich, or poore, man, or woman, is bound to haue a personall calling, in which they must performe some duties for the common good, according to the measure of the gifts that God hath bestowed on them.

Fourthly, hereby also it is required that such as we commonly call seruing-men should haue, beside the office of waiting, some other particular calling, vnlesse they tend on men of great place and state: for onely to waite, and giue attendance, is not a sufficient calling, as common experience telleth: for waiting-seruants, by reason they spend the most of their time in eating and drinking, sleeping, and gaming after dinner and supper, doe proue the most vnprofitable members both in Church and Commonwealth. For when either their good masters die, or they be turned out of their office for some misdemeanour, they are fit for no calling beeing vnable to labour; and thus they giue themselues either to begge or steale. The waiting man of Cornelius the Centurian, was also by calling a souldier: and it were to be wished now a daies, that gentlemen would make choise of such seruants, that might not onely tend on their persons, but also tend vpon some other conuenient office. It is good for euery man to haue two strings to his bow. Act.10.7.

II. Rule. Euery man must iudge that particular calling, in which God hath placed him, to be the best of all callings for him: I say not simply best, but best for him. This rule is set forth vnto vs in the example of Paul. I haue learned (saith he) in whatsoeuer state I am to be content and well pleased. The practise of this duie is the stay and foundation of the good estate both of Church and common wealth: for it maketh euery man to keepe his owne standing, and to imploy himselfe painfully within his calling: but when we begin to mislike the wise disposition of God, and to thinke others mens callings better for vs then our owne, then followes confusion and disorder in euery societie. When Absalom a childe, and subiect of king Dauid was not content with his estate, but sought his fathers kingdome, and said, O that I were iudge among you! many contentions and hurliburlies followed in the common wealth of the Iewes all his daies. And the sonnes of Zebedeus not contenting themselues with the calling of Disciples, but beeing inflamed with desire of honour and dignitie, sought two principall offices in Christ his kingdome, which (as they deemed) should be a ciuil and worldly kingdome. Hence arose enuie and heartburning among the disciples, and further Phil.4.11. 2. Sam.15.4.

euills would haue inſued, vnleſſe the wiſedome of our Sauiour Chriſt had cut them off. The Biſhops of the Church of Rome, not contented with their Eccleſiaſticall eſtate, affected the honour of the Empire: and by this meanes, brought hauocke and ruine vpon the whole church: yea, the very firſt familie that euer was in the world, felt the ſmart of this euill. Caine, becauſe he feared the loſſe of his primacy, whereby hee was to be a Prieſt, Prophet, and ruler in Adams houſe, after his deceaſe, ſlew his brother Abel. And this may well be gathered by the words of the text, Gen. 4. 7. where when Caine began to be angrie, the Lord ſaid; If thou dooſt well, there is remiſſion; if not, ſinne lies at the doore. Now Caine might happily reply and ſay; this is well, but my griefe remaines, that I muſt looſe my right and dignity. To this God anſwereth thus, in the next words; And his appetite ſhall be to thee, and thou ſhalt rule ouer him; namely, if thou doe well. And from time to time, the greateſt diſcords that haue fallen out in the Church of God, haue iſſued from this fountaine. And the ſame is alſo true in the Common-wealth: hence come treacheries, treaſons, and ſeditions, when men, not content with their owne eſtate and honours, ſeeke higher places: and being diſappointed, grow to diſcontentments, and ſo forward to all miſcheefe. Therefore in a word, the good eſtate of the Church and Common-wealth, is, when euery perſon keepes himſelfe to his owne calling. And this will vndoubtedly come to paſſe, if we conſider what be our callings, and that we are placed in them of God; and therefore iudge them to be the beſt callings of all for vs.

III Rule. Euery man muſt ioyne the practiſe of his perſonall calling, with the practiſe of the generall calling of Chriſtianitie, before deſcribed. More plainely. Euery particular calling muſt be practiſed in, and with the generall calling of a Chriſtian. It is not ſufficient for a man in the congregation, and in common conuerſation, to be a Chriſtian, but in this very perſonall calling, he muſt ſhew himſelfe to be ſo. As for example. A Magiſtrate muſt not onely in generall be a Chriſtian, as euery man is, but hee muſt be a Chriſtian Magiſtrate in executing the office of a Magiſtrate in bearing the ſword. A maſter of a family, muſt not only be a chriſtian abroad in the town, and in the congregation, in the ſight of ſtrangers, but alſo in the adminiſtration and regiment of his particular family, towards wife, children, and ſeruants. It is not inough for a woman to be vertuous openly to ſtrangers; but her vertue muſt priuately ſhew it ſelfe in her ſubiection and obedience to her own husband. A Schoolemaſter muſt not onely be a Chriſtian in the aſſembly, when he heareth the word, and receiueth the Sacraments, but he muſt alſo ſhew himſelfe to be a Chriſtian in the office of teaching. And thus muſt euery man behaue himſelfe in this particular calling: becauſe the particular calling and practiſe of the duties thereof, ſeuered from the foreſaid generall calling, is nothing elſe but a practiſe of iniuſtice & profaneneſſe. And the generall calling of chriſtianity, without the practiſe of ſome particular calling, is nothing elſe, but the forme of godlineſſe, without the power thereof: And therefore both callings muſt be ioyned, as bodie and ſoule are ioyned in a liuing man. And that wee may the better ioyne both our callings together, we muſt conſider the maine end of our liues, and that is, to ſerue God in ſeruing of men in the workes of our callings. God, as hee made man, ſo can he preſerue man, without the helpe of man: but his pleaſure is, that men ſhould be his inſtrument, for the good one of another. For this cauſe hath hee ordained the excellent office of Magiſtrates and Miniſters, and almoſt an infinite variety of trades of life, all tending to preſerue the body or ſoule, or both. Thus God manifeſts his fatherly care ouer vs, by the imploiment of men in his ſeruice, according to their ſeuerall vocations, for our good: and there is not ſo much as the vaſſall or bond-man; but hee muſt ſerue God by ſeruing his maſter: as Paul teacheth, Coloſ. 3. 24. And by this one point, we may learne two things. The firſt, that they profane their liues and callings that imploy them to get honours, pleaſures, profites, worldly commodities, &c. for thus we liue to another end, then God hath appointed, and thus we ſerue our ſelues, and conſequently, neyther God, nor man. Some man will ſay perchance; What, muſt we not labour in our callings, to maintaine our families? I anſwer; this muſt be done: but this is not the ſcope and end of our liues. The true end of our liues is, to doe ſeruice to God, in ſeruing of man: and for a recompence of this ſeruice, God ſends his bleſſings on mens trauailes, and hee allowes them to take for their labours.

Secondly, by this we learne, how men of meane place & calling, may comfort themſelues. Let them conſider, that in ſeruing of men, by performance of poore and baſe duties, they ſerue God: and therefore that their ſeruice is not baſe in his ſight: and though their reward from men be little, yet the reward at Gods hand, ſhal not be wanting. For ſeeing they ſerue God in ſeruing of men, they may iuſtly looke for reward from both. And thus may we reape maruelous contentation in any kind of calling, though it be but to ſweep the houſe, or keep ſheepe, if we can thus in practiſe, vnite our callings.

By this rule may any man rightly iudge of himſelfe and others. For whereſoeuer theſe two callings are ſeuered, whatſoeuer is in ſhew, there is nothing in ſubſtãce. And by this alſo wee may diſcerne a common fault in the liues of many men, who ſhew themſelues ready and willing to heare the word of God; yea, they approue it, receiue the Sacraments, and profeſſe themſelues to be members of Chriſt: & all theſe be good duties of the firſt and generall calling: but goe on further, and looke into their particular callings, there ſhall you find nothing leſſe, there is all out of order; ſome be vſurers and oppreſſors, ſome ingroſſers, ſome vſe falſe weights and meaſures, ſome lying and ſwearing, ſome are looſe and laſciuious. It may be, ſuch perſons reſolue themſelues that all is well, when they doe ſome duties of their generall calling: but whereas they neglect the performance of the ſaid duties, in their particular callings, they are farre out of order; yea, they leade a dangerous and lamentable courſe of life. For though they be indued with excellent gifts, and be able to ſpeake well, conceiue prayer, and with ſome reuerence to heare the word, and receiue the Sacraments, yet if they practiſe not the duties of godlineſſe within their owne callings, all is but hypocriſie. And therefore, vnleſſe they repent, the greater their gifts are, the more ſhall they make to their deeper condemnation at the day of iudgement.

Againe, this rule ſerueth to teach all men the right way to reforme their liues. If thou wouldſt leade a life vnblameable both before God and man, thou muſt firſt of all bethinke thy ſelfe, what is thy particular calling, and then proceede to practiſe the duties of the morall law, and all other duties of Chriſtianity, in that very calling. And if thou wouldeſt haue ſignes and tokens of thy election and ſaluation, thou muſt fetch them from the conſtant practiſe of thy two callings ioyntly togither: ſeuer them in thy life, & thou ſhalt find no comfort, but rather ſhame and confuſion of grace, vnleſſe thou repent.

IV. Rule. Such as beare publike callings, muſt firſt reforme themſelues in priuate. When Moſes went from Midian to Egypt, to be a gouernor of the Iſraelites, the Lord withſtood him in the way, by reaſon of a fault in his priuate family, that his child was not circumciſed, according to the law of God. How ſhall he order publike matters for the common good, that cannot order his owne priuate eſtate?

V. Rule. A particular calling muſt giue place to the generall calling of a Chriſtian, when they cannot both ſtand togither. As for example: a ſeruant is bound to his maſter to obey him, either becauſe he is a vaſſall, or at the leaſt, becauſe hee is hired to ſerue for wages: the ſaid maſter being a zealous Papiſt, threatneth his ſeruant, being a Proteſtant, that vnleſſe hee condeſcend to heare Maſſe, he ſhall either burne at a ſtake, or carry a faggot. Now the ſeruant ſeeing the malicious purpoſe of his maſter, and not finding himſelfe able to beare the brunt of a triall, in this caſe, he departs and withdrawes himſelfe for a time: And the queſtion is, whether he doth well or no? The anſwer is, he doth: and in ſuch a caſe, hee may lawfully flie from his maſter: for a ſeruant that by perſonal caling is bound to an earthly maſter, is further by a general calling, bound vnto God. And the particular calling of any man, is inferiour to the generall calling of a Chriſtian: and when they cannot both ſtand together, the particular calling muſt giue place; becauſe we are bound vnto God in the firſt place, and vnto man, vnder God: and ſo far onely as wee may withall, keepe our bond with God. And thus much of the fiue generall rules that are to be practiſed in euery particular calling.

To proceede. Perſonall callings be of two ſorts: of the firſt ſort, are all ſuch as be of the eſſence and foundation of any ſociety, without which, the ſociety cannot be. As in a family, the calling of a maſter, and the calling of a ſeruant; the calling of a huſband and wife; of parents, and children. And in the common-wealth, the calling of Magiſtrates, and ſubiects. And in the Church, the calling of the Miniſter and of the people. Of the ſecond ſort, are all ſuch as ſerue onely for the good, happy, and quiet eſtate of a ſociety. And theſe be of ſundry ſorts; ſome of them ſeruing for the preſeruation of the life of man, as the calling of an husbandman, of a Merchant, &c. ſome ſeruing for the preſeruation of health, as the calling of a Phiſition, and of the Surgeon, &c. ſome ſeruing for the outward peace, as the calling of a ſouldier, of the Lawyer, &c. ſome ſeruing for the clothing and attiring of the body, and they be almoſt ſo many, as be the parts of the body: ſome alſo ſeruing for building, as the calling of a Carpenter, and Maſon. In a word, looke how many things be neceſſary, for the good eſtate of any ſociety, ſo many perſonall callings there be, which belong not to the eſſence and being of a ſociety, but ſerue onely for the good of the ſame. And to one of theſe two kindes, may all lawfull perſonall callings be referred. Thus much of callings in generall, and of the kindes thereof.

The third point to be conſidered, which is the moſt principall, is this: How euery man may in a good and holy manner, vſe his calling: this ſtill being remembred, that I ſpeake not of extraordinary callings, or of the generall calling of a Chriſtian, but onely of ordinary and perſonall callings. The handling of this point, is of great weight and moment: for by the right vſe of euery calling, the workes thereof are made good works, though otherwiſe they be but meane and baſe in themſelues. In a good work are three things required: firſt, it muſt be done in obedience: ſecondly, in faith: thirdly, it muſt be directed to the glory of God. Now the workes of euery calling, when they are performed in an holy maner, are done in faith & obedience, and ſerue notably for Gods glory, be the calling neuer ſo baſe. As for example, a man is by profeſsion a ſheepheard, the calling is but baſe and meane, and the duties thereof are ſutable: yet if there be grace to vſe that calling aright, the duties thereof are good workes before God, being done with conſcience of obedience vnto God, for his glory, and the good of the maſter. The meaneneſſe of the calling doth not abaſe the goodneſſe of the worke: for God looketh not at the excellency of the work, but at the heart of the worker. And the action of a ſheepeheard in keeping ſheepe, performed as I haue ſaid, in his kinde, is as good a worke before God, as is the action of a Iudge, in giuing ſentence, or of a Magiſtrate in ruling, or a Miniſter in preaching. Thus when we ſee there is good reaſon why we ſhould ſearch how euery man is rightly to vſe his particular calling. In the right vſe of any calling, foure things are to be conſidered & performed. I. good choice of a calling. II. good entrance into it. III. good continuance therein. IV. an honeſt and good leauing of the ſame. For the firſt, in the choice of our callings, we muſt remember and obſerue three particular rules.

I. Rule. That we are to chooſe honeſt and lawful callings to walke in. Let him that ſtole (ſaith Paul) ſteale no more: but let him rather labour and worke with his hands, the thing that is good. Eph. 4. 28. Heere we are warned by the holy Ghoſt, to make choice of ſuch callings as be honeſt. Againe; all the works of our callings, muſt be done in faith, & there is no faith, vnleſſe the calling be honeſt.

For better direction in the choice of an honeſt calling, this generall ground muſt be obſerued: Euery calling that ſerueth to vphold & maintaine three ſeuerall eſtates and ſocieties, namely, the eſtate of the Church, or the eſtate of the Commonwealth, or the eſtate of the family, is grounded vpon the moral law; and therfore lawfull, and conſequently may be had, vſed, and inioyed with good conſcience. On the contrary, if it be an hinderance to any of theſe three eſtates, in whole, or in part, it is an vnlawfull calling.

II. Rule. Euery man muſt chooſe a fit calling to walke in; that is, euery calling muſt be fitted to the man, & euery man be fitted to his calling. This rule is as neceſſary as the former: for when men are out of their proper callings in anie ſocietie, it is as much, as if a ioynt were out of the place in the bodie. Now in choyce of callings, two ſorts of men muſt be conſidered: men of yeares, & children. Men of yeares make choice of fit callings for themſelues, when they trie, iudge, and examine themſelues to what things they are apt and fit, and to what things they are not. And euery man muſt examine himſelfe of two things: firſt, touching his affection: ſecondly, touching his gifts. For his affection, he muſt ſearch what minde he hath to any calling, and in what calling he deſireth moſt of all to glorifie God. For his gifts, he muſt examine, for, and to what calling they are fitteſt. Hauing thus tried both his affection and gifts, finding alſo the calling to which they tend with one conſent, hee may ſay, that is his calling; becauſe he liketh it beſt, and is euerie way the fitteſt for it. As for example: one brought vp in the Schooles of learning, deſireth to know what ought to be his calling: well, he examines his affection or deſire, and findes it moſt of all inclined to the miniſterie of the Goſpel: hee examines his gifts alſo, and findeth both knowledge and vtterance fitte for the ſame. Now ſuch a one may ſafely ſay; that the miniſterie is the calling, to which he is ſet apart. And the like may any other man, in any other calling ſay for himſelfe. Yet, becauſe many men are partiall in iudgeing of their inclination and gifts, the beſt way for them is, to vſe the aduiſe and helpe of others, that are able to giue direction heerein, and to diſcerne better then themſelues.

Now touching children, it is the dutie of parents, to make choice of fit callings for them, before they applie them to any particular condition of life. And that they may the better iudge aright, for what callings their children are fitte, they muſt obſerue two things in them: firſt, their inclination: ſecondly, their naturall gifts. Touching inclination, euery childe euen in his firſt yeares, doth affect ſome one particular calling, more then another; as ſome are affected more with muſicke, then others, ſome with marchandiſe, ſome with a more liberall kind of learning: ſome with this, ſome with that. And by this may the parents ſomething iudge of their inclination and towardneſſe. This was practiſed among the Athenians, who before they placed their children in any calling, did firſt, bring them into a publique place, where inſtruments of all ſorts were laide: and they obſerued with what kinde of inſtrument they took delight, and to the like Art did they afterward apply them with good ſucceſſe. And it will not be amiſſe for Chriſtians to be followers of the heathen in this, or any other commendable practiſe. Secondly, the natural gifts which parents are to obſerue in their children, are either in their bodies, or in their mindes. And thoſe children which excell in the gifts of the body, are to be brought vp in callings, performed by the labour of the body: as in Machanicall Arts. And ſuch as excell in the gifts of minde, are to be applied to thoſe ſciences, that are performed by wit and learning. The [a] notes of a childe that is fit for learning, are theſe: a loue of learning, a loue of labour, a loue of praiſe, and a wit neither too quicke, nor too dull. A fine wit in a child, is like a pen-knife that wil not ſhiue a great loafe, but onely ſerues to cut a quill. Againe, in the gifts of the minde, marke a ſpeciall difference. There be two kindes of vnderſtanding, Actiue, and Paſsiue. The actiue vnderſtanding, is that which not onely conceiueth of things inuented by others, but alſo can inuent things of it ſelfe. The paſsiue vnderſtanding, is that which onely conceiueth of things deuiſed by others, and cannot inuent, but very hardly of it ſelfe. And euery one, both old and young, haue one of theſe kindes of vnderſtanding. Now all thoſe children that excell in this actiue vnderſtanding, are to be ſet apart, for the greateſt callings in the Church & commonwealth. Democritus the Philoſopher, choſe Protagoras to be his ſcholler, becauſe he ſhewed wit in the artificiall binding of a bundle of ſtickes. Athanaſius, that famous Biſhop, was firſt put to learning, becauſe he was found by the ſea ſide, doing the part of a Miniſter, among the company of little children, like himſelfe, examining and baptizing them, according to the ſolemne order, vſed in the congregation. Origen, that famous clarke, when he was a childe, vſed to queſtion with his father Leonidas, about the ſenſe of the Scripture, and to demaund of trades men, the cauſes of things, and the vſe of their tooles and inſtruments. And thus we ſee in ſome ſort, how parents may iudge to what calling euery childe is fit. Euſeb. hiſt. 3.

And heere all parents muſt be warned, that the neglect of this dutie, is a great and common ſinne: for the care of the moſt is, that their children may liue, nothing regarding whether they liue well, & do ſeruice to God in a fit calling or no. And the truth is, parents cannot doe greater wrong to their children, and the ſociety of men, then to apply them vnto vnfit callings: as when a childe is fit for learning, to apply him to a trade, or other bodily ſeruice, contrariwiſe, to apply him to learning, when he is fitteſt for a trade: for this is as much, as if a man ſhould apply his toes to feeling, and not his fingers; and to go on his hands, and not on his feet, and to ſet the members of the body, out of their proper places. And this is the ſecond rule.

III. Rule. He that is fit for ſundry callings, muſt make choice of the beſt. Thus much S. Paul teacheth plainely in the next verſe of this chapter: Art thou (ſaith he) called, being a ſeruant? care not for it; but if thou maieſt 1 Cor. 7. 21.

maiest be free, chose it rather. Where he giues this counsell, that a bondman hauing libertie in his choise, must accept of it, rather then continue a bond-man still. Againe, Paul bids the Corinthians to couet spirituall gifts; but especially, that they may prophecie: where he giues this rule, that in the choice of gifts, we must labour for the best gifts: and if wee are to seeke after the best gifts, then proportionally, we must seeke for the best callings. 1. Cor. 14. 1.

Heere is a speciall rule for all young studēts in the Vniuersities. Such as are brought vp in the schooles of the prophets, desire to know what particular calling is best for them, because they haue liberty to be either Schoolemasters, or Phisitians, or Lawyers, or Ministers of the word of God. St. Paul, according to this generall rule, sheweth that a choice must be made of the best calling. And in the first place, if gifts will serue, a choice must be made of the calling of a Prophet or teacher; and that aboue all other, Academicall callings must haue the first place. Thus much of choice.

II. Point. When choice is once made, we must then consider, how a good entrance is to be made into the calling which we haue chosen. Touching entrance, many points are to be scanned. The first is, in what sort and maner an entrance must be made. And the right manner is this; Euery man must so enter, that he may truly in conscience say; God hath placed me in this calling, be it neuer so base a calling. Thus Paul saith in this chapter v. 17. As God hath called euery man, so let him walke. And Christ our Sauiour neuer tooke vpon him openly, the office of a mediator, till he was baptized, and therein called vnto it, by the voice of his father from heauen, saying; This is my beloued Sonne, in whom I am well pleased. But immediately after, he began to teach and preach, and to shew himselfe the true Messias, in performing the duties of a King, Priest, and Prophet. There is no calling vpon earth, since the fall of Adam, but hath crosses and calamities attending on it, but they are delayed by comfort sufficient, when our conscience can tell vs, we were placed in our callings by God himself; and when our conscience cannot say thus much, the comfort is gone.

Now, that euery man may certainely know himselfe to be called of God, to this or that calling, hee must haue two things: Gifts for the calling from God, and Alowance from men. For the first, whom God calleth, to them he giueth cōpetent & conuenient gifts, as knowledge, vnderstāding, dexterity to this or that, and such like; & thereby makes them able for the performance of the duties of their callings. Contrariwise, they that enter into any calling, being vtterly vnable to performe the duties thereof, were neuer called of God. For the second, men are to be set apart to their particular callings by the appointment of men, whom God hath left on earth as his instruments, for the ordering and disposing of vocations. For God hath his deputies to allot men their offices in euery society, as parents and masters to dispose of persons in priuate families: for Ecclesiasticall callings, the Gouernours of the church; for ciuill, the Magistrate, and men of authority in the Common-wealth. And he that would truly say, God hath placed him in any particular calling, must also haue the outward calling of men. And heere it is to be remembred, that triall of gifts and free election, without partiallity, should be in the designement of all, specially of publike callings. Thus in the primitiue Church, not so much as Deacons were admitted without iust & sufficient triall 1. Tim. 3. And heere sundry abuses are to be reproued: as first of all, the buying and selling; the chopping and chaunging of ciuill offices; for where the calling is set to sale, there little or no triall, little or no election takes place. And he that buies his office, must rather say, his mony called him, than God: wherefore, such as lay vp money to buy offices, had best take heede before hand: for the saying is true; He that buies the seate, must sell iustice: and where iustice is sold, the poore is oppressed, and all goes to wracke. The like is to be said of the sale of Ecclesiasticall liuings, to which, cure of soules is annexed: yea, of the dispensing and giuing them hand ouer head. Indeede, to buy or sell the liuings of the Church, is not properly the sinne of Simon, who sought to get the gifts of the holy Ghost with money; yet is this buying a grieuous sinne, flat against the order that God hath set down touching entrance into any calling. The very heathen themselues haue complained of this chopping and changing of places, as of the ruines of states, and Common-wealths. Alexander Severus the Emperour saieth; it is necessarie that he which buieth, must sell. I will not suffer buyers and sellers of offices: if I suffer them, it is because I cannot condemne such. For I a Lampridius in vita Seuer. b Mercatores potestatum.

Thus much of entrance in generall. Now follow certaine queſtions thereof. If this be as I haue ſaid, that ſuch as enter into any calling, ſpecially publike, muſt firſt be enabled with gifts from God, and alſo ſet apart by men, after due triall and examination. Heere a queſtion is to be skanned, which the Papiſts vſe to propound; namely, what calling the firſt Preachers of the Goſpel, and planters of our Church had? The anſwer to this queſtion is needefull: for if they had no calling, neither haue we that are their followers. And I anſwer two things. Firſt, that they had their callings, by vertue whereof they reſtored the Goſpel of Chriſt from the Romiſh Church it ſelfe: for they were eyther Prieſts, or Schoole-Doctors, as in England, Wickliffe; in Germanie, Luther; in Bohemia, Iohn Huſſe, and Ierome of Prage; at Baſil, Oecolampadius; in Italie, Peter Martyre, and others. And therefore theſe, with many others, were ordained, eyther in Popiſh Churches, or in ſchooles, and there by oath ſolemnly bound to doe the duties of their callings with good conſcience, by confuting of errour, and maintaining the auncient Apoſtolique faith. Wherefore if this their calling, be of any moment to ſtoppe their mouthes, wee ſay, the firſt reſtorers of the Goſpel in our times, had their firſt callings of them. If it be ſaide; that theſe men were all periured, for preaching againſt the Church of Rome, to whoſe alleagance they were bound by oath: I anſwer, that by vertue of their oathes at their ordination, they were bound onely to the Catholike and Apoſtolike Church, and not to the preſent Church of Rome: for the wordes [the Catholike and Apoſtolike Church of Rome] which now runne in the tenor of the oath, were not ſo ſtrictly vſed in former times, but are more vrged now of late. Secondly I anſwer; that many of them had callings in ſome ſort, extraordinarie; I ſay, in ſome ſort, diſtinguiſhing the office of teaching, and the vſe of it. The office which they performed, was ordinarie; but the execution of this office, in purging and reſtoring true religion, not in reſpect of that true order, which God hath ſet downe in his word: but in reſpect of the abuſe of it in the Romiſh Church, was extraordinarie. Which I declare on this manner. God calleth men extraordinarily, when he bindes not himſelfe to ordinary lawes of vocation, ſette downe in his word. And this he doth three waies. Firſt, by his owne immediate voice, And thus was Abraham called, & Moſes in the buſh, and ſo were all the Apoſtles of Chriſt called immediately; and Paul likewiſe after Chriſts aſcention. Secondly, he calles extraordinarily, by the miniſterie of creatures: as Eliſhah was called by Eliah: thus was Aaron called by Moſes: and Philip called to baptize the Eunuch, by the meſſage of an Angell. Act. 8. Thirdly, by ſpeciall inſtinct, and extraordinarie inſpiration of the ſpirit. Examples heereof we haue in the word of God: in Philip, who by his firſt calling, was a Deacon, went and preached the Goſpel in Samaria, and firſt began the Church of God there; not by calling from the Apoſtles, becauſe they were ignorant of his preaching, Act. 8. 14. and we may not thinke that he did enterprize this worke vppon his owne braine. And therefore, by all likelihoode, his calling was by a ſpeciall inſtinct of the ſpirit of God. Againe, when the Church of Ieruſalem was diſperſed, there came men of Cyprus and Cyrene to Antioch, without any outward calling, and yet preached there, no doubt by the inſtinct of the holy ghoſt; as appeares, in that the hand of God was with them. The like I ſay of Luther, and the reſt, namely, that they were ſtirred vp by ſpeciall inſtinct of the ſpirit of God; whereby they were mooued to reſtore the Goſpel to his former puritie, as they did. But ſome will ſay, this doctrine laieth open a gappe to all heretickes and deceiuers, for they may likewiſe pleade extraordinarie inſtincts, and by this meanes, ſeduce and deceiue the people of God. I anſwer, there be certain ſpeciall notes & markes, whereby we may diſcerne an extraordinary calling from the illuſions of the diuell, whereby he ſuborneth heretickes, to deceiue the world. Firſt, extraordinary calling neuer hath place, but when ordinary calling faileth. There be two ſpeciall times, wherein God calleth men extraordinarily. The firſt is, in the founding and planting of the Church: and heereupon were the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts called extraordinarilie. The ſecond time is, when the Church of God is defaced, and vniuerſall Apoſtaſie taketh place: for then there is no place for ordinarie calling; and therfore to reſtore the Church againe to her former eſtate, he calleth men extraordinarily: we may not looke for any reformation of a ſtew from them that liue therein, vnleſſe the occaſion be extraordinarie: and the like is to be thought of the reformation of an hereticall and Apoſtaticall Church, as without doubt is the Church of Rome.

Secondly, we may diſcerne of men extraordinarily called by the doctrine which they deliuer, which muſt bee the very doctrine of Prophets and Apoſtles: and hee that pleadeth extraordinarie calling, and yet bringeth any other doctrine, is not called by God, but is deluded by the diuell. Thus hath Moſes taught vs to iudge of true and falſe Prophets, not by their myracles, but by their doctrine. And when Chriſt was demaunded by the Scribes and Pharifies, by what authoritie he did thoſe things: he anſwered by demãding a like queſtion: whether Iohns baptiſme, that is, his Miniſterie and doctrine, were of God or no? and if his doctrine were of God, then alſo his calling, and cõſequently the calling of Chriſt, becauſe it was the office of Iohn to teſtifie of him.

Luke 20.

Thirdly, they may bee diſcerned by their liues and conuerſations. Chriſt hath foretold, that there ſhould come falſe prophets in ſheepes cloathing, which are inwardly rauening wolues: how then ſhal we know them? the anſwer is, by their faults, that is, not onely by their doctrine, but alſo by their liues, becauſe thir office is to teach, not onely by doctrine, but alſo by exãple. Now the men whom God called to the reſtoring of the Goſpel, to them he gaue with ſynceritie of iudgement, integritie of heart and life: which the Lord in mercie ioyned togither for the confirmation of the truth of their calling. And he that teacheth wholeſome doctrine, and bringeth forth contrarie fruits, is in that regard a falſe prophet, though his doctrine bee neuer ſo true. Fourthly, whome God calleth extraordinarily, them doth he furniſh with gifts aboue the ordinarie meaſure of men: as namely with knowledge, zeale, wiſedome, conſtancie, courage, and other giftes, that ſerue for the diſcharge of extraordinarie callings. And this we finde to be true in the firſt Miniſters of the Goſpell, but eſpecially in Luther, whom God notably armed with boldneſſe, and courage, to withſtand the whole Church of Rome. In our age ſome ſtart-vps haue ſaid, that they were Elias, Iohn Baptiſt, and Chriſt, but by this laſt note they haue beene deſcried: for when their gifts were examined, they haue been found to come farre ſhort of the gifts of many ordinarie men.

Math. 7. 15.

Now if we lay all theſe notes togither, it will eaſily appeare, that the firſt preachers of the goſpel in this laſt age, may at leaſt ſome of them, be ſaid truly to haue receiued extraordinarie callings from God. For firſt, they preached in ſuch a time, when no face of a true Church was to be ſeene, and a generall Apoſtacie ouerſpread the world. Secondly, they renewed the verie doctrine of the Apoſtles and Prophets. Thirdly, they adorned their doctrine with godly life & cõuerſation. And laſtly, were al, or moſt of them furniſhed in great meaſure with ſufficient giftes of knowledge, wiſedome, zeale, and courage, to mannage their callings and profeſsions. But the Papiſts ſay, there was nothing in them extraordinarie, becauſe they could not confirme their doctrine by miracles. I anſwer: firſt, the doctrine which they taught, needed not then to be confirmed with miracles ſeeing it was at the firſt publiſhing thereof, ſufficiently confirmed by miracles wrought by the prophets and Apoſtles. Secondly, I anſwer, that extraordinarie men doe not alwayes confirme their callings by miracles, as Iohn Baptiſt, and ſundrie prophets in the old Teſtament, who neuer wrought anie miracles. Thirdly, the gifts of working a miracle may be giuen to him that is an enemie to God and his Church; as the gift of prophecie may, that is greater: for Balaam and Caiphas, both prophecied, and yet were profeſſed enemies to Chriſt and his Church. And Moſes ſaith plainly, that falſe prophets comming among the people, would worke miracles for this end, to trie them. Therefore the working of a miracle ſerueth not alwayes to confirme an extraordinarie calling.

Queſt. 11. Secondly, it may be demaunded, if entrance be made into a lawful calling with an euill minde, and by euill meanes, what muſt then be done? I anſwer, he is not to forſake his place, but to repent of that his bad entrance, and to doe the duties of his calling with diligence and good conſcience, waiting after this for further approbatiõ from god, & alſo frõ men: which whẽ he hath in any meaſure obtained he may with good cõſcience proceed in his calling: for the after approbation, and acceptance (though it doth not iuſtifie the bad entrance) yet doth it make a ſupplie thereof. A Prince as W. Conquerour enters into a land or kingdome, & by warre and bloodſhedde ſeekes to ſubdue the people, and to make them ſubiect vnto him: now by this bad entrance, he is no lawfull king: for euery lawful king is placed by God, and by men that are appointed vnder god to ſet vp princes ouer them according to the lawes and cuſtoms of ſeuerall kingdomes. Yet if the people doe willingly ſubmit themſelues to this vſurper, and be content to yeeld ſubiection; & the king likewiſe to rule them by good & wholeſome lawes, he is nowe become a lawfull Prince, though his entrance was but tyrannicall. Vpõ this ground another queſtion is anſwered, touching the callings of the Miniſters of our Church. Some there be that ſay our Church is no Church, our Miniſters no Miniſters; yea the preachers of the Goſpell the worſt of al. The ground of their opinion is, becauſe (as they ſay) we haue no good and lawfull entrance into our callings and miniſterie, according to the word of god. For anſwer to them, put the caſe that all the preachers and Miniſters in the Church of England were vnlawfully called, yea, wanting the verie ſubſtance of true calling (which no man can with good cõſcience either ſpeak or thinke) yet is it poſsible that there may be a true Church of God among vs, and lawfull preachers of the worde, becauſe they may haue an after-acceptation and approbation, both from God, and from man: and an after-acceptation makes ſupply of a bad entrance. Nay, further it is euident that our miniſters haue approbation both from God and man. For firſt of all, God inableth them to teach the true and wholſome doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, which is one ſpeciall note to diſtinguiſh a falſe Prophet from a true. Secondly, God inables them with grace to adorne their doctrine and profeſsion with reformed liues. Thirdly, Gods hand is with them, in that he bleſſeth their labors, for the conuerſion of manie ſoules vnto God in all parts of this land. And by this, God doth as it were ſet to his hand & ſeal, for the approbation of our callings. The queſtion was amõg the Corinthians, whether Paul was an Apoſtle or no? And Paul himſelfe anſwereth, that if he were not an Apoſtle to others, yet was he to them, becauſe he was the Miniſter of their conuerſion. Now if this be a good reaſon to proue the extraordinarie calling of an Apoſtle, then no doubt but it wil ſerue much more to proue the calling of an ordinarie miniſter. 1.Cor.9.2.

Queſt. III. Thirdly, it may be demanded, whether a man being to enter into a calling, may lawfully offer himſelfe and make meanes to enter into it or no? Anſ. This queſtion S. Paul anſwereth, when he ſaith, He that deſireth the office of a Biſhop, deſireth a worthie worke: here he giueth vs to vnderſtand how it is not vnlawfull to deſire an office. It is true indeed, there be vnlawfull deſires of places & callings, namely, when they are ſought vpon a vaine and greedie minde, for pleaſure, or for lucres ſake; yet when they are deſired or ſought for, vpon conſcience to diſcharge a dutie vnto God and man, there is no offence. Now if the deſire of an office be lawfull, then to ſhew the ſame deſire by honeſt and lawfull meanes, is not vnlawfull. Therefore men may vſe honeſt & lawfull means to enter into callings meet for them, if ſo be they bring ſufficient gifts for the diſcharge thereof, and withall ſubmit themſelues to examination, and election according to lawfull order. The Prophet Iſaias, as ſoone as God had touched his tongue with a coale from the Altar, was readie to goe at the call of God, and when the Lord ſaid, Whom ſhall I ſend? he anſwered, here am I, ſend me: And after this example of this holie Prophet, may any man ſhewe himſelf willing to enter into an office, whẽ God hath furniſhed him with gifts, if ſo be he may be called. Here thẽ is a leſſon for ſuch as are brought vp in the ſchooles of the Prophets; their duty is, ſo ſoone as they are inabled to doe the offices of miniſters, to ſhew themſelues willing and readie in godly manner to take vppon them this kind of calling. And therefore without queſtion, it is a fault in many, that being enabled with gifts ſufficient, neuertheleſſe doe imploy themſelues wholy in their priuate ſtudies: not ſhewing any willingneſſe to take vpon them to diſcharge any miniſteriall calling, for which they are fit. For howſoeuer to ſeek a calling in the church of God for lucres ſake, is vnlawfull, yet to ſeeke a calling is not ſimply vnlawfull, if there be an honeſt mind, good meanes, & the glorie of God be truly intended. 1.Tim.3.1. Eſay.6.6,7,8.

Queſt. IV. Fourthly, it may be demaunded, whether a man may enter into two callings callings once or no? Ianſwer by diſtinguiſhing: in ſome reſpects he may, and in ſome he may not. An entrance may be made into two callings in three caſes: firſt, when god hath combined two callings togither by his owne appointment. Thus Melchizedech, that he might be a liuely figure of Chriſt our Sauiour, was a king and a prieſt, and did the office both of a King and Prieſt. And the high Prieſts that were the ſucceſſours of Aaron by Gods appointment, were not onely prieſts, but ciuill Iudges alſo. Iehoiada the high Prieſt was protectour of Iuda, in the nonage of Iehoaaſh, and by vertue of his protectorſhip ſlue Athaliah that vſurping Queene. And there is no maruel of this, becauſe the Leuites were the common lawyers, and the Scriptures were the poſitiue lawes of the Iewes: and therfore none were ſo fit to be iudges as Prieſts and Leuites. Euen as in this land, the fitteſt iudges in cauſes both ciuil & criminal, are Lawyers, that are expert in the lawes of the land. In this regard, it was not ſo great a burden among the Iewes to manage the office of a Prieſt, and to execute ciuil iudgement. Secondly, two callings may be combined, when the entring into them at once is not againſt the word, and for the common good. Thus Eli in the kingdom of Iſrael, was a prieſt by one calling, & by another calling a iudge. Thus Samuel was a Prophet, and a iudge. Thus Moſes a Prophet and a ciuil gouernour, yea, a Prince: for in thoſe times, both ſtates were ſo corrupt, that there could not be found ordinarie men ſufficient to diſcharge either calling ſeuerally. Thirdly, two callings may be endured, when being ioyned, they hinder not each other, nor the common good. Thns a man may lawfully be a maſter of a family, and a Marchant, or of any other trade whatſoeuer. Examples hereof we haue in the word of God. Abraham, beſides that he was a maſter of a great familie, and in his familie alſo a Prophet and a Prieſt in offering ſacrifice, was by another calling a mightie Prince, and a great warrior. And the ſame may be ſaid of the Patriarkes, they were gouernours in their families, and alſo Princes bearing the ciuill ſword, as may appeare in the examples of Iuda. Now there were two cauſes why they might beare both theſe offices: firſt, becauſe the Church of God was then verie ſmall, and compriſed in one familie: and ſecondly, the doctrine of religion was compriſed in few heades, & deliuered from man to man by tradition. And in this caſe S. Paul was by one calling an Apoſtle, and at the ſame time by an other calling a Tent-maker, becauſe of the pouertie of the Church of Corinth: as alſo becauſe he would hereby ſtop the mouthes of falſe Apoſtles, which would haue accuſed him for making aduantage of the goſpel. And in like caſe of neceſsitie, I doubt not but the miniſters of the goſpel now, may take vnto them other callings: this alwayes remembring, that they be no hinderaunce to their principall calling, nor offence to men.

Heb. 7.

Acts 18. 3.

Now I come to the ſecond parte of my diſtinction, to ſhew that men may not enter into two diſtinct callings at once: and that in three caſes. Firſt, if God haue diſioyned theſe callings by his word & commaundement. Secondly, if the practiſe of the one hinder the practiſe of the other. Thirdly, if the combining of them together, hinder the common good. On theſe groundes, our Sauiour Chriſt being the Doctor of the Church, refuſed to be iudge of inheritance betwixt the twoo brethren. And heereupon the Apoſtles being to doe the duties of their own callings, refuſed to performe the office of Deacons. Hence I gather, that in townes, corporations, and ſocieties, care (as much as may be) is to be had, that ſundry offices and charges being of themſelues weightie, and of diuerſe kindes, be not laid on the ſhoulders of one man: for the execution of them all breedeth diſtraction, and diſtraction diſableth the moſt able manne in the diſcharge of one office. He that commeth to the corne heape, the more hee openeth his hand to receiue, the leſſe hee holdeth: ſo hee that dooth as it were enlarge himſelfe to beare the moſt offices, the fewer ſhall hee diſcharge.

Luk. 12. 13, 14

Acts 6.

Queſt. V. Furthermore it may heere be demaunded whether it be lawfull to enter into two trades at once, or no? Anſwer: It is not vnlawefull, if ſo be they hinder not each other, nor the combining of them hinder the common good of men, and the partie intend not filthy lucre, but the common benefit. Neuertheleſſe it is inconuenient in a peopled common-wealth, for then one man ſhall hardely liue by an other: yet if one be not ſufficient to maintaine the charge of a family, a ſecond calling may be added vppon the former conditions.

Again it may be demanded whether one may may haue two farmes at once or no? Answ. Some haue thought it not conuenient, but the trueth is, it may as well be demaunded whether it bee lawfull to haue two coates at once or no: for in a common wealth all must not be equall: but some aboue, some vnder others in regard of wealth. And therfore such as haue sundry farmes, whether it be by inheritance, or by honest purchase, may lawfully inioy them. And thus much of good entrance.

The third maine poynt to be considered, is, the good continuance in a calling: which continuance consisteth in the constant practise of the duties and workes of the same calling: And herein two points must bee considered. First, what be the works of our callings which must be done, and of what note: the second, in what manner they must be done. For the first, the workes of our callings must be qualified by three notes. First, they must be the proper works of our callings: secõdly, they must be profitable: & thirdly, necessary. The first is S.
1. Thes. 4. 11. Pauls rule, Liue in peace, saith he: but how shall that be done? he answereth, by doing his owne businesse. And S. Peter giueth the same rule: requiring that no man suffer as a
1. Pet. 4. 15. busie bodie in other mens matters. In both which places, the holy Ghost teacheth vs that we must first of all search what be the proper works of our owne callings, and then afterwards doe them. The husbandman must attend on husbandrie: and the Minister on preaching, &c. By this one point sundry faults are opened, that commonly fall out in the liues of men; as first, when men looke at the things of others, not regarding their owne matters. Wee haue example of this, Ioh. 21. ver. 21, 22. Our Sauiour Christ said to Peter, Peter, follow thou me: now Peter little regarding his owne dutie, must needes in a kinde of curiositie aske what Iohn must doe: but our Sauiour Christ giues him a checke, and saith, If I will that he tarrie till I come, what is it to thee? And this is the common fault of the world: men that lightly regard and slackly performe the duties of their owne callings, are neuertheless very readie to talk of and enquire into the state and liues of other men: and it is meate & drinke vnto them. Let a good report be giuen out of a man, it is not regarded, but euill reports are taken vp at the first rebound: they run like wildfire, and al this ariseth from vaine curiositie, which is here condemned as the bane of all societies. These busi-bodies are like to such as reade books, with intention lie to spie out the faults thereof: and they are like to the spider, that creepes ouer all the garden, onely to gather poison. But men that feare God must learne to knowe their owne businesse, and to suffer their talke and meditation to be imployed that way.

Againe, here is condemned the curiositie of those, that enter vpon the duties of other mens callings. It is a dangerous sin, as I haue shewed heretofore, by the example of Vzzah, who was slain for touching the Arke, though his intent was onely to keepe it from falling: for he had no such calling. And of the men of Beth-shemesh, of whome there died fiftie thousand, for looking into the said Arke of God, when they had no calling so to doe. And of Corah, Dathan, & Abiram, who would needs challenge vnto them the calling and office of Moses.

Thirdly, hereby is condemned the studie and practise of figure-casting, and iudicial Astrologie: for thereby many, and that vpon false grounds, go about to search what shal befal other, men either in life or death, things that god wil not haue known before they come to passe. In a word, euery one that doth not the duties of his owne calling diligently, and with good conscience, is hereby condemned.

The second propertie is, that the works of our callings be profitable, not onely to the doers, but to the common wealth. This the lawe of nature teacheth. By this second propertie sundrie men are to be blamed. First the trades man, that getteth his liuing by making forreine and fond fashions of attire, which serue for no vse, but to be displaied flagges, and banners, either of follie, or pride, or wantonnesse: for all such fashions are condemned by the word of God, yea by the very light of nature. And therefore such as liue by selling & making of them, cannot be free from offence: nay their offence is the greater. For if there were no inuentours of vaine nouelties, they should not be so commonly vsed as they are. Secondly, here the Alchymist is to be reprooued, that spends his time, and substance in labouring to change baser mettals into gold, a thing in truth vnpossible: for it is a kinde of newe creation, to turne one kind of creature into a creature of another kinde, as euery mettal is And that which is said, or rather dreamed of the Philosophers stone, is but a conceit, and no where where to be found, but in Vtopia: and there is no question, but one day an account must be made of the good time vnprofitably spent in seeking for it.

The third condition of our actions is, that they must be necessarie. We must consider the nature and qualitie of the works of our callings. In euerie calling there be two kinds of workes. Some be principall, without which the calling cannot be maintained. And some lesse principall, which giue no essence to the calling. Now men must especially giue themselues to practise the principal works of their callings: as for example, the action of a Minister in his calling is to reade, and to preach the word of God: nowe reading is a worke lesse necessarie, and preaching the most principal: and for this cause he must giue himselfe especially to the practise thereof. On this manner wee might goe through the callings of al men, & note many wants therein. Magistrates in townes and corporations carrie and drawe the sword for the maintenance of peace and ciuill order: it is well done, for it is a worke of their calling; yet not the principall, and they doe commonly faile in this, that they vse not the sword for this ende, to vrge men to the keeping of the cõmandements of the first Table, to a practise of pure religion, and to the keeping of the Sabboth day. This is the maine dutie of the Magistrate, who beares the sworde specially for the good of mens soules. A master of a familie is to care not only for the bodies, but also for the souls of his household, for this is the principal dutie: and most housholders are faultie herein: for commonly they betake themselues to the lesser duties, & leaue the principall: they care for the bodies of their wiues, children, seruants; neglecting the meanes of the saluation of their soules. Cleane contrary to the rule in hand, which inioyneth the practise of the principal duties in the first place: therefore all careless and ignorant masters of families are here to be warned, to haue speciall care to prouide for the sauing of the soules of all them that liue vnder their gouernment. This also sheweth vs the faults of many students, who setting themselues apart for the work of the ministerie, doe first giue themselues to studie the Fathers and auntient writers, whereas their first principal dutie is, to be soundly instructed in the worde of God, and to ground themselues in the maine points of religion, that they may be able to know what is true, what is false, what is to be done, what is not to be done in all matters, whether they concerne faith, or maners. And when this good foundation is laid, then the foresaid helpes may with good successe be adioyned.

Againe, necessarie workes I call those, which vpon due consideration, are not onelie lawful in themselues, and agreeable to our calling; but also expedient in the doer: for if they be inexpedient, though otherwise lawfull, they are not to be done.

Before I proceede any further, here is a necessarie Question to be handled, Whether the works & actions of a calling done by a man which entreth vnlawfully into that calling be nullities or not, that is, to be reputed of vs as actions not done? I answer: that in things done, there be two kinds of faults: one in the worke, another in the worker. A fault in the worke, is whē the action it selfe is done amisse: and it may be done amisse in substance, or in circumstance; and if the fault be in the substance thereof, it is indeede a nullitie, and must be reputed as not done. Secondly, the fault of the worker is, when an action of a lawfull calling is done by one that is not called lawfully. Now then, when the fault of an action is not in the worke it self, but in the person that worketh it, it is not to be reputed a nullitie, neither to be reuersed as nothing. As for example, one called lawfully to the ministerie, baptiseth infants in the name of the father, and of the virgin Marie: here is a fault in the action done, and that in the substance of baptisme, & therfore here is no baptisme, but rather a prophanation of the ordinance of God. Now put the case further, that baptisme is administred by a man that is called, though not lawfully; I say, if there bee no fault in the action, but onely in the man, that baptisme is not to be reputed a nullitie.

This doctrine is agreed vpon by the cõmon consent of diuines, as also by the laws and orders of kingdomes, as may appeare plainly iu particulars. Tiberius Cæsar a Romane Emperour, inuaded the kingdom of the Iewes, and brought into a Prouince: and thus was he made king of the Iewes, not by lawful means, but by intrusion. For all this, the actions done, and the commandements giuen by him, were the reputed cõmandements of a king, not reuersed by any Iewe, but obeyed of all. For when he gaue commandement that all the worlde, yea the Iewes should be taxed, they yeelded themselues to this cõmandement; yea righteous Ioseph and Marie went to their owne towne to be taxed. Caiphas was honoured as high priest among the Iewes, & though his entrance was by corruption & briberie, yet notwithstanding, the actions done by him in his office, were not esteemed nullities, but actions done. And therfore our Saviour Christ suffered himselfe to be accused, arraigned, & iudged of him: and also was cõtent to come into the temple and worshippe God, according to the manner of the Iewes, vnder Caiphas himselfe. The Scribes and Pharisies that were the Doctours of the Iewes, had not many of them their calling by succession from Aaron, and for iudgement were also in part heretical, holding some things against the foundation, namely iustification by workes, &c. and yet our Saviour Christ, because they sate in Moses chaire, biddes the Church of the Iewes, and his disciples heare them, so far forth as they taught the doctrine of Moses. Whereby it is manifest, that if there be no fault in the worke, the defectiue calling of the works, doth not make a nullity of the actiõ done. For howsoeuer the worker sinnes in his vnlawfull entrance, and in that regard, is not to be approoued, yet the actions in the calling to which he is entred, are the actions of that calling: for though he be called amisse, yet he stands in the roome of one lawfully called. And we are to make difference betwixt him that is called, though vnlawfully, and him that hath no calling at all. For the actions done without calling, are indeed nullities, wheras if there be any calling, though entrance be badly made, it doth not make the action voide. And whosoeuer denieth this ground of truth, ouerturneth the regiment of kingdomes, churches, states, and societies what soeuer.

By this which hath beene said, a question is resolued concerning baptisme: many of our aunce stors heretofore haue beene baptized by Masse-priests, and neuer receiued any baptisme, but in the Church of Rome: now the demand is, whether that baptisme were sufficient or no: and whether they must be rebaptised? I answer thus: the Romish priest is no Minister of God and Christ, but of Antichrist, in that he offereth Christ a reall Sacrifice for the quick and the dead, wherein chiefly stands his office: yet because he hath bin, and is designed by men to baptise, and stander in the roome of a lawful minister, his action is not void: for though he be not a minister lawfully called to baptize, yet is he not a meere priuat man, but he is betweene both, that is, one called, though amisse through ignorance & ouer-sight of men: and consequently, he is one that in the act of baptizing standes in roome of a right and lawfull minister.

Againe, it pleaseth some, carried more by affection then iudgement, to dispute on this maner. There is no right & lawful calling allotted for ministers in the Church of England: therefore there is no sacraments among vs, nor true preaching of the word of God: our Sacraments (say they) are but Sacraments in shew, and the effect of all preaching with vs, is no better than the illusion of the diuell: I answer, be it graunted there is no lawfull calling of Ministers in the Church of England, (which neuertheless to say is both false and wicked) yet will not this follow, that our Sacraments are no Sacraments, and our preaching no preaching, for though men be vnlawfully called, yet their actions be the actions of Ministers, if they be called at all. The preaching of a minister vnlawfully called, may be true preaching, and Sacraments, true Sacraments, else Christ would not haue said to the Scribes & Pharisies, Heare them: whereas they were of other tribes then Leui, and came in often by briberie and like corruption. A bad entrance maketh not the actions done, to be void, and of none effect, if so be, the doer be called to stand in the roome of a right and lawfull agent. And, as good entrance maketh not alwayes the actions good, because, where there is a good entrance into a lawfull calling, there may be an after apostasie: so on the contrarie, the defect of good entrance maketh not a nullitie of ministeriall actions.

Now I come to the second point touching coninuance in a calling, namely, in what manner the actions thereof are to be done. It is not sufficient for a man to doe the proper workes of his calling, but hee must do them in a good and godly manner: and that a man may so doe them, two things are principally required, Holinesse, and Constancie. To doe a worke in Holinesse, the word of God teacheth, that there is required a double Sanctification. The first, of the worker; the second, of the worke and action to bee done. That the worker should be sanctified, it is necessarie for two causes: first, because the person must first please God, before the worke of the person please him. For to the vncleane all things are vncleane; yea, not only their workes, but their mindes and consciences are defiled: & the reason is plaine, for so great is the corruption of our wicked natures, that we defile whatsoeuer thing we lay our hands vnto. If men be not repentant sinners, all the actions which they doe, though good workes in themselues, are very sinnes, and offences before God, in that they proceede not from an vpright heart, neither are done to the glorie of God. Secondly sanctification of our persons is required: because, vnlesse we be borne a newe of water, and the spirit, we can looke for no successe or blessing vpon our labours: it is the righteous mans priuiledge, Whatsoeuer he doth is shall prosper; no man else must looke for this fauour at Gods hand. Righteous Ioseph prospered in all that he did, for the Lord was with him, when he was made ruler ouer the house of Potiphar the Egyptian. And Iehosaphat saith, Beleeue the Lord and his prophets, and thou shalt prosper. While the Arke was in the house of Obed Edom, he prospered and all his house. How much more then shall he prosper, that hath not onely the signe of Gods presence, but God himselfe dwelling in his heart? If it be said, that in experience we finde the vngodly man to prosper as wel as the godly: I answer, the prosperitie of the wicked, is like the Quailes which God did send to the Israelites in the wildernesse, which brought a plague & destruction with them, for they died while the meate was yet in their mouthes. The prosperitie of the wicked serues to their deeper condemnation.

Psal.1.3.

1.Chr.20.20.

Hence we learne, that beeing designed and set a part to any calling, we must first of all from our hearts turne vnto God, from all our sinnes, and vse meanes to become new creatures; because vnlesse wee repent and turne to God, and with constant purpose cleaue vnto him, the best actions of our callings, though we had no other sinnes, shall bee sufficient to condemne vs: considering no worke euer pleased God, till the person of the worker be accepted in his sight. The blind diuinitie of the world is this, that such as walke diligently about their businesse, liue peaceably with all men, and doe no man hurt; haue all things to goe well with them, and God will haue mercie vpon them. These things indeede are good and commendable, but not sufficient: for vnlesse the person that doeth these things goe further, & repent him of his sinnes, and die vnto them by the vertue of the death of Christ, and liue vnto God, all his peaceable and vpright dealing wil in the end proue no better then figge leaues before God. For euen the best workes that can be, are damnable sinnes in the doer, vnlesse he turne vnto God, and be in Christ, in the same field, at the same time, in the same businesse, there is the worke of the oxe, and the worke of a man; now I demand which of these twaine is the better worker? I know the answer wil be, the worke of the man, but the truth is, vnles he be renewed by the grace of God, his labour is worse then the labour of the beast: for the beast in his kinde obeies god, so doth not the vnrepentant sinner. And thus Actions lawfull in themselues, in him become vnlawful, not because they are done, but because they are done in euill manner: euen as the channel is faultie, not because it carries the water, but because it defiles the water.

The second thing required, is sanctification of the worke, or action. This point also must be learned and practised: for it is not sufficient to doe a lawful action, but it must be done in holy manner: for lawfull actions vnlesse they be sanctified, are sins: as may appeare by one and the same action done by two persons. The Publican and the Pharisie goe to gether to pray, they doe both one and the same action, and yet the one for his praier is approued, the other is not; because the one, that is, the Pharisie praied in the pride of his heart and profaned the lawful action of prayer: the publican praied in the humilitie of his heart for the pardon of his sinnes. and his action was not only lawfull in it selfe, but also holy in the doer. And this is the point that must be learned and practised in all the actions of our callings: that they must not only be lawful in themselues, but also holy in regard of vs.

This discouereth the blindnes, and ignorance of most men among vs: which thinke it is sufficient for them, if their actions which they doe, be lawfull. As for example, chapmen thinke they may vse their own libertie in buying and selling, because bargaining is gods ordinance, and thinke it nedelesse to regard in what manner they buie and sell, nay commonly they doe not so much as dreame of this, that they are in such order to perform their actions, that in their doings they may aproue themselues vnto god.

In the sanctification of the workes of our calling two things are required: The word and praier: 1. Tim. 4. for that which Paul sets downe of the vse of meates, and drinkes, must be extended to all the ordinances of God whatsoeuer. I will speake of both these in order. And first of all, the word of god must be our rule and square, whereby we are to frame and fashion all our actions; and according to direction receiued thence, we must doe the things we doe, or leaue them vndone. Dauid a King had no doubt a wise and Godly counsell, and he himselfe was a man of great wisdome, beeing a prophet of God: and yet he saith, that the word and the lawes of God are his Councellours. And that which the Lord commandeth the king, that sitting vpon his throne he should haue the booke of the law before him, to do all things herein: the same must euery subiect likewise in his particular place and standing performe. Peter fished all night and caught nothing, in the morning Christ came & bade him cast his net into the sea, who presently, though discouraged with bad successe before, saith, Lord, at thy word I will doe it. And thus much should euery man daily say in his place, that he wil doe the workes of his calling at Gods commandement, and according to his word. When the people of Israel came out of Egypt, and went into Canaan, a type of the kingdome of heauen, in their whole iourney, they were led by a piller of a cloud in the daie, and by a piller of fire in the night: when the cloud stood still, they stood still, and they were to follow it which way soeuer it went, forward or backward. Nowe looke as the Israelites went to the earthly Canaan by following the pillar of fire, and the cloud: so must we as it were goe blindfold, & suffer our selues to be ruled by the word of God in the workes of our calling, though we seeme in reason to goe backward: what it doth command, that must we doe; and what it forbiddeth, that must wee eschew. Many things might bee rehearsed out of Gods word for our better direction in particular actions, but I will reduce them all to two heades. For some directions serue for the eschewing of vice, and some other for the practise of vertue. The vices to be eschewed in the works of mens callings, are especially two: Couetousnes, and Iniustice. Couetousnes is a notorious vice, whereby all men almost apply their callings, and the workes thereof, to the gathering of wealth and riches: this is one of the head and master sinnes of the world, and from it a sea of euils flow both into Church and common wealth. There be many that haue good affections, and receiue the word with ioy: yet like the thornie ground they are choaked with the cares of this world. Now then, considering Couetousnes is so vile a sinne, let such as be placed in any calling, take heede of it, and be carefull lest it take place in their heartes, and drawe them to many other euils. Saint Paul saith, they that will be rich, that is, such as referre the labour of their callings to the gathering of wealth, fall into many and grieuous temptations, and so consequently into damnation: and therefore he addeth, that Couetousnes is the roote of all euill. It may be obiected, that vnbeleefe is the first particular sinne that euer came into the world, and consequently, that couetousnes is not the roote of all euill: I answer, that vnbeleefe is a mother sinne, whence all other sinnes arise, yet couetousnes also is a roote in an other respect; because, as the roote giueth sappe and nourishment to all the branches, so doth couetousnesse to euery other sinne whatsoeuer: where it raignes, no sinne dies or decaies. In the bodie when the spleene swells, all other parts decay and consume: euen so, when the heart swells with desire of riches, all the graces of God consume and fade away. Iudas no doubt had many good things in him: he forsooke all to be a disciple of Christ, he preached the Gospell to the Iewes as the rest of the disciples; he wrought miracles and cast out diuels; nay which is more, he was one of Christs owne familie, & as it were a steward: he bare the bagge and disposed of all things; and yet at the last, because he suffered this damnable sinne of couetousnes to preuaile within his owne heart, he condescended to sell his master for thirtie pieces of siluer. And thus all good things in him came to naught; for presently vpon this fact, he went and desperatly hanged himselfe: and with such violence cast himselfe downe, that his bowels gushed out. And thus will it fall out with all such as nourish this sinne, & giue place vnto it, though they bee neuer so furnished with know-lodge, zeale, and commendable life. If it be ſuffered to preuaile, it will bring them at laſt to fearefull and lamentable ende. In a common familie, it is a great diſorder to ſee the maſter play the ſeruant, and the ſeruant to doe the office of the maſter: much more then it is a diſorder in the Church of God, which is the familie of Chriſt, that men ſet their minides on the worlde, and make themſelues ſeruants of riches, that ſhould rather ſerue them. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; then much more riches were made for man, and not man for riches. Againe, couetous and worldly deſires are againſt the order of nature: for when we come into the world, we bring nothing with vs, and while we liue here Nature is contented with little: and when we die, we muſt carrie nothing with vs, but a coffin, or a winding-ſheete, why then ſhould we ſet our mindes ſo much on earthly things? Againe, the gate of heauen is ſtraight, and the way narrowe, ſo as we muſt be faine to ſtruggle and creepe before we can make any entrance, and denie all that we inioy. Now when in the workes of our calling we intend onely to get wealth, we doe as it were ſet barres on heauen gates, loade our ſelues with burdēs, which make vs vnable to paſſe. Therfore ſpecial care muſt be had, that our time and calling be not ſpent in gathering earthly treaſures. And euery man in his calling may remedie this vice, and the practiſe thereof, by doing theſe two duties. Firſt, he muſt reſtraine his affection from the world. Secondly, he muſt turne and diſpoſe it to better things. For the firſt, our affection is like a ſea, which being ſuffered to paſſe his bankes, ouerflowes the whole Countrey: and therefore to keepe our deſires in compaſſe, euery man in his place and calling muſt labour for two things: firſt, for contentation; ſo ſaith the holy Ghoſt, Let not your conuerſation be in couetouſneſſe, but be content with that which you haue. This contentation is the eſteeming of that particular eſtate wherein God hath placed vs, to be the beſt of all eſtates for vs that can be. A notable example of this vertue we haue in the Apoſtle Paul: who had learned in whatſoeuer ſtate he was, therewith to be content. And therfore he ſaith, I can be abaſed, and I can abound, euerywhere and in all things I am inſtructed both to be full, and to be hungrie, to abound, and to haue want. This which Paul practiſed, is ſoone ſaid, but not ſo ſoone done. Nowe that we for our parts may after his example be content in euery eſtate of life, we are to performe theſe duties. Firſt, we muſt labour to ſee a particular prouidence of God, and to haue experience hereof in all things that come to paſſe. In health, wealth, and liberty, all men acknowledge a Prouidence; but in the contrarie eſtates, of ſickneſs, bondage, and pouertie, &c. the blind world ſeeth no prouidence, nor goodneſſe of God, it ſhuts vp all the goodneſſe of god in health and wealth. But ſuch as profeſſe the knowledge of the true God, muſt better acquaint themſelues with this prouidence and goodnes of God, and labour to feele it, as wel in ſickneſs as in health, in want as in wealth, in perſecution as in libertie & peace. And when we can in ſome good meaſure doe this, experience of diuine prouidence will breede & bring forth contentation. An example of this we haue in Iob, who in the midſt of his miſerie ſaid, The Lord giueth, and the Lord taketh away, now bleſſed be the name of the Lord: let vs in theſe words marke his contentation, and the cauſe thereof: namely his perſwaſion, that God himſelfe did lay that affliction vpon him: in which perſwaſion beeing ſetled he giues thankes to God. Secondly, we muſt labour to be reſolued euen in conſcience with Dauid, that God is our portion, that is, that God the father is our father, Chriſt Ieſus our Redeemer, and the Holy Ghoſt our ſanctifier and comforter: herein we muſt ſettle our conſciences: and then may we ſay as Dauid ſaid, I haue a goodly heritage: and we ſhal find our minds more ſetled and contented, with any eſtate good or bad that befals vs by the will and appointment of God. Al men are wel pleaſed with health, libertie, wealth, & if we could be able in trueth to ſay, the Lord is my portion, we ſhould be as wel pleaſed with ſickneſſe, bondage and pouertie, And thus are we to inure our ſelues to contentation.

Pſalme 16.

Now for the better reſtrayning of our affections from the world, two things muſt be done: firſt of all, we muſt in this life reſolue our ſelues to ſeeke for no more, but things that be neceſſarie and ſufficient for vs and ours. For to ſeeke for aboūdance is not laweful, neither dooth it ſtand with good conſcience, which I proone on this manner. We may ſeeke for that which we may pray for: but we haue no warrant to pray for aboundance: for things neceſſarie & ſufficient, we haue warant to pray; as Agar doeth, Giue me neyther pouertie nor riches feede me with foode conuenient for me. And Chriſt taught vs to pray on this manner, Giue vs this day our daily bread: that is, bread for our ſubſtances, or ſuch bread as is ſufficient to preſerue our liues. And S. Paul plainely condemnes the deſire of riches, that is, of things more then neceſſary: affirming that ſuch as deſire to be rich, fall into the ſnares of the deuil. Some haue obſerued 12. wonders in the Manna of the Iewes. 1. The children of Iſrael were fedde with it 40. yeares. 2. To the godly it taſted according to euery one his deſire. 3. To the vngodly it was loathſome. 4. A Gomar of it ſufficed all ſtomacks. 5. Whether men gathered more or leſſe, they had full meaſure, neither more nor leſſe, that is, a Gomar ful. 6. Two Gomars full before the Sabbath, on other daies but one Gomar full. 7. It fel euery daie, but on the Sabbath. 8. It melted in the ſunne, and was hardened in the fire. 9. It was kept many yeares in the Arke vnputrified. 10. Beeing preſerued til the morrowe it putrified, except on the Sabbath. 11. He that gathered leaſt had his Gomar ful. 12. He that gathered moſt had but his Gomar. Now by the moſt of theſe wonders, and ſpecially in that Manna laid vp till the next day putrified, and that euery Iewe had his competent meaſure, were his labour more or leſſe, we are taught that the ſeeking, and deſire of aboundance, pleaſeth not God. The Lord commandeth the king by expreſſe lawe, that he ſhould not multiply his horſes, nor his ſiluer and gold: it is not here the intent of God to barre Kings from ſeeking for things ſufficient to maintaine their kingdomes; but to moderate their affections, that they ſeeke not for that aboundance, which may ſerue to maintaine, not one, but two or three kingdomes. If God ſend aboundance of things more then neceſſarie to Princes, they may receiue them at the hand of God, and they are to be thankful therefore: but kings themſelues may not ſeeke for more, then which is ſufficient for their eſtates.

Deu. 17. 16, 17

Nowe if this be the dutie of the Prince, then much more it is the dutie of the people: and ſubiects in kingdoms ſhould content themſelues, if they haue as much as will prouide them foode and rayment, and thus much lawfully may they ſeek for. As for example, a maſter of a family, may with good conſcience ſeeke for that meaſure of wealth, as ſhall in Chriſtian wiſdome be thought meete to maintaine him and his familie with conuenient food and raiment: hauing obtained thus much, a pawſe muſt be made, and he may not proceede further, to inlarge his eſtate, by ſeeking for that aboundance that may well ſerue his owne houſe, & a ſecond, or many families more. It may be heere demaunded howe we are to iudge what is ſufficient for any man? I anſwer, we muſt eſtimate ſufficiencie, not by the affection of couetous men, for then nothing ſhall euer be ſufficient: but we are to proceed by the ſame rule in this matter, as in like caſe of apparel. Becauſe the word of God hath giuen no particular rule, how euery man or woman ſhould be attired: therefore our rule muſt be the example and iudgement of the godly, and graue men and women of our eſtate and order. So likewiſe for a ſufficiencie in things of this life, our rule muſt be the common iudgement & practiſe of the moſt godly, frugal, and wiſe men, with whome we liue: and that which they in good conſcience iudge ſufficient and neceſſarie for euery man, according to his place and calling, that is to be eſteemed ſufficient. And here we muſt remember, not to make one rule for all men: that things ſufficient for one ſhould be ſufficient for all: but euery man muſt be meaſured according to his condition and degree. For as one man is aboue another in degree, more or leſſe, ſo to one is more required for ſufficiencie then to another. But the couetous man may except, and ſay, euery gift of God may be ſought for: But aboundance is the bleſsing and gift of God; and therefore it may be ſought for. I anſwer, we muſt diſtinguiſh the bleſsings and gifts of God; ſome of them are ſimply bleſsings; and ſome onely in reſpect. Thoſe which are ſimply bleſsings, are ſuch gifts and graces of God, as are not only bleſsings in themſelues, but alſo in euery man that hath them: and ſuch are the gifts of faith, of repentance, of the feare of God, and the loue of God and man. The ſecond kind of bleſsings which be in reſpect, are ſuch as are good in themſelues, but not good to euery perſon that hath them: ſuch are riches and aboundance of worldly things. Thus then I anſwer, Euery bleſsing of God may be ſought for, if ſo bee I knowe it is a bleſsing to me: therefore I may lawfully ſeeke for faith, and repentance, & al ſuch gifts of god, as are ſimply bleſsings.

But

But wee may not seeke for such thinges, as are onely blessings in some respect, vnlesse we can say they are blessings to vs: a sword or a knife are good things in themselues, and haue their vse: but they are not good in the hand of a child, or of a mad man, because they may thereby hurt themselues. And so are riches good in themselues, but not for euery man: and therefore no further to be sought, than we knowe they are good and profitable for vs.

Secondly, it is alleadged, when men doe seek for abundance, they finde it, and God woulde not giue it them, vnlesse it were a blessing: because whatsoeuer is of God, is good. I answer, first of all, that God in giuing aboundance to the couetous man, is void of all blame; for the question is, of the mans seeking and receiuing, not of Gods giuing. Againe, when God grants aboundance to some that seeke it, he giues a blessing, but like to the quailes which hee gaue to the Israelits, that brought a plague with them: for God oftentimes giueth temporall blessings in his wrath. Thirdly, it may be alleadged, that God hath made a promise to euery righteous man, that he shal receiue aboundance: riches and treasures shall be in his house (saith Dauid) and therefore he may lawfully seeke for riches. I answer two waies: first, that by riches in the word of God is often vnderstoode, things necessarie, and not aboundance. Secondly, if riches be taken for abundance; I answer, that promises concerning temporall blessings must be vnderstoode with exception of the crosse and chastisement: and therefore the meaning of the Psalmist is, that riches shal be giuen to the righteous, vnlesse it bee the will of God to exercise and trie him by want and pouertie. And that this place must thus be vnderstood, it appeares plainely, Hebr. 11. where some are commended, because they indured pouerty by faith, wandring to and fro in sheep-skins and goat-skins. And Lazarus when he died, was receiued into Abrahams bosome, though in his life time he had not so much as crummes from the rich mans Table, to feede his bodie. Now then, if the promise were absolute, euery man might seeke for abundance, and euery beleeuer should haue it: but seeing it is conditionall, and we are vncertaine, whether it will please God to trie vs by want or not therefore we may not seeke for abundance. Fourthly, it may be alleadged, that euery man must doe good to the Church and common wealth, and therefore hee must seeke for plentie, that hee may haue wherewith to doe this good. I answer, we must doe good indeed, but yet within the compasse of our estates and callings, and according to our abilities; for God accepteth euery man according to that he hath, and not according to that he hath not.

Lastly, it is alleadged, that there be examples of righteous men, as Abraham, Iacob, and Salomon, that abounded with riches. I answer, they got not their riches by seeking aboundance: they were made rich by Gods sending, not by their owne seeking. So may any man accept abundance, when it is the pleasure of God to bestowe it vpon them, while they walke in their callings. And it can not be shewed, that either Abraham, Iacob, or Salomon, wanting riches, sought for them, but commonly the couetous man layes plottes howe to get thus much for himselfe, and thus much for his children, so many hundreds, and so many thousands: whereas Iacob asked of God, but food and raiment. Therefore whatsoeuer is laide to the contrary, the trueth is, that no man can with good conscience seeke for things more than necessarie. And this one thing must be as a corde vnto vs, to restrain our affections from the world: that God hath giuen a commandement, that we must seeke onely for things, that may be in Christian wisedome esteemed necessarie.

Now let vs proceede to search how wee may turne our affections from the worlde to better things. The way is this. As the cholericke persons that desire to restraine their hastinesse, must turne it against themselues for their owne sinnes: Euen so the worldling that desires to turne his grippie minde from earthly things, must sette his minde on the kingdome of heauen. And for the doing of this, two things are especially required: first, we must indeuour to haue the eies of our mindes inlightened by Gods spirite, that wee may see how happy the estate is that God hath prepared in his owne Kingdome for them that loue him. Thus Paule Ephes. 1.18. prayed for the Ephesians, That the eyes of their vnderstanding might be inlightened, that they might knowe what the hope was of their calling, and what the riches of his glorious inheritance is in the Saintes. The beast that goes in a barne commen, if once it set eie on a better pasture, will, without further delay, ouer hedge and ditch, and all, til it come into the saide pasture. Now that which is nature, should much more be in them that are partakers of the grace of Christ. Therfore although like moales we haue our heads alwaies rooting vnder the earth: yet if we do by grace, but cast our eyes to the ioyes of heauen, we cannot but turn our harts from the loue of this present worlde. A notable example of this wee haue in Moses, who when he might haue bin heire to Pharaoes daughter, refused honour, esteeming the rebuke of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt: because he had respect to the recompence of reward. Thus God in mercie opened his eies, and made him see the happie estate of the kingdome of heauen, and thereby caused him to leaue and forsake the honour and wealth of Egypt. Hebr. 11.

Secondly, we must indeuour to haue in our hearts, a sense and feeling of the want of Christ, and to see our damnable estate in our selues, & how greatly we stand in need of the blood of Christ to wash awaie our sinnes. Beholde a notable meanes to make any man (though he were couetousnesse it selfe) to turne his heart from the pelfe of this world, & to seeke wholly after spirituall and heauenly things. For the consideration of our owne miserie in our selues, & a liuely sense of the need we haue of Christ wil make vs hunger after him and his righteousnes, aboue al things in the world. We finde by experience that many are indued with good gifts of knowlege, of ioy in the word of God, of zeale, &c. who neuertheless in their callings bee ouercome with this foule sinne of couetousnesse: and the reason is, because they were neuer thorowly touched with any sense or feeling of their neede they had of Christ: their hearts are dead in sin and corruption, and they neuer knew the vilenesse of their own natures, and in what extreame miserie they are out of Christ. And if they might be brought to a feeling of their vnworthinesse, and made to hunger after him, they would then beginne to say with Saint Paul, I esteeme all things as dounge in regard of Christ. And with Dauid, As the Hart braieth after the riuers of waters, so thirsteth my soule after thee, O Lord. This is the counsell of Christ, First seeke the kingdome of God and his righteousnesse, Matth. 6. 33. Wee must in our selues be as the wounded man that lay in the way, that Christ Iesus the true Samaritane may come by vs to supple our woundes, and to powre his owne pretious blood into our soules. For as Marie saide, God filles the hungry with good things, but the rich he sends empte away. And thus shall we be able by Gods grace to turne our affections set on the world, to heauenly things. Thus also we see how to walke in our callings with good conscience, and to auoyde the sinne of Couetousnesse.

Nowe I come to the second sinne of iniustice, whereby men abuse their callings, to the hurt and hindrance of others, either publikely or priuately. Example of this wee haue in Zaccheus the Publican, who enriched himselfe by forged cauillation. Now this sinne spreades it selfe as largely through all degrees and states of men, as the former sin of couetousnesse: as will appeare if wee doe but take a view of such as be the principall callings. And first to beginne with Emperours and Princes, by whome is practised the greatest vniustice that can be, as they are in the greatest callings: for many of them content not themselues with their owne dominions, but encroach either by fraude or by violence on their neighbour-kingdomes, and for the increasing of their estates, spare not to shed riuers of blood. As at this day, the Turke in Asia, and the Spaniard also, who seekes by all meanes to make himselfe the Emperour of the West parts of the world. Like iniustice appeares in the calling of such magistrates as vse to take bribes, to respect mens persons in executing of iustice and iudgement. Iniustice also creepes into the chaire of Moses, when the worde of God the food of mens soules is with-held, as also when it is corrupted, partly by the poyson of mens errours, partely by the deuises of mans braine. Iniustice in the calling of the Lawyer, is to take larger fees, then statute and conscience wil alow: and to make delay of suites, yea to delay them, not from morning til night, as Iethro said to Moses, but from terme to terme, yea from yeare to yere, for the increasing of their gaine. In the calling of the Physitian, it is iniustice, to minister physicke to the bodies of men, that is learned out of bookes without anie experience, also to minister Physicke vpon the bare inspection of the vrine, which by the best learned is iudged to be insufficient, and oftentimes deceiptfull: yea to prescribe drunkennesse and fornication for the cure of some diseases: and to minister physicke to parties absent, vpon the erecting of the figure at the time of the interrogation. In the calling of the Merchant & trades-man, there is false weights, and false measures, diuers weights and diuers measures; ingrosing, mingling, changing, setting a glosse on wares by powdering, starching, blowing, darke shoppes, glozing, smoothing, lying, swearing, & all manner of badde dealing. In the patrone, there is presentation giuen, but with secret condition of hauing his owne tythes, or some other fleece out of the liuing. In the land-lord, there is racking of rents, taking immoderate fines, incloſing of groundes that haue laien common time out of mind: and the cauſe is want of ſobriety and temperance in diet and apparell. In the husbandman and corne-monger, there is exceeding iniuſtice, in hording vp graine till the time of further aduantage: & in taking whatſoeuer they can get for their owne, though it be to the ſhedding of the blood of the poore. In the calling of the Printer, which ſhould ſerue for the ſpeciall good of the Church and common wealth, there is exceeding iniuſtice done to both, by the publiſhing of libels, and hereticall bookes, whereby errours are ſpread abroad, as alſo by publiſhing vnchaſt, immodeſt, and vnprofitable writings. And in the calling of the Booke-ſeller there is like iniuſtice, in that they ſell all bookes, good and badde, of truth and falſhood, and that hand ouer head, without any regard, to euery one that commeth. For at this day, in England, a papiſt may furniſh himſelfe almoſt with all kind of bookes of his owne hereſie, and that in the ſhoppes of Proteſtants. A thing to be thought vpon, and that which greatly hinders the good of this our Church. Thus ouer all eſtates and callings the canker of Iniuſtice hath ſpread it ſelfe, ſo as we may take vp the complaint of the prophet Micah, It is hard to finde a righteous man: euery man laies a net for his brother, and ſeeketh his hurt, his blood, and viter vndoing. This is ſo plaine, that he which hath but halfe an eye may ſee it. Yet the vniuſt man wanteth not excuſes, but ſaith, The world is naught, and therefore they that will liue in the world muſt doe as other men doe. Anſ. This indeede is the blinde reaſon of vngodly men: but Saint Paul giueth another rule, and biddes vs walke vnblameably in this preſent world, as lights in the middeſt of a crooked and peruerſe generation. And though the whole world ſhould giue themſelues to the practiſe of iniuſtice, yet he that is the child of God, muſt carrie himſelfe in his calling in ſuch manner, that he may be a light to them with whome he liueth. Other more blinde and ſhamelelle, for the maintaining of their Iniuſtice, alleadge the example and practiſe of our Sauiour Chriſt, in ſending for another mans Aſſe and the colt, when he went to Ieruſalem. But who doth not ſee the notorious abuſe of this place of Scripture? For our Sauiour Chriſt did this as Lord, not onely of the beaſt, but alſo of the owner. And therefore when he ſent his Diſciples, at the ſame time he inclined the heart of the owner, to be willing to let them goe: ſhewing thereby himſelfe to be the Lord, that hath the hearts of all men in his hand, and conſequently the gouernour of all things elſe. Other allegations for the defence of iniuſtice are of no moment. Now then, we muſt enter into examination of all the workes of our callings, and finding what ſtands not with equitie and iuſtice we are to forſake it. And the better to perſwade vs hereunto, theſe reaſons may be vſed. Firſt of all, it is Gods commandement, that euery man ſhould deale iuſtly in the workes of his calling: as Paul ſaith to Titus, The grace of God that bringeth ſaluation vnto all men hath appeared, and teacheth vs, that we ſhould denie vngodlyneſſe and worldly luſts, and that we ſhould liue ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent world. Againe, Let no man defraud or oppreſſe his brother in anye thing. Now then, if we haue beene faultie in this kinde heretofore, let vs now beginne to make conſcience of this commandement. Secondly, we muſt conſider with our ſelues, that ſo long as we practiſe iniuſtice in our particular calling, all our worſhip and ſeruice of God in prayer and thankſgiuing, in hearing the word, and receiuing the Sacraments, is an abomination vnto the Lord. Hereupon he ſaith to the Iewes, I abhorre your Sabbaths and new moones: and the reaſon is, becauſe their hands were full of blood. Againe, the Lorde profeſſeth that the ſacrifices offered vnto him by the Iewes, were, as if a man ſhould cut off a dogges necke, and offer it him in a ſacrifice, becauſe they liued in their wickednelſe. Thirdly, they that practiſe iniuſtice haue the curſe of God to follow them. Paul ſaith, that the vniuſt man ſhall neuer enter in the kingdome of God. And Moſes ſaith, that they which vſe falſe weights are an abomination to the Lord. Looke then how many practiſes of Iniuſtice be vſed in any mans calling, ſo many barres and ſtoppes there be to keepe him from the kingdome of God. Lastly, let vs marke

2.Cor.5.11 what S. Paul saith of himselfe, that, In all things he had a care to please God, in consideration of the terrour of the Lord: and that is, as if he had said; I know in the last day I must come to the barre of Gods iudgement; there be tried all the things I doe, & therefore doe I endeuour to keepe a good conscience in all the workes of my calling. And in the very same manner should euery one of vs stirre vp our selues to the practise of iustice, and to the auoiding of bad dealing in our callings: for at the last day, the badde practises of euery man shall be made manifest, and we shall be iudged according to that we haue wrought when we liued in the flesh. Thus much for the two vices to be auoided in euery mans calling.

The vertues which the worde of God requireth of vs in the practise of our callings are many, but two especially: Faith, and Loue. By faith, I meane not only sauing faith, but another particular faith arising of it, whereby we must be perswaded, that our particular calling and the workes thereof, are pleasing vnto God: & that hee will giue a blessing vnto them for Christs Hebr.11. sake. And whatsoeuer is not of this faith, is sin. When Noah is saide to build an arke by faith, we must not only vnderstand iustifying faith, but withall, another particular faith flowing from it: whereby he was perswaded, that the building of the Arke was a worke acceptable vnto God, and that he should find a blessing therein. And without this particular faith, no man can please God in any calling. Now there is a relation betweene faith, and the word: where faith is, there must be a word of God; and where the word is not, there can be no faith. And therefore that the actions of our callings may be done in faith, we must haue a word whereon to build our faith. And this word is twofold: A word of commaundement, and a word of promise. The Commaundement is that word of God, whereby the actions of euery mans calling, are either expressely commanded, or at least approoued. The promise, is a particular word, either directly propounded, or by iust consequent to be gathered out of the Scriptures: whereby God hath promised to blesse the labours and works of our callings. And for knowledge of both these, must euery one labour in his place. The Magistrate must haue a commandement from God in his word that must authorize him to draw the sword: and a promise of blessing and protection, when vpon good cause he drawes the sword indeede. The like must the Minister haue for his calling, and the man of trade for his. And he that hath not both a commandement and promise, cannot possibly doe the worke of his calling in faith.

Now if any shall thinke this strange and hard, let them consider what is done in townes and corporations. Men of the same trades, haue their Wardens and Masters of their companies, yea decrees and ordinances, to which they bind and conforme themselues. Now if men be content to bind themselues to their owne ordinances, shall they not much more yeeld themselues to the commandements of God, and walke in their callings according to them? Againe, when men thus liue by faith, hauing regard to Gods commandements, it causeth them to doe their actions in obedience. And when they shal by the same faith rest vpon the promise of God, it will make them cast their workes on the Lord, and free them from carking, and distrustfull cares, which pull the heart in peces. And by this meanes also, they shall ease their minds, when they lie vnder the crosses, that are incident vnto euery calling since the fall of Adam: for in this promise shall we behold the blessing and goodnes of god in the middest of our troubles. As the word that Moses cast into the bitter waters, made them sweete: so the promise of God, viewed by the eye of faith, sweetneth the troubles and crosses of our callings.

The second vertue is loue. Faith which is alone in iustification, goeth not alone in life and conuersation, but loue and faith are both ioyned together, for faith worketh by loue. And yet they are not one and the same vertue, but differ in their actions: as the man that serueth a mason vpon the ladder, hath vse of both his hands, with one he staieth himselfe, with the other he reacheth vp his burden: so hath euery man in his calling, the vse of two spirituall hands, the hand of faith, and the hand of loue: the hand of faith, keepeth him in compasse, and staieth the minde vpon the word of God; and the hand of loue reacheth out it selfe to others, in duties of loue towardes God and man; and thus faith and loue differ. Now the practise of loue stands in two things. First we must referre all the works of our callings, to the honor, praise, and glorie of God: and here is the princi-pall thing wherin loue consists. And therfore Paul saith notably of himself, The loue of Christ constraineth me, signifying therby, that whereas Christ had so loued him, as to shedde his blood for him, that very loue did constraine him to referre all that hee coulde doe, to the honour and praise of Christ. Now looke what Paul heere saith, the same must euery particular man in his calling say of himselfe: that the loue of Christ in sheding his blood for him, constraineth him to doe all thinges for the honour and praise of his name. The second duetie of loue is, to apply the workes and duties, and labours of our callings, to the good of the Church and Commonwealth, and the place whereof wee are members. Thus Paul saieth to the Galatians, Doe service one to an other by loue. And this is done when we imploy our labor, for the good of our brethren: and thus briefly wee see, how loue is put in practise.

2. Corinth. 5.

If we shall examine our selues by these two points, it will appeare, that most men come short of their duties: for whereas it is the property of vnfained loue, not to seeke his owne things, but the good of others: the common practise of men is to employ their paines for themselues, according to the common saying; Euery man for himselfe, and God for vs all. Now are the euill dayes, wherein men are louers of themselues. The mooving cause almost in euery man that causeth him to doe the duties of his calling, is the respect of priuate benefit. It is hard to finde a man that labours in his calling vpon loue, to the glorie of God, and the good of his brethren. Thus we see how the worde of God giues direction for the holy vse of our callings.

The second meanes to sanctifie our callings, and the woorkes thereof, is Prayer. This prayer is that, whereby wee do not onely pray vnto GOD for the pardon of our sinnes, and for the supply of such graces as concerne life eternal, but particular, for a blessing vpon the labours of our callings; whose beginning must be with praier, and in due season end with thankesgiuing. The commandement to this purpose is plaine, Whatsoeuer ye doe in word or in deed, doe all in the name of the Lorde Iesus, giuing thankes to God. The meaning is, that when we enterprise any busines, either in speech or action, wee must first call on God for his blessing, and giue him thankes in the end. Dauid saith, Except the Lorde builde the house, they labour in vaine that builde it: and, except the Lord keepe the citie, the watchman keepes the watch in vaine. If Paul before hee tooke shipping prayed on the shoare, then much more must wee doe it, in the maine and weighty works of our calings. Parents in their families teach their children to say, Father I pray you blesse mee, Mother I pray you blesse me: Well, Gods church is his familie, and men that liue therein are the children of God: hee is the father and the master of that familie: therefore let this practise of earthly parents teach vs, when we begin the actions of our callings, to goe to our heauenly Father for his blessings. This we must remember to practise, and so shal we sanctify the works of our callings.

Col. 3. 17.

Psalme 128

The second thing required, in doing the workes of a mans calling, in a good manner, & which serues also for a good continuance in the calling, is Constancie. And it is nothing else, but a perseuerance in good duties; which is the more needfull, because it is no commendation for vs, to make choice of a good and fit calling, and to enter into it, vnlesse we goe through-stitch in the duties thereof. For euen as the souldier in the field must not chaunge his place, wherein hee is placed by the Generall, but must abide by it, to the venting of his life: so must the Christian continue and abide in his caling, without change or alteration. There is a certaine lightnesse in the nature of man, whereby it commeth to passe, that many like better of other mens callings, than of our owne: and heerevppon are mooued vpon euery light occasion to alter their callings. But in the text in hand, the holy-Ghost meetes with this lightnes, by commaunding euery man to continue constant in doing the duties of his particular callings; Let euery man abide in that vocation wherein hee was called. And wee must be carefull to auoyd three lets of Constancie: Ambition, Enuy, Impatience. Ambition is a vice, whereby any man thinking better of himselfe, than there is cause hee should, becomes malecontent with his particular calling, and seeketh for himselfe an higher place, and a better estate. An example of this Ambition we haue in our first parents; who by Sathans allurement became malecontent with that estate wherin they were created, and sought to attaine to the condition of God himselfe. And this sinne of theirs cleaueth fast to the nature of euerie man, and by it wee are easily carried to a dislike of our condition. Thus Absolom through Ambition, was mooued to seeke his fathers kingdom, iudging baſely of his preſent eſtate; for out of naturall ſelfe-loue ſprings Ambition. And for the better redreſsing of this vice in our ſelues, euerie man muſt enter into conſideration of his owne eſtate: we muſt bethinke our ſelues, that in reſpect of our bodies, wee are but duſt and aſhes, and to duſt we muſt returne againe: that in reſpect of the diſpoſition of our hearts, altogether ſet vpon ſinne, wee are farre more wretched than anie other creatures; and alſo, that of our ſelues, wee haue not any ſufficiencie for the doing of the leaſt and ſmalleſt dueties of the baſeſt calling in the world: for of our ſelues wee are not ſufficient to thincke one good thought, much leſſe to performe a good duetie acceptable to God, in any calling whatſoeuer. And therefore we muſt conſider with our ſelues, that in our particular callings wee are but as weake inſtruments in the hand of the Lord, who is the principall worker and agent. Theſe and like meditations might mooue vs to contentation in the calling in which god hath placed vs.

The ſecond impediment to conſtancie is Enuie, which is a pining away of the heart when wee ſee others placed in better callings and conditions than our ſelues. This is a common ſinne, and it is the cauſe of much diſſention in the commonwealth. It is one of Machiauel his pollicies, to hold it neceſſarie in a commonwealth, that men of ſundry degrees and callings ſhould enuie and maligne each other. But contrariwiſe it is a manifeſt hindrance to conſtancie in good dueties, and hurtfull both to Church and common-wealth. And for the better redreſsing of this fault, we are to cõſider, that the greateſt callings that be, are not ordained for the maintenance of pride, and for the priuate benefit of men, but for the common good. Secondly, that ſuch as are placed in the greateſt callings, haue the greateſt charges and therefore are to yeeld vnto God the greateſt accompt.

The third impediment of conſtancie is impatience, which is a diſquietnes of mind, ariſing from the continuall tronbles that are incident to all callings, ſpecially when menne are not able to beare them, nor to brooke the iniuries that are commonlie done vnto them in word or deed. This very ſinne maketh many a man to leaue his place. Such as goe to ſea, for their delight make choice of faire & calme dayes; afterwards being ſicke, yea toſſed with winde and weather, and in ſome danger of their liues, they wiſh themſelues on land againe, beeing grieued they euer came on ſhippeboord; profeſsing if they come to land againe neuer to come on ſea any more: Euen ſo doth it fare with many men both in Church and Commonwealth: They take a liking of this or that calling: they enter into it, hoping for pleaſure, wealth, and approbation of men: now afterward finding themſelues diſappointed of their expectation, and to walke in callings with many troubles and diſcomforts, hereupon they become impatient, and either doe indeede, or greatly wiſh to leaue their calings. Now to remedy this vice, wee muſt reſolue to goe on, to doe the dueties of our callings, to go through-ſtitch in all croſſes or calamities that may befal vs any way: arming our ſelues with all meete and neceſſarie patience. Thus Chriſt commanded his diſciples, to poſſeſſe their ſoules with patience. And Paul chargeth the Philippians, to let their patient and equall mindes bee knowne to all men. The ſurgeon that is to cut his patient, goes on to launch and to woorke his cure, though his patient crie neuer ſo much: ſo muſt wee in our particular callings goe on with courage and conſtancie, to doe the dueties thereof, for the glorie of God, and the good of men, though there be neuer ſo many lets and impediments to hinder vs: And, as Paul ſaieth, to paſſe through good report and bad report, through ſhame and rebuke.

And that we may thus conſtantly proceede in all good dueties with all patience, we muſt often remember, that the duties of any lawfull calling, be it neuer ſo baſe, are accepted and approoued of God. Our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe complaineth on this manner, I haue laboured in vaine, I haue ſpent my ſtrength in vaine. Here we ſee the little ſucceſſe that the head and perfect doctour of the Church had in his callings: but let vs ſee, how doth he comfort himſelfe? ſurely thus in the words following, But my worke is with my God: that is, howſoeuer mẽ ſubmit not themſelues to my doctrine, yet my father approoueth it. It was a thing that troubled S. Paul, that his labour in the miniſterie did not turne to the good of all, but was to ſome, the ſauour of death to death: yet he comforts himſelfe with this, that alwayes to God it was a ſweete ſmelling ſauour; and by the ſame conſideratiõ of Gods approbation, we ſhould arme our ſelues with patience, that we may with good conſcience goe on in good duties to the Eſay 49.

the end. Thus much of the three impediments of constancie.

To proceede yet further: Constancie heere commaunded, must be vnderstoode with three things: with helpes, vacations, changes. Touching helpes, the ordinaunce of GOD is for the better continuaunce of callings, that customes and tribute be payd to Magistrates; necessary stipends, tythes, and dues to Ministers of the woorde: and Moses, Deuter. 15. 7. saith, that all such as doe the offices of their callings diligently, and for all this grow to decay, wanting the blessing of God vpon their labours, must be helped by lending freely, by forgiuing of debts, and other like curtesies. Let hard hearted men thinke vpon this, that wil not in such cases lend freely, but prey on such persons till they haue sucked their bones. These are the bane and plague of a common wealth: these are they that make beggars and vagabonds. For where there is no free lending, there many a man goes to wracke. Vacation is to surceasse from doing the duetie of a particular calling for some time or space: and it hath his warrant from the word of God, which alloweth vacations in three respectes. Fitst for religion sake, which is the principal vacation of all, and it is commended in the fourth commaundement, Remember the Sabbath day, that is, the day of rest, or of vacation, to keepe it holy. And here euery man is bound in conscience before God, to surceasse from the duties of his calling on the seuenth day, which is now in the new Testament, the Lords day, and so is to continue to the last iudgement. And this vacation is necessarie euen in commō reason, for without it there can be no good proceeding in religiō. It is the means to begin, continue, and increase both knowlege & grace. He that hath the most excellent gifts of nature, shal neuer be able to attaine to learning, vnles he set him selfe aparte, and giue himselfe to studie: much more then, the knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdome of heauen cannot be obtained, vnlesse men at some times lay aside al worldly affairs, specially on the Sabbath daies. Therefore it is for the good of families, towns, countries, & kingdoms, that the Lords day be kept, & consequētly it stands vs in hand to take the benefit of this vacation, and to vse it for the increase of faith, repentance, and obedience, if wee desire the saluation of our owne soules. God, who is the soueraigne King ouer all, might haue inioyned vs a perpetuall labor from one day to an other for all the dayes of our liues: but tendering our good and saluation, hee inioyned vs to labour sixe daies, commaunding a vacation on the seuenth.

The second vacation is in respect of recreation, which also hath his warrant when it is lawfully vsed. God commaundeth euery man to labour in his calling, and to eate his owne bread in the sweate of his browes: and in commaunding labour, hee alloweth the meanes that make vs fit to labour. And therefore withall he admitteth lawfull recreation, because it is a necessarie meanes to refresh either body or minde, that we may the better do the duties which pertain vnto vs. Of recreation I haue spoken else-where: therefore it shall suffice now briefly to propound a caueat or two. Touching recreation these caueates must be remembered. First of all, it must bee moderate, otherwise it is a meanes to call and drawe vs from our callings. Secondly, it must be in things lawfull. Thirdly, it must be on the dayes of labour: for labour is then onely commanded, and therefore recreation which is a surceasing from labour for a time, and serueth onelie to make vs more able to continue in labour, must be on the six daies, and not on the Sabaoth: at which time, bicause we must abstain from ordinary labors of our calings, wee are much more to abstaine from our accustomed recreations: for where that which is more necessarie and principall is forbidden, there the lesse necessarie is forbidden also: but labor is the more necessarie and principal, and recreation serues for labour. This being so, it is a notable abuse of many, to make the Lords day, a set daie of sport and pastime, which shuld be a day set apart for the worship of God, and the increase in the duties of religion. And this is specialy the fault of housholders, which hauing imployed their seruants to labour six whole daies together, giue them the seuenth day, which is the Lordes, for recreation.

A third vacation is in time of necesitie, when men are disabled by reason of sickenes, age, imprisonment, or any other iust impediment. And the ordinance of god is, that such persons as haue the trembling hand (as Moses speaketh, Leuit. 25. 36.) should be maintained with such things as be necessary to life and health, by the labor of other mens callings. This thing must not be maruelled at, for the goodes wee haue are not our owne, but the Lords: we are but keepers and stewards of them. And it is Gods will that the poore shoulde haue title to a part of euery mans goods: and for this cause it is a shame if they haue not relefe without roning, begging, or crying.

And here two questions are to be scanned that are much spoken of, & often moued. First, whereas it is a generall duetie to visite our neighbours in time of sickenes, it is demaunded, whether is it lawfull at all to surceasefrom this duty in time of plague or pestilence? I answer, there may be and is a lawfull vacation from this duetie, and that with good conscience for some time, and vpon some occasion. For first of all, it is lawfull to maintaine our owne liues, so it be without the hurt or hinderaunce of the liues of other men: now to flie in time of contagious pestilence, is to preserue the life of some without the hurt of any. Secondly, in common dangers, as in time of famine, fire, and sword men for their safetie may flie from their neighbours, and therefore by like proportion, wee may flie in time of contagious sicknes. Thirdly in the Church of the Iewes the Leper was putte aparte from the societie of men: and that, in effect, was as much, as if all the Iewes had withdrawne themselues from his societie. And therefore nowe it is not simply vnlawfull to flie in time of contagious pestilence. It is alleadged, that to flie is a flat distrusting of God as though hee woulde not preserue and defend vs. I answer, that distrusting of God is not a fault in the action of flying, but in the persons that flie. Men that labour for meate and drinke, doe many times distrust the goodnesse of God, yet the fault is not in the labor it selfe, but in the parties that indure the labour. Secondly it is alleadged, that to flie is to forsake those to whome wee are vnited in bond of neighborhoode, which is vnlawfull: I answer, when the parties visited haue sufficient helpes appoynted by the Magistrate, both for their bodies and soules, then to flie is not to forsake, and in such cases, parties visited are not to desire the presence of their neighbours. It is alleaged, that Dauid neuer fled away when the people were smitten with the plague. Answer. There be speciall reasons thereof. First, that plague was sent by God vpon a sodaine. Secondly, his very sinne was the cause of the saide plague vpon the people. Thirdly, Dauid had no cause to flie, because hee then was assured that himselfe shoulde escape. Thus then the visiting of neighbours and friendes, though it be a needefull duetie, sometimes admits vacations, in which we may with good conscience goe aside and seeke the safetie of our own selues, and those that belong vnto vs: if so be necessary helpe be otherwise prouided for the sicke.

The second question is, whether the ministers of the gospell may flie in time of persecution? I answer, they may, if they be freed from the bondes of their callings, whereby they are tied to their charges. Thus Moses fled to Midian, and Paul out of Damascus: and our Sauiour Christ from among the Iewes. Secondly, I adde, that Ministers not freed from their callings, may by the consent of their people, for a time goe aside, for their owne safetie, and the further good of men, till the brunt of the persecution be ouer: specially if they in particular be aymed at. When Demetrius had raised a tumult in Ephesus about Diana, and the people had caught Paules companions, Gaius and Aristarchus: Paul moued with zeale, would haue entred into the middle of the presse; but as S. Luke saith, certaine brethren ouerruled him, and would not suffer him to enter, but caused him to withdraw himselfe. Thus then it is manifest, that in common dangers, publike callings admit their vacations in sundry causes. Thus much of vacations, now I come to changes.

A change of a calling, is a lawful going from one change to another. It is not the Apostles meaning to barre men to diuert from this or that calling, but he giues them an item to keepe them from chaunging vpon euery light conceit, and enery sodaine occasion. And that changes may lawfully be made, it appeareth thus. Amos by calling was first a heird man, but after a prophet. The Disciples were first fishermen, and after Apostles. Our Sauiour Christ himselfe was by calling a Carpenter, in his first and priuate life, till he was thirtie yeares old: yet after his baptisme, he shewed himselfe to be the Messiah, & Sauiour of the world. Neuertheles, a chãge may not be made, but vpon vrgent and weightie causes, and they are two especially, Priuate necessitie and the common good. Priuate necessitie, is when men cannot maintaine themselues and theirs by the callings in which they are; for then they may betake themselues to other callings. Thus a Merchant man may become an husbandman, and an husbandman, a Merchant. Thus a phiſitian may become a miniſter of the goſpel. And Paul an Apoſtle, vpon priuat neceſsitie, returned to the calling of a Tentmaker: yet ſo as he perfomed his miniſtery, when occaſion was offered.

The ſecond cauſe of making change lawfull, is the publike good. Thus may a priuate man become a magiſtrate. And it muſt be remembered, that ſo oft as we change, it muſt be to better and more excellent callings, in which we may glorifie God more, and bring greater benefit to the church & Common-wealth. Thus Paul biddeth the Corinthians to ſeeke for the beſt giftes, which might ſerue for the beſt callings. And heere the fault of ſome is to be reproued, that hauing notable gifts of nature and learning, becauſe they would attaine to worldly wealth, make themſelues Merchants, or factors to merchants, or ſeruing-men to great perſons; whereas for their gifts, they might doe God better ſeruice in the greateſt callings of the Church. And thus much of conſtancie.

The conſideration of this, that wee are bound to be conſtant in the duties of our particular callings, muſt teach vs much more to be conſtant in the generall duties of Chriſtianity. And therefore let vs all be carefull, not onely to profeſſe the true religion for the preſent time, but to continue conſtant in this profeſsion vnto the ende. Our generall calling admitteth no vacation nor chãge, as our particular callings do. Well then, in that we profeſſe our ſelues to be members of Chriſt: in theſe our happie daies of peace, let vs arme our ſelues againſt the euill daies to come, that wee may be faithfull to the end.

Againe, in the general calling, euery man is bound in all good conſcience, to obey God in all his commandements: heere alſo muſt our conſtancy appeare, ſo long as we liue, that we may ſay with Paul; I haue finiſhed my courſe, I haue fought a good fight. And with Hezekias on his death-bed; Lord remember how I haue walked before thee, with an vpright hart, and haue done that which is acceptable in thy ſight. God hath made a moſt mercifull promiſe of life euerlaſting, which is the comfort of all comforts, and without which, the caſe of Gods children were of all moſt miſerable. And this promiſe is made to them that continue faithfull vnto the end: theſe are they, on whom God will beſtow the crowne of life. And thus much for continuance in our callings.

The laſt point to be conſidered is, the good ending thereof. And heerein are two things required: the Reſignement, and the Account. In the parable of the rich man, the Lord calleth his ſteward, and biddeth him giue an account of his ſtewardſhippe, for he can be no longer ſteward: where we ſee, beſides the reſignement of our callings, there muſt an account be made of our doings therein. Of theſe two in order. The Reſignement of a calling, is nothing elſe, but the laying downe of the ſaid calling, by ceaſing to put in execution, the works and duties thereof. In the reſignement of callings, two things muſt be conſidered. Firſt, the time when. Secondly, the manner how. The time is not left in our owne choice: for wee may not leaue our callings when wee pleaſe; but the preſcribing thereof belongs to God: like as in the field, the ſouldier may not leaue his ſtanding when he will, vntill he haue a warrant from the Captaine. For as the caſe ſtands in one kinde of calling, ſo by proportion in the reſt. Now in one particular calling, namely, in the office of the Leuite, the entrance into it, the continuance, and the ending of it, is in the will of god, who preſcribes the time when he muſt enter, namely, at the age of thirtie yeares; and how long hee muſt continue, twentie yeares; and when he muſt end, namely, at fiftie yeares. And therefore the preſcribing of particular ſeaſons and times, of laying downe other callings, is not altogether without the will of God. Hence it followeth, that no man is to lay down the calling wherein he is placed, til he can ſay by ſome warrant in his conſcience, that it is the good will and pleaſure of God, that he ſhall then reſigne and ceaſe to doe the duties thereof any longer.

This rule hath his truth in all things whatſoeuer, whether pertaining to the Church or common-wealth. And by it we may iudge on the contrary, what may be thought of reſignements of callings, both ciuill, and Eccleſiaſticall, vpon no other ground, but the very wills of men, for the attainment of greater wealth, pleaſure, and preferment.

To goe yet further in this point. Callings are of two ſorts: changeable, and perpetuall. Changeable callings are ſuch as are impoſed for a ſeaſon: as for a yeare or two, or longer: and ſuch callings are to be reſigned, according to the appointment of them that impoſed them. But in perpetuall callings, the caſe ſtands otherwiſe, and other conditions are required. Neuertheleſſe, there be foure ſpeciall times, in which ſuch kind of callings may be reſigned. Firſt, when men are vtterly diſabled, either by age, or by any vncurable diſeaſe, of body or minde, or by want of gifts: then indeede whatſoeuer the calling be, eyther publike, or priuate, ciuill, or Eccleſiaſticall, it may be laid downe. When Moſes was ſtricken in yeares, and ſaw the end of his daies at hand, he called the whole congregation, and tells them; that being an hundred and fiftie yeares old, he was no more able to goe in and out before them: that is, to doe the office of a Iudge, & Prince: and therefore reſignes his office to Ioſhua, who iudged the people in his ſtead.

The ſecond time of reſignement is, when any man is lawfully depoſed for a crime or offence committed. Thus the Prieſtes that offered ſacrifice before the Lord, if they fell away to idolatry, were depoſed from the office of the Prieſt, and euer after were imploied in ſome ſeruice in the Temple.

The third time of reſignement, is the time of death: for when God calls vs from this life, we then receiue a diſcharge from our particular calings: for after this life, the children of God ceaſe from their labours, and in their death, begin their perpetual & eternall Sabboath: for the time of this life, by Gods commaundement, wee reſt euery ſeuenth day, and labour in the ſixe. But after, we ſhall continually without ceaſing, doe that, which now for ſubſtance, we doe on the Sabboath day: that is, honour, and praiſe, and glorifie the name of God, in euerlaſting ioy.

The fourth time of reſignation, is at the laſt day of iudgement, to them that ſhall be then aliue: that is, the generall time of all reſignements; for as S. Paul ſaith; Chriſt Ieſus muſt then reſigne his kingdome vp into his fathers hands, and put downe all humane rule and authority, and power: for then, ciuill, Eccleſiaſticall, and œconomicall ſtates & callings, in regard of gouernment, muſt haue an end. Yea, Chriſt himſelfe, in regard of the manner of his regiment, muſt giue vp his kingly office, and the execution both of his prieſt-hood, and propheticall office, muſt then alſo haue an end, though the vertue & fruit thereof, ſhal abide for euer. Then there ſhal be no more Prince, nor people; magiſtrate, nor ſubiect; maſter, and ſeruant; parents, and children; but God ſhal be all in all to the elect. Thus we ſee the time of reſignements: the manner followes.

The manner is, to reſigne them, in, and with the teſtimonie of a good conſcience: which is, when our conſciences bears witneſſe, that we haue in the works of our callings, kept our ſelues vnblameable, & haue indeauoured in all things, to do the will of god. Examples we haue of this in the ſcripture. When Samuel was no longer to be a iudge the people, he called the whole congregation of the Iſraelites, proteſting vnto them, that he had not taken any mans oxe or aſſe, receiued any bribes, or done any man wrong, but in all things, kept a good conſcience. And anſwerable to this proteſtation was the peoples teſtimony. And S. Paul, when he drew neere to the end of his dais, ſaith; he had now fought a good fight, and kept the faith; and that now it remained onely, that God ſhould giue him a crowne of righteouſneſſe, laid vp for all thoſe that loue the appearing of the Lord Ieſus. Now in the day of iudgement, it ſhall not ſuffice, that men and women are found in the works of ther callings, (thogh that is farre better, than to be imployed in the workes of vngodlineſſe) I ſay, it ſhall not ſuffice: for at the laſt day, two ſhall be in the field, in the works (no doubt) of their callings; yet the one ſhall be taken, the other refuſed: two women ſhall be grinding at the mill, the one ſhall be taken, the other refuſed. Therefore, beſides the practiſe of a lawfull calling, care muſt be had to keepe a good conſcience to the end, both before God and man. And thus much of reſignements.

The ſecond and laſt point is, the Account that euery man muſt make of the workes of his calling. Now, that ſuch an account is to be made, it appeares in the parable of the rich man. And S. Paul ſaith; Euery man muſt goe to iudgement, and giue an account for himſelfe. And Solomon tells the yong man, rouing in his owne waies, that for all this, he ſhall come to iudgement. Few are truely perſwaded of this laſt and great account, becauſe it is deferred: but we ought to be of better reſolution, and prepare our ſelues for it.

Towching this Account, two things muſt be conſidered. Firſt, what is the account. Secondly, how it is made. The giuing of an account, is nothing els, but an action of the reaſonable creature, eſpecially of man, wherein hee muſt be anſwerable and accountant to God for all his actions, both both of his generall, and of his particular calling. And by the law of nature, wee are bound to this: yea, if inferiour officers in the common-wealth, become accountable to the higheſt Magiſtrates for all their doings, then much more muſt euery creature become accountable to God, his Creator, for the duties of his calling, wherein hee doth him homage and ſeruice.

There are foure things required in this account. I. The preſentment of euery mans perſon before God. II. The manifeſtation of all the workes that they haue done. III. The examination of them all. IV. The giuing and rendring to euery man according to his workes. For the firſt: the preſentation of all perſons, before the tribunal of Chriſt, ſhall be brought to paſſe by the power of God: for as in the beginning, euery creature had his being by the word of God, ſo ſhall it be in the day of iudgement: God ſhall but ſpeake the word, and all reaſonable creatures, liuing and dead, though many thouſand yeares before, ſhall preſent themſelues before him, to giue an account of all the actions done in this life. Secondly, when all men and Angells are ſet before the preſence of Chriſt, then ſhall euerie worke that they haue done, be made manifeſt, euen the moſt ſecret workes of all, as Eccleſiaſtes ſaith; God will bring euery ſecret thing to iudgement. Eccleſ. 12. 16. And if any thinke it ſtrange, we muſt know, that God hath bookes of record, wherein all mens thoughts, and words, and deedes, good, or bad, ſecret, or open, are inrolled. And of theſe ſpeaketh Daniel when he ſaith: that he ſaw the Ancient of daies, and the bookes laid open. We may not imagine that theſe be materiall bookes like to the regiſters of men, or the bookes of Captaines in the field, wherein are ſet downe the names of their ſouldiers, and their expences. But by theſe bookes wee muſt vnderſtand: firſt of all the infinite knowledge and prouidence of God: ſecondly, the cõſciences of men, to teſtifie of our doings, and be as a thouſand witneſſes. The third thing that is doone in this account, is the triall of euery mans worke, in reſpect of obedience, or diſobedience. The triall ſhall be made by the will of God, reuealed partly in the Law, and partly in the Goſpel, which is the rule to diſcerne good and euill works. The fourth and laſt action, is the giuing of reward to euery man, according to his works. He that hath beene a faithfull ſeruant, ſhall heare the voice of Chriſt, ſaying vnto him; It is well done, thou good and faithfull ſeruant, thou haſt beene faithfull in a little, enter into thy maſters ioy. But he that hath beene vnfaithfull, or vniuſt in the workes of his calling, ſhall heare the ſame voice of Chriſt, ſaying; Take him, binde him hand and foote, and caſt him into vtter darkeneſſe. And thus we ſee what this account ſhall be.

Now then, let vs alittle ſearch how wee may be able to make a good account before God at the laſt day. For the dooing whereof, we muſt take a fore-hand reckoning of our ſelues, in the time of our life. For in common experience wee ſee, that ſuch as deſire to make iuſt reckonings with others, doe reckon firſt with themſelues. In this fore-hand reckoning, three things muſt be done. Firſt, we muſt draw out the bill of our receipts and expences. The bills of receit are framed thus: we muſt call to remembrance, what graces, bleſsings, and gifts, wee haue receiued of God, whether temporall, or ſpirituall. For temporall bleſſings, wee muſt throughly bethinke vs of our peace, health, wealth, liberty and good name, and all things of this kinde. For things ſpirituall, wee muſt conſider what knowledge, faith, hope, loue and repentance God hath beſtowed vpon vs: as alſo what gifts we haue receiued for the diſcharge of our callings: yea, of all other things that we haue enioyed, we muſt take a full and iuſt receit; for they are the talents of our Lord, and he lookes for a reckoning. This done, we are next to frame our bills of expences: which are nothing elſe, but large conſiderations of our owne ſinnes, calling them all to our remembrance, as much as we can, whether committed againſt God or man, with all the abuſes of our gifts, all our ignorances, negligences, and frailties whatſoeuer. Tradeſmen, for their temporall eſtates, keepe in their ſhoppes, bookes of receits and expences: ſhall not we then much more doe the like for our ſpirituall eſtates? Iob ſaith; If hee diſpute with God, hee cannot anſwer one word for a thouſand: whereby he inſinuates thus much, that hee had looked into the whole courſe of his life, and had found euen thouſands of ſinnes in himſelfe. When the Prophet Dauid ſaith; Who knoweth the errors of this life? hee ſignifieth that he had exerciſed himſelfe in ſearching out his owne offences and tranſgreſsions. Ezra could not haue ſaid, that his ſinnes, and the ſinnes of the people, were as an huge mountaine: but that he firſt tooke a narrow account of Iob 9. Pſal. 19. Ezra 9.

his own life, and of the liues of the people. And ſo muſt euery one of vs do for all the things that euer we did. The conſideration of our earthly matters, makes vs know our worldly eſtate: and ſo will the conſideration of our daily offences, and our ſpirituall eſtate, giue vs ſome light and knowledge, how the caſe will ſtand with vs, when we ſhall appeare before the great God of all the world, to giue vp our account.

Now, when theſe two bills of our accounts are made, we muſt conſider in the next place, whether we be able to make an euen reckoning with God, or no. Thus doing, we ſhall find that our reckonings will be farre ſhort of that, which God requireth at our hands. Few there be that thinke on theſe things: for men commonly perſwade themſelues, that all ſhall goe well with them at the day of iudgement, and that they ſhall make a ſhort and eaſie reckoning, becauſe God is mercifull. It is hard to finde men, whoſe hearts are touched, or their eyes open, to ſee and beleeue: Firſt, that they muſt make an account: And ſecondly, that they are vtterly vnable to doe it; as Iob was, that could not excuſe one of a thouſand of his offences before God. Let vs therefore labour to ſee our vneuen and skant reckonings, and to ſhake off that ſpirituall drowſineſſe which poſſeſſeth our mindes, that we cannot ſo much as ſay; What haue I done? And how ſtands the caſe betweene God and me? and when we haue attained to this knowledge, that we are vnable to make a iuſt reckoning with God: in the third place, we muſt cleaue to our ſuretie Chriſt Ieſus, the onely ſonne of God, God and man: and for the time of this life, we muſt humble our ſelues before God, and pray vnto him, that hee would accept the only ſatisfaction of Chriſt in his death and paſsion, as a ſufficient paiment for all our ſinnes and wants, whatſoeuer: for thus wee are taught to pray; Forgiue vs our debts. And we muſt not onely be hearers of theſe things, but doers alſo. And the better to perſwade vs to the practiſe of theſe three duties, let vs conſider, that this account at the laſt day, ſhall be a ſtrait account: for as Chriſt ſaith; Wee muſt giue an account of euery idle word. And St. Paul ſaith; The law is an hand-writing of condemnation: that is, a bill of our owne hand againſt vs: for by the law, we are debters to God; and either we muſt fulfill the iuſtice thereof, or elſe, according to the tenour of the law, vndergoe eternall iudgement, vnleſſe we be acquitted by the obedience of a Mediatour. If we thinke to eſcape this account, by abſenting our ſelues, we are deceiued: for then, not ſo much as one man in all the world, ſhall be wanting. Many ſhall then wiſh with all their hearts, that hills and mountaines would fall vpon them, and grinde them to powder, that they might be hid from the preſence of the Lord. But that will not ſerue. All, without exception, muſt needes come to this account, not one ſhal be freed. And we may not thinke, that Chriſt will either not know, or remember our particular offences. We vſe to make faire weather with men, and to keepe cloſe our doings, from the eyes of the world; but the Lord will deſcrie our moſt ſecret ſins: in him is no want of knowledge, or diſcerning: he can finde out Adam, though he be in the thicket of paradice, & deſcrie him in the middeſt of his figge leaues. At this great day of account, euerie ſecret thing ſhall be made manifeſt. What ſhall wee then doe? Some doe pleade, that they are no great ſinners, they are no whoremongers, no adulterers, nor blaſphemers, nor theeues: and therefore they hope to make an account good enough. But (alas) this is a fond and poore excuſe; for the wages of the leaſt ſinne, is death. And hee that breaketh the law but once, and that in thought onely, is guiltie of eternall condemnation: and therefore it will not goe for paiment to ſay; wee are no great ſinners, as other men be. What then ſhall we ſay? that wee haue walked in our callings, and alwaies had a good meaning, and did no man hurt; and therefore wee hope that God will be mercifull? This indeede is the common excuſe, but it is not ſufficient paiment with God: for as Iohn ſaith; The axe is laid to the roote of the tree: and he ſaith not further, that euery tree ſhal ſtand, which bringeth not forth bad fruit; but, euery tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, ſhall be cut downe, and caſt into the fire. In a word, let vs deuiſe what we can, it will not ſerue the turne. Wilt thou make vp thy reckoning with almes deedes, and good workes, according to the opinion of many, that looke to be ſaued by their works? but they are no currant paiment in this account; becauſe one breach of the law, marres all the good workes we doe. And he that will be iuſtified by works, is bound to fulfill the whole law, in the rigour thereof. Beſide this, the beſt workes we doe, are in themſelues defiled in the ſight of God.

What

What then ſhall wee doe? ſhall we vndergoe the curſe of the law? Some of a deſperate minde ſay; if the worſt come, there is but one out of the way: but farre be it from vs, thus to thinke or ſpeake: for the curſe of the law, and the wrath of God, is moſt horrible and eternall, without reſt or eaſe. All the fire in the world, is but ice, in regard of that ſpirituall and eternall fire of hell. Thus then, hauing turned our ſelues euery way, and finding no helpe in any thing, we muſt flie vnto our ſurety, Chriſt Ieſus, who was content to ſtand in our roome vppon the Croſſe, and there to ſhed his blood, for the redemption of our ſinnes.

Thus in this life, while the day of grace remaineth, are we to make a fore-hand reckoning with our ſelues, in our owne perſons, neuer reſting, till we haue aſſurance in our conſciences, that the bookes in heauen are cancelled, and that God is content to account of Chriſt, his ſatisfaction, as a paiment for our ſinnes. And this being done, we ſhall be able to make a good account before the Lord, at the laſt day of iudgement.

EXPOSITION
upon the two last verses of the

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFVL, MY VERY WORTHY and Christian friend, Syr William Gee, Knight, one of his Maiesties Honourable Counsell in the North, Recorder of the Townes of Beuerley, and Hull, and one of his Maiesties Iustices of peace in the East-riding of the Countie of Yorke, a true friend of learning, and pietie: and to the vertuous, and religious Lady his wife. Grace and peace from God, &c.

Mongst the many reasons (Worshipfull Syr,) which haue perswaded mee that Poperie cannot be the true Religion, this is not the least: the insufficiencie of their doctrine of faith and repentance: which two thinges though they be the chiefe and principal points in Religion, and so necessarie, that he, who doth not, both know, and practise them aright, can neuer be saued: yet I dare auouch, that the faith and repentance of the Romish Church, as they are taught by many of the best approued Papists, are no better then such a faith, and such a repentance as an hypocrite, and a very reprobate may attaine vnto: Indeed, to insist vpon repentance onely (they make many faire florishes, they call it penance, they make it a Sacrament, and say it is a boord that saues a man after shipwrack, and write great volumnes of it, and of confession, and of Cases of conscience, (as you good Syr in your owne reading knowe better then I) and yet alas, when all is done, it is but a shadowe of repentance; and indeede how can they teach aright the doctrine of repentance: which erre so fowly in setting down the iustice of God, and the vileneſſe of sin? which 2. points a man must know, else hee will neuer repent: but Poperie misconceiuing the iustice of God, teaching it not to be infinite, in as much as it needes not an infinite satisfaction, and misconceiuing the nature of sinne, teaching euery sinne not to be damnable, nor to offend Gods Infinite iustice, erring (I say) in these 2. how is it possible they should conceiue aright the nature of repentance? by which a man seeing his sins, their foulenesse, their punishment, and his own misery by them, confesseth them, bewailes them, fearing Gods iustice, flieth from it, and craues forgiuenesse of his mercie, and lastly purposeth, and indeoureth to leaue them all, and to leade a newe life. The serious consideration hereof, hath often made mee wonder, why many Popish treatiſes being in ſome ſort exhortations to repentance, ſhould bee ſo accounted of as they are by ſome: for though I confeſſe, there are in ſome of them, good and holeſome meditations, and many motiues to mortification, and good life, yet would I gladly learne of any man but this one thing, how thoſe exhortations can be pithie, or powerful, ſound, or any way ſufficient to moue a man to repentance, when as, not thoſe bookes, nor all Poperie is able to teach a man ſufficiently what true repentance is.

If any man reply: I will therefore learne the doctrine out of the Proteſtants bookes, and vſe the Papiſts for exhortation onely: I then anſwere, is it not a more compendious, and conuenient, and a leſſe ſcandalous courſe, to ſeeke exhortations out of ſuch writers, as doe teach the doctrine aright? nay I doubt how it is poſſible to finde a powerfull exhortation to repentance in any Papiſt, who erres in the Doctrine: the reaſon is manifeſt, becauſe Doctrine is the ground of exhortation: and if the Doctrine be vnſound, how can the exhortation bee any better? Let vs therefore leaue theſe muddie puddles, and fet our water at the fountaine: the water of life, at the fountaine of life; I meane the doctrine of faith, and repentance, at the written word of God, and at ſuch mens writings as are grounded therevpon, and agreeable therevnto.

Deering, Greenham, Bradford, and many other.

Now, amongſt thoſe many inſtruments of God, who haue laboured with profit in this great point of Religion: namely repentance, drawing their doctrine out of the two breſts, of the 2. Teſtaments of Gods booke, I may well ſay, (to ſay no more,) that this man of God Maiſter Perkins, deſerues to haue his place: whoſe labours, whileſt he liued, and his yet liuing labours, what they deſerue, I had rather others ſhould proclaime, then I once name: who profeſſe my ſelfe to be one of thoſe many, who may truely ſay, that by the grace of God and his good meanes principally, I am that I am: But leauing him in that glorious manſion, which Chriſt the Lord of the Harueſt hath prepared for him: and now giuen him, I returne to my ſelfe, and doe humbly praiſe the Lord of heauen, who gaue me my time in the Vniuerſitie, in thoſe happie dayes, wherein (beſide many worthy men of God, whereof ſome are ſalne aſleepe, and ſome remaine aliue vnto this day) this holy man did ſpend himſelfe like a Candle, to giue light vnto others.

The ſcope of all his godly endeuours was to teach Chriſt Ieſus, and him crucified, and much laboured to moue al men to repentance, that as our knowledge hath made Poperie aſhamed of their ignorance: ſo our holy liues might honour our holy profeſſion. And as repentance was one of the principall endes, both of his continuall preaching and writing: ſo eſpecially and purpoſely hath he twiſe dealt in that Argument.

Firſt, in his Treatiſe of Repentance: publiſhed 1592. wherein briefly (as his manner was) but ſoundly, pithily, and feelingly, he layeth downe the doctrine, and the very nature of repentance: and after the poſitiue doctrine, hee toucheth ſome of the principall controuerſies and difficulties in that doctrine, but afterwardes thinking with himſelfe, that he had not ſeriouſly and forcibly enough, vrged ſo great and neceſſarie a leſſon as Repentance is, therefore ſhortly after, being deſired and called to the dutie of Preaching, in that great, and generall aſſembly at Sturbridge Faire, he thought it a fit time, for this neceſſary and generall exhortation to Repentance: to the intent, that as we were taught the doctrine of repentance, in the former treatiſe: ſo in theſe ſermons wee might be ſtirred vp to the practiſe of it. And certainly, (good Sir:) I iudge there could haue beene no matter, more fit for that aſſembly, then an exhortation to repentance, for as the audience was great and general, of all ſorts, ſexes, ages and callings of men, and aſſembled out of many corners of this kingdome, ſo is this doctrine general for all: ſome doctrines are for parents, ſome for children, ſome for ſchollers, ſome for tradeſ-men, ſome for men, ſome for women, but repentance is for all: without which, it may be ſaide of all, and euery one of age, not one excepted: No Repentance, no ſaluation.

Theſe Sermons being in my hands, and not deliuered to me from hand to hand, but taken with this hand of mine, from his owne mouth, were thought worthy for the excellency, & fit for the generalitie of the matter, to be offered to the publique viewe: I haue alſo other workes of his in my hands: of which (being many,) I confeſſe my ſelfe to be but the keeper for the time, taking my ſelfe bounde to keepe them ſafely, to the benefite of Gods Church, of whoſe treaſure vpon earth I make no queſtion, but they are a part: and I heartily deſire you (my godly friends) & all other faithful Chriſtians, to ſolicite the Lord in prayer for me, that I may faithfully diſcharge my ſelfe of that great charge which in this reſpect lyeth vpon me: and that his grace & bleſsing may be on me, & all others, who are to be imploied in this ſeruice, wherein (had the Lord ſo pleaſed) wee could heartily haue wiſhed neuer to haue bin imployed: but that his life might haue eaſed vs of the labour: and that as I begin with this, ſo I, or ſome other better able (which I rather deſire) may goe forward, vndertaking the weight of this great burthen, and not fainte, til he haue made a faithfull account to the Church of God, of all theſe Iewels deliuered to our truſt.

And now theſe firſt fruites of my labours, in another mans vineyard, as alſo al that hereafter doe or may follow, I humbly cõſecrate to the bleſſed Spouſe of Chriſt Ieſus, the holy Church of God on earth, and namely to the Church of England, our beloued mother, who may reioyce, that ſhe was the mother of ſuch a ſonne, who in few yeares did ſo much good to the publique cauſe of religion, as the wickednesſe of many yeares ſhall not be able to weare out. But firſt of all, and eſpecially, I preſent the ſame vnto you (my very worſhipfull and Chriſtian friends) who (I muſt needs ſay) are very worthy of it in many reſpects.

Maiſter Perkins, but forty yeares olde at his death.

1 For the matter it ſelfe, which is repentance, my ſelfe being able to teſtifie, that you are not hearers, but doers, ripe in knowledge, & rife in the practiſe of repentance, inſomuch as I dare from the teſtimonie of mycõſcience, & in the word of a Miniſter pronounce of you, that as you haue heard & knowne this doctrine of repentance, ſo bleſſed are you, for you doe it.

And 2. for him who was the author hereof (whoſe mouth ſpake it from the feeling of his ſoule, and whoſe ſoule is now bound vp in the bundle of life:) I know, and cannot in good conſcience conceale the great delight, you haue alwaies had in the reading of his bookes, the reuerend opinion, you had of him liuing, and how heauily and paſſionately, you tooke his death and departure: therefore to cheare you vp in want of him, I ſend you here this little booke, his owne childe, begotten in his life time, but borne after his death: obſerue it well, and you ſhall find it, not vnlike the father: yea, you ſhall diſcerne in it the fathers ſpirit, and it doubts not, but to finde entertainement with them, of whom the father was ſo well reſpected.

And for my ſelfe, I ſpare to rehearſe what intereſt you haue in me, & all my labours, it is no more then you worthily deſerue, and ſhall haue in me for euer: you are the faireſt flowers in this garden, which in this place I after others haue planted for the Lord (or rather God by vs): And two principall pearles in that crown, which I hope for, at the laſt day from the Lord my God, whoſe word at my mouth you haue receiued with much reuerence, & with ſuch profit, as if I had the like ſucceſſe of my labours in others, I ſhould thē neuer haue cauſe to ſay, with the Prophet, I haue laboured in vaine, & ſpent my ſtrength in vaine, but my iudgement is with the Lord, and my worke with my God.

And if I knewe you not, to be ſuch as take more delight in doing well, then in hearing of it, I would proue at large, what I haue ſpoken of you: yet giue me leaue to ſay that, which without open wrong, I may not conceale, that beſide your rare knowledge, and godly zeale to religion, and other duties of the firſt table to God himſelfe, your charitie and pittie to the needy diſtreſſed Chriſtians, at home and abroad: your mercifull dealing with them, who are in your power; your beneuolence to learning, and namely to ſome in the Vniuerſity; doe all proclaime to the world thoſe your due praiſes: which I (well knowing your modeſties) do ſpare once to name: neither would I haue ſaid thus much, were it not for this cold & barren age, wherein we liue, that ſo, when our preaching cannot moue, yet your godly examples might ſtirre vp. Pardon mee therefore I pray you, & thinke it no wrong to you, which is a benefit to Gods Church: But goe forward in the ſtrength of the Lord your God, & hold on in that happie courſe you haue begun, bee faithfull vnto the end, the Lord will giue you the Crown of life: faithfull is he, which hath promiſed, who wil alſo doe it: proceed (good Sir) to honour learning in your ſelf and others, & religion eſpecially, which is the principall learning; & proceed both of you, to practiſe religion in your own perſons; and in your family, hold on to ſhine before your family, and amongſt the people, where you dwell, in zeale and holineſſe; hold on hereby, ſtill to ſhame popery, to ſtop your enemies mouthes, & to honour that holy religion, which you profeſſe, to gaine comfort of good conſcience to your ſelues, & aſſurance of eternall reward: and laſtly, to encourage me in thoſe paineful duties which lye vpon me: for I openly profeſſe that your religious zeale & loue of the truth, with many other good helps, are principall encouragements in my miniſtery, and eſpecial motiues vnto me, to vndertake the charge of publication, of ſo many of the works of this holy man deceaſed, as may not in better maner be done by others. But I keepe you too long from this holy exhortation following; I therfore ſend you to it, & it to you, & from you to the church of God, for I dare not make it to be priuately yours & mine, wherein the whole Church hath intereſt, as well as we: It was preached in the field, but it is worthy to bee admitted into our hearts: I found it in the open field, but vpon diligent view, finding it to be Gods corne, & a parcel of his holy & immortal ſeed, therefore I brought it home, as good corne deſerues: And as it is Gods corne, ſo in you, I deſire al holy chriſtians to lay it vp in Gods garners, that is in their hearts and ſoules.

Pſal. 11. 16. Apoc. 2, 10 1. Theſ. 5. 24.

And thus committing this litle volume to your reading, the matter to your practiſe: you and yours, to the bleſſed fauour of that God, whom you ſerue: and my ſelfe and my endeuours, to your hartie loue, and holy praiers, I take leaue: From my ſtudie. Auguſt. 7. 1605.

Yours in Chriſt Ieſus, euer aſſured.

William Craſhawe.

FOraſmuch as there hath beene lately ſignification made, of diuers of Maiſter Perkins his workes hereafter to be Printed, in an Epiſtle to the Reader, premiſed before the Treatiſe of Callings, and that ſignification being but generall, might peraduenture giue occaſion to ſome, to ſet out ſome particulars (without the conſent of Maiſter Perkins his aſſignes) as imperfectly as are theſe two bookes, intituled The reformation of Couetouſneſſe, and The Practiſe of Faith, iuſtly and truly (for ought that I ſee) cenſured in the aforeſaide Epiſtle: It is therefore now thought good, to mention the particular Treatiſes, and works of his, which ſhall hereafter (if God will) be publiſhed, for the benefite of Gods Church: I doe therefore hereby make knowne to all, whō it any way may concerne, that there were found in the Studie of the deceaſed, and are in the hands of his Executors, or Aſſignes, and preparing for the Preſſe.

All theſe he had peruſed himſelfe, and made them ready for the Preſſe, according to which Coppies by himſelfe ſo corrected, ſome of them already are, and the reſt will bee publiſhed in due time: And hereupon we deſire all men who haue Coppies of them, not to offer that wrong to that worthy man of God, as to publiſh any of their owne, ſeeing the Coppies hereof which are to be Printed, are of his owne correcting: but rather if they can helpe to make any of them more perfect by their Coppies, they may therein doe a good worke to the benefit of many, and much comfort to themſelues.

And further, I doe hereby make knowne, that I haue in my hands at this preſent of his workes, taken from his mouth, with my owne hand, hereafter (if God will) to be publiſhed, with the allowance of our Church, and for the benefit of his children, theſe particulars.

AN EXHORTATION TO REPENTANCE.

Zophoniah, Chap. 2, verse. 1. 2.

Search your selues, emen search you ô nation, not worthy to be beloued: before the Decree come forth, and you be as Chaffe that passeth on a day.

THe Prophet in the first Chapter of this prophecy rebuketh the Iewes of three notable crimes, Idolatry, fraud, and crueltie. In this second hee exhorts them to repentance, and withal reproueth some of their speciall sinnes. In the three first verses he propoundeth the Doctrine of repentance, and addeth some speciall reasons to moouo and stirre them vp to the practise of it, In propounding the Doctrine of repentance, he directs it to two sorts of men. First to the obstinate and impenitent Iewes in the first and second verses. Secondly, to the better sort of them, in the third, So that the summe and substance of these two first verses, is a briefe and summarie propounding of the doctrine of Repentance to the obstinate Iewes. The wordes containe in them 5. severall points, touching the doctrine of repentance.

1. The dutie to be performed, Search:

2. Who must be searched: your selues:

3. Who must doe it. The Iewes: who are further described to be a nation, not worthy to be beloued of God, these are in the first vrse.

4. In the second verse: the time limitting them, when to repent, before the decree come forth: that is, before God put in execution the iudgements which are already decreed & appointed for them.

5. A forcible reason vrging them to doe it, which lieth hid, and is necessarily implied in the fourth point; namely, that there is a decree against them, which wants nothing but execution: which also shall come vnlesse they repēt, whereby they shall be fanned: and if they shal be found to be chaffe, they shall flye away with the wind of Gods iustice. Of all these points in order.

For the first, the holy Ghost saith; Search your selues. The words are commonly reade thus. Gather your selues, which though it be good, for that in repentance a man gathereth himselfe, and all his wits together, which afore were dispersed, & wandred vp & down in vanitie: yet I rather allow their translation who read thus Search or fan your selues: but either of them may stand, because the word in the original doth cōprehēd both significatiōs; yet it seemeth that to search, or sift, fits this place better, cōsidring the same manner of speech is afterwards continued in the word Chaffe: so that the meaning of the holy Ghost seemeth to bee this: Search, try, and fanne your selues, least you bee found light chaffe, and so fly away and be consumed before the iustice of God. Iunius.

Concerning this dutie of searching, let vs obserue first, that the holy Ghost vrging the Iewes to repent, vseth not the word Repentance, but bids them ſearch themſelues: yet meaning, hee would haue them to repent: giuing vs to vnderſtand, that no man can haue true and ſound repentance, but hee who hath firſt of all ſearched and examined himſelfe: and this ſtands with good reaſon, for no man can repent, who firſt of al doth not know himſelfe, and his owne wretchednesſe. But no man can ſee into himſelfe, nor knowe himſelfe, but hee that doth diligently ſearch himſelfe: ſo that the beginning of all grace, is for a man to ſearch and try, and ſanne himſelfe, that thereby he may knowe what is in himſelfe: that ſo vpon the ſearch, ſeeing his fearefull and damnable eſtate, hee may forſake himſelfe & his own waies and turne to the Lord. Thus ſpeaketh the holy Ghoſt in the heartes of holy men; Let vs ſearch and try our waies: and marke what followeth; and turne againe to the Lord: as though there were no turning againe to the Lord, but after a ſearching of our ſelues. With this teſtimonie of the holy Ghoſt, agreeth the teſtimonie of al holymens conſciences, who all know, that the firſt beginning of their turning vnto the Lord, was a ſearching of themſelues: Let any repentant ſinner aske his conſcience, and call to minde his firſt calling and conuerſion, and he will remember that the firſt thing in his repentance was this; that he ſearched into himſelfe, and looked narrowly into his waies, and finding his waies dangerous, and his caſe fearefull, did thereupon reſolue to take a new courſe, and turne to the Lord for pardon and mercie, and for grace to enter into more holy, and more comfortable courſes. Lamen. 3.

The man that paſſeth vpon ridges of Mountaines, & ſides of hils, or that goeth ouer a narrow bridge, or ſome dangerous and ſteepe Rocks at midnight, feareth not, becauſe hee ſeeth no daunger: but bring the ſame man, in the morning, and let him ſee the narrowe bridge, he went ouer in the night, vnder which runnes a violent ſtreame, and a bottomleſſe gulfe, and the daungerous Mountaines, and rocks, he paſſed ouer, and hee will wonder at his owne boldneſſe, and ſhrinke for feare to thinke of it, and will by no meanes venture the ſame way againe: for now hee ſeeth the height of the Mountaines; the ſteepeneſſe of the Hilles, the craggineſſe of the Rocks, the fearful downfall, and the furious violence of the ſtreame vnderneath, & therby ſeeth the extreame danger, which afore he ſawe not: therfore he wondreth, & reioiceth, that he hath eſcaped ſo great a danger; and will by no meanes be drawn to goe that way in the day, which hee went moſt careleſly in the darkeneſſe of the night, but ſeeketh another way (though it ſhuld be far about:) So a ſinner in his firſt eſtate, which is naturall & corrupt (as wee are bred and borne) hath a vaile before his face: ſo that hee ſeeth nothing: the wrath of God & the curſe due for ſinne, Hell and damnation ſeeking to deuoure him, he ſeeth thē not, although (liuing alwaies in ſinne,) hee walketh in the very Iawes of Hell it ſelfe; and becauſe he ſeeth not this fearfull daunger, therefore hee refuſeth no ſinne at all, but ruſheth ſecurely into all manner of ſin: the night of impenitencie, and the myſt of ignorance ſo blinding his eyes, that he ſeeth not the narrow bridge of this life, from which if he ſlide, he falles immediatly into the bottomleſſe pit of Hell.

But when as Gods ſpirit hath by the light of Gods word opened his eyes & touched his heart to conſider his eſtate, then hee ſeeth the fraile bridge of this narrowe life, and how little a ſteppe there is betweene him and damnation; then hee ſeeth Hell open due for his ſinnes, and himſelfe in the high way to it: ſinne being the craggy Rocke, and Hell the gaping gulfe vnder it; this life being the narrowe bridge, and damnation the ſtreame which runneth vnder it: Then hee wondreth at his miſerable eſtate, admireth the mercy of God in keeping him from falling into the bottome of Hell, wondreth at the preſumptuous boldneſſe of his corruption, which ſo ſecurely plodded on towards deſtruction, and being aſhamed of himſelfe, and theſe his waies, he turnes his heart to the God that ſaued him from theſe daungers; and ſets himſelfe into more holy wayes, and more comfortable courſes, and confeſſeth that ignorance made him bold, and blindneſſe made him ſo preſumptuous; but nowe hee ſeeth the daunger, and will by no meanes goe the ſame way again: and thus the ſearching and ſeeing into the fouleneſſe of ſinne, and the danger thereof, is the firſt beginning of repentance, and the firſt ſtep into grace.

This doctrine teacheth vs what faith and repentance is generall in the world. All men ſay, they beleeue, and haue repented long agoe; but trie it well, and we ſhall finde in the body of our Nation, but a lippe faith, and a lippe Repentance: for euen when they ſay ſo, they are blinde and ignorant of their owne eſtate, & knowe not themſelues, but preſume of themſelues, that becauſe they are baptiſed and liue in the Church, therefore they are in Gods fauour, and in very good eſtate, when as they neuer yet were reconciled to God: and are ſo farre from it, that they neuer yet ſawe any ſinnes in themſelues wherof they ſhuld repent: as a man trauelling in the night, ſeeth no daunger, but plods on without feare: So the moſt part of our common people, in the night of their ignorance, think and preſume they loue and feare God, and loue their Neighbour; and that they haue euer done ſo: Nay, it is the common opinion that a man may do ſo by nature, and that hee is not worthy to liue, who doth not loue God with all his heart, and beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt: But alas poore ſimple ſoules, they neuer knewe what ſinne was, neuer ſearched nor ſaw into their own harts with the light of Gods lawe, for if they had, they ſhould haue ſeene ſuch a Sea of corruption, that then they would confeſſe it to bee the hardeſt thing in the world, to loue God, and to beleeue in Chriſt, and forſake ſinne: it is therefore manifeſt, that they haue not yet begun to beleeue or repent, nor haue entred into the firſt ſtep of grace, which leadeth to repentance, for that they haue not learned this leſſon, which the Prophet teacheth: that is, to ſearch themſelues.

Furthermore, let vs in the ſecond place, obſerue better the ſignification of the word: it ſignifieth to Search narrowly, as a man would doe for a peece of Gold, or a precious Iewell, which is loſt in a great houſe: Or as a man may ſearch for gold in a Myne of the earth, where is much earth, and but very little gold Oare.

Hence we may learne, that in true Repentance and conuerſion, wee muſt not ſearch ſo only, as to find the groſſe and palpable ſinnes of our liues: but ſo as we may finde thoſe ſinnes which the world accounts leſſer ſinnes, and eſpie our ſecret faults & priuie corruptions. Some corruptions ſeeme more neere a kinne of our nature, and therein men hope to be excuſed, when they forſake many other greater ſins: But a true penitent ſinner muſt ſearch for ſuch, ſo as a good Magiſtrate ſearcheth for a lurking traitor which is conueied into ſome cloſe and ſecret corner, and hee muſt ranſack his heart for ſuch corruptions, as wherein his heart takes ſpecial delight, and muſt thinke that no ſinne can be ſo ſmall, but it is too great to bee ſpared, and that euery ſinne great or little, muſt bee ſearched for, as being all Traitors to Gods Maieſtie.

But alas, the practiſe of the world is farre otherwiſe, great ſinnes are little ſinnes, little ſinnes are no ſinnes: Nay, after a little cuſtome, great ſinnes are alſo little or nothing, and ſo at laſt men make no bones of groſſe and grieuous ſins: and for the moſt part men ſearch ſo ſuperficially, that they ſcarſe find any thing to be ſinne: ſuch excuſes are made, ſuch diſtinctiõs are deuiſed, ſuch mittigations, ſuch qualifications, ſuch colours are caſt vppon all ſinnes; as now vp and downe the world, groſſe ſins are called into queſtion, whether they be ſins or no: and the great tranſgreſſions of the lawe are counted ſmall matters, neceſſarie euils or inconueniences, tollerated to auoide other euils: and what is hee counted but a curious and percife foole, which ſtandes vpon them: Ignorance after fiue and thirtie yeares preaching is counted no ſinne, blind deuotion in Gods ſeruice no ſin, lippe labour in praying, vaine and cuſtomable ſwearing, mocking of religion, and the profeſſors thereof, no ſin: prophaning of the Saboath, contemning of preachers, abuſing of parents, no ſinne: pride in apparell, ſuperfluitie in meates, beaſtly and ordinarie drunkenneſſe, fornication, no ſinnes. Nay, deceits, Cosonages, oppressing vsury, notorious briberie, and couetousnesse, that mother sinne; these are counted no sinnes: these beames are made but moates by prophane men, & they are so minced and carued, or there is some such necessitie of them, or some such other flourish or vernish must be cast vpon thē, as that they are little or none at all. Alas, alas, is not that a simple and a silly search where such blockes as these are, lye vnspied: what are moule-hils, when such mountaines are not seene? Moates will be little regarded, where such beames are not discerned: but it is cleere, that therefore there is no true triall nor diligent search made: for a true conuert will search his heart for all, and will spare none: He deales in searching his owne heart, as a good Iustice of Peace in searching for traytors or Seminarie Priests. He seekes not superficially, but most exactly, and leaueth neuer a corner vnsought, and he thinkes great sinnes to bee infinite, and little sinnes great, and iudgeth no sinne so small, but that it deserueth the anger of God, & therefore he wonders at the mercy of God, which throwes vs not all down to hel in a moment: & he crieth out with holy Ieremie: It is the Lords mercy that we are not consumed. A-way then with this superficiall and hypocritical search, where so many sinnes are spared and not found out. It is Pharisaical, for euen so the Pharisie, when hee came into the Temple to recken with God, and to tell what Traytours hee had found, that is, what sinnes vpon good search hee had espied, hee returnes his precept, all is well, hee hath found neuer a one, but beginnes to thanke God that hee was so good, and so good, and not so ill, and so ill, nor yet like the Publicane. The world is full of Pharisies, not onely the Popish Church: but euen our Church swarms with these superficiall searchers, who cannot (because they will not,) finde any sinne to present vnto God. Men thinke in the Countrie, a Church Officer hazards his Oath, if he present all well, and findeth no fault in his Parish, to present as punishable to the Ordinary: for men thinke it vnpossible, that there should bee none in a whole parish: then how doth that man hazard his own soule, who being made ouerseer & searcher of his heart, findes nothing in it to present to the Lord. For it is not more easie to espye outward and actuall transgressions in a whole parish, then it is to finde a heape of corruptions in a mans heart, if a man will search into the bottome of it with the light of Gods law. Therefore when the Lord comes and keepes his visitation, what shall become of such a man, but to vndergoe the strict and seuere search of the Almightie, because hee would not search himselfe?

Lam. 3, 22.

Our bodies and liues are free from spanish Inquisition (which is one of the last props, which Sathan hath lent the Pope, wherewith to vphold his declining Kingdom) and the Lord grant we may be euer free from it. But in the meane time, that might put vs in mind how to deale with our corrupt hearts, and vnmortified affections, euen to erect an Inquisition ouer them, to lay in waite for them, to search them narrowly, and to vse them roughly: yea, to set our hearts vpon the rack of Gods law, that so it may confesse the secret wickednesse of it: for the Papistes doe not thinke vs Protestants, greater enemies to their superstition, then the inward corruptions of our hearts, are to our saluation; therefore it may bee a godly pollicie for euery man, euen to erect an Inquisition ouer his owne heart and conscience, and not to spare his most secret and deerest sinnes, and such as are neerest allyed to his owne nature: for that is the true search here commaunded by the Prophet, and practised by all godly and holy men: when a man purposeth to finde all that are, and to espie euen all his sinnes: for a godly man is neuer satisfied in his search, but still, the more he findes, hee suspects the more are still behind: and therefore hee continueth searching his owne heart all his life long: Therefore let euery professor looke to it betwixt God & his conscience, that he dally not with himselfe in this case: for if hee doe, then, when God comes with his priuie search, his hipocrisie shal be discouered & his nakednes shal be laid open in the viewe of men, & Angels: to his eternall confusion.

Third-

Thirdly, Search, ſaith the Prophet, but not ſo content: hee forceth it againe, Euen ſearch you. In thus repeating and vrging this exhortation, the holy Ghoſt giues them and vs to vnderſtand, that the true ſearching of a mans heart, and life, is a duty of a great moment, and ſpecial neceſſitie: therefore he leaues it not after once naming it, but inforceth it the ſecond time, as being no matter of indifferency, but of great neceſſitie: thereby ſhewing, that it is a principall dutie in repentance, euen the beginning and foundation of all true grace.

And further, it is a meanes alſo to preuent Gods iudgements: for when men ſearch not themſelues, then God ſendes the fire of afflictions, and croſſes to trie and ſearch them: but when they ſearch themſelues, then God ſpareth to ſearch them by his iuſt iudgements.

Now in that this dutie of ſearching, is both the beginning of all true grace, and the meane to ſtaie Gods iudgements, and therefore is ſo pithely, and forceably vrged by the holy Ghoſt, it muſt teach vs all a neceſſary leſſon: namely, to make great conſcience of ſearching our ſelues. Firſt, becauſe God hath ſo commanded, and we are to make conſcience of obedience to euery commaundement. Secondly, becauſe therby we ſhal reape two ſo great commodities, as firſt, thereby we ſhall lay a ſure foundatiō for the good work of grace in vs, and ſecondly, ſhall ſtaie the hand of God, and his iudgements, from being executed vpon vs. Let vs therefore hearken to this counſaile of the holy ghoſt, let vs take the fan of the Lawe, and therewith ſearch and winnowe our harts and liues. Our hearts, for ſecret and hidden corruptions. Our liues, for committing of euil, and omitting of good. Doe with your hearts as men doe with their wheate: they will not ſuffer their corne to lie long in the chaffe, leaſt the chaffe hurt it, but commits it to the fanne, that the winde may ſeparate them: So the graces of God in our hearts are pure corne, our ſinnes & corruptions are chaffe: looke well, & thou ſhalt find in thy ſelf much chaffe, and but little corne: let not then the chaffe lye too long mingled with the corne, leſt it corrupt the corne. Let not thy ſins lye mingled with the grace of God in thee, if thou doe, they will choke it in the end, and ſo depriue thee of al grace; therfore rip vp thy hart, and looke into thy life, and when thou haſt ſinned, enter into thy ſelf, aske thy cōſcience what thou haſt done, & be not quiet til thou haſt found out thy ſinne, and the foulenes of it: and neuer thinke that thou knoweſt any thing in religion, till thou knoweſt what is in thine owne heart. And what are thy ſpeciall and priuieſt corruptions, and looke into thine owne faults, not with a partial eye, but with a cenſorious, and a ſtrait iudgement, ſpare ſinne in no man, but eſpecially condemne it in thy ſelfe.

But alas, theſe times of ours, cry out of an other ſtate, for euen Ieremies caſe is ours: We may complaine as hee did, No man repents him of his wickedneſſe, ſaying, what haue I done? the ſame is the ſore of our people, and the ſickneſſe of all Nations: that euery man runnes on in his ſinnes, from ſinne to ſinne, careleſly: euen as the barde horſe into the battaile. But how rare a thing is it, to finde a man, that daily ſearcheth himſelfe, and examines how hee liues, & how the caſe ſtandeth betwixt God and himſelfe: and that when hee hath done amiſſe, entereth into the cloſet of his hart, and ſtrikes himſelfe vpon the breaſt, and diſputes the caſe with himſelfe, ſaying, What haue I done? O what is this, that I haue done againſt God, againſt his Church, & againſt my own ſoule? Ier.8.6.

The want of this, is that which the Prophet complaines of in that place: not as though it were ſufficient thus to doe, in a mans owne conſcience: but becauſe it is a good beginning, and a ſtep to further grace. For if a man did ſeriouſly thus deale with his conſcience after his ſinne, his conſcience would ſhape him ſuch an anſwere, and would tell him ſo roundly, what hee had done, that hee would take heede, how hee did the ſame againe, and looke more narrowly, and warily to himſelfe all the dayes of his life. Seeing therefore it is ſo neceſſarie a dutie, let euery one of vs indeuour the practise of it, namely, to rippe and ransacke our hearts, and to search our waies vnto the bottome.

Now for your better instruction, and furtherance in the performance hereof: you must knowe that this Search is to bee made by the Lawe of God, for nothing els but Gods law can helpe vs, and let vs see that which wee must search for: for if we search by any other meanes, we may seeke and search long enough, ere we find anything that will be matter of repentance. Aske the diuell, hee will tell thee all is well, and that thou art in an excellent estate and God loues thee, and thou art sure of Heauen: this song the diuell alwayes sings for the most part till a man comes to dye, for then hee appeares in his colours, but till then, hee labours to sing, and lull all men a sleepe in the cradle of securitie. Aske our own flesh, and our owne hearts and natures, and they will answere, and say, that all is well and safe, and that wee haue beliued, and loued and feared God all our daies. Aske the world, and men in the world: and they will answere, all is well, and they will say further, that thou art a right good fellow, and art worth twentie of these curious fooles that stick vpon points, and stand vpon circumstances, as swearing & drinking, and good fellowship, and gaming, and such other nice and circumstanciall points: thus will worldly men answere: for thy prophane course is acceptable to them, because thereby thou approuest the same in them. Nay, goe further, and aske all humane learning in the world, and it cannot tell thee what one sinne is, nor what it is to offend God: so that there remaines onely the lawe of God, the light whereof will disclose the darkenesse of our hearts, and the iustice whereof will reueale the vnrighteousnesse and the peruersnesse of our natures: therefore to the Lawe of God must wee flye to helpe vs in this search.

And yet for our better helpe in this dutie, and that there may bee nothing wanting to that soule, that seeketh God, therefore we are further to know, that if wee will search our selues by the lawe profitably, we must marke three rules, the truth whereof vnlesse wee knowe, acknowledge, and feele: wee shall neuer see our owne estate, nor profite by this Search, but plodde on from sinne to sinne, vntill wee plunge into hell.

The first Rule is, that euery man that came from Adam, sinned in the sinne of Adam: thou must therefore knowe, that his sinne in eating the forbidden fruite, was thy sinne: and thou sinnedst therein, as well as hee (though thou wast then vnborne) and that thou art guiltie of it before God, and must aunswere for it to GODS iustice, vnlesse Christ doe it for thee. The reason hereof is, because wee are his seede & posteritie, we were the in his loines, he was the father of vs all: and was not a priuate mā as we are now, but a publike person, the pledge of all mankind, and bare the person of vs all at that time: therefore what he did then, he did it for himselfe, and for vs: what couenant God made with him, was made for himselfe and vs: what God promised him, and hee to God, hee promised for himself, and for vs: what he receiued in his Creation, hee receiued for himselfe, and for vs: and what he gained or lost by his fall, hee gained and lost for vs, as for himselfe. He lost the fauour of God, and originall puritie: therefore he lost it for all his posteritie: guiltinesse, and Gods anger, and corruption of nature which he gained, he got for vs all, as well as for himselfe. If we doubt of this point, it is proued by the Apostle: where the holy Ghost saith: Sin entred by one man, and death by sin: and thus sinne went over all, and that it went ouer all them, which sinned not in the like transgression with Adam* (that is, euen our children) who as they are borne, are borne not onely tainted with originall corruption: but guiltie also of Adams sinne. This is a most certaine truth, though it seeme strange, for fewe men thinke of it, that euer they shal answere for Adams sinne: and therefore if any obiect, what reason is there that I answere for another mans sinne? I answere, true, if it had beene Adams sinne alone: but it was his and thine also: for hee was thy Father and stoode in thy roome: and thou also since thou wast borne, hast confirmed what hee did.

Now

Now therefore though not one of many thinkes seriously thereof: namely, that hee should stand guiltie of a sinne committed more then fiue thousand yeeres before he was borne, yet seeing it is most true, both in Scripture and good reason: let euery man subscribe in his conscience to this truth. And let this be thy first resolutiō in this search, that thou standest guiltie of Adams transgression.

The second rule to bee knowne is, that in euery man are all sinnes: more plainely, that in euery man by nature are the seedes of all sinnes: and that not in the worst, but in the best natured men: make choyse of the best man and the greatest sinne, and that worst sinne is to be found in that best man. If any doubt of this, let him consider what originall sinne is, namely, a corruption of the powers of our soules; and that not of some, or in part, but of all, and wholy. This corruption hath two parts. First a want, not of some, but of all good inclinatiō, a want of all goodnes. Secondly, a deprauation & proneneſſe, not to some, but to all euil: and not a proneneſſe onely, but originall sin infuseth into euery mans heart, the seed of all corruption.

Many men stand much vpon their good meaning, and vpright heart, and bragge of a good nature: but they are soulely deceiued; for take the ciuilest man vpon the earth, and the seedes of all sinnes in the worlde are in him by nature. But to explaine this point fully, obserue these two clauses.

First, I say not, the practise of all sinnes, but the seedes; for all men practise not all sinne: the seedes are in their nature: but the practise is restrained, sometime by education, sometime by good and wholesome lawes, sometime the constitution of mens bodies deny the practise of some sinnes, sometime the Countrey a man dwelles in, or calling a man liues in, keepes him from the practise of some sinnes: and alwaies a generall and limitting grace of God, restraines the natures of all men, from running into many sins: which hand of God, if God should take away, and leaue euery man to his nature, wee should see that euery man would practise any sinne in the world: yea, euen the greatest sinnes that euer we heard to bee done in the worlde. All men which knowe themselues, knowe this to be true. And the more a man knowes his owne heart, the more hee seeth that his heart is a sea of all wickednesse: and that it is the mercy and grace of God, that hee hath not fallen into the mightiest and most monstrous sinnes in the world.

Secondly, I say, by nature. For I know by good education, & by grace, it is otherwise: grace rectifieth nature, but that is no thankes to nature: for it is as euil and corrupt still, being seuered from grace: and therefore nature must be fully abolished, afore man come to heauen. And yet (though all this be true) I say not that sinne breakes out in all natures alike, though all natures be alike corrupt: for the course of nature is restrained in some more then others, by the meanes aforesaid; but this is the truth, that whereas some are not so angry, some not so wanton, some not so cruell, some not so couetous, some not so ambitious, &c. as others; that comes not from any goodnesse of nature in them, aboue the other originally, but from Gods hand, which tempereth, restraineth, and moderateth euery mans nature as he seeth good.

And if God did not thus moderate and restraine the natures of men, but suffer them to breake out to the full: there would then be no order, but all confusion in the world; therefore (as especially for his Churches quietnesse, so also for the preseruation of publike peace, and the vpholding of societie in the world, betweene man and man) the Lord holdes a hand ouer euery mans nature, and keepes euery one in a certaine compasse limitted by the wisdom of his power, which restraining hand of his, if the Lord should take away, all societies and common wealths, would be turned vpside downe, because euery man by the vniuersall corruption of his nature, would breake out into euery sinne. I ende this point with appealing to the testimony of the consciences of all men, and especially of the best and holiest men: of whom I would ask this question, whether they find not in their natures an inclinatiõ, euen to the fowlest sinnes in the worlde; if shame, or feare, or else the grace of God restrained them not? so that the best men doe knowe well enough, what adoe they haue with their corrupt natures, to keep them within the compasse of Obedience.

Nay, I yet adde further, the nature of men, and of all men is so corrupt, since Adam: that euen the seede of the sinne against the holy Ghost, and a proneneſſe to it, is in the nature of euery man (though not one man amongst many thousandes doe commit that sinne,) for seeing in that sin, there is a heape or sea of all sinnes gathered together, hee therefore that hath in his nature the seede of all sinnes, hath also the seede of it. And againe, seeing all euill tendes to a perfection, as well as grace doth; what reason therefore is there, but wee may safely thinke that the Diuell woulde hale euery one to that height of sinne: if it were not that the powerfull hand of God preuented him, who will neither suffer wicked men, nor the Diuell himselfe to bee so wicked as they could, and would bee.

The vse of this second Rule, is notable. For in this searching of our selues, it sheweth vs what wee are, without all colours or deceit, and fully discouers vnto vs, the vglineſſe of our natures: and it may teache vs all how to think and esteeme of our selues, when we heare of Caines vnnatural murther, Pharaohs vnnatural cruelty, & Sodomits vnnatural lust, Achitophels diuilish pollicie, Senacharibs horrible blasphemie, Iudas monstrous treason, Iuliens fearefull Apostacie. When we heare of the fearefull murthers, treasons, periuries, sinnes against nature, blasphemies, Apostacies, witchcrafts, and other the horrible sinnes of the worldtlet vs then returne into our selues, & looke homewards, euen into our owne hearts, and confesse euery one, that these should haue bene euen thy sinnes also, if Gods grace had not preuented thee.

Exod.1.
Gen.8.
2.Sam.15.

This will humble thee, and make thee thinke vilely, & basely of thy selfe, and so consequently bring thee to repentance & true amendment: and the very reason, why men repent not, nor amend their waies, is because they are Pharisies by nature, and thinke highly of themselues, and of their owne natures, and their naturall inclinations: this will be a harsh and a strange Doctrine to them; Oh, they haue excellent natures, and they cannot endure such, and such sinnes, and they thanke God, they are not as ill as others: but let all such men know, they must cease magnifying nature, and learne to magnifie Gods grace. Let them knowe, that nature in them, is in the Roote, as much corrupt, as in the worst man in the worlde, and euery mans heart is a bottomlesse fountaine of all sinne; therefore praise not thy nature, but Gods grace & mercy in giuing thee so good a nature; or rather, so well restraining, and rectifying thy nature; and stay not there, but desire of the Lord, that as he hath giuen thee a better tempered nature, thẽ to other men: so also he would bestow on thee his speciall and sauing grace: & as he hath kept thee from the fearfull sins of others (thou being as ill naturally as they) so he would also lead thee into the way of saluation, which else the best nature in the worlde, can neuer attaine vnto.

The third rule to be known & practised by him, who will truely search himselfe, is, that euery man borne of Adam, is by nature the child of wrath, and Gods enemie: this is true of all without exception; High, or low, rich or poore, noble or simple, borne in the visible Church or without. And further, by beeing enemy of God, hee is therefore borne subiect to hel, to damnation, and to all other curses: so that looke as a Traytour conuicted, stands therby in his Princes high displeasure, and is sure of death without speciall pardon; so stands euery man when hee is borne, conuicted of high treason against God, in his high disfauour; and is in daunger of Hell, which is the fulfilling of the wrath of God. Thus Dauid confesseth of himselfe; I was borne in iniquitie, and in sinne hath my mother conceiued me: If in sinne, then in Gods wrath, and vnder the daunger of damnatiõ. If any aske, how, or why this is so, I answere, the truth, as also the equitie of this third rule depends on the two former: for, becauſe euery man is borne guiltie of Adams great ſinne, and alſo tainted originally with all corruption & a pronneſſe of all ſin: therefore it followeth in equitie and iuſtice, that euery man is borne vnder the wrath and curſe of God. This point is a plaine and euident truth: yet men in the world thinke not ſo, and it is the cauſe, why men repent not of their ſinnes: for moſt men thinke that by nature, they are in Gods fauour; and therfore they neede not ſo ſue for it in humiliation and repentance; but onely liue ciuily, and do no open wrong, and all is well: whereas (alas) there is no condemned Traitour, more out of his Princes fauour, nor more ſure of death without a pardon, then al we are out of Gods fauour, and ſure of damnation, vnleſſe wee procure Gods fauour againe, by faith and repentance.

For the better opening of this third rule, and the manifeſting of the truth: let vs knowe further, that the curſe of God, vnder the which we are all borne is three-fold.

The firſt, is a bondage vnder Sathan: It is a certaine truth that euery man as he is borne of his Parents, and till hee repent, is a ſlaue of Sathan: man or woman, high or lowe, Sathan is his Lord and Maiſter. Hee ſittes as Iudge in his heart; and in this ſence Sathan is the King of the Nations, and God of the world, Men will in wordes defie Sathan, and not name him without defiance: and ſpitte at him; and yet (alas,) hee is in their hearts: they ſpit him out of their mouthes, but hee is lower; they ſhoulde alſo ſpitte him out of their hearts, and that is true defiance indeede: for alas, hee lodgeth in thy heart, and there he makes his Throne, and raignes vntill the ſpirit of regeneration diſpoſſeſſe him: and till then, no ſeruant is ſo ſubiect to his maiſter, no ſlaue to his Lord, as is the heart of man by nature vnto Sathan, the prince of darkeneſſe. Nay, our bondage, is more fearefull, then the ſlauery of any poore Chriſtian, in the Spaniards, or in the Turks Gallies: for their bodies are but in bondage, and at commaund, and vnder puniſhment but our beſt part, our heart, our conſcience, our ſoule it ſelfe is captiuated vnto him, and vnder his command, who is the King of crueltie, and confuſion, and Lord of Hell, whoſe commandements are Iniuſtice, whoſe ſeruice is ſinne, and whoſe hyre is damnation.

The ſecond part of the Curſe, is the firſt death, or the death of the body: that is, a ſeparation of the ſoule and body a ſunder for a time, namely, till the laſt iudgement. This death is duly and iuſtly the puniſhment of any one, or the leaſt ſinne: therefore, how due and iuſt a puniſhment vpon that horrible heape of ſinfulneſſe, which is in euery mans nature? and it is a moſt terrible curſe. For it is the very gate of hel, and the downfall of damnation, vnto all men, but ſuch, as by faith and repentance doe get their death ſanctified by the death of Chriſt: vnto ſuch men indeede it is no curſe, but a gracious and glorious bleſſing, for it is altred by Chriſt his death. But vnto all men by nature, and which repent not, it is the heauie curſe of Gods wrath, and the very downfall into the gulfe of Hell.

The thirde part of the curſe, vnder which euery man is borne, is, the ſecond death: the death of ſoule and bodie; which is the eternall want of Gods preſence, and the accompliſhment of his wrath: and an apprehenſion and feeling of that wrath, ſeazing on body, ſoule, and conſcience. The firſt curſe, was a ſpirituall death; the death of the ſoule. The ſecond a temporarie death, the death of the body. The third, is an eternall death, a death both of ſoule and body together; and for euer. This eternall death is the curſe of all curſes, the miſerie of all miſeries and torment of all tormentes: and I ſhewe it thus. Often when thy tooth acheth, and ſometime when thy head acheth, or in the paine of the ſtone or collicke, thou wouldeſt giue all that thou haſt in the world to bee eaſed of that paine: Nay, in the extremitie of ſome fittes, many will wiſh themſelues euen out of the world: Now, if the paine of one tooth, can ſo farre diſtemper minde and body, that it cannot bee relieued with all the pleasures of this life; O then, what a torment shall that bee? when not one kinde of paine, but the whole viole of Gods wrath shall bee powred, not on one member, but on the whole soule body, and conscience, and that not for a time, vnder hope of better: but eternally without hope of release; and that not in this world, where there are comforts, helpes and remedies: but in that vgly and darksome place of torments; and that not amongst liuing men, which might mittigate thy paine, or else bemone thee, and bewaile it with thee: but with the Diuels, and damned spirits, which will now laugh at thy destruction, and solace themselues in this thy misery, and will reioyce, as thou didest serue them in earth, so now in hel to be thy tormēters. It may be therfore (by the way), good warning and wisedome to vs all, when wee feele the extremity of some bodily paine, to consider with our selues, and say: O then, what shall bee my misery and torment if I repent not; when not one member, but soule, body, and conscience, shall be racked and tormented in the feeling and apprehension of the anger of the Lord of Hostes.

In these three points, stands that curse and wrath of God, vnder which euery man is borne. And these doe answer to the three degrees of sinne, which are in vs: for as the two first Rules taught vs, there is in euery man by nature, till hee repent, a three-fold guiltinesse. First, a guiltinesse of Adams sinne. Secondly, the taint of originall, and vniuersal corruption. Thirdly, a pollution by many outragious actuall sinnes. In the first of these, euery man is equally guiltie. In the second, euery man is equally corrupt. But in the third, euery one keepes that compasse, within which the Lord wil keepe them, by his limiting power.

Now as in our guiltinesse of Adams sinne, sin hath his beginning: in originall sinne, his continuance: in actuall sin, his perfection: So answerable herevnto, the wrath of God (which alwaies standeth opposite to sinne) is begun in leauing vs by nature to the slauerie of Sathan, is continued by death, and is accomplished in damnation.

And now these three Rules, I commend to the carefull & Christian consideration of you all: certifying you from God, that as you can neuer bee saued, vnlesse you repent: nor repent, vnlesse you Search your selues (as here the Prophet biddeth) So, that you can neuer search your selues aright, till you bee perswaded, and resolued of these three Rules, and of the truth of them all, euen in your hearts and consciences: namely. First, that thou art guiltie of Adams sin. Secondly, that thou art prone by nature to all euil in the world. Thirdly, that for these, thou art subiect to the wrath of God, and to all the curses of his wrath: but when thou art in heart and cōscience resolued, that these are true, then thou art a fit Scholler, for this Lesson of the Prophet, Search thy selfe. For when thou goest, thus prepared vnto this Search, and esteemest of thy selfe, as these three Rules haue described thee: then if thou Search into thy selfe, thou wilt finde thy selfe, and thy estate to be such, as will cause thee to repent, returne and take a new course: therefore, what the Prophet saide to those Iewes, I say vnto you also, my brethren of this Realme of England, who are here now gathered together out of so many countries, & quarters of this Realme: yea, in the name of the same God, I cry vnto you. Search, O Search your selues: and thinke it not a matter indifferent to do, or not to doe it: but knowe it, that God commands you, as euer you will come to saluation: Search your selues. And the rather, because by these three Rlues you see how much chaffe of corruption is in your nature, and what neede therefore it hath to bee searched into, and fanned by Repentance. Bee well assured thou man, whatsoeuer thou art: there is so much Chaffe in thee, that if thou search not, and fanne it not out, thou wilt proue nothing but Chaffe at the last day, and so be blown away with the winde of Gods iustice into Hell. Take hold therefore of this exhortation, and deferre it not.

Thou wilt not suffer thy Wheate to lye too long in the chaffe, for feare of hurting it: Is it then safe to suffer the chaffe of thy sinnes and corruptions to lye cankering and rotting in thy heart? Bee ſure that that little portion of grace, which thou attaineſt vnto, by liuing in the Church, and vnder the Miniſtrie of the Word of GOD, will bee putrifyed, and cleane corrupted with the Chaffe of thy ſinnes: therefore againe, and againe, I exhort you to make conſcience of this dutie: Search into your ſelues, fanne out this Chaffe, this preſumption of ours, and high eſteeming of our owne nature, and conceits of Gods fauour before wee haue it: that ſo this Chaffe being blowne away, the Lord may then beſtow vpon vs ſoundneſſe of grace, & the foundation of all goodnes, which is a holy & humbled heart.

Saluation is ſuch a building, as the foundation thereof had need to be ſure and ſtrong: Ignorance, blindneſſe, and preſumption, are not ſufficient foundations for ſuch a building: therefore as no man wil build a ſtrong houſe vpon any earth, but will firſt ſearch it, leaſt it prooue Sandie, & ſo ouerthrow all: So a wiſe Chriſtian will not build his ſaluation, vpon fancies & conceits, and naturall preſumptions: but will Search, and looke into his heart: and finding theſe to be ſandie, and rotten, and therefore too weak for the foundation of ſo glorious a building, will refuſe them all, and labour to furniſh his heart with ſuch ſound grace, as whereupon he may truſt ſo weightie a work, as is the Saluation of his ſoule. Againe, if thou wilt ſtand in the day of triall, then Search thy heart betime, and diſcerne betwixt Chaffe & Wheat: thou ſeeſt, that chaffe flyeth away before the wind; but good corne indures the Fan, and the furie of the wind: ſo in the day of triall, temptation, ſickneſſe, or open perſecution, the Chaffe of natural preſumption, and outward formalitie in Religion, will flye away: and it muſt be the penitent, humbled, and believing heart, which muſt then abide it out, and endure the fanne of temptations and perſecutions.

And to conclude, Let not the Diuell deceiue thee, in making thee imagine or hope to pleaſe God, and yet to let thy corruptions lie vnſeene, and thy ſins vnſearched out, leaſt thereby thou marre all: for thou vſeſt not to lay vp wheat in thy garners, vntil it be purged from the Chaffe: ſo thinke not to ſtore vp any ſauing knowledge, or any other grace of God in thy heart, vntill the chaffe of vanitie be firſt blowne away, that ſo the holy graces of God, may be laide vppe in the garners of thy ſoule. And therefore queſtionleſſe (to ſpeake one word to touch our common profeſſors, in the very ſore of their ſoules) al knowledge that is ſtored vp in theſe impure and vnſearched hearts; is euen as wheat laide vp in the Chaffe, which is (a thouſand to one) ſure to be eaten vp by the chaffe, ſo that, when the winnowing time of triall and perſecution comes: I feare, that ſuch men will (for all their knowledge) ſhrinke aſide, and betray the truth: there knowledge then prouing no better then chaffe, becauſe it was laide vp in an vnholy heart: If therefore thou wouldeſt ſtand and endure when Poperie, or perſecution, or temptations come, if thou wouldeſt abide the furie of the fanne of temptations: now then exerciſe thy heart with the fanne of GODS law, Search and ranſacke it, purge out the chaffe of corruption, and ſtore vp knowledge in an holy heart, and a good conſcience, and that will abide the violence of all temptations: yea, when God ſuffers the Diuell to doe with vs, as hee did with Peter, to winnow vs like wheat, to ſift and trie vs, as hee did Iob, with the furious winde of all his mallice: the knowledge will proue Wheate, that wil abide the winde, and gold that will abide the fire: thus glorious will it be in the ende, if we follow this holy Prophets counſell, and Search our hearts.

And thus much for the firſt point (namely) the dutie of Searching heere commanded, in which wee haue ſtaied the longer, becauſe it is the foundation of all the reſt: and this being well laid, the whole building will goe vp the faſter.

Now wee come to the ſecond generall point here laid down: that is, whom muſt we Search? the Prophet anſwereth: your ſelues not other mē, but your ſelues. This ſearch ſo vrged and inforced by the Prophet, muſt not be of other mens hearts and liues, but of our owne: our owne are our charge, and not other mens: and therein is the saying true, which else is most false: Euery man for himselfe: for as euery soule must bee saued by it selfe so must it beleeue, Repent, and search it selfe.

The dutie therefore here commanded, is, for euery man that would haue his soule to be saued, to Search it, and reforme it, and leaue others to bee searched by themselues. Here the holy Ghost meets with the common corruption of this worlde, (and that is) that men are Eagle eyed, to see into the liues of other men, but to looke into their owne hearts, and liues, they are blinder then Moles: they can see moates in other mens liues, but discerne not beames in their own: whereby it comes to passe, that they stumble and fall fowly for the eies of most men are set vpon others, & not vpon themselues: and thereupon it is, that an euil man seeing other men, & not himselfe: thinkes best of himselfe, & worst of other men: but contrariwise, a good man seeing himselfe, & not other men, thinkes worst of himselfe, and better of other men: an euill man lookes outward, and iudgeth other men: but a good man looks homeward & iudgeth himselfe: and in iudging, condemnes himselfe, farre aboue other men: and that because by searching into his own heart and waies, hee knowes that by himselfe, which he knowes not, by any man in the world besides.

So then we must search, not other men, but our selues: our owne hearts and our owne liues are our charge, and burthen: the liues of other men concerne vs not, being priuate men, further thē either to followe them being good, or take heede of them being euill: but to search, or to bee inquisitiue into them, is no dutie commaunded vs, but rather a foule & a base vice forbidden of God. Indeede Magistrates in their people, Pastours in their congregations, and housholders in their families are to search: but they can search onely for criminall causes, or open actuall sinnes: but this searching must bee of our hearts, which no man can search, but our selues onely. Fewe men haue a calling to enquire into other mens liues, but euery man hath a calling to search into himselfe: but (alas) men doe farre otherwise, they suffer themselues to rotte in their owne sinnes, and erect an Inquisition ouer other mens liues, and it is to be seene in daily experience, that those men, who are the great Searchers and priers into other men, are the neglecters and forgetters of themselues: And contrariwise they who doe narrowly Search themselues and their owne wayes, and looke into the corners of their owne hearts, doe finde so much worke to do with themselues that they little busie themselues, with other men.

And thus much may suffice for that point.

It followeth.

O Nation not worthy to be beloued.

The third point: Who must search? the Iewes, who are here termed a Nation, not worthy to be beloued: and yet for all that, they are bid to search themselues, that so vpon their Repentance, they might bee beloued. Where, wee may see the vnspeakable loue of God, and his wonderfull mercie, offering grace vnto such men, as are altogether vnworthy of it. Gods children are by nature like other men, and God findes nothing in them, why to respect them aboue others: but euen of his owne mercie, makes them worthy, who of themselues are not: therefore how worthy is that God, to haue all the loue of our harts, who loued vs, when we were not worthy to be beloued.

But let vs examine more particularly, why GOD doth call the Iewes a Nation, not worthy to bee beloued: I answere, God had blessed them aboue other Nations: He gaue them his Couenant of grace, and thereby made them his people, & committed to their trust, his holy word and Oracles: but he delt not so with other Nations, neither had the Heathē knowledge of his lawes. Besides all this, they had a better lande then others about them, it flowed with Milke, and Honie, (that is, with all commodities, and delights) and though their Countrie was but little: yet themselues so populous, and so ſo powerfull, that whileſt they pleaſed GOD, no enemie durſt ſet vppon them.

Thus for ſoule and bodie, they were euery way a Nation, bleſſed of God, a people beloued of God aboue all others. Now, how did this people (thus beloued of their God,) requite this his loue, which they had no more deſerued, then any other Nation? Certainly, as they deſerued it not afore they had it, ſo they requited it not when they had it: but requited this loue of God with ſinne, with rebellion, and with diſobediēce. They tempted him, they prouoked him to wrath, they preſumed of his mercy, and proued a moſt ſtubborne & ſtifnecked people, a froward generation: Moſes partly ſawe this in his owne experience, and better diſcerned it in the ſpirit of Propheſie: and therefore, wondring at this their wickednes, he cried out; Do you thus requite the Lord; O fooliſh people, & vnwiſe? thus: that is, with ſin, & diſobedience, which is the onely meanes to diſpleaſe the Lord, & to prouoke him to wrath: for this cauſe, they are worthily called a fooliſh & vnkinde people by Moſes, and here, by the Prophet. A Nation not worthy to be beloued: namely, for their vnthankfulneſſe, and vnkindneſſe: which was ſuch, as they not only were ſlacke, and careleſſe in performance of ſuch duties as God required: but euen multiplyed their ſinnes, & committed thoſe foule rebellions, which his ſoule hated.

And amongſt many, the Prophet heere in this Chapter, noteth three of their great ſins: for which they were a Nation not worthy to be beloued. Couetouſneſſe, Cruelty, and Deceit; all which were the more hainous and intollerable, becauſe they were the ſinnes of their Princes, their Rulers, and their Prieſts: who ſhould haue beene lights and examples to the reſt.

Now, although euery ſin in it ſelfe, is of that ill deſert, as it is able to caſt vs out of Gods fauour, and depriue vs of his loue: yet, behold, heere God complaines, not vpon a little cauſe, but for wonderfull, & exceeding vnthankfulneſſe, & vnkindneſſe in them; who of all other ſhould haue loued the Lord.

As a man cares not for hard vſage from him, whome hee eſteemes not: but a little vnkindneſſe dooth greatlie greeue a man, from him who is loued and reſpected: ſo is it with the Lorde our God, hee loued not the Gentiles, as hee did the Iewes, neyther was hee ſo bountifull vnto them: and therefore, (as wee may ſee) though they lived alwayes in ignorance, and continued alwayes in diſobedience, yet, the Text ſaith, the time of that ignorance God regarded not: but when as the Iewes, his owne people, whom hee choſe out of all people, & beſtowed his loue vpon them, and made his Couenant of grace with them, when they became vnkinde, vnthankfull, forgetfull, ſtubborne, and rebellious, that cauſed the Lord euen to complaine of the indignitie, and to cry out by Moſes, Do yee thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh people and vnwiſe? And heereby the Prophet, O Nation, not worthy to be beloued: & therfore there is no man, but if he be asked what he thinkes of this Nation of the Iewes: hee will anſwer, that they are a moſt vile & wicked people, a froward generation, and that they are worthy to taſte deepely of all Gods plagues, who ſo farre abuſed his loue and mercie.

Pſa. 147. Acts. 17. verſe. 30.

But what doth this belong to them alone? and is Iſrael onely a Nation not worthy to be beloued? Nay, I may cry out with as good cauſe: O England, a Nation not worthy to bee beloued. For, God hath beene as good a God to vs, as he was to them: and wee haue bin as vnkinde a people to him, as they were to him. But that I may bee free from diſcrediting our nation, and from defiling my owne neſt: let vs prooue both theſe points, and lay them open to the view of the world.

I Firſt therefore, the ſame mercies, and farre greater, haue beene powred and heaped vpon vs: he hath called vs out of the darkneſſe: Firſt, of Heatheniſme, & then of Popery: his couenant of grace and ſaluation, he hath confirmed with vs, his treaſures of his word and Sacraments, hee hath imparted to vs, his holye word neuer better preached, and the myſteries thereof neuer more plainly opened, ſince the time of the Apoſtles: and as wee haue Religion, ſo wee haue it vnder a religious Prince, whereby it comes to paſſe, that theſe bleſſings of ſaluation, wee inioy not in ſecret, or by ſtealth: but wee haue it countenanced by authorities: ſo that religion is not barely allowed, but euen as it were thruſt vpon men. Beſides all this, wee haue a land alſo, that floweth with milke & hony, it is plentifull in all good things: we haue liberty & peace vnder a peaceable Prince, and the companions of peace, proſperitie, plentie, health, wealth, corne, woole, golde, ſiluer, aboundance of all thinges, that may pleaſe the heart of man: thus hath God deſerued the loue of England.

2 But now England, how haſt thou requited this kindneſſe of the Lorde? certainely euen with a great meaſure of vnkindneſſe: that is, with more and greater ſinnes then euer Iſrael did: ſo that if Moſes ſpake true of them, then may our Moſes much more truelie cry out againſt England: dooſt thou thus requite the Lorde thou fooliſh people? And if this Prophet ſaid thus of Iſrael for three ſinnes, then may it be ſaid of England, for 300. ſinnes (O England) a Nation not worthy to be beloued: for thou haſt multiplyed thy tranſgreſſions, aboue theirs of Iſrael; euen as though thou hadſt reſolued with thy ſelfe, the more Gods kindneſſe is heaped on thee, the more to multiply thy ſinnes againſt him. For thou England, as thou haſt requited the Lorde with ſinnes; ſo not with a few ſinnes or ſmal ſinnes, or ſinnes, which hardly could haue bene preuented: for that had bin a matter of ſome excuſe, or not of ſo great complaint. But thy ſinnes are many, and grieuous, and capitall. And which is worſt of all, wilfull and affected, euen as though God had deſerued euill of vs: and that therefore we ought malitiouſly to requite him.

If any man make doubt of this, and therefore thinke I ſpeake too hardly of our Church: I will then deale plainely, and particularly, and rip vp the ſores of our nation, that ſo they may be healed to the bottome.

The common ſins of England, wherwith the Lord is requited, are theſe. Firſt, ignorance of Gods will and worſhip, (I ſpeak not of that compelled ignorance in many corners of our Land, which is to bee pitied becauſe they want the meanes) but wilfull, and affected ignorance. Men are ignorant, euen becauſe they will bee ignorant. Meanes of knowledge were neuer ſo plentifull, and yet neuer more groſſe ignorance: is not hee wilfully blinde, who wil not open his eyes in the light? and can there be any darkneſſe at noon day, but it muſt be wilfull? But our Nation is darke and blinde in the Sunneſhine of the Goſpell, and groſſely ignorant, when the Goſpell beates their eares, and light ſhines round about them: ſo, as if they cloſed not their eies, and ſtopped not their eares, they could not but both heare, and ſee: who would looke for ignorance after thirty fiue yeares preaching? and yet, many are as ignorant, as if they had bin borne and brought vp vnder Popery: ſo that our people are as euill as thoſe in the daies of Chriſt, of whom the holy Ghoſt ſaith; Light is come into the worlde, but men loue darkneſſe more then light. So knowledge is come into England: but many Engliſhmen loue ignorance better then knowledge. Alas, how many thouſands haue we in our church, who know no more in religion, then they heare in common talke of all men, and which is worſe, they thinke it ſufficient alſo, and which is worſt of all, whereas they might haue more, they will not, but care not for it. Ioh. 3. 19.

2 The ſecond maine ſin of England, is Contempt of chriſtian Religion. Religion hath bin among vs theſe fiue and thirtie yeeres; but the more it is publiſhed, the more it is contemned, and reproached of many; in ſo much, as there is not the ſimpleſt fellow in a Country towne, who, although hee knowes not one point of religion, yet he can mock, and ſcorne ſuch as are more religious thē himſelfe is, this is one of the moaths of England, that eates vp religion, this is greeuous in whomſoeuer, but moſt intollerable in two ſorts of men. Firſt, in them, who are altogether ignorant, that they ſhould mock they know not what. A pittiful thing to hear one, who himſelfe cannot giue the meaning of one one petition in the Lords praier, to vpbraid other men, becauſe they are too forward: but it is the worſt of all, when men of knowledge, and ſuch as liue ciuilly, & would be counted good Chriſtians, are indeed of the better ſort, cannot abide to ſee others goe a little before them: but if they do, preſently they are hypocrites and diſſemblers. Thus not prophaneneſſe, nor wickednes, but euen Religion it ſelfe is a by-word, a mocking ſtock, and matter of reproch; ſo that in England at this day, the man or woman that begins to profeſſe Religion, and to ſerue God, muſt reſolue with himſelfe to ſuſtaine mockes & iniuries, euen as though he liued among the enemies of religiō, and not among profeſſors; and as religion increaſeth and ſpreadeth it ſelfe, ſo doth the number of theſe mockers. O what a curſed ſinne is this? to contemne the greateſt fauour that God can giue vs, that is, his holy religiō: for the which we ſhould rather praiſe him all the dayes of our liues. All that God can giue a man in this worlde, is his goſpell, what then can God giue to be regarded, when his goſpell is contemned?

This ſinne was neuer amongſt the Iewes: they indeed regarded it not ſo as it deſerued, but who did euer make a mocke and a ſcorne of it but England? O England, how canſt thou anſwere this? God ſends thee the moſt precious Iewell, that he can ſend to a Nation; and thou ſcorneſt it, and them that bring it, and them that receiue it; euen as though it were no bleſſing, but a curſe: ſo that as Chriſt ſaith to the Iews, for which of my good workes doe you ſtone me? So may the Lord ſay to England, I haue giuen thee a fruitfull lande, a bleſſed Prince, gold and ſiluer, peace and libertie, plentie and proſperitie: for which of theſe (O England) doeſt thou contemne my religion? The leaſt of theſe deſerue loue; but England hath a better then all theſe; that is, his Goſpell, and word of ſaluation: and yet, that alſo is contemned (as beeing nothing worth) and thoſe which confeſſe it, and thoſe that bring it, and conſequently God himſelfe that gaue it. If England had no more ſinnes but this: this deſerues, that it ſhould be ſaide of vs, that we are a Nation vnworthie to be beloued aboue al Nations, for ſome Nations would haue religion, that they might loue it, but they cannot haue it: ſome haue it, and do loue it: ſome haue it, and loue it not: but in no Nation is it made a mocking-ſtock, but in England. And where are thoſe men, but in England, who (like the dog in the manger) will neither entertaine Religion themſelues, nor ſuffer thē that would? let vs in time take heed of this ſinne, as a ſinne that cryeth to God, to reuenge ſo vile a diſhonor done to his maieſty: neither is there any ſin that more certainly foreſhewes, and more forceably haſtens the remouing of the Goſpell from vs. For high time is it to ceaſe louing, wher loue procures diſdain: And to ſtay giuing, where gifts are ſcorned,

Iob. 10. 32.

Carry home this leſſon to your great townes & cities where you dwel, for in theſe populous places are theſe great mockers, for where God hath his profeſſors, the diuel hath his mockers; and repent betimes of this ſin, for holde on in mocking, and be ſure that God (who will not be mocked) will remoue his Goſpel from you; but if you leaue this ſinne, and entertaine the Goſpell, (as it worthily deſerues) then be ſure of it, God wil continue the Goſpell, to you, & your poſteritie after you, in the face of all your enemies round about you.

There were then preſent inhabitants of London, Yorke, Cambridge, Oxford, Norwich, Briſtow, Ipſwich, Colcheſter, Worceſter, Hull, Lin, Mancheſter, Kendall, Couentry, Nottingham, Northampton, Bathe, Lincoln, Darby, Leiceſter, Cheſter, New caſtle, and of many other moſt populous cities and townes of England.

3 The third common ſin of England, is Blaſphemie, many wayes, but eſpecially in vaine ſwearing, falſe ſwearing, and forſwearing, and the abuſe of all the names and tytles of the Lorde God. This ſinne is generall, euen ouer the whole land, eſpecially, in Fayres, and Markets, where men for a little gaine, will not care to call the Lord of Hoſtes to be witneſſe to a lye, and the God of truth, to teſtifie an vntruth. And which is worſt of all, Gods holy name is vſed in vaine oathes, and ordinary talke. When men haue no cauſe to ſwear at all: ſo that it is moſt lamentable to ſee and obſerue, that the name of any man of honour, or worſhip, is vſed more reuerently, and leſſe abuſed, then that fearefull and glorious name: the Lord our God.

4 The fourth generall and great ſinne is, Prophanation of the Saboath. A common ſin euery where, and yet ſo great a ſin, that where it raignes, in that Country, congregation, family, man or woman, there is no feare of God, nor any true grace in them: for the keeping of the ſaboath, is the maintaining, increaſing, and publiſhing of religion.

5 The fift ſinne of our Nation is, vniuſt dealing in bargaining betwixt man and man. How harde is it to finde an honeſt, ſimple, plaine dealing man: and that euen in ſuch great aſſemblies as this is, I feare preſent experience wil teſtifie: you are now many thouſands gathered together, ſome to buy, ſome to ſell, ſome to exchange: Remember that I haue tolde you, an honeſt hearted and plaine dealing man is harde to find: therfore labour to approue your ſelues ſincere hearted men; remember the counſell of the holy Ghoſt; Let no man oppreſſe nor defraude his brother in bargaining: for the Lord is the auenger of all ſuch things. Theſe ſinnes are generall and vniuerſall as a canker: And ſo are the ſinnes of the 6.7. and 8. Commandements (though they be not altogether ſo commō as theſe be) Murthers, Adulteries, Vſuries, Briberies, Extorſions, Conſonages, they are a burthen, vnder which, our earth groanes; and they cry againſt vs to heauen, ſo that vpon as good or much better cauſe may it bee ſaid to vs, as to the Iewes: O Nation not worthy to be beloued.

Looke at the outward face of our Church, at the ſignes of Gods loue, which are amongſt vs, and at Gods dealing with vs; and behold, we are a moſt beautiful Church, a glorious Nation, a Nation to be admired, and wondred at: but looke at the liues of our ordinary profeſſors, looke at our ſins, and at our requiting of Gods loue: and we are a people of Sodom, as full of iniquities as they were, whoſe ſinnes are ſo many, ſo rife, and ſo ripe; that at the laſt they wil euen bring downe fire and brimſtone, or ſome other ſtrange iudgment vpon vs, if repentance doe not preuent it, or the cries and prayers of holy men ſtay not Gods hand. So, then let vs all here aſſembled, grant & confeſſe, that we are a Nation ſo far from being worthy to be beloued, as that we are moſt worthy to be hated, and to haue all the wrath of God powred vpon vs.

Now then, are we ſo? and ſhall we continue ſo ſtill? Nay, that is the worſt, and moſt wretched of all: then let euery one of vs learn this duty, enter into our ſelues, ſearch our hearts and liues, that they may lye open to our owne ſight, to the confuſiō of vs in our ſelues, that in God by repentance we may be raiſed vp.

Our ſinnes lye open before the face of God, and ſtinke in his preſence, and cry for vengeance: and before the face of Gods Angels, who bewaile it, and before the face of the diuel, who reioyceth in our confuſions: and ſhall they lye hid onely to our ſelues? Now then, if we would haue them hid from God, & ſtop the cry that they make againſt vs, and keepe them from Sathan, who accuſeth vs for them; we muſt ſo ſearch our ſelues, that they may lye open to our owne hearts: Remember thou thy ſinnes, and God will forget them: laie them open before thy owne face, and God will hide them from his: Write them vp for thy owne ſelfe, and God wil blot them out of his remembrance: but if contrariwiſe thou hideſt them, then aſſure thy ſelfe, the more thou hideſt, and burieſt them, the more open doe they lye in the face of God: and then what wil follow, but that they wil all be diſcloſed at the laſt day, to thy eternall confuſion. Therefore againe, and againe, I exhort you in the name of God, Search your ſelues, finde out your ſinnes, cōfeſſe them to God freely, and ingeniouſly: confeſſe their deſert to be Hell and damnation, humble your hearts to God, cry, and call for pardon, as for life and death, purpoſe and promiſe to leaue them, begin a new courſe of life, beleeue ſtedfaſtly, and doubt not but of pardon and forgiueneſſe in the blood of Chriſt, continue in that faith, and that new courſe of life: So may England preuent Gods iudgements, and quench that great action of vnkindnes, which God hath againſt them, and become a Nation as worthy (vpon their faith & repentance) in Chriſt to be beloued: as for their peace and proſperitie, they haue bene of all nations of the earth admired.

Hitherto

Hitherto, of the third generall point.

4 The fourth generall point in this exhortation, is the time limitted them, when they ſhould Search. Before the Decree come forth &c. As though the Prophet ſhould ſay. Iſraell, repent, before God execute his iudgements on thee. For behold the gracious dealing of God: Man ſinneth, his ſinnes deſerue plagues: but GOD preſently plagueth not, but deferres it, he puts a time betwixt the ſinne and the puniſhment (ordinarily:) this he doth to ſhew his mercy vnto mankinde, becauſe that hee would not deſtroy them, if they would amend. Therefore, after the ſin, he ſmites not preſently, but puts of his puniſhment, that in the meane time man may Repent. Here the Prophet compares the Lord to a mother, for as ſhe conceiues the fruite in her wombe, and beares it a long time, ere ſhe bring it out: ſo the Lord after a mans ſinnes, or a peoples ſinnes, conceiue (that is) ordaines, and decreeth a iudgement for it, but he keepes it vp, and all that while he heares it: But as ſhe, when her time is come, then trauailes and bringes forth: ſo, when the time that God hath appointed, is come, and ſtill ſinne is not repented of: then his iuſtice trauailes to be deliuered of that iudgement, which mercy hath kept vp ſo long a time. Thus the old world had an hundred & twentie yeares giuen them for time of repentance; all that while God was in conceiuing, at laſt when their ſinnes were ripe, and no hope of amendment: then GOD trauelled, and brought forth a fearefull birth, namely the vniuerſall flood, to waſh away, and take reuenge vpon the vniuerſall iniquities of thoſe times. So many hundred yeers hee gaue vnto the Iewes, long he was in conceiuing their deſtruction, and oftentimes hee had it at the bringing forth, as in the captiuitie of Babylon, and vnder Antiochus; yet his mercy ſtayed it: and ſtill hee trauelled longer: telles them heere by the Prophet, that yet the Decree is not come forth, (though it bee conceiued:) but at laſt when Iſraell would not Repent, but grewe worſe, and worſe; (as in Chriſt his time) then hee could containe no longer, but trauelled indeede, and though it bee with griefe, yet hee hath brought foorth: and what? a moſt fearefull byrth, euen an vtter deſolation of that kingdome and Countrey, of their Citie, and Temple, and a diſpertion of their Nation ouer all the world: but as a woman at laſt is deliuered with daunger, and difficultie, with paine and ſorrowe: ſo the Lord long conceiues, but at laſt bringes foorth his iudgements: yet it is with griefe and vnwillingneſſe, and hee is loath (as it were) and much agrieued to execute his moſt iuſt iudgementes on thoſe, who haue profeſſed his name: hee often touched the Iewes a little, and as being vnwilling to ſmite them: hee drue backe his hande againe: but at laſt when their ſinnes did ſo increaſe, and were ſo ſtrong, that they euen did wringe out, by violence his plagues from him, then with much bewayling of their great miſerie (as wee may ſee in Chriſt weeping for them,) hee executes his iudgements on them. But as they are long a comming: ſo, when they come forth, they were the beauier; as a child, the more fulneſſe of time it hath, is the greater, the luelier, and the ſtronger: ſo, Gods iudgement, the longer God deferreth them, and is in conceiuing them, the beauier are they, when they come: that is manifeſt in the Iewes, once his owne people, for he hath deſtroied their lande with an irrecouerable deſtruction, and ſmitten their poſteritie with a blindnes of mind till this houre, ſo that to this day, when the old Teſtament is read, the vaile is ouer their eies, that they cannot ſee the light of Chriſt Ieſus, but plodde on in fearefull and palpable blindneſſe.

This Doctrine hath ſpeciall vſe to this our Church, to teach vs to looke to our ſelues betimes, and try our owne wayes, and turne to the Lord, for wee cannot tell how far off his iudgements are: ſin reaſō they muſt needs be neare, they haue beene ſo long deferred, and yet beene ſo iuſtly deſerued of vs. Certainely God hath long beene in conceiuing iudgementes and plagues for the ſinnes of England, and often hath Gods hand bene vpon vs by warre, famine, mine, peſtilence, invndations: and yet it hath beene puld backe againe: and his ſword hath beene put vp into his ſheath, and God hath ſtayed his byrth euen in the very trauell, and wee haue eſcaped, euen as a man, whoſe necke hath beene vpon the blocke, and the Axe holden vp to ſtrike: ſo then, yet the day is not come, yet wee haue time: happie wee that euer we ſawe this day, if now wee haue grace to repent, and ſearch our hearts, for then wee ſhall ſtaye this Iudgement decreed, that it ſhall neuer come forth againſt vs: but if we deferre to repent, & put off from day to day, and lye rotting ſtill in our ſinnes: then knowe and be aſſured, that as the Decree is eſtabliſhed, ſo it muſt needes come foorth: and then, when iudgement is come forth, & the ſtroke ſtriken, Repentance is too late: therefore what he ſaid to the Iewes, I ſay vnto vs, Search thy ſelfe O England, (a Nation not worthy to be beloued) before the Decree come forth, which is already paſt againſt thee.

Thus much for the fourth point.

5 Now followeth the laſt point: the reaſon of all. Why ſhould wi ſearch our ſelues? The reaſon is included in the fourth point: For there is a Decree come forth againſt thee. And though the execution bee deferred, and though God be vnwilling to take it out, yet without Repentance, it is moſt certaine, it ſhall come foorth, and bee executed at the laſt. In one word, this is the reaſon. Repent, or elſe certainely God will take vengeance: But (will mans heart ſay) is this true? Or rather theſe bee but words to feare men, and to keepe them in awe. I anſwere, for the proofe and experience hereof, neuer goe further then this place, and preſent example wee haue in hand: the Prophets bids them Search, Search, and Repent, elſe, as certainly, as there was a iudgemēt conceiued, ſo certainly it ſhould be executed vpon them: they would not heare, nor Search, nor repent: but what followed; let all men iudge whether God is not true of his word to them or no: yea, alas, who ſeeth not that God hath trauelled indeede, and hath brought foorth a fearefull iudgement on them, and hath made them for theſe thouſand yeares & a halfe, the gazing ſtock, the by word, and the amazement of all the world.

Thus was it threatned to the Iewes, and thus it is performed: and certainely thus hath it beene threatned, & thus ſhall it bee performed to thee, O England, except thou preuent the iudgements that are comming: O happy England, that I may ſay to thee, it is yet but comming. For as for the miſerable Iewes, vpon them (alas) it is come alreadie: to thoſe poore ſoules it can bee ſaide no more, Repent before the Decree come foorth: for it is now paſt: but thou art happie, for thy day is not yet come: yet I may ſay to thee: Repent before the Decree come foorth: and O happie England, that thou maieſt heare this worde: (Before) ſounding in thine eares. Therefore my beloued brethren, who are heere aſſembled out (almoſt) of euery corner of this kingdome, heare my words: and carry them home with you into al countries. God is the ſame God ſtill, as iuſt, and as iealous, as euer hee was: our ſinnes are as ill, nay, much viler then the Iewes were: how can it be then, but that muſt fall to vs that fell to them? therefore the zeale of Gods glorie, and my deſire of your ſaluations, make mee, that I dare not flatter: but tell you the truth: that is, that out of all queſtion, if wee ſearch not our ſelues and repent, there is a generall iudgement in preparing for vs: certainely the Decree is out, and what can ſtop the execution of it, but Repentance? God hath long ſpared, and hee hath beene long in trauelling, therefore (though nothing can be ſaid in way of propheſie) I am in my conſcience perſwaded to feare, and that out of infallible grounds of the word of God, that a plague, and a iudgement, and that moſt fearefull, hangs ouer England, & that it is alreadie pronounced vpon this Nation, and ſhall bee as certainely executed, without a viſible reformation: and becauſe I may ſeeme to ſpeake ſomewhat at large, giue mee leaue to giue you the reaſons inducing me hereunto.

1 First, the Goſpell hath beene preached preached theſe fiue and thirtie yeares, and is daily more and more, ſo that, the light therefore neuer ſhon more gloriouſly, ſince the Primitiue Church: yet for al this, there is a general ignorance, generall of all people, generall of all points, yea, as though there were no Preaching at all: yea, when Poperie was newly baniſhed, there was more knowledge in many, then is now in the body of our Nation: and the more it is preached, the more ignorant are many, the more blinde, and the more hardened (euen as a Stithie the more it is beaten vpon, the harder it is) ſo they, the more they heare the Goſpell, the leſſe eſteeme they it, and the more they contemne it: and the more God calles, the deafer they are: and the more they are commaunded, the more they diſobey. We Preachers may cry till our Lunges flye out, or bee ſpent within vs, and men are mooued no more then ſtones. O alas, what is this, or what can this bee: but a fearefull ſigne of diſtruction? Will any man endure alwaies to bee mocked? then how long hath God beene mocked? Will any man endure to ſtand knocking continually? If then God hath ſtood knocking at our hearts fiue & thirtie yeares: is it not now time to bee gone, vnleſſe we open preſently?

But, if we will know what this argueth, to contemne the Goſpell, and not to repent, when the word is ſo abundantly Preached: reade the Storie of Ely his wicked ſonnes. Hee ſpake vnto them, and gaue them godly counſaile, but they hearkened not vnto the voyce of their Father: But will ſome ſay, that is no great matter, not to heare their Father is a common thing: but marke what followeth, They would not heare their Father, becauſe the Lord would deſtroy them: a fearefull thing. Euen ſo it is with a nation, or a people: are they taught, and are they worſe and worſe? take heed: If Elyes ſons obey not, it is, becauſe God wil deſtroy thē.

If therefore Ely, and many Elyes haue ſpoken to England, and England heares not, England obeyeth not: England repents not: take heede the Lord in heauen ſay not, England will not heare the voyce of the Prophets, becauſe I will deſtroy it. Let no man ſay, wee take vpon vs to propheſie: wee onely giue warning, and ſhewe the danger, by example of the like.

My ſecond reaſon is this. One iudgement executed: and not working Repentance, is alwayes a fore-runner of another, that Rule is certaine, and an euident truth, and needs no prooving. Now, wee haue beene viſited with Famines, Earth-quakes, peſtilences, inundations, Thunder & lightnings in winter, and moſt ſtraunge & vnſeaſonable weather: but alas, all theſe haue taken no effect: where is the humiliation, repentance and reformation which they haue wrought? therfore it muſt needes bee, there remaines behinde a greatter iudgement. Men may be ſo madde to thinke theſe to be ordinarie things, and to come by courſe of Nature, and ordinarie cauſes: but certainly they are the ſhaking of the Rod, and fore-runners of a greatter iudgement, vnleſſe Repentance cut of their courſe. For looke as one cloud followeth another, till the Sunne conſume them: ſo one iudgement haſtens after another, and repentance onely is the Sunne, which muſt diſpell them.

3 Thirdly, it ſtands with the iuſtice of God, according as he hath reuealed it in the Scripture, eſpecially in Deut. 28. out of the whole Chapter, it muſt needs be gathered as a Rule. I will curſe that people which breake my lawes, now we may not deny but this land of ours, is for abundance of ſinne, a people of Sodome. All kinde of ſinnes, in all eſtates of men, rage and raigne euery day more and more: therefore I conclude, that vnleſſe wee repent, and ſo diſſolue this cloude, of iudgement, that hangs ouer our heads: it cannot be, but a moſt fearefull tempeſt is to come at the laſt, and when it is come, it will bee too late to wiſh they had done it. Therefore in the bowels of Chriſt Ieſus. Let this bee to intreate and exhort you all, to ſearch and looke into your ſelues, that ſo repenting and changing your wayes, you may get the ſword againe into his ſheath, which is already drawn out, but yet hath not ſtricken home, & may quench the wrath which is already kindled, but yet burns not out as it wil do, if by repentance we quench it not: & doe this euery one, as you tẽder the ſaluation of your own ſoules, & the continuance of the Goſpel to this glorious Nation, and the peace and proſperous ſtate of this Church & common wealth. For let men make what cauſes they will, it is certainly ſinfulneſſe that ouerturnes kingdomes, and changeth ſtates, as all theſe kingdomes and ſtates haue felt, who haue continued finally to contemne the Goſpell.

It followeth:

And you be as chaffe, that paſſeth on a day.

The Prophet proceedeth, & deſcribeth more plainely, the manner and ſtate of that plague, which God will ſend vpō them: the meaning was partly opened before, to bee in effect thus much; Search your ſelues, leaſt God take his fanne and try you, becauſe you would not try your ſelues, and finding you vppon the tryall, not ſound wheat, but light chaff: blow you to hell with the winde of his wrath: the Metaphor which the Prophet vſeth is this, he compares the Lord to a husbandman, great and rich, the whole world is his corne field: ſeuerall nations, (as this of ours for one,) are his heapes of Corne: but theſe heaps of corne be ful of chaff, that is, theſe particular Churches, are full of hypocrites: now a wiſe husbandman letteth corne and Chaffe lye together no longer, then till the winde doth blow, and then he appoints his fanning time to ſeuer his corne from his chaffe, and to blowe away his chaffe, and lay vp his corne: ſo God, the great & wiſe husbandman, will not let the Chaffe lye for euer amongſt the Wheate, hee hath therefore appointed his fanning times, when to blowe the Chaffe into hell, and to gather his wheat into heauenly garners.

Now Gods winnowing times are two: the one is at the laſt day, after this life, and that is Gods great winnowing day of all his Corne (that of all men) when the bad ſhall bee ſeuered from the good for euer, neuer to be mingled againe with thē, but by the ſtrong and powerfull fanne of his laſt and finall iudgement to be blowne into Hell: the winde of whoſe wrath, at that day, ſhall bee ſtronger to blowe them all away, then all the wind in the world to blow way one handfull of light Chaffe.

2 Gods other fanning time, is in this worlde, and that is alſo double. The one is, when the word is preached: the preaching of the word is one of Gods fans: For when the Goſpell is preached to a Nation or Congregation, it Fannes them, and tries them, & purgeth them, and ſo ſeuers them, that a man may ſee a manifeſt difference of the chaffe and the wheate, that is, of the godly man, and the wicked man: this preaching of the Goſpell doth Iohn the Baptiſt expreſſely call a Fanne: where the holy Ghoſt purſueth this whole Metaphor moſt plainely ſpeaking of Chriſt, hee ſaith, Whoſe Fanne is in his hand, and hee will throughly purge his Floore, and gather his wheat into his garner, but the chaffe he will burne with fire vnquenchable. The winde of this fanne of the word preached is ſo ſtrong, as that it ſeuers the Chaffe from the Wheate, that is, good profeſſors from hypocrites in the viſible Church, and blowes ſo ſtrongly vpon the wicked, that it brings them to the beginning of Hell euen in this world, for it ſo worketh vpon the conſcience, as if it cannot conuert them, it ſtrikes them with feare, terrour & torment, either in life or at death, which torment of conſcience is the very flaſhes of hell-fire. Mat. 3.

But, when this firſt Fanne of the word, wil not ſerue to bring men to repentance, (for the word preached, doth not confound a man actually, but only pronounce the ſentence, and thereby ſtrike the conſcience) then God hath another fanne, and that is the fanne of his iudgements: and that fanning or winnowing time is, when hee executes his vengeance and his iudgements on a Nation: this is his latter fanne, when the firſt will not preuaile, this is his powerfull and ſtrong fanne driuen about with the winde of his wrath, this fanne went ouer the olde worlde, and ſwept them al away, and went ouer the nation of the Iewes, and we ſee they are no more.

1. Theſe

1 These three fannes of God, make a threefolde separation of the Chaffe from the Wheate, that is, of the wicked from the Elect: with the fanne of his word, which is powerfull, he seuers them in affection, and disposition, and makes a distinction of them, so, as generally the Wheate is knowne to be Wheate, and Chaffe discerned to be Chaffe, by the preaching of the word: but though the tare be knowne to be tare, yet both growe together, so that the word onely seuers them in affection, and sets seueral notes of distinction vpon them both.

2 But then the second fanne of his iudgements is more violent, for therby he seuereth thē asunder in soule, gathering the godly men, as his wheate into the heauēs, & blowing the soules of the wicked into hell: but yet the bodies of them both lye together, as partakers of the same iudgement, so subiect to the same corruption, and are all lodged in the same graue of the earth, and death hath like dominion ouer them all.

3 But afterwards at the last day, at Gods great haruest, & great winnowing time, he then with the winde of his power, seuereth them asunder in soule and bodie. Wheate from the Chaffe, Sheep from the Goates, and separateth them, neuer to be mingled againe for euer & euer: and then with the winde of his wrath, he blowes the chaffe into fire vnquenchable, and with his louing fauour gathereth his wheate into the euerlasting & glorious garners of heauen.

So then, the first seuereth them in affection. The second, in soule, for a time. The third, actually in soule and body for euer and euer.

Nowe of these three winnowing times, the Holy Ghost speaketh here properly of the second: namely the fan of Gods iudgements: so that, the meaning of the Metaphor is this: search your selues and repent betimes, least God come vppon you with some fearefull Iudgements: because you haue so long contemned the fan of the word, and finding you too light to abide the tryall, doe take you awaye in the iudgement, and cast you into hell: for as sure as the fan of the word hath made difference of you, which are chaffe, and which are Wheate, so sure shall the fanne of his iudgements blowe away the chaffe to hell and damnation.

Thus much for the meaning.

Now for the vse, for vs in England the case stands thus: Our church doubtles is Gods corne field, & we are the corne heape of God: and those Brownists and Sectaries are blinde and besotted, who cānot see that the church of England is a godly heap of Gods corne: but withal, we must cōfesse, we are ful of chaffe: that is, of prophane & wicked Hypocrites, whose harts and minds abound in sinnes and rebellions: and many of our best professors are also too full of chaffe (that is) of corruptions, and doe giue themselues too much libertie in many sinnes: but alas, the pure wheate, how thinne is it scattered? how harde to finde a man (at least a family) which dedicate themselues to the Lord in holie and sincere obedience, and labour to make conscience of all sinnes: now therefore, seeing wee are Gods corne field, and wee haue some pure wheat amongst much chaffe, therefore God will winnow vs to finde out the corne, if hee haue but one corne of wheat in a handfull of chaffe, but one good man of many, he will stirre all the heape for those fewe cornes, hee will not care to blow all the chaffe to hell, to finde out those fewe cornes of wheat, to lay them vp in heauen: so that out of all question, England being so full of chaffe, must looke to be winnowed.

Now for the first Fanne of his word, it hath bene vsed in this land these fiue and thirty yeares, & that as powerfully, and as plentifully as anie where in the worlde, and yet (alas) many are more God-lesse, more ignorant, more prophane then euer they were, yea wickednesse groweth, and the chaffe increaseth aboue the Wheate: bee sure therfore, that God will bring his second Fanne vpon vs; because wee will not suffer the first, and the milde & gentle fanne of his word to trye and search vs: therefore he wil bring the fearfull fan of his iudgements, and with it, he will blow soule and body into hel, with those our sinnes & corruptions, which we would not suffer the Fanne of Gods word to blow from vs. The first hath so long blowne in vaine, that the second must needs come vpon vs, & it hath already begun to blowe: three or foure blasts haue blown ouer vs, famin, pestilence, earthquakes, fire, water, winde, these haue so blowne some of vs, that they haue taken away a great number of vs. For vs that remain, this onely remains, that we strengthen our selues by grace, to be able to stād against the next blast, for come it will, and when it comes, no wealth nor worldly thing can inable vs to endure it, onely faith & repentance, and the grace of God will stand at that day. Now therefore, in that so fearefull a fanning abideth vs: seeing it is so neer (as appeareth by the blasts already past ouer vs, which are nothing but the forerunners of a greater tempest:) what should be our care (except we care not to be blowne body and soule into hell) but to labour to eschew this fearful fan of Gods wrath: or at least, if it come vpon vs, that it may not blow vs to hel, but hasten vs to heauen. If thy heart be touched to aske how this may be: I answer thee, only to follow the Prophets aduice in this place, by searching & trying our selues. The way to escape Gods triall, is to try thy selfe: and to escape Gods iudgement, to be a iudge to thine owne soule: and so the way to escape the fearfull fan of God, is to fanne thine owne heart by the lawe of God. For whomsoeuer the first fanne (that is the word of God) doth worke vpon: these men are neuer blowne away with the fan of Gods iudgements. O then, entertain the word of God into thy hart, submit thy soule vnto it, let it pierce & try, and ransacke thy heart, and lay before thee thy wretched estate by thy sinnes, and when thou seest thy nakednes and misery, confesse it, bewaile it, be humbled for it, cry & call for mercy & forgiuenes; pray against thy speciall sins, striue to purge them out, as the poison of thy soule, craue grace from God against al thy sinnes: & if thou seest any sins more welcome to thy nature, more deere vnto thee, and which more preuaile against thee, then others do, pray against these sinnes, and striue against them aboue all: and endeuour, that by the fanne of Gods word, they may be blowne away from thee. When thou hast done this, then marke what will come of it: when thou hast fanned thy selfe, God will not fanne thee: but whē the fanne of his iudgement comes, and bloweth so strongly vpon the wicked, thē the Lord finding thee already fanned, and clensed by his word, wil spare thee, & his iudgment shall either blow ouer thee, & passe by thee vntouched (as ouer Lot, in the destruction of Sodome) or else shall fanne our all thy corruptions, and blow thee vp to heauen, to be laid vp as pure wheate in the heauenly garners, and mansions of glorie, which Christ ascended to prepare for thee.

In the plague at London, there dyed some weeke almost 2000. a weeke in 92. but in 1603. ther died 3000 in a weeke.

Now then amongst those many businesses, with which this worlde doth comber euery one of vs (all which shall perish with the worlde it selfe) let vs good brethren, spare some time for this great businesse. Martha may be combred about many things, but this is that one thing, which is necessarie: therefore whatsoeuer is done, let not this be vndone. Once a day put thy selfe and thy life vnder the fanne of Gods lawe, try thy self what thou art, and thy life, how thou liuest. Once a day keepe a Court in thy conscience, call thy thoughts, thy wordes, and thy deeds to their tryall: let the ten Commandements passe vpon them, and thy sinnes and corruptions which thou findest to be chaffe, blow them away by repētance, so shalt thou remaine pure and cleane wheate, fit for the house and Church of God in this world, & for his kingdome in heauen. But, if we will not do this, then alas, what wil follow? my hart grieueth to vtter it: but I must, vnlesse I should be a false Prophet: And therfore I wil. Our long peace, plentie, and ease, haue bred great sinnes, so great, that they reache to heauen, and prouoke Gods Maiestie to his face, and so strong, that they wil violently draw downe iudgements from God vpon vs: which when they come, they will be so powerfull, and so violent, that they wil blow vs away like chaffe, and bring this kingdome to some miserable ruine. O therfore how happie are we, if we can entertaine tertaine this doctrine, and practise it: for in so doing, we shall preuent Gods iudgments, we shall continue the Gospell to this land, and preserue this glorious Nation from being destroyed or dispeopled, by some fearful iudgment.

At Sturbridge faire

Beloued, you come hither to this place, purposely to buy and sell, and thereby to better your estates in this world: how happy then are you, if besides the good markets you make for your bodies and estates, you learne also how to make your selues abide the triall of Gods iudgments, and how to be made pure corne, fit to replenish the garners of heauen, & how to continue Gods fauour and the Gospell to this Nation. If thou goe away with this lesson, thou hast a Iewell more worth, then thou shouldest goe home possessed of all the huge riches of this Faire: you cal this and such like times, Faire times: but if thou learn this lesson right, then thou maist say, that this was the fairest day in deede, that euer shon vpon thee, since thou wast borne. This pretious Iewel which I haue spoken of all this while, I heere offer vnto thee. Euery one brings hither something to bee solde, this is the marchandize that I bring & set to sale vnto you: what euer commoditie any of you bring, it is from some quarter of this land, but all is from the earth: but this that I bring, it is from heauen: and all the earth cannot yeeld it: and as it is from heauen, so it is of heauenly vertue, and will worke that which all the wealth in this faire is not able to doe: therefore cast not to buy the baasest, and let passe the best of all: and neuer alledge that it is aboue thy compasse, and being a Iewell, it is too deere and costly for thee: for I offer it freely vnto you, and to euery one of you, I pronounce vnto you, from the Lord, that here this blessed doctrine is offered vnto you all, in his name, freely, and that you may buy it without money. Happie is that day when thou comming so farre to buy things for thy body, and paies so dear for them, doest meete with so pretious a Iewel, the vertue whereof, is to saue thy soule, and payest nothing for it. Thou maiest hereafter reioyce, & say: I went to buy and sell, and to helpe my bodie: but I haue also learned to saue my soule. I went thither to helpe to maintaine my owne estate: but I haue learned to help to maintaine England in prosperitie: for assuredly, if wee would all of vs learne this lesson, and practise it, we might assure our selues of the glorious prosperity of England, to cõtinue frõ generatiõ to generation: wheras alas, if we continue & go forward in our sins, & impenitency, it is greatly to be feared, that neither the Gospel nor this peace, will reach to our posteritie. Therefore now to make an end; I once again, & lastly, cõmẽd this doctrine to you al, & euery one of you (for this marchandise that I bring, is of that nature, that though some take it, yet there is also inough for euery one) & I commend it vnto you, euen from the very mouth of God him selfe; thinke of it, I charge thee, as euer thou lookest to appeare before the face of Christ Iesus the great iudge, at the last day; & if thou wouldest escape the rigor of that iudgement, enter now into iudgement with thy selfe, and search thy selfe: if thou now wilt not receiue this doctrine, then shal it at the last day be a bil of Enditement against thee, for if it saue thee not, it shal cõdemne thee, thinke of it therfore seriously, as a matter that concernes thy soule and bodie: yea, and thy posteritie, and this whole Realme, all which shall smart for it, if we repent not. And if the bodie of our people, & those, whose hearts are wedded to this world, wil not entertain this doctrine; then I turne vnto you that feare the Lord, and to you I direct my last warning: Search, O search, and try your hearts and liues, renewe and reuiue your faith and repentance, that if iudgements do come and blowe vpon this nation, and driue the Gospel from it, and it to hell: that yet you may haue a testimony to your consciences, that you did not pull down this general calamitie, but for your parts laboured to haue preuẽted it, by your earnest prayers and hartie repentance: that so, the posteritie ensuing, may not curse you, but speak reuerently of you, and praise God for you, & wish that all had done as you did; for then had they enioyed this goodly land, & all Gods blessings with it, as we their forefathers did before them: and so shall our names not rot, but flourish amongst the posterities to come, which shall be partakers of the desolation: And when we haue renewed our repentance, let vs then euery one of vs, deale with the Lorde by earnest prayer for this Church and Nation, that the Lord would shew his mercy vpon it, and continue vnto it, this peace and the Gospel: it is nothing with the Lord to doe it, his powerfull hand is not shortened, he can continue our peace, when the Papist looke for hurli-burlies, he can continue the Gospel, when they hope to set vp their Idolatry againe: let vs therefore apply the Lord with our praiers, and with Moses set our selues in the breach, and pray for the ignorance of the multitude, and bewaile their sinnes, who bewaile not their owne. So did Noah, Daniel, and Iob, in their ages, and praied for the people in generall calamities: let vs all be Noahs, Daniels, and Iobs, in our generations: if we doe thus: then when Iudgments come, we shall either turne them away from our Nation, or at the least we shall deliuer our owne soules.

Ezek. 14. 13. 14.

Let vs nowe turne to the Lorde in praier, and because it cannot be hoped, but that this our generall sinfullnesse must needs end with some heauy Iudgment: let vs desire the Lord still to defer our deserued punishments, and still to spare vs, and to giue vs time and leasure to repent: that so, we entring into our selues, and searching our hearts, and turning to the Lorde: wee may turne away his imminent iudgements, and that when his wrath doth burne out indeed, wee may then be counted worthy in Christ, to escape those things which must needes come vpon the world. Amen.

WILLIAM PERKINS.

Lament. 3.

Let vs Search and try our waies, and turn againe to the Lord.

TO THE RIGHT WOR-SHIPFVL SIR EDWARD COOKE, KNIGHT,

his Maieſties Atturney Generall, and Sir Thomas Heskith, Knight, Atturney of his Highneſſe Court of Wardes and Liueries, and one of his Maieſties Honourable Coun-ſell in the North, Grace and peace from Ieſus Chriſt.

RIght worſhipfull, giue me leaue to put you both in one Epiſtle, whom one ſeruice, one place, one profeſſion, one order, one Religion, haue ſo neerely combined: As you are Brethren many waies, and eſpecially in the profeſſion and practiſe of one Religion: ſo vouchſafe to bee ioynt Patrons of this little after-birth, this fœtus poſthumus, of that worthy man Ma. Perkins, now deceaſed. I ſend you heere one of the ſhorteſt, and one of the ſweeteſt of his Tratiſes: had it bene as well brought foorth by me, as it was begot by him, it had beene a child not vnworthy of ſo great a father: but ſeeing it is now as a fatherleſſe childe, be you the Tutor to this Orphane, at whoſe hands Orphanes and VVards haue euer bene wel vſed. The father whilſt he liued was a ſhining light to this our Church, and being dead, is a ſhining ſtarre in heauen, for he turned many to righteouſneſſe, and his doctrine wil ſhine in Chriſtian Churches, whileſt the Sunne ſhineth vpon the earth. The ſubiect of this Treatiſe is the Miniſterie, whereof are laid down the duties and dignities. And wel doth hee couple theſe two together: for ſome can challenge the dignities of the Miniſterie, and cunningly caſt the duties from their ſhoulders: others performe the duties, but are kept from the dignities duly belonging to that calling: but as hee that well doe the duties, may iuſtly challenge the dignities, ſo he that wil expect the dignities, muſt doe the duties of a Miniſter; therefore in this building, theſe two beames are in great wiſedome well ſet together by this wiſe Maiſter builder, and ſo cloſely coupled, as the idle or ambitious man cannot looke at the dignities, but he muſt withall behold the duties, nor the painfull and laborious man ſee his dutie, but withall ſhall ſee the dignitie thereto belonging.

And ſurely (Right Worſhipfull) none might better haue written of this ſubiect then hee: for who may more worthily deſcribe the dignities of the Miniſterie, then he, who neither by doctrine nor conuerſation, was euer the leaſt diſgrace vnto his Miniſterie? Or who may better challenge the honour of his calling, then he, who was euer an honour to his calling? And who might better teach the duties of the Miniſterie, then he, who ſo diſcharged them, as Enuie it ſelfe cannot iuſtly reproue, and the Enemies themſelues cannot but (a) commend? And who may better teach them to others, then he that carefully practiſed them in his owne perſon? And as none could be a fitter Author of this diſcourſe then he, ſo not many fitter Patrons then your ſelues: not many in your profeſſion better ſchollers, nor any that better loue ſchollers then your ſelues: and you are ſome of thoſe fewe in this wicked age, who willingly yeeld all dignities and due reuerence to ſuch Miniſters as you ſee willingly to diſcharge the duties of good Miniſters. Well would it bee with the Miniſterie of England, (and the better with it, the better with England) if all as great as you, were as good friendes to it as you. And if the Papiſts except, and ſay how can this bee, for that you haue beene perſecutors of their Prieſts? Let me anſwere once for you, who often anſwer for many diſtreſſed men: they perſecute you with ſlander, that ſay you perſecuted them, (but be content to beare your part in Popiſh ſlanders, with our Prince and ſtate, our Counſellors and Cleargy, our Parliaments and Lawes, for none of theſe haue eſcaped theſe viperous tongues (for though you haue executed the Lawes vpon ſome of them in your ſeuerall places, yet not with ſharpeneſſe nor ſeueritie, but with mercifull iuſtice, and that alſo not as they were Prieſts, but Plotters, Practiſers, ſubuerters, & ſeducers: and as they were Prieſts, you ſought their reformation, not their ruine. And if they, who can hardly diſcharge themſelues from being Prieſts of Baal, haue had but Iuſtice, and that alſo tempered with Mercie, it ſhewes how good regard you haue, and how much you eſteeme all good and faithfull Miniſters, which are Gods Interpreters. In a word, if all our Miniſters were ſuch as this Treatiſe deſcribeth, or came but as neere it as the Author hereof did, and if all our great ones did vſe and eſteeme good Miniſters as you doe, wee ſhould then ſoone pul the Miniſterie from vnder that foote of contempt, with which this prophane age doth daily tread vppon it. The

Church

Church of Rome, who are farre wiſer in their kinde then the children of light, haue taken other and ſtrange courſes to magnifie the Cleargie. They teach, that the ſtate Eccleſiaſticall, is ſo farre more excellent then the Ciuile, as the Sunne is then the Moone, and that not in ſpirituall onely, (for that we deny not) but in temporall power, pompe, aud eſtate: and that therefore the chiefe of their Clergie, is as farre aboue the mightieſt Emperour, as the Sunne is aboue the Moone; and as the moone borroweth her light from the Sun, ſo doth the Emperour his ſtate and power from the Pope.

They teach, that the Clergie is a ſtate ſo diſtinct, and ſo abſolute of it ſelfe, as it hath not to doe with the ciuile ſtate, yea they exempt their Clergie, from being any way ſubiect to the temporall Magiſtrate. And though their crimes, be neuer ſo many or monſtrous, yet the Prince, or ciuile authoritie, hath nothing to doe to take notice thereof, much leſſe to puniſh them: and herevpon great volumes are written, and many Acts and decrees are made in their Cannon Lawe, De exemptione Clericorum. They extoll their Clergie aboue the temporalitie, allowing the Prieſts both bread and wine in the Sacrament, but leauing the Laitie bread alone. They make them in their maſſe, mediators betwixt Chriſt and God the father, and Creators of their Creator and Redeemer, when and as often as themſelues liſt. And finally, they ſend for the moſt part, all their Clergie immediatly to heauen without let, whereas all the temporaltie (except Martyrs) muſt paſſe by purgatorie. Heere are great buildings, but on a ſandie foundation, goodly Caſtles, but built in the ayre; if theſe deuiſes were of God, they would certainly ſtand, but their long tottering, threatens a ſuddaine fall.

Contrariwiſe, our church, or rather the corruption of our church, by auoiding this Scilla, haue falne into Charibdis, by auoiding one extremitie, haue falne into the other, by taking too much dignitie & authoritie from our Miniſterie, and by laying too much pouertie, contempt, and baſeneſſe vpon it. It were a worke worth the labour of the wiſeſt heades, to put downe the true meane betwixt both extreames, and worth the labour of our Noble King, to take order that that meane be kept, without ryſing to the right hand, or falling to the left. This ſhort Treatiſe may hap to giue ſome light and directions therein, or at leaſt may encourage & ſtirre vp their hearts, in vvhoſe hands it is to doe it: Vnder your worthy names would I haue it ſee the world, not ſo much for that I am bound to you both in many priuate and particular reſpects, (though that be much) as for that I knowe you both to be of ſo right and reformed a iudgement in this caſe, as you would haue none Miniſters but of ſufficient gifts, and vnblameable liues, nor thoſe Miniſters put to their penſions, or vncertaine ſalaries, but to haue certaine and ſufficient maintenance proportionable to their charge, and beſeeming the honour of a Chriſtian Church: God continue you both ſtill in that minde, and make many more of the ſame with you, ſo ſhould wee haue as floriſhing a Church as any Chriſtendome hath ſeene. Goe forward in that, and other your religious reſolutions, it is the true way to honour, both heere and in a better world: ſtand firmely for the truth, and boldly againſt the Popiſh enemies thereof, as hitherto you haue done: Religion had neuer more cauſe to thanke you, and all that doe ſo, then now it hath, for her enemies were neuer ſo inſolent ſince they were our enemies: but if you and others hold on, as in your ſeuerall places you haue well begun, and others take the like courſe, there is hope their inſolencies will be eaſily (if timely) repreſſed, and themſelues neereſt the fal, when they imagine they are in the full. The Lord bleſſe and aſſiſt you in your painfull places, and make you on earth Inſtruments of his glory, to the good of his Church, ſo ſhall you bee veſſels of glory in the kingdome of Heauen. And thus commending this little treatiſe to your reading, and my ſelfe to your fauour, I take leaue, and will euer reſt, 1605.

A TREATISE OF THE

Duties and Dignities of the Miniſterie.

Iob. 33. 23. 24.

If there be with him a Meſſenger, An Interpreter, one of a thouſand to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe:
Then will he haue mercy on him, and will ſay, deliuer him that hee goe not downe into the pit, for I haue receiued a reconciliation.

The Cohærence of theſe words with the reſt

IN this Chapter and the former, Elihu a holy, learned, noble, & wiſe young man, had conferẽce with Iob in matters of high and excellent Diuinitie: the points of his conference are theſe: From the firſt verſe of this chapter, to the ſeauenth verſe, is a Preface to his ſpeech. Frõ thence to the 13. he repeateth certaine propoſitions of Iob, and reproueth them: from thence to theſe words, hee inſtructeth Iob in certaine points touching gods dealing with ſinners: and thoſe are two.

The parts of this Chap.

1 How God preſerueth a ſinner from falling.

2 How God reſtoreth a ſinner being falne.

1 The meanes whereby God preſerueth a ſinner, are ſet down to be two principally.

1 By Admonitions in dreames and viſions.

2 By ſcourges and chaſtiſements, when the firſt wil not preuaile. And theſe are laid downe, from the thirteene verſe, vnto theſe words.

2 Then followeth the 2. point, namely the reſtoring of a ſinner: when both the meanes formerly ſpoken of, haue not preuailed with him, but that thorow his corruptiõ hee is fallen: & concerning this point, hee handleth theſe particulars.

1 The remedie & meanes of his reſtoring.

2 The effect that followeth thereupon.

1 The remedie is layde downe in theſe words now red vnto vs, then followeth the effect, which is, that when a ſinner is reſtored by repentance, then the graces of God are plentifully powred vpon him, both for ſoule & body: from theſe words, to the end of the Chapter.

The ſumme and ſcope of this Text is a deſcription of the Inſtrument by whom God raiſeth a ſinner into the ſtate of grace and ſaluation. Namely a Miniſter of his word, and hee is deſcribed.

The intent then of this ſcripture, is, that God vſeth meanes in his mercie, to preſerue ſinners from falling into ſin, but if they do, then he in much greater mercy aſordeth them meanes & helps to riſe againe. And this is the ſumme and ſubſtance of the words. Now, that meanes & remedie, is the matter I purpoſe to ſpeake of, out of theſe words: The meanes then to reſtore a ſinner after a fall, is to raiſe him by repentance to a better eſtate then he was before, and that is incluſiuely, and by implication taught in this Text: But the inſtrument by whome that great worke is to bee wrought, is here in plaine termes laide downe to be a Miniſter of God, lawfully called and ſent by God, and appointed by his Church to that great dutie. So that theſe words containe a worthy deſcription of a true Miniſter, and hee is here deſcribed.

First by his titles.

1. By his titles, which are two, { An Angell. / An Interpreter.

2. By his rarenelle, One of a thouſand.

3. By his office: which is, to declare vnto man his righteouſnes.

4. By the bleſſing that God giueth vpon the labours of this true Miniſter: which is, then God will haue mercie vpon the ſinner.

5. By his Commiſſion & authoritie in the laſt words: God wil ſay, Deliuer him that he goe not downe into the pit, for I haue receiued a reconciliation.

Let vs ſpeake of them in order as they lie in the text, and firſt of his titles.

1. Title An Angell.

1. The firſt title of a Miniſter of God is, he is called a Meſſenger, or an Angel: and not here alone, but elſewhere in the ſcripture, Mala. 2.7. He is the meſſenger of the Lord of hoſtes. And in the Reuelation, the Miniſters of the 7. Churches are called the Angels of thoſe Churches. So that it is apparant, a true Miniſter is an Angel of God in one place, and in the other place, the Angel of the Church. Hee is an Angel, or Meſſenger, ſent from God to his Church.

Reuel. 2. & 3. Chapters.

Hee is Gods Angell and the Churches.

This conſideration affords matter of much vſe. And firſt for Miniſters themſelues, Vſe 1. for Miniſters.

(a) This Sermon was preached in the vniuerſity Church. to the bodie of the Vniuerſity.

The moſt of vs in this place (a) are either Prophets, or ſons of the Prophets. If thou be a Prophet, thou art Gods Angel. If a ſonne of the Prophets thou entendeſt to be, then marke thy dutie, Prophets and Miniſters are Angels, in the very inſtitution of their calling. Therefore thou muſt preach Gods word, as Gods word, and deliuer it, as thou receiueſt it: for Angels, Embaſſadors, and Meſſengers, carry not their own meſſage, but the meſſage of their Lords & Maiſters who ſent them, and miniſters cary the meſſage of the Lord of Hoſtes, therefore they are bound to deliuer it as the Lords, & not their own.

1: Vſe for Miniſters, Goe, they muſt preach Gods word, as Gods worde.

In the firſt Epiſtle of Peter 4. 11. we are bid, If any man ſpeake, let him ſpeake, not onely the word of God, but as the word of God. Gods word muſt be ſpoken, and as Gods word: then ſhew thy faithfulnes to the Lord, in diſcharging thy hands ſincerely of that meſſage, which hee hath honored thee to carry: Gods word is pure, therefore purely to be thought vpō, & to be deliuered. Thē let all that are Gods Angels, & would be honoured as his Angels & Embaſſadors, think it no leſſe reaſon to do the duty of gods Angels, leaſt (as many men mar a good tale in the telling) ſo they take away the power & maieſtie of Gods word, in the manner of deliuering it.

For they carrie not their owne meſſage but Gods.

2. Vſe for miniſters. They muſt preach Gods word in the euidence, and demonſtration of Gods Spirit.

The ſecond vſe cōcerns the Miniſters alſo: are they Gods Angels? therfore they muſt preach Gods word in euidence and demonſtration of the ſpirit of God: for hee that is Gods Angell, the ſpirit of that God muſt ſpeak in him: Now to ſpeak in the demonſtration of Gods ſpirit, is to ſpeake in ſuch a plainneſſe, & yet ſuch a powerfulneſſe, as that the capacities of the ſimpleſt, may perceiue, not mā, but God teaching them in that plainneſſe: & the conſcience of the mightieſt may feele, not man, but God reproue them in that powerfulnes: That this is ſo, appeares by S. Paule. If a man propheſie aright, (ſaith the holy Ghoſt) the vnlearned or vnbeleeuing man comes in, he thinks his ſecret faults are diſcloſed & laid open, he thinkes all men ſee his nakednes, and do reproue him for it, he therfore falles downe and ſaith, Surely God ſpeakes in this man.

1. Cor. 14. 24. 25.

This is done First by teaching plainlie.

In which words, obſerue an admirable plainneſſe, & an admirable powerfulneſſe (which a man would thinke could not ſo well ſtand together.) Firſt plainneſſe, for whereas the vnlearned man perceiueth his faults diſcouered, it followeth neceſſarily hee muſt needs vnderſtand it, and if an vnlearned man vnderſtand it, then conſequently it muſt needs be plain. Secondly powerfulnes, in that his conſcience is ſo conuinced, his ſecret faults ſo diſcloſed, & his verie hart ſo ript vp: that hee ſaith, Certainly God ſpeakes in this man. This is the euidence & demōſtratiō of Gods ſpirit: It is thought good cōmendatiō before the world, whē men ſay of a Preacher, Surely this man hath ſhowne himſelf a proper ſcholler, of good learning, great reading, ſtrong memory, & good deliuery, & ſo it is, & ſuch cōmendation (if iuſt) is not to be contēned: but that, that commends a man to the Lord his God, and to his own conſcience is, when he preacheth ſo plainely to the capacitie, & ſo powerfully to the cōſcience of a wicked mā, as that he thinks doubtles God is within him. Art thou therefore an Angel of God, then magnifie the ſpirit of God, and not thy ſelfe, in thy Preaching of his word.

Secondly, powerfullie in that plainneſſe.

Miniſters muſt magnifie Gods ſpirit, and not themſelues in preaching.

The next vſe is for the hearers, and they are here taught, that if their Miniſters be Angels ſent them from God, then are they to hear them, gladly, willingly, reuerently, & obediently: gladly and willingly, becauſe they are Embaſſadors; reuerently, and obediently, becauſe they are ſent from the high God, the King of Kings, and do deliuer his embaſſage. God ſaith, the people muſt

The 2. vſe for hearers. They are to receiue thē and their doctrine willingly & reuerently.

Malach 2.7.

muſt ſeeke the Lawe at his mouth: and good reaſon, for if the Lawe be the reuealed will of God, and the Miniſter the Angel of God, then where ſhould they ſeeke the will of God, but at the mouth of his Angel? The reaſon therefore followeth well in that place; they ſhould ſeeke the Lawe at his mouth, for he is the meſſenger of the Lord of hoſtes: and this muſt all Chriſtians do, not only if their Doctrine be pleaſing vnto them, but though it croſſe their corruption, and be quite contrary to their diſpoſitions, yea though it be neuer ſo vnſauoury and hard vnto nature, yet in as much as it is a meſſage from thy God and King, and the teacher, the Angel or Meſſenger of that God: therefore both hee and it, muſt be receiued with all reuerence, and with the verie obedience of the heart and ſoule. And this is the cauſe why a conuenient reuerence and honour is to be giuen of all good Chriſtians, euen to the perſons of gods Miniſters (eſpecially whē they adorne their high calling with a holy life:) euen becauſe they are Angels of God. Saint Paule teacheth, that women ought to be modeſtly attired in the congregation, becauſe of the Angel: it is not onely, becauſe the holy Angels are preſent, and alwaies beholders of our ſeruice of God, but euen becauſe the Miniſters, which are Angels & Meſſengers ſent from God, are there, deliuering their Meſſage and Embaſſage receiued from God. And thus we haue the firſt title giuen to the Miniſter: he is an Angel.

For it is Gods meſſage, though they be men that bring it.

1. Corinth. 11. 11.

An interpreter.

2 Title, an interpreter, and that two wayes.

Secondly, he is an Interpreter: that is, one that is able to deliuer aright the reconciliation, made betwixt God and man: I ſay not, the Author of that reconciliation, for that is the Godhead it ſelfe; nor the Worker of this reconciliatiō, for that is the ſecond perſon, Chriſt Ieſus: nor the Aſſurer or Ratifier, for that is the holy Ghoſt: nor the Inſtrument of it, for that is the glad tydings of the goſpell: but I ſay he is the Interpreter of it; that is, firſt one that can open & explane the couenant of grace, and rightly laie downe the means how this reconciliation is wrought. Secondly, one that can rightly and iuſtly apply meanes, for the working of it out.

1 Gods interpreter to his Church.

Thirdly, one that hath authoritie to publiſh & declare it whē it is wrought: and by theſe three actions, he is Gods Interpreter to the people.

2 Mans interpreter to God.

Then he is alſo the peoples Interpreter to God, by being able to ſpeake to God for them, to lay open their wants and nakedneſſes, to confeſſe their ſins, to craue pardon and forgiueneſſe, to giue thankes in their names for mercies receiued, & in a word, to offer vp all their ſpirituall ſacrifices vnto God for them: and ſo euery true Miniſter is a double Interpreter, Gods to the people, and the peoples to God. In which reſpects, hee is properly called Gods mouth, to the people, by preaching to them from god, and the peoples mouth to god, by praying for them to god: and this title ſheweth how great and glorious a calling this Miniſtery is, if it be rightly conceiued. Now then for the vſe of it.

First vſe, Miniſters muſt haue the tongue of the learned.

First, if euery true Miniſter muſt be Gods Interpreter to the people, and the peoples to God, then hence we learne, that euery one, who either is, or intends to be a miniſter, muſt haue that toong of the learned, wherof is ſpokē in Eſay. 50. 4 where the Prophet ſaith (firſt in the name of Chriſt, as hee that is the great Prophet and Teacher of his Church; and ſecōdarily, in the name of himſelfe, and all true Prophets, while the world endureth.) The Lord God hath giuen me a tongue of the learned, that I ſhould know to ſpeake a worde in ſeaſon to him that is wearie: where note the wearie ſoules, or troubled conſcience, muſt haue a word in ſeaſon ſpokē to him for his comfort, and that cannot be ſpoken without the tongue of the learned. And laſtly, that tongue of the learned muſt be giuen of God. Now to haue this toong of the learned, which Eſay ſpeaks of, what is it but to be this Interpreter, which the holie Ghoſt heere ſaith a Miniſter muſt be: But to be able to ſpeak with this toong is, First to be furniſhed with humane learning. 2. With diuine knowledge, as far as it may by outward meanes be taught frō man to man: but beſides theſe, he that wil ſpeake this tongue aright, muſt be inwardly learned, & taught by the ſpirit

First hee muſt be furniſhed with humane learning. Secondly, with Diuinitie.

3. Hee muſt bee inwardlie

of God: the two firſt he muſt learn from men, but the third from God: a true Miniſter muſt bee inwardly taught by the ſpirituall ſchool-maiſter the holy Ghoſt.

Reuel. 10. 8 Saint Iohn in the Reuelation muſt take the booke, that is the Scripture, and eat it, and when hee hath eaten it then (ſaith the Angell) hee muſt goe preach to Nations, tongues, people, and to Kings; which was done, not that Saint Iohn had not eaten that booke, in the comming downe of the holy Ghoſt, the very ende of whoſe comming was to teach them ſpiritually: but that in him Chriſt might teach his Church for euer, that no Miniſter is fit to Preach, to Nations and to Kings, vntill they haue eaten the booke of God: that is, till after and beſides all the learning that man can teach them, they bee alſo taught by the ſpirit of God himſelfe, and this teaching is it that makes a man a true interpreter, and without this he cannot beet for how can a man bee Gods interpreter to his people, vnleſſe he know the mind of God himſelfe, and how can he knowe the minde of God, but by the teaching of the ſpirit of God. For as no man knoweth the thought of a man, but the ſpirit of man that is in him, So the things of God knoweth no man, but the ſpirit of God, Indeede wee may bee mans interpreter by humane teaching, and may interpret the ſcriptures truly and ſoundly as a humane booke or ſtory, for the increaſe of knowledge, but the diuine and ſpirituall interpreter, which ſhall pearce the heart, and aſtoniſh the ſoule of man, muſt bee taught by the inward teaching of the holy Ghoſt.

Acts. 2.

This is to eate the book of God.

1. Corinth.

This is no approbation to Anabaptiſts who depend onely on reuelations, and neglect all meanes.

Let no man thinke I heere give the leaſt allowance to Anabaptiſticall fancies, and reuelations, which are nothing, but either dreames of their own, or illuſions of the Diuell, for they contemne both humane learning, and the ſtudie of the ſcripture, and truſt wholy to reuelations of the ſpirit; but Gods ſpirit worketh not but vpon the foundation of the word: onely I teach this, that a Miniſter muſt bee a diuine Interpreter, an Interpreter of Gods meaning. And therefore hee muſt not onely reade the booke, but eate it, that is, not onely haue the knowledge of Diuine things flowing in his braine, but ingrauen in his heart, and printed in his ſoule by the ſpirituall finger of God: and therefore for this end, after all his owne ſtudie, meditation, conference, Commentaries, and after all humane helps, hee muſt pray with Dauid, Open thou mine eyes, that I may ſee the wonders of thy lawe. The diſcerning of thoſe wonders requires a ſpirituall illumination, and the opening of them, requires the tongue of the learned. Therefore after all the ſtudie which fleſh and blood, and humane reaſon can yeelde, pray with the Prophet, Lorde giue mee the tongue of the learned, that I may be a right Interpreter of thy holy will.

Pſal. 119. 18.

Furthermore inaſmuch as Miniſters are Interpreters, they muſt labour for ſanctitie, and holineſſe of life. In Eſay, the kingdome of Aſſiria is ſaide to be ſanctified or ſet apart, to deſtroye Gods enemies. If there be a certaine kind of ſanctification, neceſſary for the worke of deſtruction, then howe much more is true ſanctification neceſſary for this great and glorious worke of the edification of Gods Church? A Miniſter is to declare the reconciliation betwixt God & Man, and is hee himſelfe not reconciled? Dare he preſent another man to Gods mercy for pardon, and neuer yet preſented himſelfe? Can hee commende the ſtate of Grace to another, and neuer felt the ſweeteneſſe thereof in his owne ſoule? Dare hee come to preache ſanctification with polluted lips, and out of an vnſanctified heart? Moſes might not ſtand vppon the Mount in Gods preſence, till hee had put off his ſhooes from off his feete. Exod. 3. & dare any man preſume to come into this moſt high and holie preſence of the Lorde, vntill hee haue mortified his corruptions, and caſt off the vnrulines of his affections?

2 Vſe. For miniſters. Eſay. 13. They muſt be holy and ſanctified men: and ſo be firſt of all interpreters to themſelues.

In Exodus, the Prieſts are bid to ſanctifie the people, and in Leuiticus it is ſaid, that God will bee ſanctified in all that come neere him, but who come ſo neere vnto him as the Miniſters doe? So that it is apparant, Miniſters doe ſanctifie the people, and in ſome conſtruction, God himſelfe: Now, ſhall they one way be ſanctifiers of the people, another way of God himſelfe, and no way of themſelues? Surely if it be ſo, they are but lame Interpreters. And this is the reaſon doubtleſſe, Exod. 19. 22. Leuit. 10. 3.

For elſe they will hardly doe good to others.

doubtleſſe, why vnſanctified Miniſters, and ſuch as are of a looſe conuerſation, beſtow ſuch fruitleſſe labours in the Church: many want no learning, no abilitie to interpret, and yet how fewe ſoules doe they bring to God? Some it may be are conuerted by their Miniſterie, that God may ſhewe, the efficacie is not in the perſon of man, but in the ordinãce of God, but few doubtleſſe (for ought that wee can ſee:) to teach vs, how God hateth him which will take in hand to reconcile others to God, himſelfe being vnreconciled. Seeing then Miniſters are Gods Interpreters to the people, to declare and publiſh their reconciliation with God, and that they cannot be reconciled, vnleſſe they be ſanctified, and can ſo hardly be ſanctified by the miniſterie of an vnſanctified man: let therefore all true Miniſters of God: firſt bee Gods Interpreters to their owne conſciences, and their owne ſoules Interpreters to God, then ſhall they know more perfectly how to diſcharge the office of true Interpreters betwixt God and his people.

And thus we haue the true titles of a true Miniſter.

Now it followeth in the Text.
One of a thouſand.

2. Part of the deſcription is the rarenеſſe of a good Miniſter. He is one of a thouſand.

Here is the ſecond part of this deſcription, which is by the rarenеſſe, or ſcarcenеſſe of good Miniſters: which is laide downe in a very ſtrange phraſe, namely, that a true Miniſter, one that is a right Angell, and a true Interpreter, is no common or ordinarie man, but thin ſowne, one of many, Nay on of a thouſand.

The meaning.

The meaning hereof is to bee conceiued either properly, or figuratiuely: in the figuratiue ſence, it is ſpoken in relation to miniſters themſeluess in the proper ſenſe, it hath a compariſon with all mens the figuratiue and hyperbolicall ſenſe is, that of all the Miniſters in the world, not one of many is a right Angel, and a true Interpreter: the plain and proper ſenſe is, that amongſt the men of this world, there is not one of a thouſand which proues a true miniſter. For this point let vs examine three points: the truth of it, the reaſons of it, and the vſe of it.

1. The truth hereof.

The truth hereof is manifeſt, by the experience of all ages, wherein it is ſtrange to obſerue, how few men of any ſort, eſpecially of the better ſort, affect the calling of a Miniſter: and which is more ſtrange, how few of thoſe that are miniſters in name and title, doe deſerue theſe honorable names of an Angell, and an Interpreter, and the truth is too manifeſt in common practiſe, to inſiſt much vpon it: rather therefore let vs ſee the reaſons of it, and they be theſe principally.

2. The reaſons hereof.

1. Reaſon the contemp. of it: it being hated by wicked men.

First, the Contempt that lyeth on that calling, it being alwaies hated, by wicked and prophane men, becauſe it diſcouers their filthineſſe, and vnmaskes their hypocriſie: and their doctrine oftimes is a fretting corraſiue to their conſcience, that they cannot welter, and wallow ſo quietly, and ſecretly in their ſinnes, as otherwiſe they would, therefore is it that they ſpurne both againſt the calling, and the men, and watch them narrowly, and take holde of their leaſt infirmities, thereby to diſgrace them: iudging that to caſt contempt on that calling, is to remoue ſhame from their owne ſhamefull courſes: nor is it poſſible, but that they ſhould thus hate this calling, in aſmuch as they hate ſo deadly both that Lawe and Embaſſage which they bring, and that God, whoſe Embaſſadors they are.

This hatred and diſgrace in the wicked world, was that that cauſed Ieremy to cry, woe is me, and made him in the ſeeming of his naturall reaſon, curſe the time that euer he was a Prophet, for ſaith he, I am a man of contention, euery man is at ſtrife and at enmitie with me. Ieremie 15. 10

2. Reaſon, the difficultie of diſcharging the duties.

The next reaſon is, The difficultie of diſcharging the duties of his calling: to ſtand in Gods preſence, to enter into the holy of holieſt, to goe betwixt God and his people, to bee Gods mouth to the people, and the peoples to Gods: to bee the Interpreter of the eternall lawe of the olde Teſtament, and the euerlaſting Goſpell of the New: to ſtand in the roome, and to beare the office of Chriſt himſelfe, to take the care and charge of ſoules, theſe conſiderations are ſo many amazements to the conſciences of ſuch men, who doe with reuerence uerence approach, and not with raſhneſſe, ruſh vnto this ſacred ſeate: this made Saint Paul cry out, who is ſufficient for theſe things, And if Paul ſaid, Who is no maruell though many a man ſay, I am not ſufficient, and doe therefore draw their neckes from this yoake, and their hands from this plough, vntill God himſelf or his Church doe preſſe them to it.

2 Corinth. 2. 16.

3. Reaſon, want of maintenace.

The laſt reaſon is more peculiar to this age of the newe Teſtament, namely, want of maintenance and preferment, for them that labour in this calling: men are fleſh and blood, and in that reſpect muſt be allured, and wonne to embrace this vocation, by ſome argumentes, which may perſwade fleſh and blood; the world hath in all ages beene negligent herein, and therefore God in his lawe tooke ſuch ſtrict orders, for the maintenance of the Leuites: but eſpecially, now vnder the Goſpell, this calling is vnprouided for, when it deſerues beſt of all to be rewarded: certainely it were a worthy Chriſtian pollicie, to propound good preferments to this calling, that thereby men of the worthieſt gifts might bee wonne vnto it, and the want thereof, is cauſe why ſo many young men of ſpeciall partes, and greateſt hope, turne to other vocations, and eſpecially to the Lawe, wherein at this day the greateſt parts of the fineſt wits of our kingdome, are imployed, and why? But becauſe they haue all the meanes to riſe, whereas the miniſterie, for the moſt part yeeldeth nothing, but a plaine way to beggery: this is a great blemiſh in our Church, and ſurely I wiſh the Papiſts, thoſe children of this world, were not wiſer in their kinde, (in this point) then the Church of God: the reformation hereof is a worke worth the labour of Prince and people; and ſpecial care is to be had in it, elſe it will not bee reformed, for doubtleſſe had not God himſelfe in the olde teſtament, taken ſuch ſtraight orders for the liuings of the Leuites, they had beene put to no leſſe extremities, then is the miniſterie of this age. And this reaſon added to the other, makes them perfect; and al put together make a reaſon infallible: for who will vndergoe ſo vile contempt, and vndertake ſo great a charge for no reward; and where there is ſo great contempt, ſo heauie a burthen, and ſo meane a reward, what maruell, if a good Miniſter be one of a thouſand?

Deut. 18. 9. and 26. 2. Num. 18. 26.

This makes many of our beſt wits turne from Diuinitie to Law.

Now let vs make vſe of this doctrine: The vſe is manifold, and yeeldes inſtructiõs to many ſorts of people: Firſt, Rulers and Magiſtrates are heere taught, if good Miniſters bee ſo ſcarce, therefore to maintaine and increaſe, and doe all good they can to the ſchooles of the Prophets, to Vniuerſities, Colledges, and Schooles of good learning, which are the Seminaries of the Miniſterie: herein the example of Samuell, is very worthy to be followed, in whoſe dayes the ſchooles of the Prophets floriſhed, and euen Saul himſelfe, though he did much hurt in Iſrael, yet when he came to the ſchooles of the Prophets, his hard heart relented, he could doe them no hurt, nay, he put off his robes and prophecied amongſt thẽ. So ſhould all Chriſtian Princes and magiſtrates aduance their ſchooles, and ſee them both well maintained, and well ſtored, the reaſon is euident and forcible,

3. The vſe of it.

1. To Rulers to maintaine Vniuerſities, Colledges, and ſchooles of the Prophets.

1. Sam. 19, 20 21, 22, 23, 24

A good Miniſter is one of 1000. If therefore they would haue the number increaſed, let them maintaine the Seminaries. And againe, if Antichriſt to vphold his kingdome, the kingdome of Sathan, bee ſo carefull herein, to erect Colledges, and indow them with liuing, to bee Seminaries for his Synagogue, and vſe ſo great meanes to ſowe his tares in the hearts of young men, that ſo they may ſow them in the hearts of the people abroad: ſhal not Chriſtian princes bee as carefull, or rather much more zealous, for the increaſing of the number of godly miniſters? ſhall Baal haue his 450 hundred Prophets, & God haue his Elias alone (great ſhame muſt it be to Ahab, or to any king, whoſe kingdome is in that eſtate.

2. King. 2. 2

The Ieſuites diligence is ſuch in teaching, and the readineſſe of ſome of their nouices ſuch in learning, (the diuel himſelfe doubtleſſe putting to his helpe withall) that in three yeares (as ſome of them ſay of themſelues) they proceede in humane learning, and in the fourth, in Diuinitie: which if it be ſo, then it may bee a good Leſſon, for theſe our ſchooles of learning, and an inducement

inducement to moue all that haue the gouernment thereof, to labour to aduance learning, by all good meanes, and to giue it more ſpeedie paſſage: And it may ſhame ſome that ſpend ſo many yeares in the Vniuerſitie, and yet alas for all that proue not one of a 1000. In theſe our ſchooles are by Gods mercy, many young trees planted by the riuer ſide of this godly Orchard, which by good ordring and dreſſing, may prooue goodly trees in the Temple of GOD, and ſtrong Pillers in the Church: but they are like tender plants, and muſt bee cheriſhed. Princes and great men, by allowing maintenance, and the Gouernours by eſtabliſhing good orders, and looking carefully to their execution, muſt ſee that theſe plants haue ſufficient moiſture to growe ſpeedily to perfect ripenes, and that then they bee tranſplanted in due time, into the Church and common-wealth: theſe be the trees ſpoken of in Ezechiel, which growe by the ſides of the riuer, which floweth out of the ſanctuarie: Waters out of the Sanctuarie muſt nouriſh them, and ſo they growe vnto their perfection: but take away theſe waters: take away the liberality of Princes and good diſcipline from the Vniuerſities, and theſe trees muſt needes decay and wither: which if they doe, then the ſmall number of good Miniſters will bee fewer and fewer, and of one of a 1000. there will not be one of 2000.

Ezchiel. 47. 1. &c.

In the next place, Miniſters themſelues are here taught: First if good miniſters be ſo ſcarce, then let euery man feare to make them fewer then they be: euery man therefore for himſelfe, labor firſt for abilitie, then for conſcience to diſcharge his dutie: namely, to be an Angell, to deliuer faithfully Gods Embaſſage, & a true Interpreter betwixt God and his people: thus if thou doeſt, then howſoeuer the number of good Miniſters is ſmal, yet it ſhal be nothing ſmaller for thee.

2. Vſe for Miniſters.

1. Let euery man feare to make them fewer.

2. If they be ſo few, labour to increaſe them, for the more they are, the leſſe burthen lieth vpō each particular man, therefore let euery Miniſter by his teaching, & by his conuerſatiō labour, ſo to honour his calling, that he may thereby allure and draw others to a loue and liking thereof.

2. Labour to encreaſe them, by winning others to it.

3 Are good miniſters ſo thin ſowne? are there ſo fewe of them? then let all good and godly miniſters giue the right hand of fellowſhip one to another, and ioyne together in loue, and by that meanes arme themſelues againſt the ſcorne and contempt of the world: we ſee they that are of a kinred or a brotherhood, or any kind of ſocietie, the fewer they are, the more cloſely doe they combine, the more firmely doe they hold together againſt all forraine force: ſo ought Gods Miniſters to doe, becauſe their number is ſo ſmall: if they were many, leſſe danger in their diſvnion. But ſeeing they are ſo few, the more it concerneth them to cut off contentions, and all occaſions of debate, and to ioyne hand in hand againſt theſe common aduerſaries.

Galath. 2. 9. 3. Let them ioue another and ioyne together.

In the third place, young Students are here taught, ſeeing a true miniſter is but one of a thouſand, that therefore they bend their ſtudies, & their thoughts to the Miniſterie, for they well know it is an old prouerbe, the beſt things are hard to come by: & certainly there are ſo fewe good miniſters, becauſe the holy miniſterie in it ſelfe is ſo high & excellent a calling: & as it is a ſhame to the men that there are ſo fewe good Miniſters, ſo it is a commendation to the calling: whoſe honour & excellencie is ſuch, that as wee ſee heere ſcarce one of a thouſand attaines vnto it, therfore men of the moſt excellent gifts, are here inuited to dedicate themſelues vnto the moſt excellēt vocation, yea, very reaſon it ſelfe would vrge a man to be one of a thouſand.

3. Vſe for ſtudents. 1. To conſecrate themſelues & their Studies to that calling.

2 And further, as they are to intend this calling as the moſt rare and excellent: ſo this muſt teach them likewiſe, to haſten to furniſh themſelues with all good helpes and meanes, that they may become true Miniſters, and able Interpreters, and not too long to ſticke in thoſe ſtudies, which keepe a man from the practiſe of this high function: for it is not to liue in the Vniuerſitie, or in the Colledge and to ſtudie, though a man neuer ſo faſt deuoure vp learning, but to bee a good Miniſter, is that that makes a man one of a thouſand.

To furniſh themſelues with the true ornaments of a Miniſter.

4. Vſe for hearers. 1. To reuerence the perſon and receiue the doctrine.

In the laſt place, Hearers are heere taught their dutie, firſt, to reſpect with reuerence the perſon, and to receiue with reuerence the Meſſage of euery true Meſſenger, ſeeing it is ſo rare a thing to finde a true Miniſter, for as nothing is more vile or baſe then an euill and lewde Miniſter, (whom Chriſt compares to ſalt which hath loſt his ſauour, which is good for nothing, but to bee caſt out, and troden downe of men:) ſo is there none worthy of more loue and reuerence, then a holy Miniſter: for as Eſay ſaith, their very feete are beautifull which bring glad tydings, and wee ſhould kiſſe their feete which bring newes of peace: therefore all good Chriſtians are to receiue and vſe a good Miniſter, as S. Paul ſaith the Galathians did him, euen as an Angell of God. Haſt thou then a godly paſtor? run to him for conference, for comfort, for counſell, vſe his company, frequent his ſermons, account him worthy of double honour, thinke it no ſmall or ordinarie bleſſing, for thou haſt one of a thouſand, and bleſſe God for beſtowing his mercy on thee, which hee had denied to ſo many others: for ſome haue no miniſter: ſome haue a Miniſter, but yet alas, he is not one of a thouſand.

Math. 5. 13.

Gal. 4. 16.

2. Fathers to dedicate their ſonnes to the Miniſterie.

And further, all men that are Fathers, may here learne to cõſecrate their children to God in the ſeruice of the Miniſterie, conſidering that it is ſo rare and excellent a thing to be a good Miniſter: nay, that man ſhould thinke himſelfe happy, and honoured of God, who may be father to ſuch a ſonne, as ſhall proue one of a thouſand.

5. Vſe for all men. Pray that God would encreaſe the number.

In a word to conclude this point, all men muſt heere learne, ſeeing good miniſters are ſo ſcarce, to pray the Lord of the haruеſt, to thruſt out more labourers into his haruеſt: and for thoſe that are called already, that God would make them faithfull in that high function. And as Eliſha craueth of Elias, that the good ſpirit may be doubled and trebled vpon them, ſo that the number may bee encreaſed. And thus wee haue the truth, the reaſon, and the vſe of this, that a good Miniſter is one of a thouſand.

2. Reg. 2. 9.

It followeth. To declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe.

Here is the third part of the deſcription of a miniſter, that is, by his office, to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe: that is, when a poore ſinner, by his ſinnes (the foulenes wherof he ſeeth, and the burden whereof he feeleth) is brought downe, as it were to the very gates of hell, when this ſinner by the preaching of the Lawe, is brought to a true ſight of this miſerie: & againe by Preaching the Goſpell, is brought to lay hold on Ieſus Chriſt: Then it is the proper office of a Miniſter, to declare vnto that mã his righteouſneſſe. Namely, that though in himſelfe he be as ill, and as foule as ſin can make him, and as the lawe can diſcouer him to be: yet in Chriſt he is righteous, & iuſt, & by Chriſt ſo iuſtified, as he is no more a ſinner in the preſence and account of God, this is the righteouſnes of a Chriſtian man, this is the iuſtification of a ſinner. And to declare this righteouſnes to him that repents and believes, is the proper dutie of a true Miniſter.

3. Part of the deſcription by his office, that is, to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe.

The meaning.

In the Acts, Paule ſaith of himſelfe, that he witneſſed to the Iewes, and to the Gentiles, the repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. In which wordes is laide downe the complete dutie of a Miniſter (as he is a publique Angell or Interpreter,) firſt, to Preach repentance, which a man muſt performe to God, whom by his ſinnes he hath grieuouſly offended; ſecondly, to preach faith in Chriſt, and free forgiueneſſe, & perfect ſaluation through that faith in Chriſt, to all that ſhall truly believe in him. And after both theſe, followeth that which is heere ſpoken of, which comprehendeth both the former; namely, to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe. So that in theſe wordes, are incluſiuely laide down, theſe points of a miniſters calling: Firſt, a true Miniſter may and muſt declare vnto a ſinful man where righteouſnes is to be found, namely in Ieſus Chriſt the righteous. Secondly, how that righteouſneſſe may be obtained, namely, by doing two duties: Firſt, by denying & diſclaiming his own righteouſneſſe, and that is done by repentance; Secondly, by clayming and cleauing to Chriſts righteouſneſſe, and that is done by faith. Thirdly, a true Miniſter may and muſt declare this righteouſnes

Act. 20. 21

It comprehendeth theſe points

1. He muſt declare wher true righteouſneſſe is.

1. Ioh. 2.

2. How it may be obtained.

3. He muſt declare it to him, that is,

1. Shew that it is ready for him if he beleeue and repent.

teouſneſſe to him that is, firſt publiſh and proclaime, that it is ready to be beſtowed on euery ſinner, which will thus apprehend it, and that it is able to iuſtifie and ſaue him: ſecondly, beſides a bare publication of this iuſtification, he muſt (as Paul did) witneſſe and teſtifie it to the conſcience of the ſinner, that it is as certainely true, as God is true. For as a witneſſe in doubtfull caſes is called, that by his Teſtimonie hee may cleere the truth, ſo when the conſciences of poore ſinners are wauering and doubtfull what to belieue, when they doubt of this righteouſnes, then is a true miniſter as a faithfull witnes of God to auerre and teſtifie the truth, from his owne conſcience, knowledge and feeling of the infallible certaintie of Gods promiſes, vnto the doubtfull and diſtreſſed conſcience of the ſinner.

2. Hee muſt teſtifye, and aſsure him of it.

Thirdly, beſides declaration and teſtification, he is to maintaine this truth, and this righteouſneſſe, (if the ſinners conſcience be yet not quiet) againſt all gainſayers, againſt the power of darkneſſe and all the gates of hell: that this is true and perfect righteouſneſſe to him that apprehends it, as afore is laide downe: and this is ſo infallible to euery ſoule that repents and belieueth, that the miniſter may aſſure it to the conſcience of the ſinner in the word of truth, and in the name of God, and may call to witneſſe all Gods Saints, and all his holy Angels, and may pawne vnto him his owne ſoule vpon it, that it is moſt true, that this is true, perfect, and all ſufficient righteouſneſſe.

3 Hee muſt maintaine it, & auerre it againſt all doubts and temptatiõs.

Thus we ſee in ſome meaſure, what it is to declare vnto a man his righteouſneſſe. And this is the peculiar office of a miniſter of God, and this is the height and excellencie of his office. In the want of godly miniſters, I confeſſe that godly Chriſtian men may one helpe another in the performance of theſe duties, & that with profit, but it is the proper function of a godly miniſter to do it, and the promiſe & bleſſing belong properly to him: as the cõſciences of all penitent ſinners will teſtifie in this caſe: let Dauids ſerue for many, who when he was caſt down euen to the mouth of Hell, by that fearefull diſcouery of his two hideous ſinnes by Nathans Preaching; and when the faith of his ſoule beganne to wreſtle againſt Hell, and ſtriue againſt deſpaire, and to apprehend the mercy of God in Chriſt: then I ſay, could not the Teſtimonie of all the men in the worlde haue giuen him that ioy, comfort and aſſurance, that Nathan did, when hee ſaide in the worde of a Prophet, and of a true miniſter, God hath taken away thy ſinne, thou ſhalt not dye: what did Nathan here, but declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe? what did Nathan here, but the dutie of euery true Miniſter?

This dutie is ordinarilie peculiar to Miniſters.

2. Sam. 12.

If this be the office and dutie of a miniſter, and if ſuch be the height and excellencie of his office, let vs ſee then what vſe we may make of it.

1. Vſe for Miniſters.

Firſt, concernng the Miniſterie: It firſt diſcouereth how nakedly, weakly, & inſufficiently, the Popiſh Church doth declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe, who will let a man ſeeke it himſelfe, where alas it is not: for Paule himſelfe teſtifieth, that his deſire is, that hee may bee found out of himſelfe, and in Chriſt, and yet certainly, if euer man had righteouſneſſe of his owne worth truſting to, Paule had: this is the cauſe why ſo many of that Religion finde not that righteouſneſſe; which will pacifie and ſatisfie their conſciences, when they come to dye: and why ſo many of them, when it comes to the pinch, do then go out of themſelues, & with vs doe ſeeke for this righteouſnes in Chriſt, where both aſſuredly, and ſufficiently it is to be found.

First, for the Popiſh Miniſtery, they doe inſufficiently declare it.

Philip. 3. 8. 9.

Then for our owne Miniſterie, heere they are taught: firſt the true manner of teaching, and declaring righteouſneſſe, namely this, not to preach the lawe alone, or the Goſpell alone, as ſome vnaduiſedly doe (but both without profit) but both the lawe and the Goſpell; the lawe to breede repentance, the Goſpel to worke faith: but in order, firſt the law to breed repentance, and then the Goſpell to worke faith and forgiueneſſe, but neuer before.

Secondly our owne.

Both the Lawe & the Goſpell.

Secondly, they are taught to be holy to bee ſanctified and reconciled themſelues, for is it thy office to declare vnto men his righteouſneſſe, and not thy own to thy ſelfe? and how canſt thou bee a true witneſſe to teſtifie betwixt God and the ſoule of a ſinner, when thy owne ſoule knoweth not, nor feeleth the truth of it? certainely ſuch men are but lame witneſſes betwixt God, and the ſinners ſoule. Dauid ſaith to the ſinner, I will inſtruct thee in the way wherein thou ſhalt goe: but hee firſt of all in the ſame, ſets downe his owne experience in a large ſtorie of his owne repentance, and of Gods mercie on himſelfe. And though God ſometime doe ſatisfie, and ſaue the poore diſtreſſed ſoule of a ſinner, by the teſtimonie of ſuch men, to teach vs that the vertue is not in the men, but in the truth of Gods couenant: yet alas how fewe are they, to teach vs, how pleaſing it is vnto him, when a Miniſter is a declarer of that righteouſneſſe to others, which hee firſt hath himſelfe: and is a witneſſe of that truth to others, which hefirſt knoweth in his owne experience.

2 To be holie men themſelues.

Pſal. 32.

For elſe they will conuert but fewe.

Thirdly, the conſideration of this high excellencie of their calling, muſt arme al true miniſters againſt the ſcorne and contempt of the world, which by wicked men is caſt like duſt and myre into the face of Miniſters: let this ſuffice them, they are the men that muſt declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe, euen he that ſcornes and contemnes the miniſterie, he hath no righteouſneſſe in him, vnleſſe it be by the meanes of a poore Miniſter: then doe thou thy dutie, and hee that mockes thee, hath cauſe to honour thee. And let this encourage Students to conſecrate themſelues to the miniſtery, for what calling hath ſo high an office, as this, to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe? And aſſuredly how euer in this wicked world, thou art little accounted of (for if it did not ſo, it were not wicked:) yet thou art honoured in the hearts of all Gods children, and euen in the conſcience of ſome, whoſe tongues doe ſmite thee: and the ſoules of thouſands, when they dye ſhall bleſſe thee, who in their lines cared not for thee: and the diuel himſelfe doth enuy, and the holy Angels themſelues doe wonder at the excellencie of thy calling, in that thou haſt power to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe.

1. Vſe to Miniſters; not to care for the contempt of the world.

2. Vſe for Students.

To conſecrate themſelues to that high calling.

In the next place, hearers may heere learne; firſt if their righteouſneſſe be thus to be declared as afore, then if they will haue it, they muſt ſeeke it as it may bee found, namely, both in the law, and in the goſpell, and not in the goſpell alone: and firſt in the lawe, then in the goſpell: for hee muſt neuer looke to taſte the ſweetneſſe of the goſpell, which hath not firſt ſwallowed the bitter pilles of the lawe: if therefore thou wouldeſt bee declared righteous by the goſpell, bee content firſt to bee pronounced miſerable by the lawe: if thou wouldeſt bee declared righteous in Chriſt, then bee content firſt to bee pronounced ſinfull and vnrighteous in thy ſelfe. Secondly, all men may heere learne, how they are to eſteeme of Gods Miniſters, & what reuerence and obedience is due to their perſons, and their doctrine: theſe are they which muſt declare vnto thee thy righteouſneſſe, if thou haſt any. Art thou beholden to him, who, when thou haſt loſt a iewell (which was all thy wealth) can tell thee where it is, and helpe thee to it againe? or to him, who, when thy cauſe is in triall at the barre, will pleade it for thee? or to him, who, when thy health is loſt, can tell thee how to get it againe? then behold how thou art beholden to a godly Miniſter, who when Adam had loſt both himſelfe and thee, that iewell of righteouſneſſe, which was, and is the whole wealth of thy ſoule, can truly tell thee where it is, and how it is to be had againe: and who, when the diuell haleth thee to the barre of Gods iuſtice, to receiue triall for thy ſinnes, can drawe thee there ſuch a declaration, as the diuell himſelfe ſhal not bee able to anſwere? and who, when thy ſoule is ſicke to death, and euen to damnatiō, can heale the deadly wounds thereof. A good miniſter therefore is worthy (as the Apoſtle ſaith) of double honour, whoſe dutie wee ſee is to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe. And to conclude this point alſo, the conſideration of the height of this office of a miniſter, may encourage fathers to dedicate their ſonnes to this holy calling: for the Phyſitians care for the body, or the Lawyers for thy cauſe, are both inferiour duties to this of the Miniſter. A good Lawyer may be one of tenne: a good Phyſitian one of twentie, a good man one of 100. but a good Miniſter is one of 1000. A good Lawier may declare the true ſtate of thy cauſe; a good Phyſitian may declare the true ſtate of thy body:

3. What to eſteeme of Gods Miniſters.

4. Vſe for Fathers to make their ſonnes Miniſters.

3. Vſe for the hearers. Seeke righteouſnes both in the law and the Goſpell.

No

No calling, no man can declare vnto thee thy righteouſneſſe, but a true Miniſter. And thus we ſee the office or function of a Miniſter. Now followeth the bleſſing.

Then will he haue mercie vpon him.

4. Point, the bleſſings: then will God haue mercy on the ſinner.

The fourth generall part of this deſcription, is the bleſſing which God giueth to the labors & function of a true Miniſter: then that is, when a man by the preaching of the lawe, is brought to true humiliation & repentance, and by the preaching of the goſpel, to true faith in the Meſſias: then will he (that is, God) haue mercy on him (that is, on the penitent & beleeuing ſinner.) Behold here the admirable ſimpathy, and the cooperatiō of God, and the Miniſters office. Man preacheth, and God bleſſeth: Man worketh on the heart, and God giues grace: a Miniſter declares vnto man his righteouſneſſe, and God ſaith ſo be it, he ſhall be righteous: a miniſter pronounceth mercy to a penitent ſinner, and forthwith God hath mercy on him. Here we ſee the great and glorious account which God makes of the word of his miniſters, by them truly taught and rightly applied; namely, that he as it were tyeth his bleſſing vnto it: for ordinarily til a man know his righteouſneſſe, by the meanes of an Interpreter, God hath not mercy on him, but aſſoone as hee doth know it, then as we ſee here, God will haue mercie on him, and will ſay, deliuer him, &c. This is no ſmall honour to miniſters, and to their miniſterie, that God himſelfe giues a bleſſing vnto it, and worketh when they worke, and as it were ſtaieth wayting, whē they declare vnto a man his righteouſnes, and then hath he mercy on him: ſo powerfull, and ſo effectuall, is the word ſpoken by a miniſter of God.

God & his Miniſter worke together.

Math. 16.16. This is that which Chriſt auoucheth, Whatſoeuer you looſe in earth ſhall be looſed in heauen. Will you know the meaning hereof? Reade S. Iohn, Whoſe ſinnes ſoeuer you remit, they are remitted; whoſe you retaine, they are retained: will you haue the meaning of both? reade Eſay, God deſtroyeth the tokens of Soothſayers, and makes Wiſards and Aſtrologers fooles, turneth worldly wiſe men backward, and makes their knowledge foolhneſſe: but he confirmeth the worde of his ſeruants, and performeth the counſell of his meſſengers. Thus God bindeth and looſeth with them, remitteth, and retaineth with them, by confirming their word, and performing their counſell.

Iohn. 20.23.

Eſay. 44.25, 26.

For example.

A true Miniſter ſeeth a ſinner hardned in his ſins, and ſtill rebelling againſt the will of God, he therefore declareth vnto him his vnrighteouſnes, and his ſin, and denounceth vnto him, the miſerie and curſes of Gods iuſtice, as due vnto him for the ſame: heere hee bindes on earth, here he retaines on earth, this mans ſins are likewiſe bound and retained in heauen. On the other ſide, he ſeeth a man penitent and beleeuing, hee pronounceth forgiuenes of ſinnes, & happines vnto him for the ſame: hee looſeth him from the band of his ſinnes, by declaring vnto him his righteouſnes, this mans ſinnes are likewiſe looſed and remitted in heauen, and God himſelf doth pronounce him cleare in heauen, when the Miniſter doth on earth. Thus God confirmeth the word of his ſeruants, and performeth the counſell of his meſſengers.

The vſe of this doctrine is, Firſt for Rulers & great men of this world, this may teach them to be nurſing Fathers, and nurſing Mothers vnto the Church, whoſe authoritie they ſee is ſo great ouer them, as that their decree ſtands ratified in heauen: Therefore though their place be great, and they be Gods vpon earth, yet muſt they withall acknowledge, that in iuſtifying a ſinner, in interpretation, in declaring vnto man his righteouſnes; in binding and looſing, their power alſo is immediate from God, and aboue theirs, and they themſelues, as they are men, muſt ſubmit thēſelues to this powerful word of the miniſters, to be taught by it, and to be reconciled by meanes of it, and highly muſt they reſpect it; for though a man ſpeak it, yet is it the word of God: this is to licke the duſt of Chriſts feete, which the Prophet ſpeaketh of: not as the Pope would haue it, to holde the ſtirrop, and lead the horſe, & hold the water to the Pope, to kiſſe his toes, to hold their kingdomes of him, as tenants at wil, or by curteſie, but reuerently to acknowledge the ordinance to be Gods, the function and dutie to be high and excellent, to acknowledge the power of their keyes & cenſures (being rightly applied, their promiſes and their threatnings to be as from God, and to ſubmit to them accordingly.

Secondly, Miniſters themſelues here muſt learne, when they take the word of reconciliation into their hands and mouthes, to call to minde whoſe it is, euē the Lords, & that he worketh with them, and that therefore they muſt vſe it in holy manner, with much feare and reuerence: It is not their owne, they may not vſe it as they liſt. And laſtly, hearers are here taught, firſt to ſee how madde ſuch men be, which careleſly, and ſeldome heare Sermons, but vpon any occaſion flie to wiſeſards & charmers, which are the diuels prophets: for ſee the difference of theſe two, the wiſard and charmer hath ſocietie with the diuel, the Preacher with God: the charmer hath his calling from the diuel, the Preacher is from God: the charmers charme, is the diuels watchword (whē he charmeth, the diuel doth the feate): the preachers doctrine is Gods watchword, when he truly applieth it, God himſelf ratifieth and makes it good: therefore let all men tear to haue thus to do with the diuel, by ſeeking to his ſlaues, & let them draw neere to god, by entring into fellowſhip with his holy Prophets, and godly Miniſters.

2. Vſe Gods word reuerently.

3. Vſe for hearers.

2. Heare Gods word often, and reuerently.

And further, if when they preach, and thou believeſt, then God hath mercy on thee, then learn what reuerence they and their word is worthy of, which is thus accompanied with gods mercy and forgiuenes: & then learn to heare the Word with feare & trembling, for it is gods word, and not theirs: and whē a true miniſter ſaith vnto thee, on a true ground, I denounce thee a ſinfull man, and vnder the curſe, or I declare thee to be righteous, and a childe of grace, it is all one, as though God from heauen had ſaid ſo vnto thee. If any man aske; But is it not as good, if another man pronounce forgiuenes vnto mee vpon my repentance? I anſwer, yes vndoubtedly, if it be in extraordinarie times or places, when there are no Miniſters: for otherwiſe, certainely this bleſſing is principally tied vnto the miniſters calling: for it is not ſaide of any priuate mens calling, any where in the ſcripture, as it is here ſaid of the Miniſters.

2. See the dignitie and prerogatiue of the Miniſters calling.

Obiection, But may not another Chriſtian do it?

And not ordinarily.

If an Angell, an Interpreter come to a man and declare vnto him his righteouſneſſe, then (marke the conexion) then will God haue mercy on him, and will ſay, Deliuer him, &c.

1 For they haue not the ſame promiſe.

Whence comes this bleſſing? from this promiſe of God. If therefore other callings will challenge ordinarily the ſame bleſſing, then muſt they haue the ſame promiſe. Beſides other Chriſtians being priuate men, though they be ſanctified, and haue a good meaſure of knowledge, yet haue they not the ſame ſpirit of diſcerning that godly Miniſters haue: nor can ſo fully & truly iudge whē a man hath repented, when not; and therfore cānot ſo truly pronounce the ſēntence of the law or golpel, nor haue the abilitie ordinarily by their good conference, and Chriſtian counſel, to conuert a ſoule, but to confirme one conuerted: but that power ordinarily belongs to the publike miniſtery of the word, therfore it followeth, that ordinarily they haue not the power to pronounce the ſentence of binding or looſing vpon any man. I confeſſe, in times or places, where no miniſter can bee had, God bleſſeth the labors of priuate men, that haue knowledge, ſometimes euen for the converting of a man to God, and for comforting him at the houre of death, and giues a vertue and power to that ſentence which they ſhall pronounce one vpon anothers repentance: but as this is extraordinarie, and in the want of ordinary miniſters, ſo in that caſe a priuate man of knowledge & godlines, is made a Miniſter for that time to himſelf, or to another, euen as a priuate man in caſes of extreame danger, when no magiſtrate is preſēt, is made a magiſtrate himſelfe to defend his own life. So then as in want of a Magiſtrate, the ſword of the magiſtracie is put into the hand of a priuate man: ſo in the wāt of miniſters, the keyes of the miniſterie are committed, and put into the hands of priuate men, (as in the daies of perſecution) that then they may with comfort admoniſh and aduiſe: & with power pronounce mercie and forgiueneſſe one vnto another,

2. They haue not the ſame power to diſcerne.

In extraordinary times and in want of Miniſters they may.

vpō their true repentance. Yet alwaies remēber that in ſo doing, a priuat man is as a Miniſter for that time, and in that caſe: but ordinarily (and alwaies in ſetled Churches) this power pertaineth to the Miniſterie, and is theirs alone by ordination; and to them belongeth the promiſe and the bleſſing, that when he hath declared to a man his righteouſneſſe, then God will haue mercie on him. And thus we ſee alſo the bleſſing of God vpon the function of the Miniſterie, and annexed thervnto by the mercifull diſpenſation of God. It followeth.

And will ſay: Deliuer him, that hee goe not downe into the pit: for I haue receiued a reconciliation.

1. Part, the Commiſſion, which is, Deliuer the penitent man from hell.

The fift and laſt part of this deſcription is, the Commiſſion and authority giuen vnto him, which is ſo great, as neuer was giuen to any creature, & is this, when a Miniſter of God hath declared vnto man his righteouſnes, hath brought him to the ſtate of grace, & God in his fauour hath had mercie on him; then God ſaith to the Miniſter, Deliuer that ſoule from hell, for I haue pardoned him in Chriſt, I am reconciled to him.

How a Miniſter is a redeemer.

In which words, authoritie is giuen to a Miniſter of God, to redeeme a man penitent, from hell, & damnation: not that hee is the meanes of working out this redemption, for that whollie and onely is Chriſt himſelfe: but he is Gods inſtrument, and Chriſts inſtrument: Firſt, to applie thoſe meanes vnto him: Secondly, to pronounce his ſafetie and deliuerance when theſe meanes are vſed. Heere is the principall honour of all, belonging to that calling: and it is the greateſt that euer was vouchſafed to anie Creature, Man or Angell: for it is a plaine Commiſſion, to goe and deliuer ſuch a man from the power of hell, and to redeem him into the ſtate of Gods children, & to make him heire of Heauen: Angells neuer had this Commiſſion, they are Meſſengers ſent out for the good of thoſe whom Miniſters haue redeemed, and they haue brought manie comfortable Meſſages vnto them: but it was neuer ſaid to any Angell, Deliuer that man that hee goe not downe into the pit: as it heere is ſaid vnto a Miniſter, nor any but Miniſters haue this Commiſſion.

More then Angells.

Hebr. 1. vlt. More then any other calling of men.

To ſome callings GOD ſaith, worke thou for man, build him houſes, prouide him ſuſtenance; to the Phiſition, heale that man: to the Lawyer, doe that man iuſtice: to the ſouldier, fight for him: to the magiſtrate, defend him; to the King, gouerne him, and ſee that euery one doe his duetie: to none but to the Miniſter doth hee ſay, Deliuer him that hee goe not downe into the pit.

Vſe. 1. for Miniſters. Ergo. They muſt pray, & preach, diligently.

If this be ſo, then for the vſe, firſt Miniſters muſt learne heere, that if they wil haue the honour of Redeemers, then muſt they doe the duetie of Redeemers, they muſt pray earneſtlie for the people, for that is one meanes whereby they redeeme men.

1. Sam. 12.

They muſt ſay with Samuel, God forbid that I ſhould ceaſe to pray for you: They muſt mourne for the impenitent, when they will not turne to God. So did Dauid, his eyes guſhed out with riuers of waters, becauſe men kept not Gods law. Pſalm. 119. And Ieremie, who wiſhed a fountaine of water in his eyes, that hee might weepe for the ſinnes of the people. They muſt priuatly conferre, viſite, admoniſh, & rebuke, and principally they muſt preach, and that in ſuch good maner, and in ſo diligent meaſure, as that they may redeem and winne ſoules, and the end that they muſt ayme at, muſt be to winne ſoules. Some preach for feare of the Lawe, to auoyde cenſure or puniſhment: ſome for faſhion ſake, that they may bee like to others: ſome for oſtentation ſake, to win credite and praiſe: ſome for ambition, to riſe in the world: all theſe forget their Commiſſion, which is, Deliuer a man from Hell.

For ſo dooing they are redeemers.

Idle Miniſters are no redeemers.

This ſhould bee the ende of their preaching, to deliuer a ſoule from Hell: and what ſhould Commiſſioners doe, but execute their Commiſſion? High Commiſſioners are worthie to bee lowe Commiſſioners, or rather no Commiſſioners, if they will not put in execution. It is therefore lamentable to ſee, that ſome by not preaching: ſome by vaine preaching, ſhew that they intend anie thing, rather then the winning of ſoules to God.

Let then all good Miniſters ſo Preache, as they may ſay with Eſay, Beholde Lorde, heere am I, and the Children whom thou haſt giuen mee.

And that they may return their Commiſſion thus: Whereas thou O Lord gaueſt me this people, and badſt me deliuer them, that they goe not downe into hell, I haue done it: it is the thinge my ſoule aymed at with all my deſire and endeuour: and by thy mercy I haue effected it accordingly.

And the rather muſt all Chriſtian Miniſters ſeriouſly intend the ſauing of ſoules, inaſmuch as Antichriſt doth ſo earneſtly ſeeke the deſtruction of ſoules, by winning them to his Synagogue. The Turke ſpares no labour, no coſt, to infect young children of Chriſtians with his impure and blaſphemous ſuperſtition. The Pope & his vaſſals (eſpecially Ieſuits,) vſe al means, deuiſe many ſtratagems, ſpare no coſt, nor labor, to ſeduce and inueagle yong men, & the beſt wits. Surely their care and pollicie herein is admirable: and yet alas, when (like the Phariſies) they haue compaſſed ſea & land to make a Proſelite, they make him like themſelues, the childe of hell.

Turkes and Iewes, and Ieſuites, are carefull to ſeduce ſoules.

And they are ſo farre from hauing any Commiſſion from God to do this, or any bleſſing promiſed, as contrariwiſe God forbids them, and his curſe lyeth vpon them for ſo doing.

Shall they be ſo diligent to deſtroy ſoules without a Commiſſion, and incurre Gods curſe for their labour? and ſhall not Chriſtian Miniſters be much more diligent to win and redeeme ſoules, hauing ſo large a Commiſſion for the purpoſe, and ſo great a bleſſing promiſed therevnto?

2 Vſe for hearers.
1. To ſee the excellencie of this calling.

In the next place, this doctrine hath vſe to the hearers. First, to let them ſee the excellencie of this calling, which hath a Commiſſion & power to redeeme them from hell and damnation, and what honour is due vnto it: and to let the wicked man ſee (which any way abuſeth either the perſons or the function) how baſe & vnthankfull men they are, to recompence euil for good, and therefore no maruell though euil do neuer depart from the houſes and families of ſuch men: and further, to encourage all men to giue themſelues to God in this calling; for ſee here what they are, euen the high Commiſſioners of God. We haue in our eſtate, a power deligated to certaine men of worth, and it is called the high Commiſſion, becauſe they haue power to do great things, and that man thinkes himſelfe happy who can bring his ſonne to this, to be thought fit to be one of this Commiſſion; but behold here a higher Commiſſion, a Commiſſion from God, to redeeme Soules from the power of hell, and the deuils clawes: this is indeed a high Commiſſion, and ſo high as this was neuer granted out of the Court of Heauen to anie Creature but to Miniſters: they therefore are the High Commiſſioners of the high God. Is it not then an honour and happineſſe vnto thee to bring thy ſonne to this eſtate?

Miniſters are Gods high Commiſsioners.

And laſtlie, this muſt teach all hearers, their dutie to Gods word: namely, to ſubmit themſelues vnto it; for if the Miniſter haue a commiſſion to redeem thy ſoule, it muſt be by the word and holy diſcipline. Therefore thy dutie is, to heare Gods word patiently, to ſubmit thy ſelfe vnto it, to be taught and inſtructed, nay, to be checked and rebuked, and to haue thy ſinnes diſcouered, and thy corruptions ript vp. If thou wouldeſt haue thy cauſe ſucceed well, thy Lawyer muſt diſcouer the weakeneſſes of it: If thy bodie to be cured, thy Phiſition muſt purge the corruption of it. So if thy ſoule be to be redeemed, thy Miniſter muſt ſee the weakenes, and purge the corruption of it; and though his doctrine be harſh, and hard vnto thy nature, and the diſcipline of the Goſpell ſeeme rough vnto thee, yet muſt not thou rage and rebell againſt it, nor hate him, nor raile at his perſon, but ſubmit thy ſelfe vnto it, for it is the meſſage and Miniſterie of thy ſaluation: If otherwiſe, thou doeſt indeed a great wrong to the Miniſter, for thou fruſtrateſt his commiſſion; but alas, a farre greater to thy ſelfe, for thou fruſtrateſt thine owne ſaluation.

2 Hearers, Ergo, muſt ſubmit themſelues to be redeemed.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFVL AND REVEREND IVDGES, SIR Iohn Sauile, Knight, one of the Barons of his Maiesties Exchequer, and Sir Christopher Yeluerton, Knight, one of the Iudges of his Maiesties Court of Kings Bench, and Sir Edward Phillips, Knight, his Maiesties Sargeant at Lawe, now or late the worthy Iudges of our Northeren Circuite, The spirit of wisedome, zeale and courage, be multiplied.

RIght worshipfull, it is saide in other Nations, and written in some of their bookes, that there are three disgraces of the English Nation: The Ignorance, or (that I may so call it) the vnlearned of our gentrie and Nobilitie, the beggery of our poore, & the baseneſſe of the body of our Ministerie. The first blot, our Nobilitie & Gentrie haue well wiped off, since the first daies of our blessed Queen Elizabeth, partly by studie at home, partly by trauel abroad, and I hope they will doe it more and more. The second hath bene well lessened by good lawes of late, and would be more, if the execution were as good as our lawes bee, and it were much honour to our Nation, and more to our Religion, if it were quite taken away: for he that telles vs, there shal be poore euer with vs: saith also, there shall not be a begger amongst vs, If there were no poore, what should become of Charitie? for it is Charitie, to relieue pouertie, not to maintaine Beggerie: Pouerty may be a Crosse, but it is no Curse: but Beggerie is a fearefull curse, threatned on the enemies of God: and Dauid saith not, he neuer sawe a righteous mans childe poore, but that he neuer sawe him beg his bread. The daily cryes in our streetes, crie for yet further reformation hereof, that the impotent poore may be sufficiently prouided for, that he neede not, and the Sturdie begger compelled to worke, that he may not be suffered to begge. Happy you, or whosoeuer can haue a hand in effecting this blessed worke: we who can doe little elſe, shal pray for it, and for them that labour in it. But now for the third, I feare none but the very hand of God, can wipe out that staine from our Church: The baseneſſe of the generall body of our Ministerie, whence is it, but either from the vnworthineſſe, or pouertie therof: and the vnworthineſſe, whence is it, but from the pouertie, and baſe maintenance of our Miniſtery, which was once robbed by the Abbies, and after by ſome in our owne State, which was then Popiſh, and Poperie that ſtands ſo much vpon Non dimittitur peccatum niſi reſtituator ablatum, yet for all that, would not reſtore vnto the Church her tenthes againe. But as Popiſh Abbies ſtole them, ſo a Popiſh State kept them, and to their ſhame ſome of the good profeſſers of our Religion, haue of late reſtored ſuch as were in their handes, and there is hope that all our Profeſſors, (vnleſſe they care not to be accounted hypocrites) wil make ſome conſcionable reſtitution. We doe not craue that they would with Zacheus reſtore foure-fold (though it is apparant, that the tenthes were got from vs in olde time, by moſt falſe and forged Cauillations) wee onely craue our owne, we would aske no more, nor willingly take leſſe: for our whole dutie is ſtill required: then why ſhould not our whole due be paide? And yet that the world may learne of vs contentednesſe, as well by our practiſe as our doctrine, wee would for the preſent take in good part, and reſt contented with a part of our own: And ſome competent portions out of the Impropriations, (proportioned to the quantitie of the charge impoſed, & the gifts and paines required) would for a time be a reaſonable ſatisfaction in our miniſtery, vntill our ſtate found it ſelfe, either better enable or more ſtraightly tied in Conſcience to full reſtitution. But as I ſaid, this is a worke of God himſelfe, for if a man could doe it, ſo many Parliaments would not haue ſlipt it, but ſome of them would haue eternized it ſelfe, with this honourable name to all poſterities. The Parliament that reſtored Impropriations, but til that, or ſome other courſe (as good) be taken, it is both vnſeaſonable and vnreaſonable to complaine of the Ignorant, or to craue a learned Miniſterie. For ſhall the Oxes mouth be mouſled, which treads out the corne? or ſhall a man goe to warre at his owne coſt? and hath not God ordained (marke, it is his Ordinance) that thoſe which teach the Goſpel ſhall liue of the Goſpel? But alas, how ſhall the Miniſterie of England liue of the Goſpel, when my ſmall experience can ſhewe, that in one corner of one Countie of this Kingdome, wherein there are ſome 105. Pariſhes, or parochiall Chappels, almoſt a 100. of them, (if not a full 100.) are Impropriate: and amongſt them, I can ſhewe the moſt pariſhes haue but 10. pound or thereabouts, ſome 8. li. ſome 6. li. ſome foure pounds, ſome not 4. pounds yearely liuing for the Miniſter, and thoſe impropriations worth ſome 300 li. many 200. li. almoſt all 100. li. per. an. yea there is one worth 400. pound per an. where there were but 8. li. left for the Miniſter, vntill of late with much adoe, 10. pound more was obtained for a Preacher, and ſo there is out of 400. 8. pound ſhared for a Miniſter, and 10. pound carued for a Preacher, in that pariſh where there are 2000. Communicants. Of all the reſt, the Crown hath ſome 100. pound rent, or not ſo much, and the remainder of 280. pound (being a rich liuing, for a worthy learned Miniſter, a competent liuing for 2. and more then ſome 7. painfull and able Miniſters haue) I knowe not what becomes of it, vnleſſe it goe to the feeding of Kites & Cormorãts. Are not theſe goodly liuings for learned men? and may not we expect a learned Miniſterie, where there is ſuch maincenance? and I hartily wiſh that other countries, be not able to ſhow the like preſidents. I haue the rather made relation hereof, that our high Court of Parliament, may ſee how great cauſe they haue, to goe forward with that motion already by them made, for the eſtabliſhing of a learned Miniſterie.

But if they bring it not to paſſe, what then remaineth, but to hope that the great God of heauen, will put it into the heart of the God on earth, our noble King (into whoſe hands hee hath put the ſword of ſoueraigne authoritie) an irreuocable and vnreſiſtable reſolution to execute his ſupreme power, for the reformation of this euill, which as Maiſter Perkins ſaith in this Treatiſe) may well bee called the Kings euill, for it will hardly be healed, but by the will and power of a King. In the meane time, this Treatiſe of that worthy man, may be a motiue to our zealous profeſſors, who haue any impropriations in their own hands, to excite and prouoke them to a conſcionable reſtitution, in whole or in part, as their ſtate may beare, or their conſcience ſhall moue them. For heerein are laide downe and mixed together, both the duties to be done by faithful Miniſters, and the Dignities due vnto them for their Duties: and ſo ſeeing the Dignities of that calling to be moſt honourable, and the Duties ſo chargeable, it cannot but grieue their Chriſtian hearts to ſee the maintenance ſo miſerable.

This Treatiſe I firſt of all ſend to you, and vnder your names to the world, and to you firſt, for as I am ſure you loued the Author, and honoured thoſe excellent gifts of God in him, ſo you cannot but except this after-birth of his (as a fatherleſſe child for the fathers ſake.) And for my ſelfe, to conceale all perſonal & priuate reſpects, in the name of many thousands in the Northern countries, I praise God, for the good done in those parts, by your painful courses, and religious care, not doubting, but if your selues, or the like be imploied there, to assist our honourable and Religious Lord President, that the multitude of Popish Priests there lurking, wil be daily lessened, the number of preachers augméted, Poperie put down, and the Gospell maintained more and more. Which blessing, God graunt to that and all other Countries of this Kingdome, for his mercies sake, and giue vnto you, and all others in your place, the spirit of courage and constancie, in these declining dayes, that being faithfull in your great charges, vnto the end, you may receiue the Crowne of life: for which he hartily prayeth, who will euer rest, yours to command,

The ſecond Treatiſe of the Duties and Dignitie of the Miniſterie.

Eſay 6.5. Then I ſaid, woe is me, I am vndone, for I am a man of polluted lippes, and dwell in the midſt of a people of polluted lippes: for my eyes haue ſeene the king and Lord of hoſtes.

6 Then flewe one of the Seraphins vnto me, with a hote coale in his hand.

7 Which he tooke from the Altar with the tongs: and touched my mouth, and ſaid, Lo this hath touched thy lips, and thy iniquitie ſhall be taken away, and thy ſinne ſhall be purged.

8 Alſo I heard the voyce of the Lorde ſaying, whom ſhall I ſend, and who ſhall goe for vs? then ſaid I, here am I, ſend mee: and hee ſaid goe.

IN the fiue former Chapters are contayned ſuch Sermons, as the Propet had made vnder Vzziah, King of Iudah. At this chapter begin ſuch as he preached in the raigne of Iotham, and ſo forward: But before hee either preach or prophecie of any thing, in King Iothams dayes, or his ſucceſſors, the Lord in this Chapter giues a newe confirmation to this Calling: the olde king, in whoſe dayes Eſayah was firſt called being now dead, & another ſucceeding him, God with the new king, reneweth the calling & commiſsion of the Prophet: wherein God doeth not giue him another calling, for one calling to the office of the miniſtery is ſufficient: but hee confirmeth the calling formerly giuen, by repeating & ratifying it. And this God did to Eſay, not as hee was an ordinarie, but an extraordinarie Prophet: for ordinary miniſters need no renouation of their calling, nor any new ſignes of cõfirmation, but extraordinary prophets, who came in extraordinary maner, & to doe many extraordinary works, God in his wiſdom wil haue their calling confirmed, again & againe, & that by very extraordinarie means Out of which practiſe of the Lorde, wee learne, how great cauſe we haue to doubt theſe men, to bee eyther fantaſticall or worſe, who pretend extraordinary callings in theſe dayes, and yet ſcarſe can ſhew vs any good ſignes of an ordinary, much leſſe of an extraordinarie motion: for if in thoſe dayes when ſuch courſes were more cõmon, God will haue his extraordinary Prophets calling to be renued & cõfirmed, again, & againe, then certainly in theſe dayes, wee may iuſtly require, more, & more wonderfull ſignes of an extraordinarie calling afore we beleeue it: and if God himſelfe was ſo carefull to ſatiſfie his Church in thoſe dayes of the vocation of his Prophet, ſurely the church in theſe daies hath much more cauſe to doubt in ſuch caſes, and to require manie and extraordinarie ſignes, afore it acknowledge any ſuch extraordinarie calling: Theſe men therefore offer much wrong to the Church, & deſerue both the cenſure thereof, and the ſword of the Magiſtrate, who dare ſo boldlie offer and obtrude to the Church their owne fancies and dreames, as extraordinary motions of Gods Spirit. This is the occaſion and coherence.

The Coherence.

with a new King, God giues the Prophet a new Commiſsion.

Ergo, extraordinary.

Callings or motions in theſe dayes are eaſily to be beleeued.

This Chapter hath two partes, firſt, the meanes of his confirmation, from the beginning to theſe words: ſecondlie, the confirmation it ſelfe, from theſe words to the end: the meane of his confirmation is a viſion hee ſawe from heauen, of certaine holy Angels appearing and ſpeaking to him, in the firſt foure verſes. In the confirmation, which followeth in theſe words, are three points.

The parts of the Chapter.

The parts of this text.

1 The effect of the viſion, which is wrought in the Prophet, it caused him feare, it astonisht him, and cast him downe in the fifth verse.

2. His Consolation, & raising vp again, after his feare, in the 6. and 7. verses.

3. The renuing of his Commission againe, from thence to the end.

The feare and astonishment of the prophet, is described.

1. By the signes, of which are two.

1. A note of exclamation, Woe is me.

2. By a note of extreame dejection in himselfe, I am vndone.

2. By the causes of it, which are also set downe to be two.

1 He was a man polluted, and dwelt amongst people polluted.

2 He had seene the Lord.

Then said I, woe is me, I am vndone.

1. Point is the feare of the Prophet.

The first point in order is, the feare & extasie into which the Lord droue his holy Prophet, which the Lord did not in his anger, but in his loue vnto him, not for a punishment of sinne, but as an euidence of his further loue: for the intent and purpose of God in striking this feare into him, was to inable him to be a true prophet, & a fit messenger for himself. It may seeme a strange course, which God taketh to confirme & raise vp his seruant in zeale and courage, to strike him into an extreame feare, euen to astonish and amaze him, and yet we see it is the course which the Lord taketh: out of which practise of the Lord, we learne this doctrine: That all true Ministers, especially such as are deputed to the greatest works in his church, must bee first of all striken into a great feare, in consideration of the greatnesse of their function, yea, into an amazement and astonishment, in the admiration of Gods glory & greatnes, whose roome they occupy, & whose message they bring, & the more they are afraid and shrinke, so it be vnder the contemplation of Gods Maiestie, and their owne weaknes, the more likelier it is that they are truly cald of God, and appointed for worthy purposes in his Church: but he that steps to this function without feare, he may thrust in himselfe, but tis doubtfull whether hee be cald of God, as heere the Prophet was: Nor is it so here alone, but euery where when God called any of his seruants, to any great worke, he first droue thē into these feares and amazements, as is euident a in Moses, in b Ieremy, in c S. Paul and others. The reason of this dealing of the Lord is plaine: namely, because mans nature is alwaies ready to take enough and too much vnto it selfe, God therefore in his wisedome puts a bridle vnto the corrupt nature of mā, & astonisheth it, least it presume too much, & take too much vpon it selfe. Againe, a Minister is to preach vnto the people, feare & reuerēce of the Lord: but how can he do so to others, whē he hath not tyed that bond in his owne conscience, nor was euer cast downe in admiration of Gods glory & Maiestie: And lastly, the ministery is an high & excellēt calling (especially the office of extraordinary Prophets in the old testament) & is therefore subiect to pride, and to bee puft vp with self-conceit, & therefore teacheth the Apostle to Timothy, that a Minister may not be a young scholler, least he be puft vp, & fall into the condemnation of the wicked. giuing vs to vnderstand, that it is ꝑ peculiar danger of that calling to haue high conceits of thēselues, because of the height & dignitie of their function. Therefore to preuēt this inconuenience, God in mercy appointeth that al his true Ministers shall haue some means or other, to be cast down euē to nothing in thēselues, and shal be driuen into such feares & amazements, at sight of their owne wickednesse, as they shal throwe downe themselues at Christes feete, and denying themselues wholly, shall acknowledge that they are in him whatsoeuer they are: and doe relye, and trust onely on his grace and helpe.

1. Tim. 3.

Doct. Best Ministers most amazed at their entrance.

Vse Ergo. Ministers and especially in the Vniuersities, labour to bee humbled in sight of Gods greatnesse, and their own meanenesse.

The vse of this doctrine, as it is for all Ministers, so specially for vs which liue in the Vniuersity: we liue as it were in a Seminary, and many of vs are hereafter by Gods grace to be framed to the Ministery, as some of vs already are. Now here we haue many occasions to be puft vp in self-conceit: we see our selues growe in time, in degrees, in learning, in honour, in name and estimation: & to many of vs God giues good portions of his gifts: what are all these, but so many baites to allure vs to pride, and & vaine opinions of our owne worthe: but let vs remẽber the end we aime at, is not humane, nor carnal: our purpoſe is to ſaue ſoules, Then the weapons of our warre muſt not be carnal, as pride, vaine-glory, and ſelfe-conceit. If therefore we euer looke to bee made inſtruments of Gods glory in ſauing of ſoules, then at the firſt ſet wee not before our eyes the honour, but the danger of our calling, and humble we our ſelues vnder the mightie hand of our God, that hee may exalt vs in his due time: and let vs be content that God giue any occaſion or meanes to put vs down, either by outward croſſes or inward temptation: & let vs reioyce, when we are thereby ſo farre caſt downe, that we cry out in the aſtoniſhment of our ſpirits, as the prophet here: Woe is me, I am vndone: but otherwiſe if we will needes followe the ſwinge of our proude natures, and truſt in our owne abilitie, gifts, and learning, let vs know, we vſe carnall weapons in a ſpirituall warfare: and let vs be aſſured the Lord will worke no great work in his Church by our Miniſterie: wee may raiſe our ſelues in worldly eſtimation, and worke out our owne purpoſes, but we ſhal do litle in the ſaluatiõ of ſoules: for thoſe men doe pronounce the moſt powerfull bleſſings on other mẽs ſoules, and ſpeake the beſt wordes of comfort to other mens conſciences, which oftenest ſay vnto themſelues; Woe is mee, I am vndone.

2. Cor. 11. 4.

2. Doct. Ergo; The Prophets hold not the opinion of the Intercеſſion of Angels.

Furthermore, whereas the Prophet at this viſion and Reuelation of Gods glory vnto him, cryeth out of himſelfe, Woe is me, I am vndone: beeing wordes of extreame feare and aſtoniſhment, and of ſo lowe a deiection as is a degree towards deſperation (if it had gone forward): let vs learne, that the Prophet helde not in his iudgement, the doctrine of Interceſſion of Angels and Saints for particular men, for if he had, he needed not at the ſight of Gods maieſtie, foorthwith to haue cryed out, Woe is mẽ, I am vndone, but he might haue ſtaied himſelfe a while in this cogitation, I will deſire Moſes, Samuel, or Dauid, to pray to this glorious GOD for mee, or here are holy Angels of the Seraphins here preſẽt, they ſee in what fearefull caſe I am, I will pray to them to ſpeake to this glorious and mightie Lorde for mee, that I periſh not in this feare: but hee inſtantly ſeeing the Lord appeare in Maieſtie, and fearing his iuſt wrath (being guiltie of his own corruptions) without any hope or expectation, or (as hee ſeemes) without the leaſt cogitation of helpe or aſſiſtance from anie creature, hee cryeth ont, I am vndone.

Laſtly, whereas hee exclaimeth, Woe is mee, I am vndone: beeing words of a ſoule humbled & deiected, and hereby ſheweth himſelfe to bee in that caſe, which a poore ſinner is, when the preaching of the Lawe hath humbled him, by ſhewing him his ſinnes, and his extream danger by them. We may learne, that to be called to the Miniſtery, is to be as it were conuerted & regenerate: and that when a man is called thervnto, it is a worke little leſſe then that whereby God calleth a ſinner from his ſinne, to the ſtate of repentance: for as God firſt caſteth down the ſinner, before he giue him Grace, or any feeling of his loue in Chriſt: ſo heere hee firſt abaſeth and caſteth downe the Prophet in the ſight of GODS Maieſtie, and his owne miſerie, afore hee honour him with a Commiſsion to preach his word vnto his people. Which I note againſt thoſe men, which holde it ſo ordinary a matter to enter into the Miniſterie, as many doe, which take it vpon them in worldly and politique purpoſes. And ſome of a better Ranke, which thinke if a man haue Learning, degrees and age, hee is ſufficiently qualified for that calling. But alas, this is not all; there is a greater work to be wrought then ſo, he muſt be humbled & caſt down in ſight of the greatneſſe of that calling, of the maieſtie of that God, whoſe roome he is to execute, and of the vnworthineſſe of himſelfe to ſo great a work: he muſt be reſolued, that to call a man to the Miniſterie, is the greateſt worke that God worketh in his church, but the conuerting of a ſinner, and calling him to the ſtate of grace: nay it is a work euen like vnto it: for as a ſinner in his cõuerſion, ſo he at his Vocatiõ to that place, is often to cry out in the amazement of his ſoule,

3. Doct. Ergo, The calling to the Miniſterie is a worke like vnto the calling of a ſinner to the ſtate of Grace.

Vſe. Ergo, muſt be required to qualifie a man for the Miniſterie.

Woe is mee, I am vndone. As therefore they are fouly deceiued, which thinke any holinesse or sanctification, can sufficiently qualifie a man without learning, so are they no lesse which thinke all outward complements to be sufficient without this work, which here was wrought in the holy Prophet. Thus we see the feare & astonishment of the Prophet, It followeth,

Causes of his feare. 2.

For I am a man of polluted lippes,

1. Cause pollution of himselfe and his people.

Now followe the causes of his feare, which are two. The first is, his owne pollution and sinfulnesse, and the sinfulnesse of his people: his own he freely confesseth in these words; I am a man of polluted lippes: that is, I am a miserable and sinfull man, and therefore I feare and tremble to stand in Gods presence: nay, I dare not looke vpon the Lorde, for my sinnes. But it may be demaunded, how could the Prophet say thus truly? for hee was a holy man, and iustified in Gods presence, by his true faith in the Messias, and sanctified by repentance? can a man iustified and sanctified say, he is a man polluted? I answere, It is doubtlesse, he was so, hee therefore complaineth here not of any great and enormous sinnes, which hee had committed to the publike scandall of the Church, but first of the corruptiō of his nature, which in him as in all men is a very sea of iniquitie, & which alwaies appeares the more, the nearer a man comes to God, and therefore did now most apparantly discouer it selfe in the Prophet, when hee was in the presence of the Lord himself. Secondly, he complaineth of some actuall sins of his life, and it is more likely of some sins of omission, then of cōmission: for we finde not that the Prophet was euer touched with any great sin, & where we know it not, we are in charitie not to imagine it. So that it is most probable, hee complaineth of some smaller faults, or negligences in his Ministery: as not preaching to the people at some time when he ought, or not preaching so willingly or cheerfully as he should, or desire to leaue Preaching, because the people were stubborne & disobedient, or some impatience in his Ministery, when the people were rebellious and resisted his doctrine, which passion might the rather vexe him (as we read it did Ieremy) the Iewes were so stubborne & stifnecked a people: or it may be some want of zeale or forwardnes, these, or some such were the cause of his feare: And the cōscience of these makes him here cry out that he cannot stand in the sight of God. Where we learne, first, what a tender conscience godly Ministers must haue aboue all men: namely, that they must make conscience, not of the great and grosse sins onely, but euen of the lowest & least sins: and hee must endeuour in his calling, not only to be cleere of great crimes, but as far as may be, to bee free from the least appearance of euill, and from the least negligences in his place, for a small fault in other men is great in them, and that which may be some waies pardonable in other men, is no way in them: they must therefore watch ouer themselues most carefully, and take heede to all their waies: & for this ende is it, that a Minister in godly wisedome must often deprive himselfe euen of many thinges (which it may be, lawfully hee might vse) least his libertie be an occasion of euell to others: and must abstaine from the least sins, least euen they be blemishes to his calling, and burthens to his conscience. And hence is it, that a minister cannot bee too carefull in his calling, in his words, diet, company, recreation, apparell, gestures, and in his whole carriage, because little sins are so great in thē. Especially ministers must here learne the Apostles lesson, to be instant in season and out of season: to preach and exhort, to comfort and rebuke, publikely and priuately to good, to bad, when it is well taken, when it is ill taken, when they willingly receiue it, and when they stobbornly resist it: when they commend him, and reward him, and when they raile at him, and persecute him for it: thus must he be diligent in season and out of season, for the least negligence in his dutie, or omitting the least opportunity of doing good, will when God visits his conscience, bee a burthen and vexation to him, as it was heere to the Prophet.

Doct. Ergo, ministers must be men of tender conscience.

And make conscience of the least sinnes.

And be most careful in his ministery both publikely and priuately.

1. His owne. Hee was a man of polluted lippes.

And he was a polluted man,

And he complaineth not of capitall sinnes.

But of the corruption of his nature

2. Of some omission in his calling

And

Vſe. Ergo. Miniſters for great ſins ſhould be greatly humbled.

And furthermore, if theſe ſmall ſins thus afflicted the Prophet, then alas what is to be thought of thoſe miniſters who make no conſcience of foule and ſcandalous ſinnes? how ſhall Symonie, Incontinency, Vſury, Inhoſpitality, couetouſneſſe, Ignorance, Idleneſſe, careleſſe Nonreſidency, how ſhall theſe (I ſay) and other like grieuous crimes oppreſſe & burthen the ſoule, when as the ſmalleſt ſinnes doe ſo affright this holy man? Surely, whē God ſhal viſite them, their ſtates will bee moſt fearefull, nor ſhall any mans caſe bee ſo miſerable, as an vncōſcionable miniſters: And thogh nowe ſuch looſe and licentious Miniſters ſeeme to liue in iollitie, & without any feare, yet when God ſhall appeare vnto their conſcience, then will they cry out in fearefull anguiſh, Woe is me, I am vndone.

And for great negligēce in their calling, elſe they haue no conſcience.

And againe, if theſe ſmal faults ſo affrighted this holy prophet, & burdened his conſcience, then what pittiful conſciences haue thoſe Miniſters, whoſe daily negligence, and vnconſcionable careleſſeneſſe in their places is ſuch, as all men ſpeake of, and yet they are not touched: ſurely theſe men are not of ſo tender cōſciences as the prophet was: & either the prophet here was much more nice then needed, or elſe theſe men will proue to be in a miſerable eſtate.

Good and faithfull miniſters not to bee diſcouraged, though they haue ſome wants, for ſo the prophets had, but let them complaine of the as here the prophet doth.

Laſtly, let Miniſters of eare and conſcience, be heere comforted in the example of the Prophet: who is there, but may find imperfections and blemiſhes in himſelfe, which wil often make him cry out, Woe is me? but let not that diſcomfort them, but rather reioyce, that they can ſee their owne weaknes, as the Prophet did here: If they haue cauſe to exclaime againſt themſelues, they are not alone, it was this, and all other holy prophets caſe before them: In hauing imperfections in themſelues, they are no more miſerable then the Prophet was: but let them labour to be as bleſſed in ſeeing & complaining of themſelues as hee was: And let euery miniſter aſſure himſelfe, that the more hee makes conſcience, euen of the leaſt ſinnes of all, the more he reſembleth the ancient holy Prophets, & the more likely is he to worke effectually in his miniſtery. For his dutie is to worke in his people a conſcience, not of great ſinnes onely but euen of all: but how can he doe that in them, if hee haue not firſt of all done it in himſelfe? hence it is therefore, that godly miniſters finde fault with themſelues, when other men cannot, and cry out againſt themſelues for their pollution, (with the Prophet here) when no other man can accuſe them of the leaſt crime: nay, when other doe magnifie God for his graces on them, and praiſe their giftes, and commende their good liues, euen then doe they condemne themſelues, and exclaime againſt their owne corruptions: and their owne ſmalleſt negligences, or omiſſions, are great wounds to their conſciences: and their leaſt ſinnes, and their moſt pardonable infirmities, are ſore burthens vnto them: for of all men in the worlde, a Godlie Miniſter is a man of the moſt tender conſcience.

Godly Miniſters finde faults with themſelues when the world cannot.

Hitherto hath the Prophet complained generally of his pollution.

Particularly, hee exclaimeth againſt the pollution of his lippes. But why will ſome ſay, complaines hee of the pollution of his lippes, rather then of his heart, or his hands, or anie other part of him, were they not all polluted? yes, all in ſome meaſure: and was not he grieued at them all? yes aſſuredly, wee muſt grant that alſo. But the reaſon is he was a Prophet, his dutie was to vſe his tongue, the practiſe of his calling conſiſted in the vſe of his tongue: for a miniſter is an interpeter, as he is called, Iob 33 22. that is, the peoples to God by praier, and Gods to the people by preaching: hee is Gods mouth, and the peoples mouth: ſo that the tongue of a Miniſter is that part of his body, which is to be vſed as a principall inſtrument of Gods glory, and more to the ſetting foorth of his honour then any other: Now euery man is to be tryed what he is by his calling, rather then by any other accidentall or collaterall courſes; therefore the honour or diſhonour of a Miniſter, is the vſe or the abuſe of his tongue: and his comfort or diſcomfort is the well vſing, or not vſing of it. The Prophet therefore here affrighted at Gods preſence, and therefore retyring into himſelfe, preſently his conſcience checkes him for his moſt proper ſins: namly, for Particularly he complaineth againſt the pollution of his lippes.

For a Prophets dutie conſiſts in the vſe of his tongue.

His ſmalleſt negligence in teaching, checkes his conſcience.

ſome fault or negligence in his Miniſterie (which is the proper ſinne of that calling) and therefore is it that hee exclaimeth againſt the pollution of his lips: out of which practiſe of his wee may learne.

Vſe 1. Ergo Papiſts doctrine of mans merits is falſe. And of workes

First, the vanitie of the Papiſts, who magnifie the Merites of holie mens workes: for if this holy Prophet, a man truely iuſtified, & extraordinarily ſanctified, yet durſt not ſtand before God in this little apparance of his glorie, notwithſtanding all his zeale, and courage, and conſcience, and paines, and ſufferings in his function, but was caſt downe ſo farre, from a conceit of his owne worth, that hee cryed out; Woe is mee, I am vndone. How then can wee who are no better, but much worſe then hee, ſtand before God in the day of Iudgement, in the great appearing of his infinite iuſtice and glorie? Rather doubtleſſe, as here the ſmalleſt pollution of his lips, and negligence in his calling, droue him out of all conceite of merit, when once hee came into the preſence of God: ſo the due conſideration of our ſo many and foule pollutions aboue his, ſhould beate downe all proud conceites of our owne goodneſſe, when wee appeare before God. It is therefore to be feared, that the Papiſts, who thus magnifie their own merits, doe ſeldom or neuer enter into earneſt conſideration of their owne infirmities, doe ſeldome preſent themſelues in the preſence of Gods Maieſtie. For if they did, then doubtleſſe the leaſt ſight of their leaſt pollution, would make them farre from euer thinking of their owne merits.

And of workes of ſuperrogation. And perfect fulfilling the lawe in this life

They alſo tell vs, of workes of ſuperrogation, but it ſeemes heere, this holy Prophet had none of them. And they teach, a man may in this life perfectly fulfill the Lawe, but who can doe it, if not Miniſters? And what miniſters, if not extraordinary Prophets? And yet Iſaiah (the firſt and chiefe of them) exclaimeth here in pittiful manner againſt his pollutions: Doubtleſſe, if the Papiſts would ceaſe flattering themſelues, and not examine their conſciences by their own pleaſing corruption, but preſent themſelues in the face and preſence of GODS Maieſtie, they would bee farre from theſe conceits.

In the next place, whereas the Prophet complaineth of the pollution of his lippes: As of the peculiar ſinne of his place: Miniſters are heere taught, to auoide that ſinne aboue all others, and to labour in that dutie aboue any others for the doing of it, is his moſt comfort: the want of it is his moſt vexation: his tongue is the Inſtrument giuen him to honour God, if he vſe it well, it yeeldes him comfort, more then any other duties.

2. Vſe. Ergo Miniſters muſt take heede of negligence in their function aboue all ſinnes, for that burtheneth the cõſcience moſt heauily of all.

But if hee vſe not, or abuſe his tongue, the pollution of his lips will be the heauieſt burthen of all; they therefore are greatly deceiued, who thinke a Miniſter to diſcharge ſufficiently his dutie, though hee Preach not, if hee keepe good Hoſpitalitie, and make peace amongſt his Neighbours, and performe other workes of charitie and good life: for if a miniſter haue not this vertue, hee hath none: If hee Preach not; If hee abuſe his lippes, or if he open them not, hee hath no conſcience, nor can haue any comfort, for that is the principall dutie of a Miniſter (though all the other bee required to make him compleate): the want of them may condemne him before men, but it is the pollution of his lippes, which preſently checkes him before God, as wee ſee here in this holy Prophet: the concluſion then is to euery Miniſter, that if he had all the vertues & good properties, that can commend a man in the world, yet if his lippes bee polluted, either by not preaching, or by negligẽt, idle, or careleſſe preaching, this pollution will ſo ſtaine his conſcience, and ſo burthen him in the preſence of GOD, that the time will come (notwithſtanding all his other good qualities) hee will cry out in farre more pittiful maner, then here the Prophet doth; Woe is mee, I am vndone, becauſe I am a man of polluted lippes. It followeth,

Other vertues are excellent, but cannot ſuffice, if this want.

And I dwell in the midſt of a people of polluted lippes.

2. His peoples pollution. He complaines of it to teach.

The Prophet not onely complaines of his own pollution, but of his peoples alſo amongſt whom hee liued, and this he doth for theſe cauſes: First, to teach vs, that it is the Miniſters dutie to confeſſe feſſe not onely his owne ſinnes, but the ſinnes of his people, and to complaine of them to God: for as he is the peoples Interpreter to God, he muſt not thinke it enough to put vp their petitions, to vnfolde their wants, & craue reliefe for them at Gods hand, but hee muſt further take knowledge of the ſins of his people, and make both publique and priuate confeſſion of them to God: and the more particularly hee can doe this, the better: and this hee is to doe, both for the peoples good, and for his owne alſo, becauſe it cannot be but the ſinnes of his people, are in ſome ſort his: for this is the peculiar danger of the Magiſtrates and Miniſters calling, that generally the ſinnes of their people are theirs; I meane that they are acceſſarie to the ſinnes of their people, either by prouoking them by their euil example, or by not reprouing, or not hindring or ſuffering, or winking, or couering & concealing, or not puniſhing them, or not carefully enough vſing meanes to preuent them: by all which meanes and many more, it comes to paſſe, that the peoples ſinnes are the Miniſters by communication: ſo that as well for his owne ſake, as theirs, hee is to confeſſe to GOD their ſinnes, as well as his owne.

For generally he is acceſſarie to his peoples ſinnes.

Now if a Miniſter muſt confeſſe his peoples ſinnes, then it followeth conſequētly, that he muſt know them, and take notice of them, for elſe hee cannot confeſſe them. And this is one cauſe why the holy Ghoſt commands a Paſtor to know his flocke.

1. Vſe. Ergo, a Miniſter muſt knowe his peoples ſins.

He muſt not onely haue a flocke, and knowe which is his flocke: or haue a generall eye ouer it, but hee muſt haue a particular and diſtinct knowledge of the ſtate of it, and the more particular the better.

Pro. 27. 23.

And if the Miniſter ought to know and confeſſe his peoples ſinnes, then it followeth, firſt, that it is beſt for a Miniſter to bee preſent with his people, that ſo hee may the better knowe them and their ſtate: and certainly if it bee a Miniſters dutie to confeſſe to God the pollutions of his people, then wilfull and careleſſe Nonreſidency and all abſence, without iuſt and conſcionable cauſes, muſt needes be a foule & feareful ſin. For how could Iſayah haue confeſſed, that his people were a people of polluted lips, but that hee dwelt amongſt them. Nay, ſaith the Prophet, he dwelt in the miaſt among them, indeede well may hee knowe and confeſſe his peoples pollutions, that dwelles in the midſt amongſt them.

Ergo, it is beſt for a Miniſter to bee with his people.

Againe, if the Miniſter be to confeſſe his peoples ſinnes, and therefore muſt needes knowe them, then it followeth alſo that they muſt diſcouer & confeſſe them vnto him, or elſe it is not poſſible he ſhould perfectly knowe their eſtate: the want of this is a great fault in our Churches: for how euer we condemne Auricular confeſſion, as a very pollicie in the deuiſers, and as a rack to the conſciences of poore Chriſtians, yet we not onely allowe, but call and cry for that confeſſion, wherby a Chriſtian voluntarily at all times may reſort to his Paſtor, and open his eſtate, and disburden his conſcience of ſuch ſins, as diſquiet him, and craue his godly aſſiſtance, and holy prayers: great bleſſing and comfort doth doubtleſſe follow them that vſe this godly practiſe, and the want of it, is cauſe that a miniſter cānot diſcerne the ſtate euen of his own flock, nor can complaine to God of their pollutions, and confeſſe their ſinnes ſo particularly, as would be good both for him and them.

2. Vſe. Ergo, people muſt confeſſe their ſins, and reueale them to their miniſter.

Not Popiſh but voluntarie. And of ſuch ſins as diſquiet the conſcience.

Secondly, the Prophet couples together his own pullution, and the pollutions of his people, as the adjuvant, or helping cauſe & the effect: For the pollution of a people, helpes forward the pollution of a Miniſter, and the worſe people they are, the worſe doe they make him, though he be otherwiſe neuer ſo good: For euen the Prophet, though called of God himſelfe, & iuſtified and ſanctified, & a man of extraordinary grace, yet dwelling in ꝑ midſt of a people ſo ſtubborne & diſobedient, as the Iewes were, was ſomething touched with their pollutions: Miniſters (euen the beſt) are men, and this comes to paſſe by reaſon of the corruption of their nature as they are men, the nature of which corruption is to apprehend any euill where euer it findes it, and to partake with it: regeneration qualifieth & abates this corruption, but takes it not away perfectly in this life: whereby it comes to paſſe, that a miniſter, liuing amongſt euill people, cannot but be ſomwhat ſtained with their pollution, of what ſort ſoeuer they be: inſomuch as it is often ſeene, that one knowne to be otherwiſe diſpoſed of himſelfe, is found to bee diſpoſed to this or that euill, by liuing amongſt a people ſo diſpoſed. And againe, that a miniſter in ſuch a place, and amongſt ſuch people, free from ſuch and ſuch ſinnes, remoued to another place, is there found more or leſſe tainted with them, becauſe they abound amongſt the people: and yet further, that a Miniſter, knowne to be faithfull, painfull, and zealous, & comming to a diſobedient, ſtubborne, froward, or prophane & diſſolute people, his faith is weakened, his zeale & courage abated, Gods graces in him dulled, & much decayed: godly Miniſters doe daily complaine hereof, and experience euery where ſhewes it too true. Out of this we may learne ſomething both for our inſtruction, and for our conuerſation.

2. To teach vs that a polluted people make their Miniſter more or leſſe polluted alſo.

A wicked people dull and decay Gods graces in good Miniſters. Vſe double.

1. For inſtruction.

For our inſtruction, it here appeares how wicked and wretched the corruption of our nature is, which cannot but receiue ſome contagion from the pollution of thoſe with whom we liue: for this is ſo, not onely in them who carry a looſe hand ouer themſelues, but euen in ſuch as looke moſt narrowly vnto their ſteps: as wee ſee here in this holy Prophet, who was a man of more then ordinary ſanctification: how little cauſe therfore hath any man to extoll nature? and how much leſſe cauſe the ſchoolemen and ſome other papiſts, to giue the leaſt commendations to our pure naturals: for if nature rectified by grace, bee ſo hardly kept within compaſſe, alas how outragious & peruerſe is it, when it raignes without controlement?

1. See how corrupt our nature is.

2. What a creeping nature ſin hath.

And for our further inſtruction, heere wee may ſee of what a creeping and incroaching nature ſinne is, which like a ſecret venome in the naturall bodie, ſo it in the politique body reſtes not in the place, or party poiſoned, but cloſely creepes & diffuſeth it ſelfe into euery part and member of the whole: it creepes from man to man, yea, from an euill man to a good, from the worſt man to the beſt: from prophane men, to godly Miniſters: and as from publique perſons (as Magiſtrates and Miniſters) it deſcendeth viſibly, and the example of their euil life is palpably ſcandalous: ſo from the people to the Magiſtrate, or Miniſter, it creepeth cloſely, & aſcendeth in more ſecret and inſenſible manner, yet in the effect it is too ſenſible, for it is alwaies ſeene, that they are ſomething touched with their peoples pollutions: ſinne is not onely as a poiſon ſpreading from the heart to all parts, from the miniſter to the people: but as a gangreue, if it begin in the foot, wil without ſpeedy preuention ſpread priuily to the heart: ſo ſin ſhews it ſelf, euen from the people to the Miniſters: So great cauſe is there for all men to ſtop ſinne in the beginning, to breake it in the egge, to giue water no paſſage, no not a little: for let this gangreue beginne at the feete, it will not reſt till it be in the heart.

It wil creep from Miniſters to people, & from people to Miniſters.

Ergo, ſtop ſinne in the beginning.

For our conuerſatiõn wee are heere taught, firſt, if a Miniſter, by reaſon of the corruption of his owne nature, and the creeping nature of ſinne, is in ſuch danger to bee ſtained with the peoples pollutions, then let all Miniſters deſire, and vſe all good meanes to dwell with a people as little poluted as may be: otherwiſe let him aſſure himſelfe to be polluted with them, which is both a great diſcõfort to his owne conſcience (as here it was to the Prophet) and diſgrace to his profeſſion: for if it be a dutie of euery good profeſſor of religion, to keepe himſelfe vnſpotted of the world, Iam. 1. 17. then how much more is it the Miniſters dutie ſo to doe? and how foule a ſtaine is it to the honour of his calling, to be polluted in the common pollutions of his people?

2. For our conuerſation.

1. Miniſters, Ergo, labour to liue amongſt people.

It may bee therefore good counſell to all godly Miniſters in the placing and diſpoſing of themſelues, not to enquire onely how good a liuing ſuch and ſuch a place is, how wel ſeated, how healthfull and beneficiall it will bee, (which are alas the common & almoſt the onely queſtions now adayes) but principally, to regard what a people they bee, and how affected, amongſt whom they are to liue: if godly and well diſpoſed, or at leaſt tractable and gentle, gentle, & willing to be taught, thē leſſe to regard other incommodities: but if wicked, and prophane, or (which is worſe) ſtubborne, froward, and vntractable, then leſſe to regard the greateſt commodities: & certainely if this point be well conſidered of, and how bitter it hath beene in the ende, to many who haue not regarded it, it will appeare, that this is the beſt encouragement or diſcouragement, the greateſt commoditie, or diſcommoditie, and the beſt reaſon, either to win a man to a place: or to drawe him from it, how good ſoeuer it be other waies: they that neglect this dutie, and are led (or miſled rather) with carnall and worldly reſpects, how iuſt is it vpon thē when they are made to cry in the ſorrowe of their ſoule, Woe is me, I dwell in the midſt of a people of polluted lippes.

And in diſpoſing themſelues, rather regard it, then other commodities.

A poore liuing with good people better then a great liuing and euill people.

And heere ſuch Miniſters as haue poore liuings, but good people, let them not faint nor bee diſcouraged, they haue more cauſe to bleſſe God, then to bee grieued, for doubtleſſe they are farre better thē thoſe who haue great liuings, and an euill people.

But as for thoſe to whom God hath bene ſo good, as to beſtowe vpon them competent liuings, and a willing and well diſpoſed people, let them thinke themſelues double bleſſed of God, and treble bound to honour God, & to doe good in his Church: and if ſuch men goe not before their brethren in al Miniſterial care and dutie, their fault is aboue all men, & they make themſelues vnworthy of ſo great mercies.

2. Ergo. Miniſters muſt take heed of their company.

Againe, if that a polluted people, pollutes their Miniſter, here is a good warning for all miniſters to be wary & choyſe of their company, with whom they will moſt priuately conuerſe: for, as on the one ſide they may not retire themſelues into ſolitarineſſe, nor ſequeſter thēſelues from all ſocietie with their people, (which is rather a Cinicall and fantaſticall, then any way a religious practiſe): ſo of all men are they to be moſt carefull, that they doe not looſely and lauiſhly beſtow themſelues on all companies, as too many doe in our Church, to the great ſcandall thereof, who care not with whom they conuerſe, but all companies, all places, all times, all ſports and recreations, al meetings, all occaſions, are one with them: but alas, what maruel, though ſuch men keepe not thēſelues vnſpotted of the world, but proue too offenſiue to their callings: for ſeeing the beſt men cānot liue with the beſt people, but they ſhall receiue ſome contagion from them, how carefully ought ordinary miniſters to make difference of men and meetings, times and places, and not diffuſedly & careleſly to thruſt themſelues into all: So doing ſhal they keep their calling from much reproach, & preſerue themſelues from much pollution, which otherwiſe from their polluted people, they ſhall be ſure to receiue.

All companies and all recreations are not for Miniſters.

And heere people are to be admoniſhed, not too ſharpely to cenſure their miniſters: though hee bee not ſo ſociable with them all, as it may bee many would expect: for it concernes no man to bee ſo wary of his company and his ſports, as it doeth the Miniſter: and if they would haue comfort and honour by their Miniſter, let them be carefull into what recreations and companie they drawe or deſire him: for the more polluted the people are amongſt whō he liues, the more carefull muſt hee be to keepe himſelfe cleere from their pollutions.

And people muſt not draw their Miniſters too much into company.

3. People muſt not condemne too ſharpely ſuch Miniſters as are faultie in their liues for themſelues are the cauſe of it, beeing of euill liues themſelues.

Laſtly, here people are taught, not to be too ſharpe condemners of thoſe miniſters, whoſe conuerſations are not ſo vnblameable as were to be wiſhed: for as they liue ill, generally the cauſe is, becauſe they liue amongſt an il people.

Why then ſhould they ſo much condemne them, for ſuch faults, as wherein themſelues haue made them faultie? I ſay not, but our Church and ſtate, and Miniſterie, are to cenſure ſuch men, (and it were good they did it more) but it is againſt all reaſon the people ſhould do ſo, wheras themſelues are the cauſe of it: For alas, if this holy Prophet was a man of polluted lippes, becauſe hee dwelt with a people of polluted lippes: what maruell then, though ordinary Miniſters be polluted with the common and vniuerſall pollutions of their people: People therefore, are firſt of all to ſee that themſelues bee well ordered and godly, and then iuſtly may they complaine, if the liues of their Miniſters be not agreeable: but otherwiſe, it is not poſsible without very ſpecial grace of God but that a miniſter ſhal be more or leſſe touched with thoſe crimes which are the cõmon faults of his people. And lamentable experience daily lets vſee, that where a people in a town is giuen to drunkennes, there the Miniſter, is either ſo for company, or at leaſt too good a fellowe: where a people are giuen to contention, there the Miniſter hath too many ſuites: where the people be Popiſh, there the Miniſter is too ſuperſtitious: where the people bee ignorant, there the Miniſter is no great clarke: where the people are giuen to any great ſinne, there the Miniſter generally is not cleare from the ſame pollution: and it is ſeene, that the beſt miniſters & moſt carefull of all, doe complaine bitterly of the pollutions of their people: for that howſoeuer it may bee they eſcape partaking with their ſins: yet they alwaies finde, at the leaſt a dulling and decaying of Gods graces in themſelues, where the people are vntoward and diſobedient. If therefore a Miniſter liues with ſuch a people, his caſe is pittifull and daungerous, for hee walkes in the midſt of nets and ſnares, which are laide for him on euery ſide, and if hee eſcape them (I meane, if hee keepe himſelfe vnſpotted, in the midſt of a ſpotted & polluted people) his care and his conſcience is worthy both admiration and imitation, and himſelfe is worthy double honour, as being both a zealous miniſter and an holy man. But hee whõ God hath bleſſed with a good and tractable people, and well affected to the worde, and yet himſelfe liueth looſely & ſcandalouſly amongſt them, a heauy burden and a hard account, lyeth on that miniſter, and no rebuke is too rough, no puniſhment too great, no cenſure too ſharpe for him. And, if this holy Prophet, feare ſo much the preſence of God for his ſmall pollutions, and yet liued amongſt ſo wicked and polluted a people, then what heauineſſe and horror, ſhall bee heaped on his ſoule, who cares not with how foule pollutions his life be ſtained, and yet liueth amongſt a godly & well diſpoſed people? And thus wee haue the firſt cauſe of his feare, his owne, and his Peoples pollutions.

Looke what ſinnes abounds in anyplace, and there generally the Miniſter is tainted with it.

But ſuch miniſters as liue with a good people and yet are looſe, they are not worthy to be miniſters, but to be depriued.

It followeth,

And mine eyes hath ſeene the King, and Lord of Hoſtes.

THe ſecond cauſe of the Prophets feare and aſtoniſhment is, He ſaw the Lorde, who then appeared in glory vnto him: not that hee ſawe the ſubſtance of God (for that is inviſible and incomprehenſible) but his glory: Not the fulneſſe of his glory, for that cannot be endured, but a glimſe of it: nor that with the eies of his body in ordinary manner, but in a viſion: wherein how farre the eyes of his body were vſed, neither the Prophet expreſſeth, nor wee can well conceiue. The meaning then is; In a viſion hee ſawe ſuch glorie and Maieſtie, as hee knewe there was an extraordinary preſence of the Lord of hoſtes, who is the King of glorie, at whoſe ſight, and thought of his preſence, inſtantly his conſcience is ſmitten with feare, for his own infirmities, and the pollutions of his people.

2. Cauſe of his feare, he ſawe the Lord.

How? In a viſion.

Wherein let vs firſt of all obſerue the connexion & dependance of theſe two cauſes, one vppon another: for as they are both ioyntly the cauſe of his feare, ſo one of them is in a ſort the cauſe of another: hee feareth, becauſe of his owne and his peoples ſinnes, and becauſe hee ſawe the Lord: but why is hee afraid to ſee the Lord? the cauſe thereof is his owne and their ſins, without which, hee would neuer haue beene affraid, but rather haue gloried to ſee the Lord: but his conſcience checking him, for ſome defect of dutie in his calling, therfore he trembleth at the leaſt glimſe of Gods glory. Heere let vs marke the ground of his reaſon, which is this: That man that is in his ſinnes, is not able to ſtand in the preſence of God: this is a generall and certaine truth, & the reaſons of it are; Firſt, the contraritie betwixt God, and the nature of ſinne, it being the onely thing which offends him, & which prouokes his wrath and iuſt diſpleaſure: therefore as a ſubiect cannot but be much amazed, if he hap to come into the kings preſence, with any thing about him which the king hates, or cannot abide to ſee: ſo a man cannot but be extreame aſtoniſht, Doct: the man that is in his ſinnes endures not Gods preſence.

1. For God hates ſinne, aboue all things.

aſtoniſht, if he know himſelfe to be in Gods preſence with his ſinnes, which Gods ſoule hateth.

2. Sin makes a man a debter to God.

Secondly, ſin makes a man indebted to God: for as the Lawe tieth him firſt to obedience, ſo if he ſin, and faile in that, it bindes him to puniſhment: and the more a man ſinneth, the deeper is he in gods debt. If then in this world, a man willingly endures not the ſight of him, in whoſe debt hee is; what maruell, though a poore ſinner tremble at the preſence of god, to whom he hath forfaited ſoule and all.

3. Sinne is that, that makes God angrie.

Thirdly, ſin is that which prouoketh god to wrath: therefore a ſinfull man feareth the preſence of god, as a traytor the face of the Prince, or a malefactor of the Iudge. For theſe cauſes, a wicked man endures not gods preſence.

Degrees of Gods preſence.
1. To our thoughts.
2. To our naming him.
3. Neere in his ordinances.
4. Neereſt at the laſt day.

Now gods preſence hath diuers degrees. Firſt, god is preſent to our cõſcience, when we thinke of him. 2. He is preſent, when we name him, or heare him named or mentioned by others, and theſe are the furtheſt off. Thirdly, god is neerer vnto vs in the preſence of his Ordinances, as his Word and Sacraments, and publike ſeruice in the Congregation. Fourthly, there is a moſt apparant and ſenſible preſence of god, which ſhall be at the laſt Iudgement, when all men ſhall ſtand before him in his immediat preſẽce, to receiue their iudgement. Now all theſe preſences of god, are hatefull to a wicked man: for the firſt, a wicked man by his good will neuer thinkes of god, and if ſometime a thought of god (like lightning) flaſhes in his minde, preſently he quencheth it, as being a moſt vnwelcome and burthenſome thought vnto him: therefore ſaith Dauid; The wicked is ſo proud, he careth not for God: neither is God in all his thoughts: Nay, god himſelf is ſo little thought on by them, that they will willingly thinke of nothing, that might bring god into their thoughts: as namely, gods great works of his wonderful iudgments: of whom the ſame Prophet ſaieth, in the ſame place, Thy iudgements are farre aboue, out of his ſight. As if hee had ſaide, hee labours to ſet them farre from the eye of his minde, that hee may neuer haue occaſion to thinke of them, nor on god by them. That this is true for his thoughts, I haue endeuoured thus to prooue, by Gods owne teſtimonies, becauſe thoughts cannot be diſcerned by man. But alas, for the ſecond, that is, for his wordes, that's too apparant in the ſight of all men. For obſerue it, and you ſhall neuer ſee a wicked man, by his good will haue God in his mouth, (vnleſſe it bee to abuſe his Name, by ſwearing or blaſphemie) nor willinglie doth hee heare any other man talke, or diſcourſe largely of God, or of his greatneſſe and his iuſtice; but ſuch talke is tedious & comberſome vnto him: and if hee cannot breake it off, with other diſcourſe, then he ſits as mute as a fiſh, & inwardly either frets with anger, or is tormented with feare. All this is true in Felix the Gouernour: who whileſt Paul diſcourſed of righteouſneſſe, temperance, and iudgement to come. The Text ſaith, in the meane time, he trembled.

A ſinnefull man feares all theſe.
1. Hee neuer, or vnwillingly, thinkes of God.

Pſalm. 10. 4.

Pſalm 10. 5.

Hee neuer ſpeakes of God, vnleſſe it be to abuſe his Maieſtie.

Acts. 24. 26.

And for the third, we ſee daily wicked men, endure not Gods preſence in the Church: for nothing is more troubleſome vnto them, thẽ many Sermons, often praying, and much receiuing of the Sacrament: & therfore they neuer come to the Church, nor receiue ofter then the Lawe layes vpon them: But further then that, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith; they neuer call vpon God. But as for the laſt, that they feare and abhorre aboue all, they wiſh in their hart it may neuer be. And therefore S. Paul makes it a token of a true beleeuer, and a holy man, to loue, and looke for the appearing of Ieſus Chriſt. Wherevpon it followeth, that euẽ ſo it is a ſigne of a wicked man, to feare the laſt iudgment, & to wiſh it might neuer be: And whẽ it comes indeed, & they ſee they cannot eſcape it, what thẽ do they? Euẽ cry to the mountaines, fall vpon vs: and to the hilles, couer vs, and hide vs: from what? from the preſence of God: ſo fearefull and ſo hateful is Gods preſence to a ſinfull man.

3. They loue not the worde, nor Sacraments.

Pſalm. 14. 4.

4. They wiſh Chriſt would neuer come to iudgement

2. Tim. 4. 8.

Reuel. 6. 16.

Beſides theſe, there is another way, whereby God ſheweth his preſence: and that is, by extraordinary reuelatiõ of his glory immediately: which was vſuall in the old Teſtament, as here to the prophet, but now is not to bee expected. But how terrible that is to the ſinfull nature of man, appeares in this place: for if the Prophet a moſt holy man, whoſe conſcience accuſed him, but of a fewe and ſmall ſinnes, yet thus cryes out, amazed & affrighted, at the reuelation of ſome part of Gods glory: alas, how would they be terrified with it, whoſe cõſciences are burdened with great & grieuous ſinnes, & that without repẽtance? Thus we ſee the groũd of his reaſon, how true it is, that a man in his ſin, cannot cheerfully come, nor boldly ſtand in Gods preſence. The vſe of this Doctrine: First of all, let vs ſee the monſtrous preſumption of ſuch miniſters as dare vẽture raſhly into the miniſtery, to tread vpõ the holy groũd of God, with vncleane feete, to handle the holy things of God with vnwaſhen hands: For what is it to enter into the Miniſtery, but to enter into the chamber of preſence of the great king? and ſhould not a man look about him, afore he come there? Therefore if God rebuked Moſes, for ſtepping too haſtily towardes the Buſh, where his preſence is, and ſaid; Come not too neere, for the place wher thou ſtãdeſt is holy ground; then how will God rebuke and check the conſciences of ſuch carnall men, as careleſly & carnally ruſh into the Pulpit, and to Gods holy Table, where God is preſent, in a farre more excellent manner than hee was in the Buſh? And if they bee ſo to be blamed, who enter into this calling without fear and reuerence, then how much more faulty are they, who beeing Miniſters, dare venture to preach, or miniſter the holy Sacraments, without holy and priuate preparation, & ſanctification of themſelues: but ruſh vpon them, as vpon common & prophane actions? Wher as God is preſent there, in a moſt holy and glorious maner: theſe men ſure wil ſay, the Prophet here was of too nice a conſcience: but fearefully and terribly ſhal God appear at laſt unto ſuch men, as care not how they appeare in his holy preſence.

The firſt vſe for Miniſters: Ergo. Let them not enter into that calling in their ſinnes.

For it is into Gods preſence chamber.

Exod. 3.4.

Nor come to doe the duty of that calling, without repentance, and holie preparation,

Secondly, this ſheweth the reaſon of the practiſe of all Chriſtian Churches: who vſe to pray before the Sermõ and after: namely, not for Decorum onely, and to grace the action, but to ſanctifie and to humble our ſelues, becauſe then we come before Gods preſence: they therefore doe not thinke reuerently enough of God, and his preſence, who doe by their practiſe in any ſorte, make way to the contrary.

2 Ergo, They are to pray before & after Sermon.

Thirdly, we may here learne, the pitifull caſe of thoſe miniſters, who are ſo preſumptuous, as to exerciſe that holy function, & yet remaine in their ſinnes without repentance: what doe theſe men? they approache to the burning Buſh, with their ſhoes on their feete: that is, into Gods preſence in their ſinnes: what ſhall come of it in the ende? ſurely, that burning fire ſhall conſume thẽ: the leaſt ſinne, and ſmalleſt negligences affrighted this holy Prophet, when he ſhould goe into Gods preſence: But theſe men dare come into the Sanctuary of God; yea, dare take Gods word in their mouth's, and yet hate to bee reformed, and doe caſt the Glorious Words of God behinde their backes, which they preache to others with their mouthes: theſe men may wonder at this holy Prophets nicenes, or els all the world may wonder at their prophaneneſſe. A little pollution of his lippes, feared him to come into Gods preſence: but theſe dare doe it, with eyes, eares, lipps, feet, hands, harts and all polluted: theyr eyes polluted, with careleſſe looking at all vanities: their eares with hearing: and their lips with ſpeaking wanton & wicked talk: their feete with running into wicked company: their hands, with practizing and their hearts, with deuiſing and conſenting to all wickednеſſe.

The 3. Vſe. Ergo, ſuch men are extreamly deſperate, who dare come to preach, & miniſter Sacraments, in their ſinnes.

Pſal. 50. 16.

Such mens labours are fruitleſſe.

This is the cauſe, why the labours of ſuch men are moſt vnprofitable: becauſe they dare come into Gods preſence in their ſinnes. In many places of our land, ther is by Gods bleſsing much teaching, yet there is little reformation, in the liues of the moſt: but contrary-wiſe, ſome fall to Atheiſme, ſome to Papiſme, ſome into foule ſinnes, not to be named amongſt Chriſtians.

And their looſeneſſe doth more hurt: then their Doctrine good.

Where is the cauſe? ſurely not in the goſpell; nor in our doctrine, nor in the teaching of it; but one very principall cauſe is, manie Miniſters come into Gods preſence vnſanctified, & in their ſins: not caring how looſely they liue, in the face of their people; and therfore God in iuſtice, thogh he inſtantly ſmite not them, with viſible vengeance for their

their preſumption: yet hee ſmites the people, with ſpirituall blindneſſe, that they regarde not their Doctrine, but looke at their liues, and doe rather follow the prophaneneſſe of the one, then the holineſſe of the other. Miniſters are ſuch, in whom God will be ſanctified, therefore becauſe they doe not ſo, but diſhonour him, by comming into his preſence in their ſinnes: therefore hee cannot abide them, nor giue anie bleſsing to their labours.

Good words are vaine where there is no good life.

All miniſters therfore, as they would ſee any fruit of their Miniſtery, let them firſt ſanctifie themſelues, and cleanſe their hearts by Repentance, afore they preſume, to ſtand vp to rebuke ſinne in others: elſe let them not thinke, that their golden wordes ſhall doe ſo much good, as their leaden liues ſhall doe hurt: and they may happe to confirme men, that allreadie are conuerted, but hardly ſhall any ſuch men, conuert any ſoule, from Popery or prophaneneſſe. And it is a vaine conceite for men to imagine, there is any force in eloquẽce, or humane learning, to ouerthrow that ſin in others, which ruleth & raigneth in themſelues. Our Church, and all reformed churches, may make vſe of this doctrine: for it is the glory of a Church to haue their doctrine powerfull, & effectuall for the winning of ſoules, therfore it cõcerneth them to take order, as well that their miniſters be godly men, as good Schollers, & their liues inoffenſiue, as well as their doctrine ſound: or els they will find in woful experience, that they pull down as much with the one hand, as they build vp with the other.

But moſt neerely this doctrine toucheth miniſters themſelues: who muſt knowe, their caſe is moſt fearefull of all mens, if they come into Gods preſence, in their prophaneneſſe: for as no man is more honourable, then a learned and holy miniſter: ſo none more contemptible in this worlde, none more miſerable for that to come, then he that by his looſe & lewde life, doth ſcandalize his Doctrine: and let him aſſure himſelfe, that for his preſumption, in ruſhing into Gods preſence in his ſinnes, he ſhall in this world, be caſt out as vnſauory ſalt and troden downe of men, with the foot of contempt: & in the world to come, he ſhall aboue all men cry out, in moſt extreame torment of conſcience; Woe is me, that my eyes muſt ſee the King & Lord of hoſtes: and ſo becauſe hee would not in this world, come into Gods preſence in ſanctification and holineſſe: he ſhall therfore in feare and horror, bee haled into the preſence of Gods glorie, at the laſt day: there to receiue the iuſt Sentence of his condemnation.

The fourth vſe for Miniſters: Ergo, Godlie miniſters muſt not fly from Gods preſence becauſe of their ſins, but repent: and ſo approach to his duetie.

Laſtly, all painfull and godly Miniſters, may receiue comfort, not to bee diſcouraged or driuen from Gods preſence, becauſe of their corruptions or infirmities, for wee ſee it was the Prophets caſe: but let them ſtill approach in feare and reuerence, and be ſo farre from being driuen from their duty, becauſe they beeing ſinfull men, dare not come into GODS preſence, without much feare: as let them contrariwiſe be aſſured, that the more they tremble at Gods preſence here, the leſſe ſhall they feare it at the laſt day: and when prophane and vngodly men, who in this world feared not to ſtand in Gods preſence in their horrible ſins, ſhall crie to the Mountaines, fall vpon vs, and Hilles couer vs, and hide vs from the preſence of God: then ſuch miniſters as in this world in feare and trembling, and alwayes in repentance, did approache into Gods preſence: ſhall then looke vp, and lift vp their heads, & ſhall ſay to the holy Angels, & all the powers of heauen, helpe vs, & haſten vs to come into the glorious preſence of our God and Sauiour.

And thus wee ſee the manifolde vſe of this Doctrine, to our Churche and miniſterie.

The ſecond vſe againſt the Papiſts.

Secondly, In as much as heere the prophet in a conſcience of his corruptions, feareth and crieth out at the leaſt apparition of Gods glorie.

Ergo, The apparitions of God, & Chriſt, which they make ſo ordinary, are but colluſions.

The vanitie and falſe dealing of the Church of Rome, is here diſcouered, in whoſe Legẽds & ſtories of their Saints, nothing is more common then apparitions from heauen, of Saints departed: of glorious Angels, of the virgin Mary, (and that ſo familiarly, as ſometime ſhe ſang with thẽ in their Cell, kiſſed ſome of them, and let them ſucke her breſts.) Nay, of God himſelfe: and eſpeciallie of our Sauiour Chriſt Ieſus: who they ſay, appeared (I knowe not how ofte,) to one to one man: namely, to Saint Francis: and appeared as hee was crucified with his woundes, and imprinted those woundes of his, in Francis his bodie, which they say hee bare all his life, and that they bled whensoeuer hee would suffer them, which hee alwayes did on Good Friday, that hee might bee like to Christ. Thus, & many more such, may you see in y^e^ fabulous and blasphemous book, of the conformities of S. Francis.

But for the matter; Are apparitions from heauen so ordinary in the popish church? how then came it to passe, that the greatest and holiest men in the olde Testament, were so amazed at the verie apparition but of an Angell: as wee may see in the whole course of the Storie? Some ranne away, and hidde themselues: some couered their faces, some fell flatte on the ground: and the Prophets heere cryed out; Woe is mee, I am vndone: my eyes haue seene the King and Lorde of Hostes. But in the church of Rome, looke the stories: that Saint or Monke is no body, that hath not had some apparition, either of the Virgin Mary, or some of the Apostles, or an Angell, or Christ Iesus appearing and talking with them: and yet alas, Peter Iames, and Iohn, those three great pillars, they were as good as beside themselues, at the appearing of a little part of the glorie of Christ in his transfiguration.

Gala. 2. 9. Mat. 17. 6, & Luke, 9. 33.

Either therefore must it follow that these men haue no sin in them, which dare and can behold Gods glory so easily, and so ordinarily, (which is impossible) or rather, which indeed is truth, it appeares that these are but deceitfull fancies and forgeries of their owne deuise, to deceiue the world, and to magnifie themselues, before the eyes of the common people: for it is first of all most false, that apparitions are so common as they make them, for if they were, then are they more ordinarie in the new Testament, then in the Olde. For whereas the Scripture hath one, their Legions haue twenty: & wheras one, namely, Saint Paul, was once rapt into heauen, they haue 20. that were rapt thither: And as that is false, so is it impossible that anie man cloathed with flesh, can endure any extraordinary apparition of Gods glorie, without extreame amazement, as is plaine here in the Prophet: who I hope was as holy a man, as the holiest Monke that euer was. I haue noted this, that young Diuines may bee occasioned to looke a little into their fabulous legends, that so they may discouer the false trickes, and iuggling castes of that Religion: which euill shiftes it needed not, if it were of God.

Reasons 1.
1. Apparitions of God cannot be more common in the new, then they were in the old Testament.

2. Cor. 12.
2. No man in his flesh can endure Gods glory.

Thirdly, the people may here learne, First, in that Gods presence is so glorious and fearefull to mans nature, howe mercifullie God hath dealt with them, in teaching them not by himself, or by his Angels from heauen, which they could neuer endure; but by men who are like themselues: and how vaine and fond these men are, who would bee taught from heauen and not by men, who are so full of wants. In the olde Testament, when the people receiued the law from Gods owne mouth, it is saide, they ran away, and cried out, Why should wee die? if we heare the voice of God any more, we shal die: for what flesh euer heard the voice of the liuing God & liued? therefore they said to Moses: Goe thou neare & heare, all that the Lord shall say, and declare thou vnto vs what God saith to thee, & wee will heare it, and doe it. And then saith the text, the Lorde said, I heard the words of this people, they haue saide well in all that they haue spoken. And so, from that day forwarde, God ordinarily taught his church by men like themselues: & wee see, that the beginning of it was not in iudgement, but in mercie vnto them. It is therefore the duty of all men, both to acknowledge this mercy of God, in due thankfulnesse, and withall to remember, when they see infirmities in Ministers, that they are but men, and that, if they had not the Ministrie of men, howe harde it would goe with them: considering, that the least measure of Gods owne presence, cannot bee endured, by any man.

1. Vse, to the people; they may see Gods mercy to them, in teaching thē by men like themselues, and not by apparitions frō heauen.

Deut. 5. 25. 26. 27. 28.

2. Inasmuch as gods presence, is so glorious in it selfe, and fearefull to our nature, all men are taught to prepare themselues by holie prayer, by humiliation, and confession of their sinnes, and vnworthinesse, afore they come to Gods word or Sacraments: for they come at

2. Vse. Ergo, they must prepare thē-selues, before they come to the word, or Sacraments.

that

that time into Gods preſence: they therfore are not to come in their ſecuritie, nor in their ordinarie ſinnes vnrepented of, leaſt God ſtrike their conſciences, with a ſenſe of his fearefull diſpleaſure: & make them cry out, vpon farre greater cauſe, then heere the Prophet did.

3. Vſe, ſee the different natures of ſinne, and holines. Sin drawes a man from Gods preſence.

Thirdly and laſtly, wee learne here the different natures and properties of ſinne and holineſſe: Sinne, euen the leaſt ſinne: nay, a very ſinfulnes of nature makes a man afraide of Gods preſence: That ſinne vnrepented of doth ſo, appeares in Adam, who as in his integritie, hee ſpake & conuerſed euen in a familiar ſort with God: ſo no ſooner had he ſinned, but he ranne from God, and hid himſelfe: & that euen the leaſt ſinnes not repented of, doe ſo alſo, appeares in this Prophet, who beeing a holy man, yet his conſcience being priuie to it ſelf of ſome ſmall omiſsions or negligēces in his calling, he crieth out, he is vndone, becauſe hee ſeeth the Lord of hoſts. But contrariwiſe, the ſtate of perfect holineſſe, & the want of all ſinne, makes a man bolde in Gods preſence, and rather deſirous then afraide to behold Gods glory, which ſhall be moſt apparant at the laſt day: for when the wicked ſhall deſire rather to be couered with the hilles, and ground to duſt by the mountaines, then to appeare before the face of God: then ſhall the godly whoſe holineſſe ſhall then be perfect, looke vp, and lift vp their heads, becauſe their redemption is ſo nigh. And Iob teſtifieth of himſelfe, that hee knoweth his redeemer liueth, and that he ſhall ſtand before him, & looke vpon him with his eyes. Thus as guiltineſſe driues a man from the kings preſence, but innocency makes him bolde before him: So ſinfulneſſe makes a man auoid Gods preſence, but holineſſe makes him drawe neere vnto God, and to reioyce in his preſence.

Holines inuites a man into Gods preſence.

Reue. 6. 16. Luk. 21. 28.

Iob. 19. 25. 26. 27.

Vſe: Ergo, if a man would haue boldnes with God, hee muſt be a holy man.

Then for a concluſion of this point, let all men heere learne the way to true courage and boldneſſe before God: namely, to repent dayly of their ſinnes, and labour to growe in true holineſſe: wealth nor wit, learning nor authoritie can do this for thee, but onely a good conſcience, which muſt bee made good by grace, and by repentance, then ſhalt thou reioice in gods preſēce in this world, and delight to thinke of God, to ſpeake of God, to pray vnto him, to meet him in his word and Sacraments, and at the laſt day ſhalt thou ſtand with confidence before the throne of his glory.

Hitherto of the feare and aſtoniſhment of the Prophet, and of the cauſes thereof. Now followeth his conſolation.

Then flew one of the Seraphims, &c.

2. Generall points His conſolation, wherein are two points. 1. Circumſtances of it Circumſtances are many. 2. The ground of it.

In theſe two verſes is laid downe the ſecond generall point: namely, the conſolation of the Prophet: concerning which, there are two points in the text: 1. The ground & matter of his cōſolation, that is the forgiuenеſſe of his ſinnes.

2 Diuers circumſtances of that conſolation.

1. The time, Then.

2. The miniſter by whom it was done: an Angell, one of the Seraphims.

3. The manner how he did it, ſpeedily, He flewe.

4. The inſtrument or outward ſigne, a coale from the altar.

5. The outward action or application of it: He touched his lippes.

The matter of the conſolation is laſt in order. Let vs therefore firſt ſpeake of the circumſtances.

1. Circumſtance, the time, that is, after his feare.

The firſt circumſtance is, the time when this prophet was comforted and raiſed frō his feare. Then, ſaith the text: that is, after his feare & aſtoniſhment, but not afore. Thus dealt God alwaies with al his Saints, he beſtoweth no graces on them pertaining to ſaluatiō, but after he hath by ſome meanes or other brought thē to true humiliation in them ſelues, and to ſorrow for their ſinnes: Humiliation is the preparatiue for grace: for when by ſight and ſenſe of their ſinnes, and their owne miſery by ſinne, hee hath euen driuen them quite out of themſelues, finding nothing in themſelues, but cauſe of feare and aſtoniſhment, then powres hee the oyle of grace, and of ſweete comfort into their hearts, & refreſheth their weary ſoules with the deawe of his mercy: this point needs no further proofe, for looke into the Scriptures, and we ſhall finde, God neuer called any man to the ſtate of grace, or to any notable worke or function in his Church, but hee first humbled them, and then brought them out of al conceit with themselues, and then wrought in them, and by them, his wonderfull workes.

Vse 1. To all men: Ergo, esteeme of afflictiõs, namely, as

The vse of this doctrine, is first of all to teach all men to esteeme aright of the afflictions that God layeth vpon them in this world: commonly men take them impatiently, & our nature grudgeth against them: but let a Christian man consider with himselfe, how God hath alwaies dealt with his children, and he hath cause not to think so: for doth God lay some great affliction on thee? it may be he hath some mighty worke of his grace to worke in thee, or som great work of mercy to be wrought by thee in his church, and hereby prepareth thee for the same. Say therefore with the holy Prophet; I holde my tongue O Lord, and speake nothing, because it was thy doing: and what God may intend in his so doing to thee, thou canst not tell: and therefore in silence, and patience possesse thy soule.

Psal. 39, 9.

2 To men distressed inconscience, that their state is not desperate as they imagine but most comfortable.

Againe, heere is a comfort to all such as are distressed in mind, in sense of their sinnes, and sight of Gods wrath: their state is not miserable, much lesse desperate, for they are in the high way to grace and fauour. God iustifieth not, but him that repents: God exalts not, but him that is humbled: God comforts not, but him that is distressed: God hath mercie on none, but such as both knowe and feele they want it: and knowe also, that they knowe not where to haue it, but at his hands. Happy therefore is that soule, that feeles the waight and burden of sin, for to him wil Christ bring most ease and comfort. Gods ministers therefore are hereby to comfort distressed consciences, to allure them, that if with this Prophet they bee so deeply touched with sight of their sins, and Gods iustice, as that they cry Woe is me, I am vndone. Then, euẽ Then, are they most capable of comfort, and best prepared to receiue it, as heere it fell out to the holy Prophet. Thirdly, here is the way taught vs how to attaine to any excellẽt graces of God, either for our own saluation, or the good of the Church, namely to labour for a sensible feeling of the want of them in our selues: for

Vse. 3. The way to get excellent graces at Gods hand, is to labour to feele the want of them.

God vseth to bestowe no gifts on any man, but such as do in humility & lowlinesse, cõfesse to God, & acknowledge in themselues, the want of thẽ. So the blessed Virgin singeth, God filleth the hungry with good things, but the rich he sends empty away. And so the Psalmist, God satisfieth the hungry soule, and filleth the empty soule with goodnesse. So then if thou be rich in thy conceits, God hath not for thee: but if thou be hungry, he is ready to fill thee with good things: and dost thou acknowledge thy soule emptie, to behold treasures of goodnes, to feede and fill thee: and art thou sad downe with the Prophet, & is thy soule empty of hope, and fraught with feare, thẽ behold, euẽ then, God & his Angels are ready to raise thee vp, & to fil thee with consolation. Thus much for the time of his consolation: now for the minister, by whom it was.

Luke. 1, 53. Psal. 107, 9.

One of the Seraphims.

The 2. circumstance of his consolation is the Minister by whom it was done: An Angel: One of ẽ Seraphims: that is, an Angel of that order so called: out of which we learne.

2. Circumstance of the Ministery an Angell, a Seraphim.

Doct 1. Ergo there are seuerall degrees of Angels, that wee knowe not.

First, that there are diuers degrees and seuerall orders of Angels, though wee know not the true distinction thereof: nor think it lawful to imagine them to be 9. nor to set thẽ down particularly, as the church of Rome doth, who make many of their own deuises, which they cal traditiõs of equal authority with the scriptures. Secondly, that those holy Angels are the glorious guard of God, and do continually stand about the throne of his glory, and attend his holy will, both in heauen and in earth.

Doct 2. That they are Gods guard.

Thirdly, that they are also by the merciful appointmẽt of God, the guard of Gods children, and ministring spirits sent out, as it were with a commission, for the good of the elect. All these points, because they are plaine in the scripture, & do lesse cõcerne our generall scope, which is touching the ministery, I passe them ouer.

Psal. 34. Heb. 1. Doct. 3. that they are the guard of Gods children.

Fourthly, here it is apparãt, that as the Angels are sent out for the help & seruice of the elect: so especially of gods ministers, as is plaine in this place, where the Prophet being affrighted, a holy angel is Doct. That they haue speciall charge and care of gods ministers.

ready ready to giue him comfort: and ſo ouer the whole courſe of the Prophets: and at this day, their protection and comfortable aſſiſtance, is no leſſe preſent to the godly Miniſters of the new Teſtament, though not in ſuch ſenſible ſignes, and ſuch viſible manner, as in the olde: for if they be miniſtring ſpirits, ſent out for the good of them which ſhall be ſaued, how much more for their good, which ſhall be both ſaued themſelues, and ſaue others alſo.

Vſe to Gods Miniſters, 1. Let them bee content with their calling, though it be full of croſſes, and contempts, for it is honoured of the Angels, aboue others.

A doctrine of great comfort, and much good vſe to all Miniſters: who firſt of all may here learne contẽtment in their calling: for howſoeuer no calling hath more croſſes, ſo none againe hath more comfort: & howſoeuer none be more diſgraced by euil men, yet none is more honored by the holy Angels: and howſoeuer in this world they aboue any calling, are ſeruãts to all mẽ, yet none hath the ſeruice & attendance of Angels ſo much as they: for though we haue them not to help vs to do the outward actions of our miniſtery with vs, or for vs, (as ſome popiſh Doctors teach, that in their Maſſe, Amen is not ſaid to one collect, bicauſe the Angels ſay Amen to it) yet doubtles they are preſent alwaies as at all holy exerciſes & lawfull actions, ſo eſpecially at the publike ſeruice of God, performed by the Miniſters: & beſide that, they are witneſſes thereto, and of the paines, and diligence, and faithfulneſſe of a good Miniſter, they alſo do miniſter vnto them oftentimes, bodily ſtrength, & aſſiſtance, & many comforts: in their troubleſome trauels, which they know not how by any naturall meanes they come vnto them.

2. Ergo, Let them haue courage, for though men be againſt them, Angels are with them.

And as this Doctrine doth thus yeeld them contentment againſt the cõtempt, ſo alſo courage againſt the daunger of this calling. For what though thou haſt mightie men of this world againſt thee, when thou haſt angels for thee? & what though thou fighteſt againſt principalities & powers, when thou haſt Cherubins, & Seraphims on thy ſide? Godly Miniſters haue many enimies, but if by the eye of faith, they can ſee as well who are with them, as with the eye of reaſon who are againſt them, they wil confeſſe with Elisha, there are more with vs, then againſt vs. The ſtories of all ages doe affirme, & the comfortable experience of theſe dayes of ours doth verifie the trueth hereof. Miniſters that liue in places very prophane, or very popiſh, it is admirable to ſee how many dangers they haue eſcaped, and plottes they haue auoyded, which by their enemies, (or rather the enemies of their Doctrine) haue bene laide for their liues: which their deliuerance, & many other comforts in their Miniſteries, whence are they but from Gods protection, by the miniſtery of his Angels.

Afore we leaue this point, two queſtions may be asked, not amiſſe briefly to be reſolued.

2. Queſtions. 1. Ergo. Whence is it that Angels attend miniſters, more then other men, Anſ. 2. reaſons. 1. From God, hee will haue it ſo, becauſe they worke his vvorke more then other callings. Pſal. 91. 11, 12.

First if any aske, whence comes it that Angels performe more ſeruice to good Miniſters thẽ to other men: I anſwere, the reaſon is partly from God, partly from the Angels: firſt, God hath a principall care of them aboue other men, becauſe they worke his worke aboue all other callings: for their labors immediatly cõcerne the good of mens ſoules: wheras others do firſt concerne the bodie, and conſequently the ſoule: therefore, wheras he hath giuen his Angels charge ouer all his elect, to keepe them in all their good waies, they haue a ſpeciall charge doubtleſſe ouer al godly & faithfull Miniſters, whoſe waies are Gods in a ſpeciall manner.

2. From the Augels themſelues.

Againe, Angels themſelues as they willingly performe anie ſeruice to the Church, or to any part thereof, ſo moſt willingly of all are they imployed for the good of godly Miniſters, and that for two cauſes.

Becauſe they are fellow-labourers. 1. Cor. 4. 2. Heb. 1. 14. Mal. 2. 7. Reuel. 2. & 3. Chap.

First, becauſe they are their fellow-labourers, both for that ẏ Angels & good Miniſters are both called Gods embaſſadors, & Gods own ſeruants or officers, in a more peculiar maner then anie other calling: and for that their ſeruice is ſo like, that their names are common, one to the other. Angels being called Miniſters, and Miniſters Angels, as though they were almoſt all one.

Becauſe they conuert ſoules, which deligh-teth the Angels aboue any in this vvorlde. Heb. 1. 14. Luk. 15. 10.

Secondly, becauſe the Miniſters dutie is, to conuert and ſaue ſoules, being a worke, which (next to the glorifying of God, and doing his will) the Angels doe take moſt delight in, aboue any other: for if they be ſent out for the good of them which ſhalbe ſaued, how much more willingly for their good, by whom they are ſaued, which ſhal be ſaued? & if the Angels reioyce at the cõuerſiõ of a ſinner, ſurely they much loue him, & deſire to doe him good, by whom the ſinner is conuerted: and in theſe reſpects, Angels & Miniſters haue the ſame names: and are both imployed in the ſame great worke; namely, doing good to the elect.

Therefore is it, that the Angel calles himſelfe S. Iohn the Euangeliſts fellow in the Reuelation: If then they be fellows, euen fellow-ſeruants, and fellow-labo-rers, in a more ſpeciall maner then any other, what maruell though the Angels be moſt willingly imployed, in doing any ſeruice of help or comfort to godly Miniſters.

Reuel. 19,10, and 22,9.

2. Queſtion: what duties then are good Miniſters to performe to Angels. Not worſhip them ſo as the Papiſts doe.

In the ſecond place. If any aske, if it be ſo, then what duties are Miniſters to performe to Angels, for this their ſo carefull ſeruice, & eſpeciall attendance vpon them, aboue other men?

A Papiſt would anſwere; Miniſters muſt therefore worſhippe them, and keepe their faſting, & holy-dayes, and ſay their ſeruice, and pray vnto them, as to their keepers and Mediators. But alas, cannot the Kings Meſſenger or Officer be honoured, vnleſſe he be ſet vpon the Kings throne? will nothing ſerue him, but the Crowne and Scepter? ſo cannot Angels be honoured, vnleſſe they be made Gods, or Sauiours, or mediators? But I anſwere therefore, we dare not goe ſo farre, leaſt we remember the ſeruant ſo much, that we forget the maſter: but rather we anſwere thus: ſeeing angels are thus ſeruiceable to Gods miniſters it ſhould firſt of all, teach al men to honour that calling, with all due reuerence: For they cannot but pleaſe the Angels, in honouring good Miniſters, whom they eſteeme their fellowes.

As all men ſhould therefore honour that calling.

1. So Miniſters ſhould labour to be faithfull in their calling

Secondly, it ſhould teach all Miniſters, not to content themſelues with the name and title, but to labour to bee good and faithfull. For ſo doing, they are fellowes to the Angels, and it is a diſgrace to the Angels, when thoſe that are their fellowes are vnfaithfull.

2. To adorne it with a holy life.

And it ſhould further teach them to adorne their calling with a holy life, for as ſinne is that, that grieues the Angels, & driues them away, ſo it is grace and holineſſe, which makes them delight in the fellowſhip of men.

3. To be painfull in their calling.

And it may alſo encourage any man, to take paines in that holy calling, wherein he is ſure to haue Gods angels, in a ſpeciall manner to attende him, to aſſiſt him, to protect him, and to bee a witneſſe of his faithfulneſſe: and who would not worke cheerefully in that labour, wherein hee hath the Angels to bee in a ſort fellow-workers with him?

Thus to do, is to honour them.

To doe theſe three duties, is to honour good Angels: and that Miniſter that conſcionably performeth them: the Angels will take themſelues ſufficiently honoured of that man.

And if a Miniſter would reioyce thẽ, let him labour ſeriouſly, ſo to preach as he may winne ſoules.

And if beſide this honour, we would reioyce Gods angels, and miniſter matter of ioy vnto them, then in the fourth place, let all Miniſters propounde to themſelues aboue al things, the conuerſion of ſoules, rather then their own praiſe or liuing, or pleaſing of men, and ſo endeuour it both in teaching, and all their other courſes, that the angels may ſee it, and be witneſſe of it: for if they reioyce at the conuerſion of a ſinner, (as Chriſt ſaith they doe, then thoſe men make them ofteſt reioyce, which doe moſt ſeriouſly aime at the conuerſion of ſinners.

And thus we ſee, both the ſeruice of Angels to Gods Miniſters, and the duties they are to performe to them in that regard. The due conſideration of this point, may raiſe the world to a better conceite of this Calling, and perſwade fathers to dedicate their ſons to it, and ſtirre vp young ſtudents to conſecrate themſelues thereto, & turne their ſtudies to that ende: for no man in no calling hath ſo ſpeciall attendance, and aſſiſtance of Gods Angels, as godly Miniſters haue: At leaſt, if it worke not this in the worlde, yet it may yeeld comfort & contentment to all faithfull Miniſters in their painfull calling.

But let vs ſee how the Angel performed his ſeruice to the Prophet: not vnwillingly, not lingringly, but ſpeedilie: ſo ſaith the Text.

Hee flewe.

3. Circumſtance, the manner: He flerve.

Which is not ſo to bee vnderſtood, as though the Angels had Wings: for they they haue no corporall nor ſenſible bodies, but ſpirituall and inſenſible ſubſtances, the actions whereof are performed with ſuch nimbleneſſe and agilitie, as cannot fall within the compaſſe of outward ſenſe. But the Phraſe is vſed for our capacities, to ſhew how readily and ſpeedily the angel went about to miniſter comfort to the Prophet. For as nothing moueth ſo quickly to our ſenſe, as doth the creature that flyeth: and as wee ſay, that man doth flye about his buſineſſe, which doth it quickly and diligently: ſo here the holy Ghoſt ſets down the willingneſſe & quickneſſe of the Angel, to comfort this holy Prophet, and to doe the will of God. Where we learne;

That is readily, ſpeedily, vvillingly

Doct. 1. So vvhat excellent ſeruants of God, Angels are.

First, what excellent ſeruants of God the holy Angels bee, which ſo readily, willingly, and ſpeedily execute the will of their Lord. This muſt teach all Gods ſeruants to doe the like, and to imitate thē in this excellent obedience: And the rather, becauſe we pray daily to God; Thy will be done in earth as it is in heauen. In earth of vs, as it is in heauen of the holy Angels: but they doe it moſt cheerefully, and without all lingring, therefore ſo ought wee. Magiſtrates in their places, and Miniſters in theirs, and euery man in his function, is to apply this to himſelfe, and to bee ſtirred vp thereby to a cheerfulneſſe & quickneſſe in their duties: for therein they reſemble the bleſſed angels, & then their deeds accord with their praier: but contrariwiſe, he that doth his dutie vnwillingly, and vnreadily is like the Diuel; which indeed doth Gods will, & yet againſt his will: and ſurely vnto ſuch obedience there belongeth no reward. But as God loueth a cheerefull giuer, ſo doubtleſſe loues he a cheerfull worker.

The fourth petition.

Vſe. we muſt ſo ſerue God in our places.

2. Corinth. 9, 7.

Secondly, we ſee here how great loue angels beare vnto Gods children, eſpecially vnto godly Miniſters, how willingly they are imployed to doe them good. Willingneſſe and readines to doe good to any man, muſt needes come from loue: and yet alas al men, euen the beſt, & all Miniſters, euen the beſt, are creatures farre inferior to the Angels.

Doct. 2. What good friends they are to good men, eſpecially to good Miniſters.

1. Vſe. Ergo, ſuperiours loue their inferiours, & contemne them not.

Here Magiſtrates and Miniſters, muſt learne to be far from contempt of their inferiours: and to doe their duties of ruling & teaching carefully, though the people be farre their inferiours: it is the nature of loue, to make any man doe ſeruice moſt willingly, to him that hee loues, though he be farre meaner then himſelfe.

If therefore Princes loue their ſubiects, they will not ſpare any care, coſt, nor paines, nay, they will reioyce to doe them good, and they will labour to be like the Angels, who are farre greater then men, as they are then their ſubiects.

And ſhevve it by doing them good.

And if Miniſters loue their people, they will forget their owne dignitie, which oft-times they might ſtand vpon, and will make themſelues euen ſeruants to all that they may winne ſome.

1. Corinth. 9, 19.

And ſeeing Angels doe flye ſo faſt to giue helpe and comfort to good miniſters: this muſt teach them further.

2. Vſe, Ergo, Miniſters muſt.

First, euery one to labour to bee a good Miniſter, for then are they ſure of the loue of Angels, and then moſt willingly doe the angels any ſeruice to thē. Againe, let it teach them to flye as faſt to the diſcharge of their duties to Gods Church, as the Angels flye to doe them ſeruice, ſo ſhall Gods angels think their diligence and carefull ſeruice well beſtowed vpon them.

1. Be faithfull

2. Painfull.

Laſtly, this diligence of the Angels, & their willingneſſe, proceeding from loue, muſt ſtir vp all Chriſtians, to performe all duties of godlineſſe to God, & of loue vnto his Church, with alacritie and cheerfulneſſe: ſo doe Gods angels, We look to be like the angels in glory in the world to come, then bee like the angels in diligence, loue and faithfulnes in this world. The wiſe man ſaith, Hee that is ſlothfull in his buſineſſe is good for nothing: but the diligent man ſhal ſtand before the King. And ſurely, hee that is willing & diligēt in the duties of Chriſtianitie, ſhall ſtand before the King of kings in heauen. And let this ſuffice for the Angels ſeruice, and his diligence in his ſeruice. Now let vs ſee what inſtrument the Angell vſed.

3. Vſe. Ergo, all men ſerue God cheerefully: if vve be like Angels, therein vve ſhall euen be like them in glory.

Pro. 22. 29.

A coale from the Altar.

The fourth Circumſtance of this conſolation, is the Inſtrument which it pleaſed God, the Angell ſhould vſe to miniſter comfort to the Prophet, a 4 Circumſtance, the Inſtrument a Coale of fire.

A strange and wonderfull meanes.

strange instrument for so great a worke: A coale of fire. Here let humane reason hide it selfe, and worldly wisedome bee confounded, to see the wonderfull works of the Lord: God could haue healed the Prophets infirmities, and giuen him comfort against his feare & courage in his calling, without meanes, but he will vse meanes: and what? a weake meanes: nay, a meanes that seemes contrary: A coale of fire must touch his lippes: that which in all reason would haue made him speake worse, by Gods appointment and the power of his word, shall make him speake better. Out of which practise of God, we learn many points.

And which seemes contrary to reason.

Doct. 1 See God commendeth the vse of meanes. Gen. 1 from. 4 to 17. Seeing him selfe alwaies vseth them.

First, see how GOD magnifieth meanes: hee can worke without them, and so hee did in the Creation, giuing light to the worlde, diuers dayes before there was Sunne: but since the order of nature was established, hee generally vseth meanes, not onely in his ordinary, but euen in his miraculous actions: and though hee vse not alwaies the ordinary and direct meanes: yet meanes he generally vseth, though they seeme contrary; as heere in this place; and the same will be found true in almost al the miracles, both of the olde and new Testament.

Vse. Ergo, we are to vse the means appointed in all our purposes.

This therefore commends vnto all men, the vse of such good meanes, as Gods prouidence haue ordained of any duties, or effecting of any thing, that doth belong vnto vs to doe: and not to depend vpon immediate helpes from Heauen, as many fonde and fantasticall men doe, who are therefore oftentimes iustly forsaken of God, and left destitute of all helpe; and so exposed to shame and reproach.

Doct. 2. See how Gods power doth shew it selfe in weakenesse.

Secondly, see here the mightie power of Gods ordinance, how it appeareth in weakenes: such are all his great works. In the Creation, he brought light out of darkenesse. In our Redemption, hee brought vs life out of death. In our conuersion, he workes vpon vs by his word, and by it he drawes vs to him, which in all reason would driue vs from him: and by it cõfounds the wisdome of the world, which is darke foolishnesse to the wisedome of the word.

And so here, hee cleanseth the Prophet by a Coale of fire: which would rather defile him, and seasoneth his mouth with it, which in reason should haue burned him: so great, so admirable, and so powerfull are the ordinances of God, though they seeme so contrary, or so weake in themselues, or in their meanes.

Vse. Ergo, God can work by his word, and sacraments, and mans Ministerie, though neuer so base.

Let this teach all men not to contemne the Sacraments, though the outward Element, Bread, Wine, and Water, be weake and common, and dead creatures in themselues: nor the Ministerie of the Word though it be exercised by a weake man, mortall & miserable as others are: for that God, which can season the Prophets mouth, and clense his heart by a coale of fire, no maruell though hee worke vpon the consciences of men, by his word and Sacraments.

And againe, when wee see Grace and Holinesse conueyed into mens hearts by the Word and Sacraments; let vs learne, not to ascribe it to the dignitie, either of the Minister, or the Elements, but to the supreme power of the mighty God, who can purge the Prophet, by a coale from the Altar.

Doct. 3. The apt teacher must haue a fiery tongue

Neither is it altogether without Misterie, that God here sanctifieth the prophet, by touching his lippes with a fiery coale: for it signifieth, that the apt & sufficient teacher, must haue a fiery tongue, and to that same purpose, the holy Ghost came downe vppon the Apostles in fierie toongs, & it may be that the one is a tipe of the other. Certaine it is, that they both teach vs thus much, that all true and able Ministers, must pray and endeuour to haue a tongue full of power and force, euen like fire, to eate vp the sinnes and corruptions of the world. For though it be a worthy gift of God to speake mildely, and moderately, so that his speech shal fall like deawe vpon the grasse: yet it is the fierie tongue that beates downe sinne, and workes sound grace in the heart: It may be there are some, which neede the fiery tongue.

Acts. 2. That is a powerfull tongue, to reproue and burne vp sinne.

Ergo, such Ministers are faultie, who reproue not sinne.

This shewes apparantly, that those Ministers neuer had their lips touched with a coale frõ Gods Altar; that is, their soules with a coale frõ Gods Altar; that is, their consciences neuer touched, nor their soules seasoned with the sanctifying grace of Gods spirit, which sit still and see great and grieuous staines in a

Church

Church, and corruptions in a State, and can be content neuer to reproue them, as though Miniſters were perſwaders onely, and not reprouers.

But when this comes to be waied in the ballance of a good conſcience, it wil be found, that not the pleaſing tongue, but the fierie tongue, is the principall grace of a good Miniſter.

But to goe further: [illegible] this Coall,

Taken from the Altar.

This coale of fire was taken by the Angel from the altar of God, where was a fire which neuer went out, and this fire was that, that came from heauen ſent downe by God, at the dedication of the Temple by Salomon. And this fire kindled by God neuer went out: for no man could kindle the like, but all other was counted ſtrange fire; As Nadab and Abihu, tried it to their experience, when they would needes offer with it.

Whence came this Coale? from the Altar; which fire came from heauen.

Leuit. 10. 1.

Now the Prophet muſt be cleanſed with the fire which came from Heauen: teaching vs, that the Miniſter muſt haue his fierie tongue frō the holy Ghoſt. As the Apoſtles were ſaide to be baptized with the holy Ghoſt and with fire: A fierie tongue, is a ſpeciall ornament of a Miniſter, but that fire muſt come from heauen: that is, his zeale muſt be a godly and heauenly zeale; but he that hath a rayling, a lying, a ſlanderous, malicious, or a contentious tongue, hee hath a fierie tongue indeede. But this is kindled of the fire of hell, as S. Iames ſaith; The vnbridled tongue is a world of wickedneſſe, and defileth the whole body, ſetteth on fire the whole courſe of nature, and is ſet on fire of hell.

Doct. The fire and zeale of the Miniſter muſt come from Gods ſpirit.

Acts. 1. 5. Math. 3. 11.

Not from carnal affections.

Iames. 3. 6.

So then, a ſpiteful and malicious tongue we ſee, is a fierie tongue, but that fire is taken from hell, and not from Gods altar.

For that is from hell, not from heauen.

And hee that ſtands vp to preach with his tongue, God will neuer ſuffer any great worke to be done by him in his Church, though his tongue bee neuer ſo fierie, and his ſpeech neuer ſo powerfull.

All therefore Miniſters muſt abhorre the flattering and pleaſing tongue, and muſt haue a fierie tongue: ſo on the other ſide, this fire muſt bee from Gods altar: that is the fire of their zeale muſt bee kindled by Gods ſpirit, and not by the ſpirit of diſcord and diſſention, Ambitious humors, turbulent & proud humours, new opinions, priuate quarrels, all theſe, nor anie of theſe, are for the pulpit.

Theſe may make a man fierie tongued, but this fire, was neuer taken from Gods altar, as the Prophets was: this fierie tongue neuer came from heauen, as the Apoſtles did. It followeth.

And touched my lippes.

This fifth and laſt circumſtance, is the application of the remedie. The coale which is the medicine, is applyed by this Angel to his lips, that is, to that part which was polluted: and as he formerly complained of the pollution of his lips, ſo the medicine is applyed to his lippes: Here the Angell, which in this caſe is made GODS miniſter doth teach all Gods Miniſters, a great point of wiſedome in heauenly Diuinitie, namely, to apply their Doctrine to their audience, in ſuch manner, as the circumſtances of place, times, or perſōs do require: ſome Miniſters come to an ignorant and vnhumbled people, and teach them the Goſpell, which neuer knewe the lawe: here the fiery coale is vſed, but the lips are not touched, that is, good doctrine taught but not well applyed: for that the lawe ſhould firſt be laid to their conſciences, others beate all vpon the Lawe, when it may bee their hearers are people ſufficiently caſt down, and haue more need to be raiſed vp with the ſweet comforts of the Goſpell: others vſe to lay open the nakednes of the Court in the country, and to reproue the faults of Princes and great magiſtrates before the cōmon people, who haue more need of the Catechiſme: others bring the Catechiſme or points of ordinarie inſtruction into the Court, where the duties of Kings and Counſellors ſhould be taught in al plainneſſe and ſinceritie: others bring their newe opinions or controuerſall points vnto popular audiences, which indeede are fit for the ſchools: other buſie themſelues about ceremonies: when the ſubſtance is in danger to be loſt: All theſe haue it may be) the Coale of fire, but it is misapplied, and not applied to the polluted lips. Let all ministers therefore learne this point of wisdome of the Angell, to apply the medicines of their doctrine to the times, persons, and places, which are infected, so shal they be sure not to take paines in vaine.

1 Circumſtance, the Application of the remedie to his lippes which were polluted. Doct. Ergo, miniſters muſt apply their doctrine fitly.

And thus much of the circumstances of his consolation.

It followeth in the text.

Loe thy iniquitie shall be taken away, and thy sinnes shalt be purged.

2. Point, the ground of his consolation; which is the forgiuenesse of his sinnes. Doct. 1. Forgiuenesse & the meanes, are annexed together

After the Circumstances, followeth the ground and matter of his consolation, and that is the forgiuenesse of his sinnes, where first let vs marke how it and the instrument are annexed together: Loe saith the Angel, this coale hath touched thy lippes, and thy iniquities shall bee forgiuen, and thy sinnes purged, as though he had bene clensed by the Coale: where we may note, how greatly God magnifieth the meanes which himselfe ordaineth, euen true remission and saluation to the right and holy vsing of them, though it come not from them, but from his owne mercy, and power of his ordinance. It is therefore no maruel, though God sanctifieth the child by the Ministery of water in Baptisme, and feede our soules in the Lords Supper, by feeding our bodies with bread & wine: and no maruell though the careleſſe neglect of either of them, be damnation to him that despiseth them: seeing they are Gods instruments, ordained by him to conuey his grace vnto vs: And yet for all this, we are to knowe, that remission or saluation, is no more tyed to the very elements, or the actions, then here the Prophets forgiuenesse to the Coale of fire.

Vse. Ergo, Vse the meanes with reuerence, and despise them not.

But the maine point is, that for the Prophets consolation, the Angell tells him his iniquities shall bee taken away, and his sinnes purged, as if thereby he had said thy sins were the cause of thy feare, therefore that thy feare may be taken away, thy sinnes shall be forgiuen.

Doct. 2. Here comfort is frō forgiuenesse of our sinnes.

Where we learne, that as feare comes by sinne, so all true comfort comes from the forgiuenesse of sinnes: this is that, that onely pacifieth the conscience, and satisfieth the soule: when Dauid had sinned against the Lord in his two great sinnes, and thereby prouoked Gods wrath against him, and wounded his owne conscience, if the Prophet had told him hee had made him King of 10. kingdomes more, he had not so reioyced his heart, as when he told him, after his repentance, thy sinnes are forgiuē thee, thou shalt not dye: So when this Prophet was extreamely affrighted at Gods presēce, because of some sinnes and negligences in his calling, it had bene no comfort to his poore soule, to haue bene told, thou shalt haue a more eloquent tongue, and a more powerful speech, thou shalt haue better accesse to the Court & audience before the King: all these, and all such like, would haue beene no better then guilded poyson vnto him, beeing in this case: but the happy answere that refresheth his wearie soule more then all the world, was this, Loe thy iniquities are forgiuen, and thy sinnes purged.

True in Dauid. 2. Sam. 12.

And in this Prophet.

All faithfull Ministers must heere learne the true way of comforting troubled and distressed consciēces, namely, first to drawe him vnto a sight of some particular sinnes, then to summon him into Gods presence, and there to arraigne him for those sinnes, vntill the view of the foulnesse of his sinnes, and the glory of Gods iustice, haue sufficiently humbled him, and then to labour to perswade his conscience vppon good groundes of the pardon of those sinnes by Christ Jesus, this is the way that God vsed and deuised, this is the sure way, that cannot faile.

Vse. Here is the true way to comfort distressed consciences.

Some thinke that all trouble of mind is nothing but melancholy, and therefore thinke nothing needes but Phisicke and outward comforts: but he that considers in what case the Prophet heere was, or Dauid when hee made the 6. the 32. or the 51. Psalmes, will be of another mind, and will find that nothing can properly trouble the mind but sinne: therefore as the wise Phisitian in his cure, first searcheth out the cause, and then endeauours to take it away: so the good Physitian of the soule, must first of all search into the cause of his sickneſse, that is his sins, and must take them away: which if they doe not, then al their labour is lost: for al the company,

Physick and outward comforts will not serue. Psal. 2. 3. 6. 7. Psal. 32. 3. 4. Psal. 51. the whole Psalm company, muſick, recreation, wine, diet, nay al worldly comforts & delights, if it were the aduancemēt to a kingdom, cannot ſo much comfort the diſtreſſed ſoule of a ſinner, as this voice of a miniſter ſpokē frō God vpon good grouds; thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. Now to lay downe what bee thoſe true and good grounds, whereupon a Miniſter may ſafely and comfortably pronounce pardon of ſinnes to a ſinner, belongs properly to another place.

This is done by the Author in his Cases of conſcience.

In the next place; Let vs heere obſerue how the lord afore he renued the Prophets commiſſion, or ſend him to preach to the people, firſt humbles him for his ſinnes, and then vppon his repentance, giues him pardon: teaching vs, that no Miniſter is well qualified to the holy duties of the Miniſterie, vnleſſe he haue truly repented of his ſins, and haue obtained pardon and mercie in the Meſſias.

Doct. 5. True qualification of a Miniſter, is to be humbled, and to repent.

Miniſters labour for qualifications, but the true Miniſter of God will labour for this qualification aboue all other: for doubtleſſe hee ſhall pronounce moſt powerfully the pardon of ſinnes to others, to whoſe conſciēce God hath pronounced pardon of his owne.

In the laſt place, let vs obſerue how the Prophet being to be comforted before he goe this newe Embaſſage, the Lord is ſo carefull for him, that rather then he be not comforted (if there be no man to do it), An angel ſhal be ſēt to be his cōforter, & (if there be not another Prophet to doe it) An Angell ſhall pronounce vnto him the pardō of his ſins.

Doct. 6. True Prophets & miniſters ſhall haue helpe and comfort in their labours, elſe Angels ſhall come to cōfort them.

Let this be an encouragement for all Paſtors and Miniſters of Gods Church, to labour painfully & faithfully in their places, for the goodneſſe of the Lord will neuer faile them, nor ſhall they want comfort, when euer they ſtand in neede thereof. Yea rather ſhall Angels from heauen bee helpers and comforters, then faithfull Miniſters ſhall be left deſtitute.

Hitherto of the ſecond generall point: namely, of the Prophets conſolation.

Generall points, the renuing of his cōmiſsion: which containeth 3. points.

The third and laſt generall point is, the renouation of the Prophets commiſſion, in the eight, & part of the ninth verſes, and it containeth 3. parts, 1. A queſtion or inquirie made by God; Whom ſhall I ſend, and who ſhall goe for vs?

2 The anſwere of the Prophet: Here am I, ſend me.

3 The commiſſion renued vnto him: The Lord ſaide, Goe and ſpeake vnto this people.

1. Gods queſtion.

The firſt part, is a queſtion made by God, by way of proclamation, wherein he enquireth who ſhall goe preach vnto this people.

Whom ſhall I ſend.

Alſo, I heard the voice of the Lord, ſaying, whom ſhall I ſend? and who ſhall goe for vs?

In which Proclamation, and inquirie of the Lord, wee are not to imagine that the Lord, was either vnprouided of ſuch as ſhould execute his will, or knewe not who were able, or who were willing to goe preach his word: For as the Apoſtle ſaith, in the matter of Election; The Lord knoweth who are his: ſo much more in particular vocations. The Lord knoweth who are his, and need not to aske whom ſhal I ſend, or who ſhall goe? But then it may be demanded, why the Lord ſaith ſo? I anſwere, not for his owne ſake, but for ours: whom hereby he would inſtruct, in diuers points of holy doctrine.

Not as though God had none to ſēd or knew not whom.

2. Tim. 2. 19.

But to our conceits and for our ſake, to teach vs many good doctrines

Doct. 1 How hard to finde a good Miniſter

First, hereby hee would giue vs to vnderſtand, how hard a thing it is, to finde an able and godly Miniſter, for if there were not a great ſcarcitie of ſuch men, the Lorde needed not aske this queſtion. But ſome will obiect againſt this, that there are in many Chriſtian Churches ſo many Miniſters, as they cannot all bee maintained, but ſome goe vp and downe vndiſpoſed, and vnprouided for. I anſwere, this is too true in all ages: there were wandring Lewits in the Olde Teſtament, which went vp and downe and offered their ſeruice, and ſerued for 10. ſhekels of ſilver, and a ſute of apparell, and meate and drinke: but this calamitie was vpon the Church of the Iewes, (neuer but then,) when there was no king in Iſrael and euery one did that which was good in his owne eyes. If therefore there bee any in our church, and in chriſtian nations, which goe vp and downe, and offer their ſeruice at ſuch rates, it is much more miſe-

Ob. There are too many Miniſters, for ſome goe vp and downe.
Anſ. 1. Then it is a diſorder in a Church.

Iudges. 19. 1, 8 and 17. 8, 6.

Iudge 17.6. rable, ſeeing now there are kings in Iſrael; and therefore it is no reaſon that euery man rob the Church, as it ſhal pleaſe his couetous minde. But ceaſing to enquire whether this be ſo or no: and if it bee ſo, leauing the reformation thereof to thoſe Churches and States whom it may concerne: I anſwere, for the matter in hand, that this may be ſo, and yet the Lorde may complaine as heere hee doth; Whom ſhall I ſend? for the Lord meaneth not ſuch as beare the name of Leuits or Prieſtes in the old, or of Miniſters in the new Teſtament (for there were alwaies enow of them: who, ſome for prefermēt ſake, ſome for their eaſe, and ſome for a refuge how to liue, are willing to enter that function, and accordingly in that calling, ſeek not the Lord, but themſelues, and their owne ends).

Anſ. 1. He ſeeks not for any,

But heere the Lord enquireth for ſuch men, as firſt, purely doe ſeeke and vndertake that function, therein to honour God, and to gather his Church, and then in all their labours and miniſteriall duties, truly and faithfully endeuour to the ſame ends; Preaching Gods word, and as Gods word, diligently reproouing, exhorting, and admoniſhing, and ſhining before their people in good workes: for ſuch men, it is no maruell though the Lorde light a Candle at Noone day, and make open Proclamation to ſeeke for them, ſaying; Whom ſhall I ſend? for, ſuch a man is as Iob ſaith, One of a thouſand: for ſome wāt ability to diſcharge their duties, as S. Paul ſaith, Who are ſufficient for thoſe things? And ſome want willingneſſe to vndertake the labour, as God heere complaineth; VVho ſhall goe for vs? Now to make vſe of this doctrine to our Church.

But for good Miniſters.

Iob. 33. 22. 2. Corinth. 2. 16.

It were to be wiſhed, that in theſe daies, & for our Chriſtian churches, the Lord had not as great cauſe to cry out in the want of able, faithfull, and godly Miniſters, VVhom ſhall I ſend, and who ſhall goe for vs? But alas, this want is too apparant, and this blemiſh is too notorious, and it is a worke worthy the labour of kings and princes to reforme it; and is a kings euil, not to be healed but by the power of a King: for as long as there are ſo fewe and meane preferments for painefull Miniſters, there will neuer want abundance of ſuch Miniſters as doe want either conſcience or abilitie to diſcharge their duties.

Good Miniſters ſcarce, euen in theſe dayes.

In the meane time, till God put into the hearts of Parliaments and Princes, to looke to this great and needfull worke; let vs Miniſters learne our duties: and firſt, wee who are in the Vniuerſities, are here admoniſhed to look to our ſelues. By Gods bleſſing wee are many, & daily growe more and more: let vs therefore ſo furniſh our ſelues, as that when God or his Church ſhall ſay, Who ſhall goe for vs, and whom ſhall I ſend? then he may find many amongſt vs, whōhe may ſend to that great worke of the Miniſterie; & let vs feare to be ſuch, as that God may affirme of vs, as in the daies of Iob, that he cannot finde one of a thouſand.

Vſe. 1. To Miniſters. 1. They in the vniuerſities frame themſelues to the Miniſterie.

Sécondly, all Miniſters learne here, not to contēt themſelues with the name and title of Miniſters, but labour for the ſubſtantiall ornaments thereof, nor to be willing to take the honour and liuings, and to refuſe the burden and duties of the Miniſterie.

2. Labour to be worthy Miniſters.

For elſe let them knowe, God hath no neede of them: for had the Lord pleaſed or contented himſelf with ſuch kinde of men, as ſeeke to bee Miniſters for themſelues, and not for his ſake: or being Miniſters, doe feede themſelues, and not their flocke: or Preach themſelues, and not Chriſt: then had he not needed to haue made this Proclamatiō, for Ages haue yeelded ſtore of ſuch. But contrariwiſe, hee that is painfull and faithful in this function, let him knowe, that God and his Church hath neede of him.

For God hath vſe of them, but none of vnconſcionable or idle Miniſters.

Laſtly, heere the Romiſh Cleargie are iuſtly to bee taxed, whoſe number is infinite: but it is lamentable to ſee howe fewe among them be ſuch as the Lord here ſeeketh for. Their Orders of Regulars are exceeding many, beſide all their Secular Prieſts, and it is almoſt incredible, how many thouſands there bee of Dominicans or Franciſcans, or in ſome one of their orders: and yet amongſt the many millions of their Monkes, there is ſcarce to bee found one of many, who for his learning & other gifts, is fit to be ſent to the work of God: nay, their ignorance was palpable and ridiculous to the world, vntill

2. Vſe. To the Cleargie of Rom. A ſhame to them, that being ſo many, there are ſo few of them fit for God to ſend

Moſt of all their Prieſts and Monkes are ignorant drones of late being by Luther, and others of our Church, made aſhamed thereof, they haue laboured (eſpecially the Ieſuites) to become learned. How foule a thing is it that amongſt ſo many, the Lord ſhould haue cauſe to complaine; Whom ſhall wee ſend? The Ieſuits indeed, many of them are learned, but for other qualities, they are fitter to be plotters, & practiſers in State matters, Spies or Intelligencers, reconcilers, ſeducers, and ſubuerters, then Miniſters: and fitter to be inſtruments of pollicie to euil kings, then miniſters of the Goſpel vnto God. But take away them, and ſome fewe ſelected Monkes (and thoſe but fewe out of many thouſands) & then euen for learning alſo God may cry, and call & proclaime in their Monaſteries; whom ſhall I ſend? And if it be a ſhame and miſerie to a Church to want ſuch as God may ſend, or to haue but a fewe, then the Romiſh Church is ſhameleſſe, which ſhames not to haue ſo many, and yet amongſt them all, whom God may ſend, almoſt none.

The Ieſuits haue learning but no conſcience: and are rather Statesmen, then Diuines.

Doct. 2. No man is to goe vntill God ſend him.

In the next place. By this inquirie, and queſtion made by God, whom ſhall I ſend. and who ſhall goe for vs? The Lord would teach vs, that no man is to vndertake this function, vnleſſe God call and ſend him: therefore heere are condemned, the prophane fances of the Anabaptiſts, and all like them, who thinke that any man vppon a priuate motion, may ſteppe foorth and vndertake the duties of a Prophet, to Preach and expound, &c. Oh, but ſay they, theſe motions are from Gods ſpirit: ſurely they can ſay litle for themſelues, who cannot ſay ſo much: but that cannot ſerue their turne: for if we ſay, contrariwiſe nay, but they are from the diuel, or at the leaſt from your owne vanitie and pride, how can they diſproue it? Againe might not the Prophet haue alleadged that with a better pretence and colour then they? yet he ſtaieth till God here cal him: euen ſo all good Miniſters are to ſtay Gods calling.

And not to runne vpon priuate motions.

Ob, How ſhall I know when God calles me? Ans. if Gods Church allowe thy calling.

If any aske, how he ſhal know when God calles him? I anſwere, God calleth ordinarily by his Church, her voyce is his: therefore whenſoeuer the Church of God, ſaith vnto thee, thou ſhalt bee ſent, and thou ſhalt goe for vs; euen then doth the Lorde call vs out to this holy function.

Thirdly, let vs obſerue howe the Lord ſaith: who ſhall (I) ſend: & who ſhall goe for (vs)? Some Interpreters gather out of this Chapter, an Argument for the trinitie of perſons; as namely, out of the 3. Verſe, where the Angels ſing; Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God, &c. But it is not found enough to ouerthrowe our ſtubborne enemies the Iewes, and therefore it ſeemes thoſe Diuines are of a ſounder and wiſer iudgement: who ſeeing we haue other places pregnant and plaine enough, therefore thinke it no good diſcretiō to vrge this or any ſuch place which may probably admit another Interpretation, leaſt that the Iewes finding the weaknes of the Argument, doe iudge al our proofes to be as weak: and ſo take occaſiō to perſiſt the rather in their blindneſſe, by that which wee brought to haue conuerted them. And as for that ſong of the angels in the third Verſe, where they aſcribe holineſſe to the Lord 3. times: that their repetition ſignifieth nothing elſe, but the continuall ioy and delight which the holy Angels take in praiſing of God, who cannot ſatisfie theſelues in honouring his name: teaching vs in their example, neuer to be wearie of praiſing God by praiers and holy hymnes, and of honouring him in our liues and callings.

Doct. 3. out of the repetition of holy 3. times Here is no ſufficient proofe of the Trinity, as ſome think.

For the repetition made by the Angell, ſhewing onely how he cannot contein himſelfe in praiſing God.

But to proue out of the words; Holy, Holy, Holy, the three Perſons in Trinitie, ſeemes to bee no fit nō ſound collection. Rather in my opinion, wee may ſafely collect and conclude out of theſe wordes (I and vs) that there are more perſons in the Trinitie then one: for firſt, God the Father, or the whole Deitie ſaith: Whom ſhall I ſend? and then changing the number, hee ſaith: Who ſhall goe for vs? For howſoeuer God may imploy in the word (Vs,) that he that is ſent to Preach, is ſent as well for the good of the Church, as for his owne glory, yet can it not bee denied, but that the plurall number heere, and elſe where, aſcribed to the Deitie, muſt needs argue a certaine pluralitie of perſons in that Deitie: as in Geneſis it is written, that God ſaid, Let vs make man: and here, Who ſhall goe for vs?

But here may be proued a pluralitie of perſons.

Gen. 1. 26.

Out of the euidence of which places, ſeeing the enemies of this doctrine muſt needes grant a pluralitie, namely, that there are more then one: then wee ſhal ſufficiently proue out of other places, and by other arguments, that there are three.

Doct. 4. Miniſters are Gods ſeruants, they goe for God.

In the laſt place, let vs marke what God ſaith: Whom ſhall I ſend, & who ſhall goe for vs; God ſends a Miniſter to preach, and he goeth for God. Then behold here, what is the trade and profeſſion of a miniſter, hee is the ſeruant of God. So ſaith God here, he goeth for me; and ſo ſaith the Apoſtle of himſelfe & all other good Miniſters, that they are Gods Labourers.

1. Corinth. 3. 9. Acts. 27. 23.

And in another place, the Angell of God appeared, Whoſe I am, and whom I ſerue. But if any man thinke that either God ſpeaketh too fauourably of them, or S. Paul too partially of themſelues, then let the Diuell himſelfe bee iudge in this caſe, who plainly & freely confeſſeth (though he did it not in loue to the truth or them). Theſe men are the ſeruants of the moſt high God, which teach vnto vs the way of ſaluation. Let therefore either God be believed, who is for them, or the diuell who is againſt them. But what kinde of ſeruants are they? what place of office haue they? They are his Meſſengers or Embaſſadors, this is their profeſſion, and their place.

Confeſſed euen by the diuel himſelfe.

Acts. 16. 16. 17.

Q. What place is it they hold? R. His Embaſſadors.

Iob. 33. 23.

Now then for the vſe hereof.

Vſe. 1. Then they muſt ſeek to pleaſe God their Maiſter, not themſelues.

If they be Gods ſeruants, then are they not their owne Maiſters, they haue a Maiſter, euen God, whoſe they are, and for whom, and from whom they come: they may not therfore pleaſe themſelues, nor ſerue their own pleaſures, nor ſeeke the ſatisfying of their owne carnall luſtes, either in matter of pleaſure, credite, or profite: if they doe, then will he call them to a heauie account, whoſe ſeruants they are.

Vſe. 2. Then let them doe their ſeruice diligently, and expect their reward aſſuredly.

Againe, if they bee Gods ſeruants, then let them doe their ſeruice to God, and expect their reward from God: ſome miniſters wil expect the reward, and honour of Gods ſeruants, but will doe no ſeruice: that beſeemes not ſeruants: let ſuch men remember for whom they come, euen from that God, who as he can giue reward, ſo hee will expect ſeruice.

And as for ſuch men as painfully doe their ſeruice, but are not regarded, not rewarded of men as they deſerue, let them bee content and continue in their faithfulneſſe, for they are Gods Embaſſadors: & we knowe Embaſſadors may haue gifts giuen them, of thoſe to whom they are ſent: but they expect their maintenance from the kings their owne Maiſters: So the maintenance which the world ſhould giue Miniſters, is like gifts giuen to Embaſſadors: if it come, it is no more then they deſerue. If it come not, yet will faithfull Miniſters doe their dutie, and expect their payment from their king and Maiſter, God, whoſe they are, and whom they ſerue.

Though the would do not, yet God wil, for they are his Embaſſadors.

Thirdly, if they bee Gods Embaſſadors, ſent by him, and come from and for him, then let all ſuch as either condemne, or any way iniury them, bee aſſured, that as God is mighty & powerfull, ſo he will mightily reuenge it.

3. Vſe. Let no man therefore wrong them for God will not ſuffer his Embaſſadors to be abuſed.

There was neuer King ſo poore or weake, but thought himſelfe ſtrong inough to reuenge any wrong offered to his Embaſſador. And ſhall God ſuffer ſo foule a wickedneſſe to lye vnpuniſhed? Nay, they and their poſterities ſhall ſmart for it: let Ahab, and Iezabel, and Iulian, ſay if it be not ſo: and all ages or ſtories, ſhewe the cõtrary if they can, that euer any contemner and abuſer of godly Miniſters, eſcaped the viſible vengeance of Gods reuenging hands on him or his.

No king ſo poore that ſuffred it.

1. King. 22. 26. 27. 28. 34. &c. 2. King. 9. 33. &c. Act. 12. 1. 2. and 23.

Fourthly, ſeeing they are Gods Meſſengers & ſeruants, they muſt not be the ſeruants of men, to pleaſe, or flatter, or ſatisfie humours, this is not for them that are Gods ſeruants: they therefore that will bee ſlaues to the perſons, and pleaſures, and humours of men, they forget that they are Gods ſeruants, and came for him: yea: they muſt not endeuour the pleaſing of themſelues, nor the bringing of their owne purpoſes to paſſe, but in euery motion, either made to them by others, or ſuggeſted from their owne hearts, they muſt forth-with call to mind, Who ſent me hither, and for whom am I come? Euen from & for God: therefore they are to yeelde to nothing, nor ayme at any thing, but which may be both to the will, and for the glory of him that ſent them.

4. Vſe. Ergo, they muſt not be ſeruants of men: that is, men pleaſers: but his that ſent them.

And

Great men muſt not thinke to haue Gods ſeruant at their commaund.

And if the great men of this world, doe thinke it wronge that any man ſhould command their ſeruant againſt their will, or expect any ſeruice from him againſt their owne honour: then let them thinke it reaſon that Gods Miniſters ſhould not be commanded any thing contrary to Gods will, or againſt his honour.

5. Vſe. Ergo, they muſt regard the glory of God, their Maiſter, both in life and doctrine.

And further, if Miniſters be Gods ſeruants, then let them regard their maſters glory, and be aſhamed to doe any thing, either in their doctrine or liues, which may diſhonour him: that ſeruant is vnworthy of a good maiſter, who ſeekes not his maiſters credit in all his courſes.

6. Vſe. Ergo they muſt deliuer Gods Embaſſage, not their owne, and as they receiued it.

Laſtly, if they be Gods embaſſadors, then muſt they not deliuer their owne fancies, or inuentions, but that meſſage they receiued: And as they receiued it, ſo muſt they deliuer it. And if they do their duties faithfully, this doctrine is comfortable to them, they may take paines, with ioy, they haue a maiſter wil reward them: they may ſpeak freely, (ſo it be with diſcretion) they haue a maiſter will make it good: they may ſtand boldly in the face of their enemies, they haue a maiſter will defend them. And euery faithfull Miniſter may ſay to himſelfe, I wil do my dutie, and deliuer my Embaſſage. He whom I ſerue, and whoſe I am. He who ſent me, & for whom I come, will beare me out. And thus much of the enquiry which God makes, and the manner of it.

Now let vs ſee the anſwer which the Prophet makes, in theſe words.

Then I ſaid, Heere am I: ſend me.

2. Point. The Prophets anſwer: Here am I, ſend me.

The Prophet after he was comforted by God, and had his ſinnes forgiuen, then anſwereth; Heere am I, ſend mee. First, marke heere, what a great change is wrought on the ſuddaine: he who a little afore, feared & ſhrunke at the leaſt appearance of Gods glorie: now ſtands forth boldly, aſſoone as he is called, and anſwereth: Heere am I, ſend me. So great a matter is it for a Miniſter to haue his ſinnes forgiuen, and to feele the fauour of God to his ſoule and conſcience. Here therfore we haue an anſwere to two great queſtions, often moued in the world.

Doct. 1. He whoſe ſins are forgiue, comes boldly to Go i: and to his dutie.

First, many would haue quietnes of minde, and peace of conſcience, and cannot attain vnto it; If they aske how they might, to them I anſwere, Here is the way, ſeeke it not in worldly wealth, carnal pleaſures, nor humane learning, in company nor recreation: but ſeeke it in the fauour of God, and pardon of thy ſinnes, and thou ſhalt not miſſe of it. Thus ſhalt thou haue comfort in thy owne conſcience, courage before men, and boldneſſe toward God.

Vſe. 1. Here is the true way to peace of cõſcience, and quietnes of minde.

Secondly, many Students in Diuinitie, would gladly be Miniſters, and do much honour to the Calling: but they finde a feare and ſhrinking in themſelues, and therby an vnwillingneſſe to venture vpon it. If they aske how they may amend this: I anſwere, or rather the example of this Prophet anſwereth (for me); Let that man ſet himſelfe in gods preſence, enter into himſelf, ſearch his conſcience, find out his ſinnes, confeſſe and bewaile them to God, craue pardon in Chriſtes blood, and grace to leaue them, and ceaſe not till he heare the voice of gods ſpirit ſounding in his conſcience; Thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. Then whẽ God ſhall aske whom ſhall I ſend, thou wilt anſwere readily, and with ioy, Here am I, ſend mee.

Vſe. 2. To ſtudents. 1. If they wold be Miniſters, repent and get pardõ of their ſinnes.

And againe, many are driuen from this Calling, to beholde the contempt and reproach, and daungers which belong vnto it. But let thoſe men marke heere the phraſe of this holy Prophet, when God asked, Whom ſhall I ſende? Hee might haue anſwered; Lorde, I would goe: but ſuch diſgraces and diſcouragements do accompany this function, as I deſire to be excuſed: but he caſting aſide all ſuch conceits, anſwereth peremptorily, Here am I, ſend me. How came this to paſſe? for certainly the Prophet was as ſenſible of theſe wrongs as any of vs all, for he was nobly borne and brought vp, and was of the blood royall: ſurely, becauſe hee ſaw he was in Gods fauour, he had him and his commiſsion on his ſide, and he held this for a ſure ground: If God be on my ſide, who can be againſt mee?

2. If they wold be encouraged againſt the contempts and wrongs of the world, be aſsured of Gods fauour in the pardon of thy ſinnes.

Therefore doubtleſſe, thoſe men who are driuen backe by theſe diſcouragements, were neuer ſetled in aſſurance that their ſinnes were forgiuen: nor ſatisfied ſufficiently, that God is on the ſide of all good Miniſters, and that their Calling, as it hath their authoritie from God, ſo likewiſe, allowance, bleſsing, aſsiſtance, and defence of God, aboue any other calling: for if they were, they would ſcorne the ſcorne, & contemne the contempt of the prophane world, and with much courage and comfort ſet their hand to Gods Plough, and ſay with the Prophet; Here am I, ſend mee.

Doct. 2. We muſt not ſet others to the labour of the Miniſterie, but our ſelues alſo.

Secondly, let vs obſerue, how the prophet when God askes the queſtiō, ſends him not to others, nor commends others to that ſeruice, as is to be thought hee might haue done many in the Churches of the Iewes, but offers himſelfe, Here am I.

It controlles the carnall courſes of many amongſt vs in the Vniuerſities, who thinke it ſufficient to liue there, and ſend out other men, and giue teſtimonies & Letters of commendations to other men, but themſelues ſtir not, when queſtion is made, Who ſhall goe to ſuch a place? or who ſhall be ſent to ſuch a pariſh? they ſay not, Here am I, but either it is too little a liuing, or too great a charge, or ill ſeated, or ſome fault it hath, that they will not be ſent to it: but will anſwere God and his Church, there is ſuch a man, and giue him Letters of teſtimony, or commendation, and ſo all is well: but for themſelues, they liue too ſweete and eaſie liues, willingly to vndertake the contempt and burthen of the Miniſterie.

Vniuerſitie men muſt not be alwaies ſending out others, but muſt alſo ſend out themſelues.

Let ſuch men therfore learne, when God and his Church giue them a calling, to anſwere with the prophet, Here am I, ſend mee.

And let all ſuch as are Students of Diuinitie in the Vniuerſities, marke here the prophets anſwere, not I will be ready, but here am I: why takes he no longer time? becauſe hee was now ſufficiently qualified. Where let them learn, not to linger and lye rotting too long in their ſpeculatiue courſes: but when they are competently furniſhed with learning, and other qualities befitting that calling: let them ſhew themſelues willing & ready to yeeld their ſeruice to the Church, when they ſhall be called. For as an Apple may as well hang too long on the tree, as bee puld too ſoone, and both make it vnfit for vſe: ſo many men as well ſtay too long, as goe out too ſoone: and both wayes are made vnprofitable, or at leaſt leſſe profitable in the Church.

And let Students muſt not deferre too long, but haſten to the Miniſtery.

For ſome too long, as ſome goe too ſoone.

And to conclude this ſecond point, It is not vnworthy to be noted, that the Prophet ſaith not, Heere I am: and I runne on my owne head, but Send mee.

Doct 3. The Prophet will not goe till he be ſent.

Hee willes the Lord to ſend him: then where are they who dare bragge of their priuate motions, and wil runne when they are not ſent?

The prophet might haue ſaid: Oh, now I feele a motion from the Spirit, therefore I will goe and preach: but he ſtaieth til he be ſent in expreſſe termes: Let no man therfore preſume to preſſe into this function, till he be fully reſolued in his conſcience, that God and his Church hath ſaid vnto him, Goe.

And that not by priuate motion only, but in expreſse words.

And though a man be neuer ſo well qualified with all maner of ſufficiency, yet let him ſit ſtill and ſtay Gods leyſure, and let him ſay, Heere I am, ſend me: and ſo reſt contented vntill he be ſent. If any man ſay it is vnfit that a man ſhould ſay ſo of himſelf, I anſwer, let him not ſay ſo in wordes, but in deeds: let him therefore make proofe of himſelfe, and giue the Church tryall of his gifts. Vpon which experience of his gifts, if hee be found ſufficient, that practiſe of his is all one, & much more then if hee had ſaide, Heere I am, ſend mee.

Men therefore are to offer themſelues, but not to goe till they be ſent.

Thus we ſee the prophet would not ſtirre till he were ſent, and therefore in the next word he is bid to goe.

And he ſaid, Goe, and ſpeake vnto this people.

Heere is the third and laſt point, Namely, the eſſentiall words of his Commiſſion. Wherein (after God had ſought for one to goe, and the prophet had preſented himſelfe, and offered his ſeruice) god both giues him leaue to goe, and further, doth furniſh him with authoritie, both to goe and ſpeake.

3. The Commiſsion receiued.

Doct 1. No man is to preach without a Commiſsion.

Wherein the principall point is, that the authoritie of the prophets calling, is deriued from God himſelfe in plaine and euuident words; Goe and ſpeak: and till then the Prophet went not. So in the new Teſtament, the Apoſtles went not into the world to preach, till they had their Commiſſion: Goe and teach all Nations. And after them, Saint Paule preached not till it was ſaid vnto him, Ariſe, and goe.

Matt. 28.19 Act. 9.6.&c.

In all which is diſcouered and condemned the pride and preſumption of thoſe who dare run on their own heads and will not ſtay till the Lord ſay vnto them: Goe, and ſpeake. Theſe men are bolder, then either the extraordinary Prophets of the olde Teſtament, or the Apoſtles, which are the extraordinary Miniſters of the new: who alwaies had their warrāt with thē when they went. And if any man aske why it is neceſſarie they ſhould haue ſo; I anſwere, the reaſons are many.

This is ſo, for theſe cauſes.

Firſt, all Prophets and Miniſters, are Gods Deputies and Commiſſioners, it is therfore reaſon that they haue authoritie from their Lord and Maiſter.

Rea. 1. Commiſſioners haue no power but from the King.

Secondly, their wordes nor deedes beare no credit, nor haue any power in them, vnleſſe they be ſpoken by vertue of a Commiſſion: nor haue their labours any bleſſing, vnleſſe God giue it.

Rea. 2. Elſe what they doe, is without vertue or bleſsing.

Thirdly, their perſons haue no protection, nor ſafetie, vnleſſe they bee Gods Embaſſadors: and how are they ſo, vnleſſe they be called and ſent by God and haue authoritie giuen of God? For theſe cauſes, no man is to thruſt himſelfe into the Miniſterie, without a calling from God, and therefore no maruell, though thoſe men who will bee Chuſers, and Callers of themſelues, and run when they are not ſent, bee in their perſons, ſubiect to all daungers: becauſe they are out of Gods protection, & their labours without profit, becauſe no bleſſing, nor promiſe of God was giuē vnto them: for GOD may iuſtly ſay vnto them: Let him that ſent you, protect your perſons: let him that ſent you, bleſſe your labours.

Rea. 3. Elſe their perſons haue no protection.

But it will then be demaunded, how may I know if God bid me goe? for God ſpeakes not now from heauen as in old time, and as to this Prophet I anſwere, It is true, we are to look for no ſuch viſions, nor apparitions from heauen, for ordinarily there are none ſuch, and the Popiſh Church doth but deceiue themſelues, and cozen the world, who tel vs of ſo many apparitions that happen to their Monkes and Fryers: for now ordinarily, God ſpeaketh in another maner to his Church: for in generall duties God ſpeaketh to vs out of his word and holy Scriptures, and in particular aud perſonall duties, (where the word in plaine tearmes ſerueth not) he ſpeaketh to a man by his owne conſcience, and by the voice of his Church.

Ob. how may I know if God bid me goe? Anſ. we muſt not expect Gods voyce from heauē.

But he ſpeaketh to man two waies, generally in his word.

Out of his word, God ſheweth thee the dignity and excellency of this calling, to be a Miniſter of the word: Namely, they are his Meſſengers and Embaſſadors, &c, that ſo hee may winne them to loue and affect it. And againe, the neceſſitie of it, that it teacheth the way to ſaluation, that without it ordinarily Gods Church is not gathered, nor mens ſoules ſaued, that this may ſtirre thee vp to vndertake the burthen: this is generall. But now particularly for thy ſelfe, wouldeſt thou knowe whether God would haue thee to goe or no, then thou muſt aske thy own conſcience, and aske the Church, for if thou be hartily willing, and be fully and worthily qualified, then God bids thee goe. Now thy conſcience muſt iudge of thy willingneſſe, and the Church of thy ability: and as thou maiſt not truſt other men, to iudge of thy inclination or affection, ſo thou maiſt not truſt thy owne iudgement, to iudge of thy worthines or ſufficiency. If therefore thy owne conſcience tell thee vpon true examination, that thou doeſt not loue and affect this calling aboue any other, then God ſends thee not: and if thou enter with ſuch a teſtimonie, not God, but ſome worldly and ſiniſter reſpect doth ſend thee, and put thee forward, for though thou doeſt deſire it, yet if the Church of God haue not allowance of thy ſufficiēcie, God doth not ſend thee: But if contrariwiſe, thy conſcience doe truly teſtifie vnto thee, that thou deſireſt to doe ſeruice to God & his church, in this calling aboue any other: And if withall, vpon ſignificatiō hereof to the Church, & vpon triall made of thy gifts and learning, the Church (that is, maly learned, wiſe, and godly, and ſuch as the Church hath publikely appointed for that purpose) do approue of that thy desire, and of thy sufficiencie to do God seruice in his Ministerie, and thereupon by a publike Calling, bid thee goe, then assuredly God himselfe hath bid thee goe. And it is as effectuall a calling, as if thou heardest the voice of God frō heauen: for as in Repentance, If thy conscience tell thee thou hast truly repented, and if thou canst make that knowne to the church by so good euidēce, as thervpon a Minister of God pronounceth the pardon of thy sins vnto thee: If thou rest herein, and knowest it to be as effectuall, as if God from heauen had told thee, thy sinnes are pardoned. So it is here, if thou hast the testimonie, first of thy conscience, and then of the Church, thou art to rest therin, as in the voice of God: And this is the calling that wee are to looke for in these dayes.

1. Cor. 4.1. Iob 33.23. Acts. 16.17. Pro. 29.18.

Where theſe 2. voices call a man, ther God bids him goe.

Vse. 1. Against them that run, & cry they be sent.

By which doctrine, as those are iustly condemned of foule presumption, who dare runne vppon priuate motions, and carnall respects, and are iustly left without blessing or protection: so they on the other side, doe offer great wrong to God and to his Church, who when they cannot denie, but they affect the Ministerie aboue any calling, and haue approbation of their giftes from the Church of God, yet will not belieue the Testimonie of the Church herein, but their own priuate Iudgemēts, which in this case is no waye a competent Iudge, either for, or against. Let such men knowe, that they oppose themselues euen against God himselfe: it being certaine, that where the inward calling of the conscience, and the outward calling of the Church doe concurre, there God himselfe calleth and biddeth that man, goe, and speake.

2. Against such as are called by both voices, & yet wil not goe

Doct. 2. See the authoritie of a true Minister immediate frō God himselfe.

Now then (to drawe to an ende) let vs obserue in the last place, with what authoritie a Minister of God comes vnto vs, and executes his Function: euen with an immediate authoritie & Commission from God: whereby he is bid, Goe, and speake. If it bee so, let it perswade the world, to feare to doe any wrong, either to that calling, or to those persons who come with so faire a commission from God himselfe. But if it doe not perswade the prophane worlde, at least let this be a comfort & encouragement to all true Ministers, for if God bid them goe, he will goe with them himselfe. If hee send them, hee will not forsake them, but assist them, and blesse them, and open their mouthes, and enlarge their hearts, and harden their foreheads, and giue power vnto their words to conuert his children, & to confound and astonish the hearts of his enemies. If he send them, hee will defend and protect them, so that one haire of their heades shall not fall to the earth without his prouidence. If hee send them, hee will prouide for them, and sufficiently reward them: and wil honour them in the hearts of his owne people, and magnifie them in the faces of their enemies. And lastly, if hee send them, he wil pay them their wages, euen an eternal waight of comfort here, and of glory in heauen. And as they are here bid goe, so once they shal be bid Come: and that not onely with the generall call of all the Elect; Come ye blessed of my father, inherite the kingdome prepared for you. But euen with that particular Call, which especially belong to them that are faithfull in this seruice: Come thou good and faithfull seruant, enter into thy Maisters ioy.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE

Sir William Ruſſell, L. Ruſſell,

Baron of Thornhaugh; with the vertuous Lady his wife,
Grace and Peace.

Vpon that ſtrange [a] battel in heauen, betweene Michael [b] the great Prince, and Satan that olde Serpent, was heard a loud voice ſounding foorth ioy and woe: ioy to the heauens and to them that dwell therein: becauſe [c] the accuſer of the brethren is caſt out thence: but woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the ſea, (that is, to the ſonnes of men in this vale of teares) for the Diuell is come downe vnto them with great wrath, knowing that he hath but a ſhort time.

[a] Reuel. 12. 7.
[c] Reuel. 12. 12.

In this voice (right Honourable) are two things affirmed, touching Satan; firſt, that his caſting out of heauen is ioifull to the Saints; next that his comming downe on earth is wofull vnto men. Is the matter of our woe, ioy to the Saints? Nothing leſſe; but that the Diuell might be knowen to be an euill gueſt where euer he comes, the heauens doe reioice for his departure, and ſea and earth ought to mourne for his approaching; ſo that he is, or at leaſtwiſe ought to be, no where welcome, except it be in hell; and all ſuch perſons may well perceiue themſelues, not heauenlie but plainly helliſh minded, as giue more kinde welcome vnto Satan in their cheerefull practiſe of the works of darkeneſſe, then they do vnto Ieſus Chriſt, who [d] knockes at the doore of their hearts promiſing to come in and ſuppe with them, if they will heare his voice and open vnto him.

[d] Reuel. 3. 20.

But what do the heauens gaine by Satans caſting downe? And how doth his deſcending to the earth work man ſuch wo? Anſ. For heauens gain, [e] they are wel rid of the malitious accuſer of the brethrē. Who would know more, muſt ſtriue to get to heauen, and if more be needfull, there his information ſhalbe certaine. As for mans woe by Satans company here on earth, who ſo doubts heerof, may well ſuſpect himſelfe to haue already receiued of him that deadly hurt, in blindneſſe of minde and hardneſſe of heart, whereof none ſaue Ieſus Chriſt the good Phyſitian of our ſoules, by the [f] eie-ſalue, and [g] anointing of his ſpirit, can worke the cure. Is it not wofull to the flockes and to the heards, when rauenous beaſts do frequent their paſtures? then wo to man becauſe of

Satan: for the perill of the lambe from the woolfe; of the kid from the leopard; of the fat beaſt from the Lion; and of the ſucking child from the Aſpe, is nothing comparable to the danger of man from this olde ſerpent, who in craft and cruelty, yea in euery hurtfull property goes beyond them all. Other deuouring creatures keepe their circuites and obſerue their times; they are ſometime weary, and not alwaies hungry; ſome are vnfit for the darke, and others afraid of the light, whereby their ſillie pray gets ſome reſpite: but

Indeed the naturall man doth not perceiue that working of Satan which doth procure his woe; it may be he hath ſeene the plaiers and the painters Diuels, ſome blacke horned monſter with broad eies, crooked clawes or clouen feet; and till ſome ſuch thing appeare vnto him, he neuer feareth hurt by Satan: little doth he thinke that ignorance in the ſcriptures, neglect of Gods worſhip, profaning Gods ſabbaths, with greedy affecting the wealth, pompe, and pleaſures of this world doe giue aduantage vnto Satan againſt his ſoule; and therefore while the matters of this life do

[g] 2. Cor. 2. 11.

But is there no remedy to man for all this woe that comes by Satan? Yes, bleſſed be our God who hath not left vs for a praie vnto his teeth, but to ſhew the exceeding riches of his grace and loue to the world, [h] hath giuen his onlie begotten ſonne to be our prince and our deliuerer; who in no ſort [i] tooke the Angels, but the ſeede of Abraham: and becauſe they were [i] partakers of fleſh and bloud, he himſelf took part with them, that hee might deſtroy through death him that had the power of death, that is, the diuel. For the euidence and application of which deliuerance, he hath ordained in his church an holy miniſtery, whereby naturall men are brought [k] from darkneſſe vnto light, and from the power of Satan to himſelfe; and his owne children doe [l] grow vp into Chriſt their head, and be edified [m] in their moſt holie faith, through [n] which they are kept by the power of God vnto ſaluation. Yet we muſt ſo conceiue of this deliuerance, that as Iſrael being brought out of Egypt, was not preſently ſetled in the land of Canaan, but for the ſpace of forty yeares was exerciſed with ſundry temptations in a barren and drie wilderneſſe, where they met with [o] fierie ſerpents, and were encountred with many and ſtrong enemies, who ſought to debarre them from the promiſed land: ſo the children of God, though redeemed by Chriſt, are not preſently tranſlated from the bondage of corruption, to the full inheritance of perfect glory in the heauens; but muſt paſſe through this vale of teares, and in the wilderneſſe of this world meete with that crooked ſerpent the Diuell who will ſeeke to ſtinge their ſoules to death, and alſo ſtirre vp many an [p] Amelec to entrap them in the way, that either through diſobedience or vnbeliefe they may be depriued of their heauenly Canaan. True it is, this match is farre vnequall, for fleſh and bloud to fight againſt ſpirituall powers; yet heere is comfort, that we haue him for our Captaine who in his [q] deepeſt humility ſpoiled our ſtrongeſt aduerſary, and is now [r] crowned with glorie and honour, being highlie exalted [ſ] far aboue all might and domination at his fathers right hand, where he [t] muſt reigne till he hath put all his enemies vnder his feet; yea till he hath [u] troden Satan vnder the feete of all his members: only this he requireth that we ſhould bee valiant and [x] quit our ſelues like men in the power of his might, knowing that the battel is the Lords, and ſo the victory ſure before we ſtrike a ſtroke. Now for the manner of our fight (a matter indeed of great moment, becauſe a [y] ſmooth ſtone out of Dauids ſling wil foile to the ground great Goliah) wee haue in this combate between Chriſt and the Diuell, ſo pregnant direction ſet before vs, that vnleſſe wee doe wilfully ſhut our eies againſt the light, in this behalfe wee cannot be ignorant of our duty: [z] whatſoeuer was written aforetime was

The view heereof hath formerly beene presented to your Honors, by Master Robert Hill, bachelor of Diuinity, vnder this title, Satans Sophistrie answered by our Sauior Christ. And now at the intreaty of M. Perkins executors, I haue published it againe; yet vnder a new title, and more large almost by one third part. Mine endeuour hath beene that this poore Orphane might imitate his brethren, who were the messengers of loue vnto our Church, while their happy father liued among vs. What is wanting heerein, or may deserue a iust reproofe I willingly take to my self, me me adsum qui feci-&c. What I haue beene able to doe, I humbly commend to the church of God vnder your Honourable protection. If heerein I seeme presumptuous, because I am vnknowen vnto you, I humbly craue this fauourable construction; that I chose rather by presuming to wrong my selfe, then to alienate this booke from your Honours, who had right heereto by former dedication. When your Honourable imployments in time past required your wisedome and courage, for the iust defence of our Soueraignes right, I make no question, but as well the messengers of victory ouer rebels, as the counsellers of peace, were alwaies welcome to your Honour: why then should I doubt, whether this ensuing display, being as wel a counseller of peace with God, as an Herauld of triumph through Christ ouer Satan, the Arch-enemy of our soules, will be gratefull vnto you, who haue learned long since, that whosoeuer will keepe a good conscience towards God or man must endure manie a conflict with Satan?

Ænead. 9.

Now that God of peace who is able to doe exceeding abundantly aboue all that wee can aske or thinke, graunt vnto your Honours according to the riches of his mercy, so to fight the good fight of faith on earth, that you may receiue the crowne of glorie in heauen. Your Honours in the Lord to be commanded,

THO. PIERSON.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE Sir WILLIAM RVSSELL, Lord Russell,

Baron of Thornhaugh, yoonger ſonne to that moſt Chriſtian and Honourable Earle, FRAVNCIS Earle of Bedford; with the vertuous Lady his wife,

Grace and Peace.

RIGHT Honorable, as Iohn the Baptiſt was in one deſert, ſo our Saviour Chriſt he was in an other: but as theſe two differed in their being in the world: ſo did they not accord in their being in the wilderneſſe. Iohn was with ſome men, Chriſt with none; Iohn was with wilde men, Chriſt with wild beaſts; Iohn was preaching, Chriſt praying; Iohn was baptizing, Chriſt fighting; Iohn was feeding, Chriſt faſting; Iohn was encountring with Diuels incarnate, Chriſt did encounter with the Prince of thoſe Diuels. From Iohn preaching in the deſert, learne wee diligence in our callings: from Chriſt tempted in the deſert, ſee we troubles at our calling: [a] Many are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord deliuereth them out of all. Mat.3. Mat.4.1. [a] Pſa.34.19.

If it pleaſe you to giue theſe after-lines the reading, you ſhall ſee ſet downe that monomachie or ſingle combat, which was hand to hand betwixt Chriſt and the Diuell. And as for Chriſt Ieſus, you ſhall ſee him faſting, fighting, conquering. Faſting and an hungry, to ſhew he was man: fighting and encountring, to ſhew he was Meſſiah; and conquering and triumphing, to ſhew he was God. And as for the diuell, you ſhall ſee him obiecting, anſwering, flying. Obiecting, that [b] Chriſt might deſpaire; [c] anſwering, that he might preſume; and [d] flying, when he could not ouercome.

[b] Mat.4.3. [c] Mat.4.6. [d] Mat.4.11

In Chriſts temptations, we ſee the eſtate of the [e] Church; in Satans aſſault, we ſee his malice to the [f] Church. Is Chriſt tempted? think it not ſtrange if we fall into [g] temptations. For the griefe of the head, is the griefe of the [h] members: and the temptations of Chriſt, ſhew the temptations of [i] Chriſtians. It is true of Chriſt, that [k] by many tribulations he did enter into the kingdome of God: that [l] our High Prieſt was conſecrated by afflictions, that ſo he muſt ſuffer and enter into his [m] glory.

[e] 1. Pe.2.21 [f] 1.Pet.5.8 [g] Ioh.15.20 [h] 1.Cor.12.26. [i] Ioh.15.20 [k] Act.14.22 [l] Heb.2.10 [m] Luk.24.26

He is no ſooner borne into the world, but he is [a] hunted by Herod; baptized at Iordan, [b] but Satan ſets on him; a Preacher for repentance, but the [c] Scribes proſcribe him; to [d] worke miracles, but the Phariſes ſlander him. He is no ſooner to ſuffer, but [e] the Diuell aſſaults him; apprehended, but the [f] Iewes deliuer him; deliuered, but [g] Herod derides him; derided, but [h] Pilat condemnes him; condemned, but the ſouldiers [i] abuſe him. Is he on the croſſe? the [k] people will not pity him: is he riſen? the high Prieſts will [l] belie him. In a word, is he vpon earth? he is tempted in his [m] perſon; is he in heauen? he is [n] tempted in his members. Thus the life of Chriſt was a warfare vpon earth, and the life of Chriſtians muſt be a warfare vpon earth. We liue heere in a ſea of troubles: the ſea is the world, the waues are calamities, the Church is the ſhip, the anker is hope, the ſailes are loue, the Saints are paſſengers, the hauen is heauen, and Chriſt is our Pilot. When the ſea can continue without waues, the ſhippe without toſſings, and paſſengers not be ſicke vpon the water, then ſhall the Church of God be without trials. We begin this voiage ſo ſoone as we are borne, and we muſt ſaile on till our dying day.

[a] Mat.2.14. [b] Mat.3.16.4.1. [c] Ioh.7.1. [d] Luk.11.15. [e] Ioh.12.27 [f] Ioh.18.28 [g] Luk.23.11. [h] Luk.23.24. [i] Mat.27.27. [k] Mat.27.39. [l] Mat.28.15. [m] Luk.11.16. [n] Act.9.4.

We doe reade in Gods word of many kinds of temptations: God, Satan, Man, the World, and the Fleſh, are ſaide to tempt. God tempteth man to trie his obedience, Satan tempteth man to make him diſobedient: men doe tempt men to trie what is in them: and man tempteth God to trie what is in him. The world is a tempter, to keepe man from God: and the fleſh is a tempter, tempter, to bring man to the Diuell. So God tempted Abraham [a] in the offering of his ſon: Satan [b] tempted Iob in the loſſe of his goods: a [c] Queene tempted Salomon in trying his wiſedome: men [d] tempted God by diſtruſt in the deſert: the world tempted Demas, [e] when he forſooke the Apoſtles: and the fleſh tempted Dauid, [f] when he fell by adultery. Doth God tempt vs? take heed of hypocriſie: doth Satan tempt vs? take heed of his ſubtiltie: doth man tempt man? take heed of diſſembling: doth man tempt God? take heed of inquiring: doth the world tempt man? take heed of apoſtaſie: doth the fleſh tempt man? take heed of carnalitie. But do we ſo? are we warie of theſe tempters? No, we are not, and therefore we fall. We fall on the right hand, by temptations in proſperitie, and we fall on the left, by temptations in aduerſitie. Of the one it may be ſaid, it hath ſlaine [g] thouſands: of the other, that it hath ſlaine ten thouſands.

When we come and ſee cities diſpeopled, houſes defaced, and walls pulled downe, we ſay, the ſouldier hath beene there: and when we ſee pride in the rich, diſcontent in the poore, and ſinne in all, we may iuſtly ſay, the Tempter hath beene there.

Now of all other temptations, it pleaſeth God to ſuffer his church to be tempted with afflictions. It is neuer free either from the ſword of Iſhmael; which is [a] a reuiling tongue: or the ſword of Eſau, a [b] perſecuting hand. Neither was there yet euer Chriſtian man found, who had not his part in the cup of affliction. We muſt drinke of the [c] ſame cup our maſter did: [d] the diſciple is not aboue his maſter.

Reaſons why God doth afflict his children.

The reaſons why God doth viſit vs thus with afflictions, are: 1. To humble vs. 2. To weane vs. 3. To winnow vs. 4. To preuent vs. 5. To teach vs. 6. To enlighten vs. 7. To honour vs. 8. To cure vs. 9. To crowne vs. 10. To comfort vs. 11. To protect vs. 12. To adopt vs. And laſt of all, to teach and comfort others. To [e] humble vs, that we be not proud: [f] to weane vs, that we loue not this world: [g] to winnow vs, that we be not chaffe: [h] to preuent vs, that we do not ſinne: [i] to teach vs, that we be patient in aduerſity: to [k] enlighten vs, that we ſee our errors: to [l] honor vs, that our faith may be manifeſt: to cure vs, that we [m] ſurfet not of ſecuritie: to [n] crowne vs, that we may liue eternally: to [o] comfort vs, that he may ſend his ſpirit: to [p] protect vs, that he may guide vs by his Angels: to [q] adopt vs, that we may be his ſonnes: [r] and to teach others, that they ſeeing how ſin is puniſhed in vs, they may take heed it be not found in them: that they [s] ſeeing our comforts in troubles, may not be diſcouraged in the like trials.

Thus a Chriſtian mans diet is more ſowre then ſweet: his phyſicke is more aloës then hony: his life is more a pilgrimage then a progreſſe: and his death is more deſpiſed then honoured. This if men would thinke of before, afflictions would be as welcome to the ſoule of man, as [a] afflicted Ruth was to the field of Boaz. But becauſe we looke not for them before they come, thinke not on Gods doing when they are come, and doe deſire to be happie both heere and hereafter; therefore we can away with the name of Naomi, but in no caſe would we be called [b] Mara. We [c] ſee the ſea, not the whale: the [d] Egyptian, not the ſaluation: the [e] Lions mouth, not him that ſtoppeth the Lions mouth. If we could ſee God in our troubles, as [f] Eliſha did in his, then would we ſay: There are more with vs, then there are againſt vs. But becauſe we doe not, therefore at euery aſſault of the Aſſyrians, we ſay, as the ſeruant to [g] Eliſha did: Alas maſter, what ſhall we doe? and with the diſciples: Careſt thou not Maſter that we periſh? Yet it is good for vs to ſuffer affliction: [h] Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he ſhall receiue the crowne of life which the Lord hath promiſed to them that loue him. It is [i] commanded by God, [k] practiſed by Chriſt, [l] yeelded to by the Saints, [m] aſſigned by Gods prouidence, and good for vs each way. We are Gods [n] trees, we ſhall grow better by pruning: Gods pomander, ſmell better by rubbing: Gods ſpice, be more profitable by bruiſing: and Gods conduits, we are the better by running. Let vs ſuffer afflictions, they are [o] momentany in reſpect of time: [p] fauors, if we reſpect Gods loue, and a meanes to bring vs to the kingdome of God. If they did conſume vs, we might wiſh them an end: but they doe purge vs, let vs be content. They [q] are Gods fan, we are Gods wheat: they are Gods boulter, we are Gods meale: they are Gods [r] flame, we are Gods buſh: they are Gods [s] cords, we are Gods ſacrifice: they are Gods fornace, we are Gods gold. The wheat will not be good without the fan, nor the meale without the boulter, nor the buſh without the flame, nor the ſacrifice without the cords, nor the gold without the fornace: they are trials, not puniſhments, if we be ſonnes: puniſhments, not trials, if we be ſlaues.

Let

Let vs then beare them, they [l] will haue an end: ioy [m] will follow: they [n] ſhew vs our weakeneſſe: they [o] moue vs to pray: they [p] ſhew we are in the path way to heauen: and [q] make vs contemne this preſent world. By them we [r] learne to repent vs of ſinne paſt, [s] to take heed of ſinne preſent, and to foreſee ſinne to come. By them we [t] receiue Gods ſpirit: [u] are like to Chriſt: are acquainted [x] with Gods power: haue [y] ioy in deliuerance: know benefit of proſperity: made more hardy to ſuffer: and [z] haue cauſe to practiſe many excellent vertues. They cauſe vs (as one ſaith) to ſeeke out Gods promiſe: the promiſe to ſeeke faith: faith to ſeeke praier: and praier to finde God. [a] Seeke, and yee ſhall finde: [b] call, and he will anſwer: [c] waite, and he will come. I am to write an Epiſtle, I muſt not be long. Iobs [d] meſſengers came not ſo faſt on him: but Iobs afflictions may come as faſt vpon vs. Hath Dauid ſlaine [e] a Beare? he ſhall encounter with a Lion: hath he killed a Lion? [f] he muſt fight with Goliah: hath he ſubdued Goliah? he muſt make a rode vpon the Philiſtims: are the Philiſtims conquered? [g] Saul will aſſault him. Remember Dauids troubles, and foreſee what may be our troubles. The more righteous we are, the more manifold are our troubles: and the better we are, the better we may indure them.

But as our troubles are many, ſo are our deliuerances many. God will deliuer vs out of all. He that deliuered [h] Noah from the flood, [i] Lot from Sodome, [k] Iacob from Eſau, [l] Ioſeph from Potiphar, [m] Moſes from Pharaoh, [n] Iſrael from Egypt, [o] Dauid from Saul, [p] Eliah from Achab, [q] Eliſha from the Syrians, [r] Naaman from his leproſie, [s] Hezechiah from the plague, [t] the three children from the fire, [u] Daniel from the Lions, [x] Ioſeph from Herod, the Apoſtles [y] from the Iewes, [z] and Chriſt from the Diuell: he, euen he will either deliuer vs from trouble, or comfort vs in trouble, or mitigate troubles when they come vpon vs.

He, [a] he hath promiſed to doe it, and he that hath promiſed is able to doe it. And this he doth ſometimes by no meanes, ſometimes by ſmall meanes, ſometimes by ordinary meanes, ſometimes by extraordinarie, ſometimes contrarie to all meanes. By no [b] meanes he cured a creeple at Bethſaida: by [c] ſmall meanes he fed fiue thouſand in the deſert: by [d] ordinary meanes he was brought from the pinnacle: [e] by meanes extraordinary he was prouided for in hunger: and contrarie to all meanes were the [f] three children preſerued in the fornace of fire.

I haue good cauſe to thinke of Gods gracious deliuerance, being my ſelfe deliuered from a great trouble. Since the time I was vnkindly diſmiſſed from my poore charge, where I would haue continued, if malice had not hindred me, I haue liued in an end of this City: dangerouſly in reſpect of the ſickneſſe; poorely in regard of maintenance; and painfully, in reſpect of my miniſterie: yet till this time hath the Lord deliuered me: and as Paul ſaid, [g] he will deliuer me, if that be ſee it be beſt for me.

Let man therefore [h] comfort himſelfe in the Lord: [i] after two daies he will reuiue vs, and the third day he will raiſe vs vp againe: [k] Heauineſſe may endure for a night, but ioy will come in the morning. [l] Doubtleſſe there is a reward for the righteous: verily, [m] God retaineth not his wrath for euer. Could he ouercome the world, and can he not ouercome many troubles in the world? Yea, let one plague follow another, as one quaile flyes to another: yet as the [n] viper leaped on Paules hand, and forthwith leaped off againe, ſo one trouble ſhall leape vpon the righteous, and anon leap off againe: [o] though he fall, he ſhall riſe againe, the righteous ſhall not be forſaken for euer.

If he hath deliuered vs from the guilt of our ſinnes, he will deliuer vs from the puniſhment of our ſinnes. Let vs then therefore be patient in trouble, conſtant in hope, rooted in loue: let vs waite and he will come, call and he will heare, beleeue and he will performe, repent vs of our euill committed againſt him, and he will repent of his euils intended againſt vs. He is ouer vs by his prouidence, about vs by his Angels, in vs by his ſpirit, with vs by his word, vnder vs by his power, and vpon vs by his Sonne. In him is our helpe, from him is our comfort, by him is our victory, and for him is our trouble. [p] In thee haue I truſted, ſaith a king: [q] who euer was confounded that truſted in the Lord, ſaid a friend? and as Elkanah was to [r] Hannah inſtead of many ſons, ſo God is to his inſtead of many comforters. Of other comforters, we may ſay as Iob did of his friends: [s] Silly comforters are you all. They will leaue vs, as mice doe a ruinous houſe: but the Lord (like [t] Ruth to Naomi) will neuer leaue vs, nor forſake vs. Eſpecially in the houre of death, [u] which is in remembrance bitter to great men: in that houre of death he will be with vs, and command his [x] Angels to take charge of our ſoules, the [y] earth to be as a bed for our bodies:

bodies: that so the one [f] may goe into glory, the other reserued in hope of like glorie, [g] and be made one day like vnto the glorious body of Christ Iesus. Thus, right Honorable, you haue seene the righteous in affliction; as [i] Israel was in Babylon: and that the Lord like [m] Zorobabel is ready to deliuer them. Though in troubles Christs seemes as in the [n] ship to sleepe, yet in deliuerance he awakes as a man out of sleepe, and as a Giant refreshed with wine. He will rebuke the waues and winds of troubles and persecution, and they shall flie before him as Sysera did before [a] Debora, and the [b] Philistims before Ionathan and his seruant. And as Christ asking the woman of her accuser she answered, There was none: so in the end aske a Christian of his troubles, and he will say, There are none. He is a buckler for our left hand, and a sword in our right: he is an helmet on our head, and harnesse for our body. We shall looke vpon troubles, as [d] Israel did on the Egyptians, as the [e] Iewes did on Goliah, and as the Grecians did on Hector, to triumph ouer them: and as the Angell said to Ioseph, [f] They are dead that sought the childs life; so the Spirit shall say to the afflicted, They are dead that did seek your life. A day of deliuerance, a yeere of Iubile will come, and then [k] Ioseph shall be out of prison, [h] Iacob out of seruitude, and [l] Iob shall lie no more in the dust of the earth: [k] Let vs comfort our selues with these words.

I haue exceeded an Epistle, especially to such a small pocke. If the walls seeme too great for this city; abundans cautela non nocet. It is vsuall for students not onely to present their owne Labours, but also other mens to great personages, especially such Workes wherein they haue beene either Translators or ouerseers. It were infinit to instance this point. I am bolde to doe the like to your Honour at this time. This Copie it was brought vnto my hand, I haue conferred it with another, I haue perused it at the Presse, I heard diuers of the Sermons, I haue added nothing of mine owne: and I desire, that of those [o] many baskets full of most delicate diet, which this worthy man hath now left behind him, there may not so much as any one be lost. If any such come vnto my hand, surely they shall not be lost. By his life had I much comfort, and I will seeke to honour him after he is dead. I was twenty yeeres acquainted with him: I at his request made the first fruits of his labours to speake English. And now I am bold to present this his posthume to your patronage. Your honorable Nephew, his vertuous Lady, your worthy sister, haue heeretofore accepted the labours of this man. If it shall please your good Honor to do the like, this Preface of mine shall remaine as a perpetuall testimony of my duty to you: and the booke following as fully armed against all such aduersaries as shall speake against it. The God of heauen, who hath made you honorable in your most honorable Progenitors, make you twice honorable in your future successors: that the memoriall of the righteous may be euerlasting, when at the name of the wicked shall rot. THE COMBATE BETWEENE CHRIST and the DIVELL expounded.

Then was Ieſus led aſide of the ſpirit into the wilderneſſe to be tempted of the Diuell.

THE eleuen firſt verſes of this chapter do conteine a briefe deſcription of Chriſtes tẽptations, whereof I haue choſen to intreat, hauing formerly handled the doctrine of Conſcience, becauſe all that endeuour either to get or keepe a good conſcience, are moſt of all ſubiect to temptations: Now here we haue the ſpeciall temptations of the Diuell wherewith he aſſaulted our Sauiour Chriſt, and in Chriſts example the beſt way to auoid the ſame. This deſcription conſiſteth of three diſtinct parts: Firſt, A Preface or preparation to a Combate betweene Chriſt and the Diuell, verſ. 1.2. Secondly, The combate or conflict it ſelfe, verſ. 3.4.5.6.7.8.9.10. Thirdly, The iſſue or euent of this combate, verſ. 11.

I. Part. The Preparation to the combate hath two parts: Firſt, Chriſts going foorth to that place where the combate was to be fought, verſ. 1. Secondly, his abode & conuerſing in that place, verſ. 2 1. Chriſts going forth to the place is ſet out by ſundry circumſtances of the Euangeliſts: as, The time when he went; The authour of his going; The maner how he went furniſhed; the place whither he went; And the end wherefore.

I. Circumſtance. The time when Chriſt went foorth to be tempted is noted in this word Then: what time this was, we ſhall ſee in the end of the former chapter, where is ſet downe the baptiſme of our Sauiour Chriſt by Iohn in the riuer Iordan; as alſo the great honour and maieſty wherewith he was there renowmed: for it pleaſed Chriſt for ſpeciall end and purpoſe to be baptized, not as we are, to put off ſinne, for he had none; but to be ordained a Mediatour for vs, that putting on our ſin he might beare the burden thereof in our ſteed. Againe in his baptiſme he was diſtinctly proclaimed, The doctour of his Church: for immediatly thereupon, The Holy ghoſt deſcended vpon him like a doue, and a voice came from heauen, ſaying, This is my welbeloued ſonne in whom I am well pleaſed. Now ſo ſoone as Chriſt was thus ſolemnly inaugurated into his office, and proclaimed from heauen to be the ſole Doctor and Prophet of Gods Church, euen then immediately without any delay was he driuen forth, as Marke ſaith, chapt. 1.12.

The vſe. In that Chriſt is no ſooner baptized, but he is preſently tempted, we learne; that all thoſe who are truely baptized into Chriſt muſt make account to be tempted, and prepare for a combat with the Diuell, euen through the whole courſe of their liues: for if Satan durſt be ſo bolde as to encounter with Chriſt Ieſus the head of the Church after his baptiſme, then doubtleſſe he will not ſpare any of his members who are but weake & ſinfull men. Again, in baptiſme a man giues vp his name vnto God, promiſing therein for euer to renounce all ſeruice to the Diuell, the fleſh and the world; and contrariwiſe to beleeue in God, and to ſerue him; and this vow being thus made, it is the will of God he ſhould be tempted, that in the ſchoole of temptation he might learn to practiſe his baptiſme. But here moſt men wil ſay, they neuer felt by experience in themſelues the trueth of this doctrine; for they haue not perceiued any ſuch combate in themſelues, though they haue bene baptized many yeres agone. Anſw. Such men, whatſoeuer they be, haue indeed the outward baptiſme of water, but they neuer yet receiued the inward baptiſme of the ſpirit; they weare Chriſts liuery, but as yet they do ſeruice vnto Satan; And though they haue been made partakers of the ſeales of the couenant, yet ſtill they abide within the kingdome of darkeneſſe; for Chriſt heere teacheth by his owne example, that all thoſe who haue receiued the inward baptiſm of the ſpirit, whereby they haue effectually put off ſinne, and put on the Lord Ieſus, are as ſure to be tempted by Satan as himſelfe was: therefore let ſuch perſons as neuer yet felt in themſelues this ſpiritual conflict, now begin to reform their liues, and to performe their vow of baptiſme, and they ſhal vndoubtedly find in themſelues the truth of this doctrine, That all that are baptized into Chriſt, ſhalbe tempted of the Diuell. So long as the children of Iſrael continued vnder Pharaos bondage, they were not purſued by his army; but when they ſet their faces toward the land of Canaan, then preſently he makes after them, with all his might and malice; euen ſo, while men liue in ſinne and ſubmit themſelues to Satans ſpirituall bondage, he will ſuffer all things to be in peace with them; but if once they ſet their hearts on the heauenly Canaan, and giue themſelues ſyncerely to Gods ſeruice, then will he with all his force purſue them, & meet them with armies of temptations to turne them backe into their olde way of ſinne againe. The ſilly bird that is in the ſnare or vnder the net, ſo long as ſhe lieth ſtill feeles no harme; but when ſhe ſtirs & offers to get away, then begins her paine, and the more ſhe ſtriues, the more ſhe finds her ſelfe enſnared: So fareth it with ſilly men, while they liue in ſinne ſecurely, they are not troubled with Satans temptations; but when they beginne to leaue their badde courſes, and ſettle themſelues to ſerue the Lord, then preſently the Diuel ſeeks to ſpread his net to intangle them in his ſnare. The conſideration whereof muſt teach vs, to watch and pray that we enter not into temptation; and (as Paul ſaith) to put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to ſtand againſt the aſſaults of the Diuell, Epheſ. 6. 11.

The ſtate of thoſe that were neuer tempted.

Secondly, in that our Sauiour Chriſt after his ſolemne inauguration into his mediatorſhip, was immediatly to go to be tempted; we learn, that all thoſe that are ſet apart by God to any ſpeciall calling, euen at their verie entrance thereinto muſt looke for temptations. This befell the head, and therefore all the members muſt reckon for it. When Moſes was firſt called to be the guide and conducter of Gods people out of Egypt, [a] hauing ſlaine an Egyptian in defence of one of his brethren, vpon knowledge of the fact he was fain to flie from Pharaos court into the land of Madian, and there to liue a ſhepherds life for many yeres with his father in law Iethro. And Dauid was no ſooner appointed by God to be king ouer his people Iſrael, but [b] Saul began to perſecute him, and ſo continued all his dayes. And our Sauiour Chriſt, hauing called his Apoſtles to their office of preaching his kingdome, [c] tooke them ſoone after to the ſea, and there falling alleepe ſuffered their ſhip to be ſo toſſed with waues in a great tempeſt, that they looked for nothing but preſent drowning, ſo as they cried out, Maſter ſaue vs, we periſh. And this the Lord doth in great wiſedome for the good of his children: firſt to teach them, that no man is able of himſelfe, to carry himſelfe in any acceptable courſe of his calling without Gods ſpeciall aſſiſtance and grace. Secondly, to ſtir vp in them thoſe good gifts and graces which he hath formerly beſtowed on them; as the feare of his name, the loue loue of his maiesty, the gifts of prayer, faith, patience, and many other which he would haue tried in the entrance of their callings, and exercised in the continuance therein vnto the end.

Thirdly, seeing Christ begins his propheticall office of teaching his church, with temptations; This should admonish all Ministers of the word, that howsoeuer all Gods people must prepare themselues against Satans temptations, yet they must doe it aboue the rest; for looke as in a pitched field, the enemy aimeth principally at the standerd-bearer; euen so Satan and his instruments, do among all Gods people, bend their greatest forces against the ministers of Christ which holde vp his scepter, and display his banner in the preaching of the Gospel. When Iehoshuah the high priest stood before the Lord, Satan stood at his right hand to resist him, Zak. 3.1. And when Ahab went to fight against the king of Syriah, Satan became a lying spirit in the mouth of 400 prophets & mo, 1. King. 22.22. This is that great red dragon, that with his taile drew downe the third part of the starres of heauen, that is, of the ministers and preachers of the word, and cast them to the earth, Reuel. 12.3.4. This is he that desired to winnow the Disciples as wheat, Luk. 22.31. And as the king of Aram said of Ahab, fight not against small nor great, but against the king of Israel only, 1. King. 22.31, So Satan fighteth not against any so much as the Prophets of Israel, the ministers of the Church.

Ministers specially must looke for temptation.

Fourthly, in that Christ is tempted before he go to preach, we learne that it is good and profitable for Gods ministers to be exercised with temptations euen of Satan himselfe, & that for sundry causes; first, that they may know [c] what temptations meane; Secondly that they may [d] be the more able to minister helpe and comfort to those that are tempted; Thirdly to make them vnderstand the word of God aright; for many places of Scripture can not so well be vnderstood by bare study onely, as by temptations [e] therewithall; and it is true which one sayth well; Reading, meditation, prayer, and temptation, make a diuine.

It is good for Ministers to be tempted.

II. Circumstance. The author or efficient cause of Christes going foorth; to wit, the Holy ghost, noted in these words, was led by the spirit: The word led, in the originall signifieth thus much, that Iesus was carried apart by the spirit; which must not bee vnderstood of any locall transportation of his bodie from the riuer to the wilderneſſe, as [a] Elias was carried from earth to heauen; or as [b] Philip was taken away from the Eunuch, and carried to Azotus; but it was a motion of the Holy ghost, wherewith Christ was filled aboue measure and made willing to encounter with Satan in that combat; for so are the words by S. Luke, [c] being full of the Holy ghost hee returned from Iordan, and was led by the spirit into the wilderneſſe, that is, by the inward motion and instinct of Gods spirit; Againe, S. Marke saying, [d] the Spirit droue him into the wilderneſſe, giueth vs further to vnderstand, that this motion in Christ from the spirit, was a peculiar motion, not forced or constrained, but voluntary, and yet very strong and effectuall.

[b] Act. 8.39.40

[d] Mark. 1.12.

Again, by the spirit here, is not meant the Diuell or an euill spirit, but the Holy spirit of God: he it was that moued Christ to goe into the wilderneſſe; so that the meaning is this; After Christ was baptized in Iordan by Iohn, hee willingly tooke his iourney into the wilderneſſe, being moued thereunto by a speciall and strong instinct of Gods holy spirit, wherwith he was filled aboue measure. If any aske, how Christ could be led by the spirit, seeing hee sends the spirit: Answ. These two may well stand together: for Christ must be considered two wayes; first as man in the forme of a seruant; secondly, as God, euen the sonne of God, yea God himselfe: Now as Christ was man, he was subiect to Gods prouidēce, and so was led and guided by the Holy ghost: but as he is God, he is not subiect to prouidēce, but is the author therof, and is not himselfe led or sent, but together with the father sendeth the spirit.

The vse. In this circumstance we may obserue; first the exceeding holinesse of Christs manhood, in that he moued not from one place to another, without the speciall instinct and direction of the spirit of God. By which example we are taught to ſuffer our ſelues to be ordered and guided by the ſpirit of God in euery thing we take in hand, yea in all our thoughts, words and deeds; for this is the true note of euery child of God to be led by the ſpirit, Rom. 8.14. where the Apoſtle vſeth the ſame word that S. Luke doth ſpeaking of this leading of our Sauiour to be tempted: we muſt therefore labour to be of Dauids diſpoſition, to haue our harts pliable to all Gods teſtimonies; when God ſaid, Seek ye my face, Dauids hart anſwered, I ſeeke thy face O Lord, Pſal. 27.8. and thus doing we ſhall ſuffer our ſelues to be directed and guided by the Holy ghoſt, for he teacheth and guideth men by the word.

Temptations come not by chance.

Secondly, from this that Chriſt was led vnto temptatiō by the ſpirit of God; we learne, That temptations come not by chance, nor yet by the will and pleaſure of the Diuel only: for he could not touch Iob, or ought he had till God [a] gaue him leaue; nor enter into the heard of ſwine, till Chriſt ſaid, [f] go; but temptations come by Gods moſt iuſt permiſſion, and not without his ſpeciall prouidence & appointment. This combat of Chriſt with Satan was decreed of God by his ſpeciall appointment in his eternall counſell. And therefore was Chriſt led by the ſpirit to encounter with the Diuell, that he might performe this one worke of a mediator, namely in temptation ouercome him, who by temptation ouercame all mankind. And as God appointed this combate of our Sauiour, ſo hath he alſo ordained the temptations of euery Chriſtian and the circumſtances thereof: The theater or place of this combat is this preſent euill world; the actors are Satan and euery Chriſtian; the beholders are men and Angels, 1. Cor. 4.9. The vmpire and iudge is God himſelfe, who ouerruleth Satan, ſo as the iſſue cannot but be happie and bleſſed to thoſe that fight manfully; for hee caſteth away none that be mighty & valiant of courage, Iob. 36.1. he will giue an iſſue with the temptations, 1. Cor. 10.13. from whence we learne ſundry good inſtructions.

[a] Iob. 1.12.

[f] Mat. 8.32.

1 Firſt, when we are toſſed and tried by manifolde temptations, we muſt not thinke it ſtrange, but rather count it exceeding great ioy, Iam. 1.2. becauſe it is Gods bleſſed will and ordinance that Satan and euery Chriſtian ſhould enter combat and conflict, for the triall of his graces in them.

2 Secondly, we are hereby taught to labour with patience to beare all trials and afflictions, not vſing vnlawfull means to winde our ſelues out of them, becauſe they come by the ſpeciall prouidence of the Almighty.

3 Thirdly, Chriſt went not to be tempted till he was led by the ſpirit; therfore no man muſt wittingly put himſelfe into danger without a calling from God, leſt therein hee tempt God: indeed a man may be moued extraordinarily, to offer himſelfe into places of danger; thus [a] Paul went bound in the ſpirit to Hieruſalem, that is, he willingly followed the motion of the Holy ghoſt, which inwardly enforced him to go thither. And the ſame may be ſaid of many holy Martyrs, who though they might haue eſcaped by flight, yet did willingly offer themſelues into the hands of their perſecutours, and endured the violence of their torments, which wee muſt thinke they did by a ſpecial motion of the Holy ghoſt; otherwiſe, for a man to offer himſelfe into danger without all warrant from God, is to ſwarue from the practiſe of Chriſt in this place.

[a] Act. 20.22.

4 Fourthly, Chriſt being ledde by the ſpirit, did not ſeeke to ſhrowd himſelfe from this combate; ſo likewiſe if a man follow his calling according to Gods will, and thereupon fall into troubles and temptations, he may not ſeeke to eſcape them by neglecting his duty, but with courage and patience muſt inure himſelfe to beare them, wayting on the Lord by wel-doing for his deliuerance.

Queſt. Of abode in places haunted by euill ſpirits.

Heere it may well be asked, whether a man can lawfully and with good conſcience abide in thoſe places which are certainly knowen to be haunted with euill ſpirits? Anſw. Some indeed are ſo venturous & bold that they feare nothing: yet the trueth is, no man ought on his own head abide or lodge in ſuch places, vnleſſe it be within the compaſſe of his calling, or els haue a true extraordinary motion of Gods ſpirit ſo to doe; we are therefore therefore rather to auoid them, than wittingly and willingly thrust our selues into the danger of such places; for if God haue giuen liberty vnto Satan to possesse such places as haue been consecrated to Idolatry, or defiled by oppression and bloud, or such like abhominations, why should wee without warrant from God, put our selues into his hands? This also may serue to reproue those men who presume so much vpō their strong faith, that they neuer sticke to thrust themselues into most lewd company: but let such persons beware, for places of bad company are places of danger by reason of that power and liberty which Satan hath among them, for there he hath a throne, Reuel. 2.13. How then can it be, that they should cleane escape the infection of sinne, who do vsually conuerse with those that commit it without controlement? [b] He that walketh with the wise (sayth Salomon) shall be wise; but a companion of fooles shall be made woorse: so the words signifie: and therefore his counsell is, [c] not to consent when sinners entise vs: nor to [d] make friendship with the angry person, nor to go with the furious, least we learne their wayes and receiue destruction to our soules.

Fiftly, in this leading of Christ by the spirit, we learne a further thing: so long as Christ was a priuat man he liued with Ioseph and Mary a priuate life; but being baptized, and thereby installed in his office of Mediatour, he returnes not to Bethlem or Nazaret where he was borne and brought vp, but gets him presently into the wildernesse, there to encounter with Satan, and that by the motion of the spirit; wherein we may see, that all that are appointed and set apart by God for any speciall calling, are in some sort changed by his spirit, and as it were made other men. When Saul was anointed to be king, the text sayth, God gaue him another heart. 1. Sam. 10. 9. And when Dauid [e] was made of a shepheard a king, he was furnished for that place, as his behauiour shewed, which was such as did beseeme a king. Thus the Apostles of our Sauiour Christ, of poore fisher-men, altogether [f] vnlettered, by the gift of Christs calling, [g] were made able ministers of the New testament, and so became indeed fishers of men, Mark. 1. 17. Which serues to confute such men as plead extraordinary callings, as many haue done; some saying they were Elias, some Iohn Baptist, &c. For if these were such men, and had receiued such extraordinary callings, then should they withall haue beene endued with extraordinary gifts fit for those callings; but no such thing befalleth them, nay it is plaine, they remaine the same men they were before, without any change at all in respect of gifts fit for such persons as they pretend themselues to be. And to apply this to our selues; we are all by nature the children of wrath, and enemies vnto God; but by grace we are made Kings, Priests, and Prophets; Kings to rule ouer the world and the Diuell, in respect of their prouocations vnto sinne, as also to subdue in our selues our owne euill lusts and affections; Priests to offer vp spirituall sacrifices vnto God, as prayers and praises for his daily blessings; and Prophets to instruct our selues and others in the wayes of God, according to our gifts and calling. Now then it behoueth vs all to become new men, and to leade new liues fitting and sutable to our holy calling, giuing our selues wholly to the honour and seruice of God, shewing hereby, that we are hereunto called by his spirit of grace and holinesse, so shall we [h] walke woorthy of the Lord, and shew foorth the vertues of him that hath called vs, 1. III. Circumstance. How Christ went furnished into this place of combate: which though our Euangelist Matthew hath omitted, yet hath S. Luke plainly noted, saying, He was filled with the Holy ghost. Luk. 4. 1. If any shall say, this seemes to import that Christ wanted the the fulnesse of the spirit all the former part of his life, if now only after his baptisme he were filled therewith. I answer, This fulnesse of the spirit is ascribed vnto Christ after his baptisme, not as though he formerly susteined any want of the spirit, but because at his baptisme he receiued a greater measure of the spirit than he had before: for this we must know, that Christ was alwayes filled with the spirit; being an infant he had a full measure of gifts fit for his infancie, and still as his growth in yeres required moe graces of the spirit, he increased therein, having in his youth & in his riper yeres full measure of gifts fit for his estate in those times. And at his baptisme being inaugurated into his Mediatourship, he receiued such fulnesse of the spirit as was behouefull for so high an office, which because it was farre greater than before he needed, therefore is he now sayd to be filled with the Holy ghost: so that though Christ were alwayes full of grace, yet he increased therein as his estate and calling did require.

The vse. This serues to confute the Papists, who teach that Christ had all fulnesse of spirit in his infancie, euen from his conception and birth; and did not grow in grace at all, saue only experimentally, as he had occasion to manifest the same more and more in practise. But. S. Luke sayth plainly, that Iesus increased in wisdome, and stature, and in fauour with God and men, Luk. 2.52. Againe, Christ was like vnto man in all things, sinne only excepted, and therefore did increase in grace as man doth in gifts from time to time.

Further, Christ goeth thus furnished to this combate that he might be able to encounter with Satan hand to hand, and at the end giue him the finall ouerthrow. Thus he furnished Moses [a] for his ambassage vnto Pharaoh; and [b] Dauid for his combate with Goliah; Aholiab and [c] Bezaliel for the worke of the Tabernacle; and euery one whom God imployeth about any speciall worke, is furnished and fitted thereto of God with speciall gifts: whereby in euery age we may see whom God placeth in any calling, for they are well qualified for the duties thereof; and therefore those that want gifts meet for their callings, doe thrust in themselues thereto, and are not placed therein of God.

IV. Circumstance. Whither was Christ led to be tempted? namely, into the wildernesse, that is the place chosen of God for this combate. There be diuers opinions touching this place; some thinke it was a little wildernes betweene Ierusalem and Iericho; some the desert of Palestina; others, the great desert of Arabia, where Elias fasted forty dayes and forty nights; and where the Israelites wandered forty yeeres. But seeing the Holy-ghost doth not define what wildernes this was, we are not curiously to inquire after it, but only know it was a desert and solitary place. Let vs rather search into the reasons wherefore he chose a desert place for this combat; and they are diuers: First, because he was to worke our redemption in great humility, euen in the base and low estate of a seruant, for the satisfying of Gods iustice in that nature which had sinned, therefore he would not goe to Ierusalem there to shew his glory and Godhead, as a little before he was proclaimed in his baptisme; but he gets himselfe to a desert place void of all pompe and glory, where he meant to begin this great worke for vs by encountring with our chiefest aduersary. Secondly, hee chose this place for the more easie encountering with our aduersarie Satan, whom he was to ouercome for vs: for if Christ after his baptisme should haue shewed the glory of his Godhead, Satan durst not haue medled with him; therefore as the fisher hides the hooke and shewes the bait to entise the fish, so our Saniour CHRIST with the vaile of his flesh in this base estate and solitary place did couer the glory of his Godhead, that Satan seeing him only in this low degree, might be the more eager and bolde to set vpon him. Thirdly, Christ was willing to giue vnto his aduersarie the aduantage of the place, that therewithall he might giue him the greater ouerthrow; for the Diuell delights [a] in desert and forlorne places, and there he would chuse to practise his temptations, because in such places men want those helps and comforts which in society they may finde: hence Salomon sayth, [b] Woe be to him that is alone: yea, God himselfe sayd of man in the state of his innocency, [c] It is not good for man to be himselfe alone. And that Satan takes aduantage of such solitarinesse, appeares by his tempting of Eue, when she was apart

4 part from her husband, Ge. 3.1. Fourthly, the praiſe and honour of this victory ouer Satan, was peculiar to Chriſt, and not communicable to any creature: and therefore Chriſt choſe a deſert place for this combate apart from all humane ſociety, that no man might challenge any part of this glory to himſelfe, but that it might be wholly Chriſts, as of 5 right it was. Fiftly, he went into a deſert place for a time, that afterward he might thence returne with more credit, reuerence and authority to exerciſe his propheticall office: for we ſee by experience that when a man hath beene abroad for ſome time, he is receiued with more reuerence at his returne.

The vſe. From hence the church of Rome would fetch a ground & warrant for their monaſticall life; ſaying, that as Chriſt went apart into this deſert, ſo may men ſequeſter themſelues from ordinary ſocieties, and liue as Monks and Heremites in cloiſters, woods and deſerts. But this collection is abſurd, as may appeare by theſe reaſons: firſt, Chriſt went not thus apart on his owne head, but by the inſtinct and motion of the ſpirit of God: but the Papiſts admit and vndertake the ſtate of Eremiticall and Monaſticall life without any warrant in Gods word. Secondly, Chriſt did thus ſequeſter himſelfe but once for a certeine time: but with them, an Heremiticall eſtate is ordinary and perpetuall for their whole life. Thirdly, our Sauiour Chriſt faſted truly all the while he abode in the wilderneſſe: but Papiſts in their Cloiſters and Hermitages doe plentifully inioy the wealth of the world in great eaſe and liberty. And therefore howſoeuer ſolitarineſſe for a time may be commendable in ſome caſes, as to meditate on the works or word of God, as Iſaac did, Gen. 24.63. or for the exer-
[d] Luk. 5.16. ciſe of [d] prayer and faſting in more earneſt maner; yet the Eremites life being a perpetuall forſaking of humane ſocieties, is neither warrantable by Gods word, nor commendable in Gods child.

V. Circumſtance. The end why Chriſt went into the deſert; namely, to be tempted of the Diuel: wherein obſerue three points; How hee was tempted; wherefore, and by whom. For the firſt; To Tempt, in Scripture is aſcribed to God, to man, and to the Diuell: God tempteth man, when he prooueth him; that is, when he maketh manifeſt what is in his heart for ſinne or grace, which before were hid to the world: thus God tempted Abraham in the offering vp of his ſonne, Gen. 22.1. and Chriſt, the ruler, Luk. 18.22. Man tempteth God, when he prooueth by vnlawfull meanes whether God be ſo powerfull, iuſt and mercifull as the Scriptures doe affirme him to be: and thus the Iſraelites tempted God, when they required meat for their luſt, and ſayd, can God prepare a table in the wilderneſſe? Pſal. 78.18.19. The Diuell tempteth when he allureth vnto ſinne, by inward ſuggeſtions or outward obiects; and hereof muſt we vnderſtand Chriſts tempting in this place; to wit, that he was led into the wilderneſſe for this end that Satan might aſſault him, and vſe what meanes he could to bring him vnto ſinne. If any ſhall thinke it was too much derogatory to the dignitie of Chriſt to be thus tempted. I anſwer; If it had ſo pleaſed him, Chriſt could haue confounded the Diuell with the leaſt word of his mouth: for as he is Creator of heauen and earth; ſo Satan had no power to tempt him, for God can not be tempted with euill, Iam. 1.13. But here Chriſt ſtood in our roome and ſted (as he did vpon the Croſſe) encountring with Satan for vs; as if we in our owne perſons had been tempted. This therefore muſt be vnderſtood as a part of Chriſtes humiliation in his manhood, whereto he ſubiected himſelfe for our ſakes, otherwiſe the Diuell could not haue tempted him. Obiect. This ſtands not with the holineſſe of Chriſt as he is man to be tempted of Satan? Anſw. Yes, he might be tempted of Satan without ſinne, as our firſt parents were before their fall: this will plainly appeare by comparing Chriſt with other men in their temptations.

The Diuell in tempting a man to ſin, firſt conuayes into his minde, either by inward ſuggeſtion, or by outward obiect, the motion or cogitation of that ſinne which he would haue him to commit.

[a] Ioh.13.27. mit. Thus he tempted Iudas, by [a] casting into him this euill thought, Iudas betray thy Master. And so dealeth hee with Christ in this temptation, he conueyed to his mind or apprehension, the vnrighteous cogitations of vnbeleefe, idolatry, and couetousnesse; yet so as Christ receiued them not, but with all power of grace repelled them. Secondly, as Satan conuayes euill suggestions into mens minds, so the same are full of trouble, sorrow, & vexation, at least to the godly: for when Satan presseth vpon man his temptations, the whole man is disquieted, his thoughts and affections are troubled, and his heart is vexed. And this also was in Christ, he felt sorrow & molestation in himselfe through these temptations, as appeareth by his Auant Satan vpon his last assault. And thus farre was Christ tempted like vnto men. Thirdly, in temptations vsually be corrupt motions; for though a man do not approue, neither enterteine with delight, the Diuels temptations, yet shall he hardly keepe himselfe from the staine and taint of sin, because the imaginations of his owne heart are naturally euill. Now herein Christ differeth from all men in temptation; for being perfectly holy in his humane nature, he did not in the least measure receiue any corruption into his minde, but by the power of grace did repel them more strongly than they were offered. Put a burning match to tinder or gunpowder, and it will kindle presently; but put it into water, and that will quench it straight: so it fareth in temptations; our corrupt hearts like tinder do easily suffer corruption to kindle in vs; but Christes most holy heart did presently like water quench the euill of Satans motions. And thus we see how Christ was tempted, and yet without sinne.

Similitude.

The vse. Hence we may obserue a good direction for their comfort that are troubled with blasphemous thoghts. Among other temptations that befall men in Gods church, the Diuell doth mightily assault some men by casting into their minds most fearefull motions of blasphemie against God the Father, the Sonne and the Holy-ghost, whereby he doth greatly astonish them and bring them to despaire. Now the ground of their stay and comfort hence is this: There be incident to the minde of man two kinds of euill thoughts: First, such as arise from the flesh, that is, from our corrupt nature; and the very first motions of these are sinnes, forbidden in the tenth commandement. Secondly, there be others that rise not inwardly from the flesh, but are from without conuayed into the minde by the diuell, as these most horrible blasphemies against God, which would make a godly heart to tremble and quake once to thinke vpon. Now these are our heauy crosses indeed, when we be assaulted with them, but the diuels sinnes wholly, and become not ours, till we receiue them by some degree of delight or assent, as may hence appeare: for Christ was tempted to infidelity, couetousnesse and idolatry, yet his holy heart receiued them not, and so they neuer became his sinnes.

The second point to be considered in this circumstance is, wherefore Christ was tempted: for it may seeme strange that Iesus Christ the sonne of God, yea very God, equal with the Father, should be tempted. The reasons therefore that mooued him to be tempted are these: Reasons why Christ was tempted.

First, that he might foile the Diuell at his owne weapon; for the Diuell ouercame the first Adam in temptation, therfore Christ the second Adam would in temptation ouercome him. Secondly, that in his example he might giue vs direction whereby to know the speciall temptations wherewith the Diuell assaults the Church, as also how to withstand and repell the same: for this cause no doubt hath the spirit of God so distinctly set downe Christs preparation to this combate, Satans seuerall assaults, and Christes victory ouer them all: which plainly confuteth the common opinion of ignorant people, who thinke those that are tempted by the Diuell to be most vile and wicked men, such as haue forsaken God, and therefore God hath forsaken them; but beholde Christ Iesus the most holy person that euer was, euen the holy one of God, was tempted pted of Satan, and that exceeding sore, hauing the same troubles and vexations thereby arising in his minde that wee haue, insomuch as the Angels came to minister cõfort vnto him, vers. 11. Gods dearest children therefore may and must be tempted, for that is no token of a childe of wrath, vnlesse we will say, that Christ Iesus was the childe of wrath, which once to thinke were most blasphemous. Thirdly Christ was tempted, that 3 he might be a mercifull high priest, vnto them that are tempted, Heb. 2. 17. 18. for himselfe knowing the trouble and anguish of temptation, must needes in a more compassionate fellow-feeling of their miseries bee readie to helpe and comfort his members when they are tempted.

The third point is, the author of Christs temptations, to wit, the diuell: the name Diuell signifieth a cauiller, a slanderer and an accuser: He is an accuser three waies; he accuseth God to man; man to God; and man to man. First God to man; as when he told Eue, they must not die though they did eate of the forbidden fruit, Genes. 3. 4. which was as much as if he had said, God doth but deceiue you with that threatning, yee shall not die at all. Secondly he accuseth men to God, and therefore is called the accuser [b] of the brethren: and our [c] aduersarie who goeth about like a roaring lyon: which word aduersarie signifies one that enters plea or suite against vs: thus he dealt against godly Iob, by the Lordes owne confession Iob. 2. 3. Thirdly, he accuseth man to man, by ingendring vngodly and vncharitable surmises and suspicions in one man against another, and in causing one man to slander and iniurie another; and for this cause is he said to worke in the children of disobedience, Ephes. 2. 2. and their wisdome is said to be diuellish, who haue bitter enuying and strife in their heart, Iam. 3. 14. 15.

[b] Apoc. 12. 9.
[c] 1 Pet. 5. 8. ἀντίδικος.

The vse. From this very name we are 1 to be admonished of two things: First to beware of false accusing, tale-bearing and slandering; for in these practises we put on the diuels name, and shew foorth the infection of his nature: Paul telling [d] 1. Tim. 3. 6. Timothie, [d] that a minister must not be a nouice, lest he be puffed vp and fall into the condemnation of the diuell, vseth such a word for the diuels name as signifieth a false accuser or slanderer, to shew vnto vs that such a one is a diuell incarnate: And yet this is the common sinne of this age, to speake euill and to backbite, when they speake one of another. Se- 2 condly, hereby we are taught to beware, how at any time or any way we diswade any one from embracing or obeying true religion: for heerein we shew our selues to be the children of the diuell. When Elymas the sorcerer would haue turned away Sergius Paulus from the faith, Paul [e] cals him, full of all subtilty [e] Act. 13. 10.
and mischiefe, the childe of the diuell. And this I doe the rather obserue, because it is a vsuall thing to draw others backe from the power of godlinesse; though not in plaine termes, yet partly in reproches and partly by bad example of life. Now all such had need to looke to their estate, for the children of the diuell are like to haue their portion with the diuell and his angels. And thus much for the author of Christs temptations; as also for the first part of Christs preparation to this combat.

VERSE 2. And when he had fasted fortie daies and fortie nights, he was afterward hungrie.

HEere is the second part of Christs preparation to this combate, namely his abode in the wildernesse, which is set out vnto vs by foure arguments: I. by his fasting forty daies and fortie nights, noted in the words of this verse. II. by his abode with wilde beasts, noted by S. Mark. chap. 1. 12. III. by his enduring of temptations within the space of these fortie daies and fortie nights, Luk. 4. 2. though in particular those be not set downe by any Euangelist. IV. by his hunger after fortie daies fasting, in the end of this verse. Of these in order.

I. Circumstance. Christs fasting fortie daies and forty nights: There be three kindes of fasts, if we take the word in a generall sense: first the daily fast of temperance and sobrietie, whereby wee vse Three kinds of fasts. 1

Gods

Gods creatures for our sustenance with that moderation and abstinence, that we rather giue lesse to natures appetite, then that which it desireth: This Christ
[f] Luk.21.34. inioineth to euery Christian, [f] take heed lest at any time your hearts be oppressed
2 with surfeting and drunkennesse. The second kinde of fast is, the religious abstinence of Gods church from all meates and drinks for a time, for the furtherance of their praiers, when they humble themselues vnto God for the preuenting or remouing of some heauie iudgement:
[g] Iudg.20.26. thus the Iewes fasted, [g] sometime for
1.Sam.7.6. one day, sometime for three daies and three nights, Hester 4.16. yea sometime
[h] 1.Sam.31. for [h] seuen daies together; but then 13.1.Chro. it is like they receiued some sustenance
10.12. in the euening: for so Daniel fasted for three weekes of daies, eating no plea-
3 sant things, Daniel 10.2.3. but of neither of these must Christs fasts heere be vnderstood. The third kinde of fast is miraculous, done by the power of God restraining the appetite for many daies togither without meate or drinke, be-
[i] Exod.34.28. yond the power of nature: Thus [i] Moses fasted fortie daies and fortie nights in mount Sina, where he enioied the presence of God so long. And so did
[k] 1.King.19.8. Elias [k] fast in mount Horeb; and our Sauiour Christ in this wildernesse. We reade indeed that Paul in his conuersion fasted three daies and three nights eating nothing, Act. 9.9. So did the Iewes with Hester and her maides, Hest. 4.16. And experience teacheth that a sicke man may liue seuen or nine daies together without meate or drinke, yea (as some learned Physitians write) foureteene daies: And Pauls companions in his iourney to Rome, ate very little or nothing at all, for foureteene daies, for the [l] Act.27.33. words are plaine, [l] eating nothing: And it may be so, sith the like hath beene found true by experience in our age. And this is the longest that a man can fast and liue, to wit foureteene, or fifteene, or seuenteene daies; for so much is recorded of some, that after so long abstinence haue liued, though with some weakenesse of nature: but for a man ordinarily, being of good constitution of body to fast fortie daies and fortie nights togither, is impossible. Indeed it hath beene auouched [m] that a man might fast monethes, yea a whole yeare togither without meat or drinke and yet liue; but we may perswade our selues it is not true. Now our Sauiour Christ (which is yet more) during this fast felt no faintnesse nor weaking of his body, as we ordinarily do with a little abstinence, so that his fast was not ordinary but miraculous altogither.

[m] Iubart. Paracel. 2. decad. 1.

The reasons why Christ fasted thus long in the wildernesse may be these; Reasons why Christ fasted fortie daies.
First that he might performe his mini- 1
stery, which now he was to begin, with more reuerence and authority: for this cause would God haue Moses to fast forty daies and forty nights before he deliuered the law written in two tables of stone vnto the people; and so must Elias do, before he did restore religion in his daies: Secondly, that it might ap- 2 peare he was no whit inferiour to Moses and Elias: and Thirdly, that he might 3 shew his full consent with them. Quest. Seeing Christ did farre excell Moses and Elias, why did he not exceed them in the length of his fast, for threescore daies or a whole yeare? Answ. Hee did it not through want of power to haue fasted longer, but because he would not giue occasion thereupon that any should call into question the truth of his manhood, which might easily haue happened, if he had fasted a whole yeere together.

The vse. Heereon the Church of Rome would build their Lent fast; but very fondly; for first Christ did not thus fast to giue vs example to follow him heerein, but to prepare himselfe to the great worke of his ministery; secondly, there is great difference between Christs fast and theirs; Christ fasted thus but once, and that by the instinct of the Holy Ghost; they keepe their fast yearely, and that on their owne heads: Christs was a true fast, without all meat or drink; but theirs is a mocke-fast, for they eat the finest fishes and other dainties, and drinke wines, wherein is as much nourishment to the body, and as good as in flesh; neither can they iustly build it on the practise of the primitiue Church, for they vsed to fast (at least in some places) but two or three daies before Easter:

Antepaſchale Ieiunium.
* Zanch. de redempt. l. 1. cap. 19. in theſi de quadrag. Ieiunio.

and their Lent faſt was not ordained nor impoſed til many yeares after Chriſt; * ſo as euery one might chooſe whether he would faſt, or not.

II. Circumſtance. S. Marke doth further ſet out Chriſts abode in the wilderneſſe by his being and conuerſing with wild beaſts, Mark. 1. 13. which ſome thinke Chriſt did for this end, that wild beaſts might come to him and doe him homage due to their Creator & Gouernour: but this is a deuice of man without likelihood of truth; for howſoeuer Chriſt in himſelfe deſerued all homage and reuerence of all his creatures; yet becauſe he abode among wild beaſts to be abaſed and humbled in the low eſtate of a ſeruant, therefore it is not like he went to receiue homage from them. The true cauſe rather is this: we find in Scripture that among the Iewes were two ſorts of deſerts; one, in part peopled and inhabited, hauing heere and there cities and villages; in ſuch a deſert was Iohn Baptiſt borne, and did baptize and preach; that the propheſie of * Iſay might be fulfilled, The voice of a crier in the wildernes, make ſtraight the way of the Lord. The other, not inhabited at all by men, being a place of abode only for wild beaſts, as Lions, Beares, Tigers, Woolues, &c. which liued therein continually: Now into ſuch a deſert as this, was our ſauiour Chriſt led by the ſpirit, and made his abode among ſuch wild beaſts; which circumſtance is therefore noted to giue vs to vnderſtand that in this combate, our Sauiour Chriſt had no aid, protection, ſuccour, helpe, or comfort from any man or other creature whatſoeuer; for by nature his companions were ſo farre from being an helpe and comfort vnto him, that they would rather ſeeke to deuoure him. Whereby we plainly ſee that the praiſe of victory in this combate, is proper to Chriſt alone, and not communicable to any creature whatſoeuer.

* Iſay 40.3.

The vſe. In this eſtate of Chriſt in this wilderneſſe, we may behold the condition of Chriſts militant church; to wit, that it is in this world as in a wilderneſſe and deſert of wild beaſts; for during their abode on earth, Gods children liue with men, who in diſpoſition and affection are like Woolues, Beares, Tigers, Lions and Cockatrices, vntill ſuch time as the Holy Ghoſt by grace ſhall turne their hearts, as we may plainly ſee, Iſay 11. 6. 7. 8. in regard whereof they muſt arme themſelues with patience againſt manifold aſſaults and vexations, comforting their hearts with this conſideration, that Chriſt their head hath vndergone this eſtate before them.

III. Circumſtance. S. Luke [b] obſerueth, that while Chriſt abode in the wilderneſſe, within the ſpace of thoſe forty daies and forty nights, he was tempted of the Diuell, before the three great temptations: the words are plaine: And was there fortie daies tempted of the diuell: And when they were ended, then the diuell ſaid, &c. what theſe temptations were, either for matter or forme, the holy Ghoſt hath not ſet downe; and yet we may probably thinke they were more milde and gentle temptations then thoſe three which are ſet downe; the diuell making them as it were an entrance to his ſtrongeſt and moſt dangerous temptations; for his maner is, when it makes for his aduantage, not to ſhewe his violence and extremitie at the firſt, but to proceed by degrees, and by little & little to inſinuate himſelfe till he haue gotten his beſt aduantage, and then wil he ſhew the ſtrength of his malice. Thus he dealt with Cain, firſt he prouokes him to anger and malice againſt his brother, becauſe his brothers ſacrifice was accepted, and his reiected; then hauing ſetled hatred in his heart, he neuer leaues till he had cauſed him in his rage to ſlay his brother; and yet he ſtaies not there, but after brings him to deſpaire of Gods mercy, in ſo much as he cried out, [c] my ſinne is greater then I can beare. Thus alſo he dealt with Iudas; firſt he caſt this euill thought into his heart, Iudas betraie thy maſter, and when he had gotten entertainment for that (for doubtleſſe Iudas would not yeeld to ſo vile a thought at the firſt motion) then he cauſed him to put it in execution, whereupon in fearefull deſpaire he brought him to hang himſelfe. This is the ſubtiltie of the old ſerpent; firſt he conuaies one claw or talant into a mans heart, and then another; another; after that he gets in his head, and so at length windes in all his bodie: Thus he assaied to doe with Christ, and so will he continue towards all Gods children. Which should teach vs to labour to be strong in the Lord, and wise in his word, that so we may stand against all his assaults: Yea, this must moove vs to a speciall watch through the whole course of our liues against the occasions of sinnes, that we may cut off temptations in the beginning, because it is Satans craft, not to spit his venom at the first, but to sugar his temptations at the beginning that no danger may appeare till he haue conueied into vs the bane and poison of our soules.

IV. Circumstance. Christs abode in the wildernesse is further set out by his hunger, in the end of this verse; He was afterward hungry: that is, after he had fasted fortie daies and fortie nights by the power of his Godhead, then he began to wax hungrie. But some will say, this stands not with the glory and maiestie of the sonne of God to be hungrie, for his flesh is meate indeed, and his blood is drinke indeed. Ioh.6.53. Answer. Christ was content to lay aside his glory and maiestie, and to take vpon him our base and fraile nature, becomming like vnto vs in all things saue sinne; now in this his abasement and humilitie he had not onely a true soule and body, but the true faculties thereof, as vnderstanding, will, memorie, &c. and though his body was free from personall infirmities, as palsie, gout, dropsie, or such like, yet he was subiect to such infirmities as agree to the nature of man, as hunger, thirst, wearinesse, &c. Yea this was one part of his humiliation to become not onely man, but man with infirmities: and therefore though he could by the power of his Godhead haue preserued himself fortie yeares without meate or drinke as well as fortie daies; yet that he might abase himselfe to the lowest degree of a seruant, he was content to sustaine the infirmitie of his humane nature in being an hungred: And that for these causes.

Reasons why Christ was an hungred.

First, to confirme vnto vs the truth of his manhood; for some man might say, it was an easie thing for him to fast fortie daies and fortie nights, seeing he had not a true body, but onely the shew and shadow of a body: therfore to shew that he was true man, and had a true naturall body as we haue, he was content to sustaine hunger, as we doe, and that truely. Secondly, that hereby he might cast an obiect before the diuell, to cause him to be the more eager and violent in his temptations, and to shew his malice in full measure against him; for by vertue of his office whereto he was now called, Christ was to encounter with Satan our common enemie, and therefore giues him not onely the aduantage of the place, but also the opportunity of estate, that Satan perceiuing his infirmitie of bodily hunger, might thereby be emboldened to giue the more violent assault vpon him. And thus much of the second part of Christs preparation to his combat.

VERSE 3. Then came to him the Tempter, and said, If thou be the Sonne of God, command that these stones may be made bread.

HEere beginnes this strange combat betweene our Sauiour Christ and the diuell, consisting of three great conflicts: The first whereof is conteined in this verse and the next, being indeed the greatest of them al, as after shal appeare. In this temptation obserue these three things: first satans preparation to this conflict: secondly the temptation it selfe: thirdly, Christs answer and repulse made thereunto.

Satans preparation.

I. Point: The diuels preparation is in these wordes: Then came to him the Tempter, and said: heerein obserue foure things; first, the title giuen to Satan the author of this temptation, the Tempter; so Paul calleth him, 1. Thess. 3.5. I sent to know of your faith, lest the Tempter had tempted you in any sort: And satan is called the Tempter, because his continuall studie and practise hath beene and is, by all meanes to tempt all men; he omits no times, neither spares any paines day or night, but by all meanes seekes to draw men from God, and to bring them to destruction: the consideration wher-of should moue vs to the practise of these duties.

Vse 1. First, to be watchfull in all maner of prayers and supplication against Satan, for the gratious protection of God against his assaults: If any of vs had our dwelling among Lions, Beares, or Tigers, which were hungerbit, and therefore would seeke greedily for their pray, we would be sure neuer to go out of our dwelling houses, without preparation for rescue & defence, whereby we might auoid their danger. Well, though we haue no such wilde beasts to endanger our bodies; yet our soules are dayly assaulted by a more deadly enemie, euen the diuell, whose continuall studie and practise is by temptation to deuour vs, 1. Pet. 5. 8. and therefore we must alwaies be watchfull against temptations, putting vpon vs the whole armour of God, that we may be able to stand against his assaults.

2. Secondly, as it is the Diuels practise alwaies to tempt, and to seeke to draw men from God, so becausse we must be vnlike him in all things, we must draw neere to God in the practise of all good duties, Iames 4. 7. 8. Resist the diuell and he will flie; draw neere to God, and he will draw neere to you: the coniunction of these two duties shewes, that the neerer we come to God, the more we oppose our selues to Satan: now he that commeth vnto God must beleeue, Heb. 11. 6. and [a] 1. Tim. 4. 7. therefore by faith must we [a] exercise our selues vnto godlinesse, as Paul exhorteth Timothie; and vnlesse we thus striue to be vnlike him, we shall neuer be able to withstand his temptations.

3 Thirdly, we must hence learne to beware of the practise of seducers, in seeking to draw backe others from the loue or practise of religion, or in hindring the good meanes whereby religion is begun and furthered in men; for if either by endeuour in action, or by bad example we shall thus doe, doubtlesse we become tempters, and the children of the diuell: for to tempt and draw to sinne is the propertie of Satan, and he that in tempting fulfils the lusts of Satan, must needs be his childe, Ioh. 8. 44. hence it was, that our Sauiour Christ cals Peter Satan, when he went about to dissuade him from that worke for which his Father had sanctified him and sent him into this world, saying, Get behinde me Satan, Adam. 16. 23. And when Elymas sought to turne away the Deputie from the faith, Paul cals him enemy to all righteousnesse, full of all subtiltie, and childe of the diuell, Act. 13. 10.

The second thing in this preparation is, the time when Satan began to tempt our Sauiour Christ in a more strong and violent maner, noted in this word Then, that is, when Christ had now fasted fortie dayes and fortie nights, and was an hungred; when the diuell saw Christ not onely to be alone in the wildernesse, but also perceiued that hee was afflicted with hunger, and so the more weake being in the low estate of a miserable man, Then he prepares to assault Christ with a most violent temptation.

The vse. This discouereth vnto vs the deepe policie of Satan in making choise of the fittest time for his assaults: he will not tempt all men at all times, neither alwaies with the greatest temptations; but he forecasts for the time of mans greatest weakenesse, and thereto he reserueth his strongest assaults: Now vsually a man is most weake, when he is vnder some grieuous affliction; either in bodie, minde, or both; or when he lieth in the panges of death: these times doth Satan obserue; and keep his strongest temptations against they come, as doth notablie appeare by his dealing with Christ, not onely at this time when he was an hungred, but also and especially at his passion; for the Scripture saith, He [b] spoiled principalities and powers vpon the crosse: wherby is apparent, that the Diuell with his greatest power did then assault him, thinking either then or neuer to giue him the foile, when as he did sustain the wrath of God due vnto the sinnes of man; and so will he handle all the members of Christ; in their greatest extremities they shall be sure to feele Satans deepest malice, vnlesse God restraine his power. Which must teach vs in the day of peace and strength, to prepare against the day of weakenesse by any affliction or by death it selfe, that so we may by Gods grace be able to stand against the rage of Satan; for then he will be sure most eagerly to seeke our ruine, and vnlesse we prepare before hand, we shall neuer be able to stand: Now our best preparation is to come to heare the words of Christ and to do the same, for then, though the winds blow, the raine fall, the waues beat, and Satan do his worst, yet being built vpon the rock Christ Iesus, we shall neuer fall, Matth. 7. 24. 25.

Satans policie in tempting.

[b] Coloss. 2. 14. 15.

The third thing in this preparation, is the occasion of Satans onset at this time, namely, Christs bodily hunger, as the knitting of this verse to the former will plainly shew, for Christ being an hungred, Satan came vnto him and tempted him. He could not find in Christs most holy manhood any blemish of sinne, or inclination thereto whereon to build his temptation; yet such is his malice, that rather then Christ should escape his hands, he will take occasion from the infirmitie of his nature in bodily hunger to prouoke and allure him vnto sinne.

Satan grounds his temptations on some thing in vs.

Heerein we learne a speciall point; namely, that the diuell will haue some ground in vs for those temptations wherewith he doth assault vs; for as we may see by his dealing here with Christ, he obserues not onely the inclination of mans heart and soule, but the state and constitution of the body, that if either body or minde will afoord him the least aduantage, thereon hee will be sure to take occasion to tempt. If we regard the seed and root of sinne, it is true that euery man hath all sinnes in him, but yet through the worke of God, restraining corruption in some, and renewing grace in others, it comes to passe, that each man is more inclined naturally to some sinnes then to others, which thing Satan doth obserue most diligently; and as an enemie that besiegeth a citie will goe about it and espie where the wall is weakest and most fit for his entrance, and there will be sure to giue his strongest onset; and as a man that would strike fire with a flint, will turne it about in his hand, to see what part is fittest; euen so the diuell, he goes about a man, and as it were turnes him to and fro, to spie out his weakenesse, and to what sinnes he is most inclined, and there he will be sure to tric him often, and to assault him with greatest violence. Example: If a man be impatient of pouertie, he will seeke to carry him to picking and stealing: If a man be prone to couetousnesse, he will prouoke him to fraud and oppression: If he be enclined to ambition, Satan will puffe him vp with pride and vainglory: nay, which is farre more, Satan will take occasion from the vetie constitution of a mans bodie to draw him vnto sinne; if choler be predominant in him, Satan will labour to sture him vp to wrath, anger, and furie, and if he can, to bloodshed and murther: If a man be of a sanguine complexion, Satan will seeke to carrie him to immoderate mirth, and to excesse in pastimes, pleasures and delight, that if it be possible he may drowne him therein, whether they be good or bad: If a man be melancholike, Satan will sometime take occasion by that humour to strike him with exceeding sadnes, with terrors and feares; and otherwhile to inroxicate his braine with strange fantasies and delusions, causing a man to thinke himselfe to be Elias, Iohn Baptist, Christ, &c. So as it is true which an ancient Diuine saith of this humour, that it is the Diuels bait wherewith hee sports himselfe. See the experience heereof in the * lunatike person, whose disease was, to be exceedingly troubled certaine times of the moneth, by reason of melancholie oppressing the braine. Now Satan (as it there appeares) tooke aduantage of that humour to abuse him most fearefully, not onely in making him deafe and dumbe, but also causing him to cast himselfe into fire and water. So that looke how many sinnes and infirmities we haue in vs, so manie darts we carry about vs, wherewith Satan will seeke to wound vs. He taketh ground or occasion from vs, of all the aduantage he hath against vs; his temptations are like fire and bellowes, and our infirmities and corruptions are wood and fewell.

* Mat. 17 15.

The vse. I. Heere then we may behold our miserable estate by reason of sinne; for thereby it comes to passe that we we beare about vs those darts, wherewith the diuel doth wound vs. And sith Satans craft and malice is such to take aduantage from vs, for to worke our wo, we must labour the more diligently, to be throughly acquainted with our naturall dispositions and inclinations, yea with our bodilie infirmities, for the Diuell will search vs; and when wee haue truly found out our own estate, we must set a strong watch and guard about our owne hearts in respect of our infirmities, and so shall we be the better able to breake the necke of Satans temptations.

The fourth thing in this preparation is, Satans comming to Christ; The Tempter came vnto him: By which phrase it is probable, though not certaine, that the Diuell tooke vpon him the forme of some creature, and so appeared vnto Christ; thus he came to Eue in Paradise, abusing the serpent to further his assault against the first Adam: And it is like, that in his combat with the second Adam, he came in the shape of some creature, for otherwise he could not properly be said to come and speake. Some indeed thinke that these temptations were inward in minde onely, and by vision; others thinke they were altogether visible and done actually; but the safest way is to holde that they were in part actually done in bodily maner, and partly shewed in vision. And thus much for the preparation to the first conflict.

II. Point. The temptation it selfe: conteining matter of great importance, being indeed the maine temptation of all, in these words: If thou be the Sonne of God command that these stones be made bread. The Diuell being well prouided for time and place, and aduantaged also by Christs bodily hunger, doth heere assault our Sauiour Christ like a cunning Sophister, and frame his argument Syllogistically, thus:

Satans Sophistrie.

If thou be the sonne of God, thou must make these stones bread.
But thou must not make these stones bread:
Therefore thou art not the sonne of God.

The ground of this temptation is this: It is no reason that the Sonne of God should starue for want of food; but thou must starue vnlesse thou canst make these stones bread: and therefore vnlesse thou canst do so, thou maist perswade thy selfe it was but a false voice which thou heardest from heauen; This is my welbeloued Sonne, &c.

The scope and drift of Satan in this temptation standes in two things; First hee labours to ouerthrow the faith of Christ. Secondly, to bring him to a practise of vnbeleefe. For the first, By faith I meane, a gift or grace in Christ, whereby as he was man, he beleeued his Fathers words to be true, which said, This is my beloued Sonne in whom I am well pleased: whereby wee may see, what the Diuell aimes at principally in his temptations against Gods children; for these his assaults against our Sauiour Christ are set down for our instruction in this behalfe. Satans maine drift then in temptation is to ouerthrow our faith, whereby wee beleeue euerie part and parcell of Gods word to be true; See this in his tempting of Eue; first he labours to weaken her faith in the truth of Gods threatning, which done, he easily brought her to actuall disobedience in eating the forbidden fruit. The same course hee holdeth at this day; first he will seeke to nuzzell men in ignorance, that he may keepe them in vnbeliefe: if he faile that way, then will he endeuour to plunge their soules into some damnable errour and heresie; and by one of these meanes doth he destroy the faith of many; for while a man remaines in ignorance he can haue no faith; and if he misse of the truth of God, he wants ground for his faith. Now the reason why the Diuell labours so much against our faith is, because we cannot truely relie vpon Gods mercie, nor depend vpon his prouidence, nor yeeld any acceptable obedience to his commandements, vnlesse we beleeue his word.

Satan seeks the ruine of our faith.

More particularly we are to obserue that speciall branch of Gods word which the Diuell would haue Christ not to beleeue; euen that voice of his Father, which a little before Christ heard from heauen at his baptisme; This is my welbeloued Sonne in whom I am well pleased: And this hath the holy Ghost recorded in great wisedome and mercie to Gods

Church; for heereby doth appeare a main drift of Satan against Christs members in his temptations, namely to make them doubt of their adoption, and to destroy this perswasion in them, that they are the sonnes and daughters of God; for if heerein he spared not the head, doubtlesse the members shall not escape his hands. This appeares by his vsual assault against them, specially when God shall lay vpon them any lingring crosse or affliction, either in mind, in body, or in goods; then the diuel will suggest this into their minds; If thou werst the childe of God, he would neuer lay his hand vpon thee so long a time and in so grieuous maner; neuer was any child of God in this case that thou art in: But God laies his hand thus heauie on thee; and therefore thou maiest perswade thy selfe that thou art not the child of God.

Satan seekes to deprive vs of assurance of adoption.

The vse. The consideration heereof must moove vs aboue all things to labour for assurance of our adoption, euen to haue our consciences assured out of Gods word, that we are the sonnes and daughters of God in Christ. The diuels drift is to ouerthrow this perswasion in vs, and therefore our endeuour must be, to confirme and settle our hearts heerein. This is the charge of the holy Ghost vpon euerie childe of God; 2. Pet. 1. 10. Giue all diligence to make your calling and election sure, that is, get the assurance thereof sealed vp in your hearts, by the comfortable fruition and practise of the sauing graces of Gods spirit, ioyning vertue with your faith, and with your vertue knowledge, with your knowledge temperance, and with temperance patience, and with patience godlinesse, and with godlinesse brotherly kindnesse, and with brotherly kindnesse loue, vers. 5. 6. 7. And indeed if we would haue true peace and comfort in euery estate whether aduersity or prosperitie, let vs labour for the knowledge of our adoption: This will be our ioy in want, in wealth, in bondage, in freedome, in sicknesse, in health, in life and in death. Heerein is that ioy of Christ which neuer can be taken from vs, Ioh. 16. 22. We cannot doe the Diuell a greater pleasure, then to neglect the getting of this assurance; for heereupon he will take occasion (specially in time of distresse) fearefully & dangerously to seeke to breake the necke of our soules; he cares not much otherwaies what men professe, and what knowledge and other common giftes of the spirit they haue, so that they want this blessed assurance; and therefore with the Apostle Paul, we must account all other things to be but dresse and dung in respect of this excellent knowledge of Christ, to be our Sauiour and Redeemer. True it is, that vnto many this exhortation will seeme needlesse; for ignorant persons that haue nothing in them but meere presumption, will bragge most of this perswasion; but they that haue felt the smart of temptation, doe know what it is that will stand vs in stead, euen that assurance only which is rightly founded vpon the word of God; and therefore forsaking the vaine conceits of our ignorance, let vs with all diligence vnfeinedly endeuour to get this resolution; if we cannot of our selues attaine vnto it, we must vse the direction and helpe of Gods faithfull Ministers; for howsoeuer it pleaseth some to thinke otherwise, yet this is the vndoubted truth of God, that a man in this life may ordinarilie be resolued and assured of his saluation.

Phil. 3. 8.

The second thing which the Diuel aimed at in this temptation, was to bring Christ to a practise of vnbeleefe, namely in want of bread to turne stones into bread, for the present satisfying of his hunger; for the Diuell would needs perswade our Sauior Christ that he must haue bread to saue his life, and therefore in the want of bread would haue brought him to this distrustfull course, to turne stones into bread.

Satan would bring Christ to a practise of vnbeliefe.

And as the Diuell heere deales with Christ, so he allures to doe with all his members; as he labors to worke vnbeliefe in their hearts, so he seeks to bring them to the practise of vnbeliefe in their liues. See the truth hereof in the course of the world; If a man oppressed with outward want and pouertie: the Diuell will tell him, he must needs liue, and therefore will perswade him to robbe and steale and to fish for his liuing. If a man be ſicke, and want preſent helpe in lawfull meanes, or els be afflicted ſomewhat extraordinarily, then will the Diuell mooue him to ſeeke to Wizards and Witches, ſuggeſting this into him by one meanes or other, that they can do more good in ſuch a caſe then all the Phyſitians in the world. This is a moſt vile practiſe of vnbeliefe, and yet too common in the world, wherein men for the remouall of ſome outward euill, will not ſticke to hazzard the loſſe of their ſoules. We therefore muſt labour to be acquainted with theſe wiles of Satan, and by the practiſe of faith in our liues, labour to expreſſe the power of faith in our hearts, as in all manner of godly conuerſation, ſo eſpecially in vſing only lawfull meanes for our reliefe in the time of miſerie and diſtreſſe.

But to come more particularly to the words of this temptation; If thou be the Sonne of God command theſe ſtones, &c. It may be demaunded, why the Diuell ſhould make choiſe of this queſtion wherewith to tempt our Sauiour Chriſt, rather then any other? Anſwer. The reaſons hereof may be theſe: Firſt, he knew well, that if Chriſt were the true and proper ſonne of God, then he muſt needs be the true Meſſias; and if he were that anointed of God, then alſo he it was that muſt accompliſh that old and ancient promiſe made to our firſt Parents: That the bruiſing of the ſeppents head: This was the thing that of all other, the Diuell was moſt afrayed of, and could not endure to heare; and therefore by mouing this queſtion he intends to infringe, yea and (if he could) quite to peruert the true Sauiour Chriſt in the right of this title. Secondly, The Diuell ſince his fall, beares an vnſpeakable deadly hatred againſt God himſelfe, and accoording to his nature, as occaſion ſerues, he cannot but ſhew the ſame. Now in this queſtion hee doth notably bewray his malice and ſpite againſt God; for, whereas in Chriſts baptiſme a little before, God had proclaimed him to be his beloued ſonne in whome he was well pleaſed, hereby the Diuell goes about to proue the cleane contrary, and ſo as much as in him lieth, ſeekes to make God a lier; which, becauſe it fitted his nature ſo well, he makes choiſe of at this time.

Gen. 3. 15.

Vſe. I. In this practiſe of the diuel we may learne what to iudge of ſundrie falſe teachers; for as well in the Primitiue Church as alſo ſince that time, there haue beene ſundry men of great fame for wiſdome and learning, as Ebion, Cerinthus, Carpocrates, Samoſatenus, and Arrius, who haue all laboured ſeuerally to prooue, that Ieſus Chriſt the Sonne of Marie was not indeed the Sonne of God, verie God, but onely a woorthie Prophet. Now of them we may ſafely thinke with the church of God in former times, that they were falſe prophets, heretikes and ſeducers, yea the profeſſed enemies of Chriſt, guided by the ſpirit of Satan, for heerein they doe directly tread in his ſteps.

II. In this his practiſe we may obſerue the malicious and contradicting ſpirit of Satan againſt God himſelfe, for heere he labours to conclude that Chriſt was not the Sonne of God, notwithſtanding God himſelfe had a little before auouched that he was. And this is his continued practiſe vnto this day; for where God in his church pronounceth grace, mercie and loue, there on the contrarie will the Diuell pronounce a curſe, hatred, and damnation. Againe, where God denounceth his curſe and iudgement, there will the diuell ſeeke to perſwade a conceit of grace and fauour. If a man be the childe of God, and haue receiued the ſeale of grace for his aſſurance thereof; the Diuell will ſeeke to weaken this aſſurance, and perſwade him if he can, that he is the childe of wrath. And if a man be voide of grace, and ſo indeed the childe of the Diuell, then will Satan ſuggeſt into his heart preſumptuous thoughts, and make him thinke he is the childe of God; ſo that euerie way hee ſhewes himſelfe contrarie to God.

Yet marke the diuels words a litle further; If thou be the ſonne of God, command theſe ſtones, &c. that is, doe but ſay the word, and bid theſe ſtones to become bread, and it will be done. And here in the very propounding of this temptation we may obſerue the deepe policie of Satans policie in tempting.

Satan; for in these few words (the better to effect his purpose) he coucheth three most true and notable points in Diuinitie: First, that he that is the Son of God by nature, is also true and verie God; for heere he ascribeth vnto the Sonne of God the true prerogatiue of God himselfe; a point wherin the Pharisees withstood our Saviour Christ, and which many heritikes since haue denied. Secondly, that the true God can without paine or labour, yea without all meanes at his verie becke doe whatsoeuer hee will; and by his word only make stones become bread. Thirdly, that to worke a miracle of himselfe, is a property and prerogatiue of him alone that is true God; as to turne stones into bread in this place. Now when the Diuell acknowledgeth all this, a man would not thinke that herein he should intend any hurt to Christ or to his church; but in very truth his drift heerein is, to destroie the faith of Christ in that word of his father which spake from heauen, and to ouerthrow the foundation of the church, by proouing that Iesus Christ the Sonne of Marie, was not true God.

Satan speakes some truth to ouerthrow another truth thereby.

Heere then obserue a tricke of the Diuels cunning; when he speaks a truth, he doth it not to confirme the same as louing it, but indeed his meaning is to ouerthrow the truth thereby: which must admonish vs, that when Satan shall any way assault vs in temptation, wee neuer giue credit vnto him, no not then when he speaketh the truth, because therein his purpose is to deceiue vs and to destroy the truth: hence it was that Christ forbad the vncleane spirits to testifie of him, though they acknowledged him to be the holy one of God: hence also Paul was grieued at the testimony of the foule spirit that was in the maid, though in it selfe a most worthy truth, to wit, that they were the seruants of the most high God which shewed vnto men the way of saluation.

[b] Act. 16. 17. 18.

Further, in comparing our Euangelist Matthew with S. Luke, there may seeme some difference between them in propounding this temptation, for in Matthew the words are thus, Commaund these stones &c. And in Luke thus, commaund this stone. But they are reconciled thus; Matthew sets downe this temptation as the Diuell first propounded it; and S. Luke shewes how the Diuell vrged it: for first the diuel comes to Christ and bids him, if he be the sonne of God, command all the stones which he saw round about him to be made bread, this S. Matthew sets downe: or if that seemed too much, command one stone to be made bread and it should suffice; and this S. Luke noteth.

[c] Luke. 4. 3.

The vse. By this comparing of the Euangelists we may obserue; that when the Diuell hath once begun to tempt a man, he will not easily leaue off, but will set an edge vpon it, and enforce and vrge it by all the meanes he can, that if it be possible it may preuaile. Which should teach vs on the other side, to be most earnest and resolute in resisting Satans temptations: he will take small aduantage before he leaue; we therefore must not [a] giue place, nor yeeld one iot vnto him: [b] Resist the Diuell and he will flie. This must euery member of the Church do; the Minister by sound and through applying of euery part of Gods truth to the heart, whereby it may be armed against the enemie; and the people by faithfull embracing and obeying of the same, as also by earnest praier vnto God for the assistance of his grace in all assaults.

[b] Deutr. 8. 3.

THese words containe Christs gratious answer, whereby he repelled the diuels temptation; and in it we may obserue three points; first, that Christ did Answer: Secondly, whence he borrowed his Answer: Thirdly, the very words of his Answer. For the first, that Christ did answer, is noted by the holy Ghost in plaine words, And Iesus answering said; Whereby he would giue vs to vnderstand, that Christ Iesus our Saviour being in the wildernesse, was not onely willing and ready to encounter with Satan, but also able to withstand him; yea and to vanquish quiſh Satan without reaching any foile at his hands. Which is a point of ſingular comfort to Gods Church and children; for was Chriſt Ieſus able in this low and baſe eſtate of a ſeruant, being diſaduantaged alſo by a deſert place and bodily hunger, was he then (I ſay) able to encounter with Satan and to ouercome him in his moſt violent and ſubtile aſſaults? Then how much more is he now able euen in all his members to giue Satan the foile, hauing ſpoiled him in his death? ſeeing he is aduanced to the throne of maieſtie and glorie, and ſet at the right hand of his father, hauing a name aboue all names giuen vnto him, at which euery knee ſhould bow, both of things in heauen and in the earth and vnder the earth? We therfore may now ſay, with that loud voice; ‘Now is ſaluation in heauen, and ſtrength, and power, and the kingdome of our God, and the power of his Chriſt: for the accuſer of the brethren is caſt downe.’

¶ Reu. 12. 10.

The ſecond point heere noted is, whence Chriſt borroweth his anſwer, namely, from the Scriptures; It is written: It had beene an eaſie thing for Chriſt being the ſonne of God, to haue confounded the Tempter with the breath of his mouth, or to haue commanded innumerable legions of holy Angels to haue driuen him away; but he betakes himſelfe to the written word for his defence. And this he did eſpecially for our inſtruction; namely, that we might know, that the written word of God, rightly wielded by the hand of faith, is the moſt ſufficient weapon for the repelling of Satan and the vanquiſhing of him in all his temptations; hence Paul calleth it ¶ the ſword of the ſpirit, becauſe it ſerues not onely for our defence, but alſo to wound Satan, and to put him to flight.

The written word our beſt weapon againſt Satan.

¶ Ephes. 6. 17.

Thirdly. I. This fact of Chriſt doth diſcouer and condemne the damnable practiſe of the Church of Rome, who locke vp the word of God from their people in an vnknowen tongue, and commend vnto them for their defence againſt ſpirituall enemies other deuices of their owne, as holy water, creſſing, creſſes, &c. which they highly commend as meanes of ſpeciall ſtrength and force to vanquiſh the Diuell; when as indeed the word of God is the onely true and truſtie weapon, whereof while they deprriue their people, they ſend them forth naked and vnarmed to encounter with Satan.

Secondly, heere alſo behold the miſerable eſtate of all thoſe that either through couetouſneſſe or any other profaneneſſe are drawen to neglect or contemne the written word of God: their caſe is moſt fearefull, for they caſt away thoſe weapons whereby they ſhould defend themſelues againſt the Diuell, and quench all his firie darts, and ſo betray their owne ſoules into his hands: And doubtleſſe all contemners and neglecters of the word are guilty of their own damnation, becauſe God hath giuen vs his word for our defence, and for the confounding of Satan, ſo as without guilt of wilfull murther not of our bodies, but of our ſoules, we cannot neglect this heauenly weapon.

Thirdly, heerby we may ſee the cauſe why ſinne ſo much aboonds in all eſtates euery where, namely, the want of loue vnto, & knowledge in the word of God, whereupon the moſt are ignorant of it, or elſe know not how to handle this ſpirituall weapon, whereby Satan is reſiſted and foiled: Hoſea 4. 2. The Lord complaineth of lying, ſweareing, killing, ſtealing, and whoring, one of blood touching blood; and the cauſe is laid downe in the firſt verſe, There is no knowledge of God in the land: This Dauid knew well, and therefore ſaid, He hid Gods ſayings in his heart, that he might not ſinne againſt him. Pſal. 119. 11. For as Sauls ſpeare ſtood in readineſſe at his head euen when he ſlept, ſo ſhould Gods word, which is the ſword of the ſpirit, be euer in our hearts, as it were ready drawen, that to what ſinne ſoeuer the Diuell allures vs, we may be able to ſay for our defence, It is written: through want hereof it comes to paſſe that the Diuell at his pleaſure leads men captiues into all impieties.

1. Sam. 26. 7.

Laſtly, this excellent vſe of the word vnderſtood, beleeued, and obeied muſt moue all ignorant perſons to labour for knowledge heerein, and with all endeuor ſtes growth in knowledge, by holy obedience,

obedience, to shew foorth their faith: If we had an enemy that had sworne our death and vowed to see our bloud, how carefull would we be, for our naturall life, both to get vs weapons, and also some knowledge to vse the same, not only for our defence, but also for the annoyance of our deadly foe? Oh then how carefull should we be for the safetie of our soules to put vpon vs the whole armour of God, and to learne to vse aright this sword of the spirit, that when we meet with Satan our irreconciliable enemy, in the field of temptation, which is this miserable world, we may be able both to award his blowes, and to wound his head! It is lamentable to see how ignorant people will-blesse themselues in their ignorance, and say they defie the Diuell, and spit at him in defiance, and yet they know not how they are intangled in his snares of their owne sinnes: he little regards such defiance so long as their soules lie naked and bare before his deadly darts: let two men meet that be at enmity, the one armed the other naked, what will it availe for the naked man to defie his enemie with bigge words, while in the meane time his armed enemy takes away his life? Lo, Satan is this strong man armed, and ignorant persons are poore naked caitiffes, they defie the Diuell and spit at him with their mouth, but in the meane time the diuel woūds their soules vnto death. They wil say they feele no such wounds, and therefore they feare him not: but they must know, that the lesse they feele, the more cause they haue to feare; for Satans wounds are most deadly when they are least felt.

The third point is, Christs Answer it selfe: Man shall not liue by bread onely, but by euery word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God: This answer is borrowed from Deuteron. 8.3. And it is that lesson which Moses sought to teach the children of Israell after the Lord had fedde them with food from heauen in that barren wildernesse where they were afflicted with hunger. The words are something hard, and therefore I will shew the meaning of them. Man shall not liue; that is, shall not preserue his temporall life in this world, for of eternall life, neither Moses nor Christ did intend to speake. By bread only, that is, onely by such ordinary meanes as food and raiment, sleepe, physicke &c. which God hath appointed in his prouidence for the ordinary preseruation of naturall life. But by euery word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God: This title word betokens diuers things in scripture: I. The substantiall word of God, the second person in Trinity, Ioh. 1.1. In the beginning was the word, and the word was God. II. It is vsually taken for the written word conteined in the bookes of the olde and new Testament, 1. Pet. 1.25. Thirdly, it is sometime taken for Gods will and decree, and it is called his good pleasure: so Heb. 1.2. Christ sustaineth all things by the word of his power; that is, according to his will and decree, by his powerfull appointment: and by this word were all things made in the beginning, and heerby haue they been preserued euer since: this is that word that melteth the Ice, Psal. 147.18. And in this last sense must we vnderstand word in this place; meaning that man doth not preserue this naturall life by ordinarie meanes onely, but withall, by Gods good pleasure, will and decree sanctifying the meanes for his good. Note further that it is said by euery word, and therein lieth the substance of this sentence; for the vnderstanding wherof wee must know, that this powerfull & working word of God may be distinguished according to the matter wherabout it is occupied: Thus, sometime God will haue men to liue by bread the ordinary food of naturall life; and this is his ordinary word. Sometime his will and appointment is that man shall liue by extraordinarie meanes; as the Israelites did in the wildernesse while they liued vpon Manna; and this is his extraordinary word: Otherwhiles hee ordaines that man shall liue without all meanes; as Moses did in mount Sina, Elias in mount Horeb, and our Sauiour Christ in this wildernesse; for the space of fortie daies and fortie nights together; And lastly he ordains sometime, that man shall liue against meanes and contrary to the course of nature; ture; Thus Daniell liued in the Lions denne, and the three children in the firy furnace; both which last may be called Gods miraculous word: So that wee see good reason of this clause euery: for heereby we learne, that man doth not preserue his life only by ordinary meanes ordained of God; but likewise by euerie word proceeding out of the mouth of God, that is, by euery appointment and decree of God, whether extraordinary, aboue the vsuall meanes, or miraculous without all means, or against the course of nature: this we must labour to know and be perswaded of. Nature teacheth that man liueth by Gods blessing and appointment in ordinary meanes: But nature knowes not this, that God preserueth mans life by his worde, aboue meanes, without meanes, yea & against meanes. The beleeuing hart will hardly yeeld to this, which Moses would teach the Israelites; and therefore wee must take the more paines to be resolued of it. If any shall thinke hereupon, that a man may liue by the written word without meat and drinke, he is deceiued; for Christ meaneth not that euery word that God hath spoken shall preserue naturall life, but that whatsoeuer way he hath appointed whereby man shal liue, whether by ordinary or extraordinary meanes, whether without meanes or against meanes, the same shall be effectuall for mans preseruation: Thus much for the meaning.

Word in scripture noteth diuers things.

Gods powerfull word distinguished.

The applying of this testimony to the Diuels temptation, is thus to be conceiued: the Diuels temptation was this. If thou be the sonne of God, then commaund these stones to be made bread: But thou canst not make these stones to become bread: Therefore thou art not the sonne of God. To this Christ answers, by denying the proposition or first part of this argument; the ground whereof was this, (which the Diuell tooke for granted) that when a man is hungry hee must needs haue bread or else he cannot liue: and this our Saviour Christ doth flatly deny, saying; Man liueth not by bread only, but by euery word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. And this application is most excellent, teaching vs that thing, for the learning whereof the Israelites were trained vp forty yeares in the wildernesse, and fedde with Mannah from heauen, and with water out of the rock; to wit, that God by his word can preserue the life of man without ordinarie meanes euen what way soeuer hee appointeth for that purpose; and if wee should spend our liues in learning heerof, no doubt the time were not mispent.

The vse. First, heereby we are taught to consider aright of all creatures whereby our life is preserued, as meat, drinke, apparell &c. and that is thus, besides the bodily sustenance of the creature, we must labour to see a further matter, euen the blessing of God in the creature proceeding from his word, decree and appointment, whereby it is made fit and able to yeeld sustenance and nourishment. The Scripture calleth this the [a] Staffe of bread, and so it is indeed, for as an aged and impotent man falleth to the ground if his staffe be plucked from him, so the best creature that serues for our vse, without Gods blessing becomes fruitlesse vnto vs. This, reason may teach vs, for how should that thing of it selfe preserue and further life, which in it selfe is void of life? And how should that giue heat and warmnesse to our bodies, which of it selfe is void of heate? let vs therefore confesse that it is not the substance of foode that doth refresh vs, nor the matter of our rayment that keeps vs warme, but the blessing of him that by his word hath ordained them for these ends, if he withdraw his blessing, the staffe and [b] stay is gone; men may eat (as Haggai saith) but they shal not haue enough; they may drinke, and yet not be filled; they may cloth themselues, and not be warme; It is Gods blessing that makes Gods creatures do vs good: how else should it come to passe, that the poore mans child which is barely clad, and homely fed, should be as healthfull, comely, and well liking as the child of a Prince, but that God blesseth aswell the homely food of the poore, as the dainty fare of the richest.

Secondly, heereby wee must learne Sobriety and Temperance, in the vse of all Gods creatures: when we vse our food and and raiment it is Gods blessing alone that makes them do vs good; the Lord as it were stands by vs to put his blessing vpon euery morsell that we eat, and euery draught that we drinke, and vpon our raiment when we put it on; how then dare wee abuse them in surfetting and drunkennesse, in pride and wantonnesse? may we not feare in so doing that whilst the meate or drinke is in our mouthes, the wrath of God will fall vpon vs; as Psal. 78. 30. 31.

Thirdly, hence wee must learne to sanctifie Gods creatures as food and raiment which we vse for our comfort, by inuocation on the name of God: for we doe not liue by the creatures simply, but by the word and appointment of God blessing them vnto vs; and therefore we must not be like vnto brute beasts which receiue Gods blessings, but yet neuer looke vp to heauen from whence they come; or like to the swine that gathereth vp the mast, not looking vp to the tree from which it falleth.

Fourthly, heereby we see the common errour of the world, who place the staffe and stay of their life in the abundance of outward blessings, whereupon they labour to inrich themselues heerewith as much as possibly they can; these men do litle consider that mans life standeth not in abūdance, neither doth he liue by bread, but by the blessing of God, which is and may be as well vpon a little, as vpon the treasures of a kingdome. This was the practise of the rich foole, [a] who spake peace to his soule for ease and pastime, because he had much goods laide vp for many yeares. But sith Christ teacheth vs that man liueth not by bread only, it must needs be a flat note of vnbelief, to carke and care immoderately for the things of this life.

[a] Luc. 12. 19.

Fiftly, heereby wee are also taught, not to entangle our selues ouermuch with the cares of this world, nor to suffer our harts to be oppressed with desire of food, raiment, lands or liuing: because our life and welfare consisteth not in these things, but in the blessing of God on whatsoeuer he lends be it more or lesse: the grippie mind after riches is a deadly [b] snare, wherewith many a soule is intangled to perdition and destruction; This choakes the heart in such sort as the seed of grace can take no root nor bring foorth any sauing fruite: this made Paul to lay a charge vpon Timothy for rich men, that they should trust in the liuing God and not in vncertaine riches, 1. Tim. 6. 17. Let vs therefore be content with food and raiment, and rather seeke the kingdome of God and his righteousnesse, and then all those things whereof we stand in need shall be giuen vnto vs in the moderate vse of lawfull meanes. Indeed the worldlings excuse is, that food and raiment is his liuing, which he must needs looke vnto: but we must still remember, that our life standeth not in these things, for when death comes, these cannot saue vs from the grave: it is Gods blessing by which we liue, hee can preserue vs aboue meanes, nay without meanes, and against meanes, and therefore wee must neuer giue place to such thoughts and cares as shew distrust in God.

[b] 1. Tim. 6. 9.

Sixthly, hence wee must learne contentation and patience in extreame pouerty and in all other miseries of this life: If God should deale with vs as hee did with his seruant Iob: if for our religion hee should bring vpon vs the losse of goods, of children, of health and all that we haue, with banishment also from our friends and country, yet then must we labour to shew the fruit of patience, and not suffer our harts to be swallowed vp of ouermuch griefe: because our life stands by Gods word, and not in any of these things: indeed, if in these outward miseries a man should be depriued of the comfort of Gods prouidence, then might he sorrow without measure: but seeing all such as feare God doe still enioy the blessing of God in their greatest calamities (for Gods blessing is not locked vp in bread, but in his meanes, without meanes and against meanes can he manifest his power and goodnesse in their preseruation) therefore in the extremity of euill must we comfort our selues with the Lord our God, as Dauid did [c] in the fire, hauing lost his two wiues and being in danger to be stoned of his owne followers: and learne to say with [c] 1. Sam. 30. 6.

Iob

[a] Iob. 13. 15. Iob. Though the Lord kill me yet will I trust in him. What if the Lord should send a famine among vs, as he may iustly do for the sinnes of this land, should we then despaire or vse vnlawfull meanes for our reliefe? nay, then we must learne Moses lesson, that man liueth not by bread only, and labour to depend on him that can increase: [b] 1. King. 17. 14. the oile in the poore widowes cruise and the meale in the barrels, till plenty come.

Seuenthly, this must teach vs moderation of our affections in all estates that do befall vs; in health and plenty wee must not be puffed vp with pride; in weakenesse and in want wee must not be oppressed with sorrow; for mans life standeth not in these things, neither can we heereby know loue or hatred; he that is in want may haue as good a portion in Gods blessing as the wealthiest in the world; heerein [c] Luk. 16. 19. 20. hungry Lazarus full of sores, went farre beyond the rich glutton in all his riot.

Lastly, seeing our life depends vpon Gods word, we must heereby learne to acknowledge Gods prouidence, and to rely thereupon in all estates. In the daies of peace, wherein (as [d] Iob speaketh of himselfe) men wash their paths in butter, and hyne the rocke to powre them out riuers of oile; men will soone be brought to say so much: but we must labour to see and feele the blessing of his prouidence euen then when we tread (as it were) the winepresse of his wrath: as well in sicknesse as in health: in want as in plenty; in the depth of distresse as in the height of all prosperity: this is the counsell of [d] Iob. 29. 6. [e] Prou. 16. 3. the Holy ghost, [e] rolle thy workes vpon the Lord. Cast all your care vpon him, for he careth for you, 1. Pet. 5. 7. It is a brutish property only to looke vpon the creatures whereon they feed, and therefore our eies and our hearts must be fixed on him who feedeth the yong rauens that crie vnto him; and beareth vp all things by his mighty word: wee must not content our selues with a bare speculation heereof in our heads, but labour to feele the comfort of it in our hearts, and to expresse the power of it in our liues. And thus much for the first conflict.

VERS. 5. Then the Diuell taketh him vp into the holy citty, and set him on a pinnacle of the Temple.

6. And said vnto him, if thou be the son of God cast thy selfe downe: for it is [f] written, that he will giue his Angels charge ouer thee, and with their hands they shall lift thee vp, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone. [f] Ps. 91. 11. 12.

7. Iesus said vnto him: it is [g] written againe, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. [g] Deut. 6. 16.

THese words containe the second conflict of Satan with our Sauiour Christ: for howsoeuer by Saint Luke this is put in the third place, which Matthew heere placeth in the second, yet this breedeth no difference betweene the Euangelists, who tie not themselues to a strict obseruation of time, place, and order how euery thing was done which they relate; as in the story of this conflict, Saint Luke respects the substance of it onely, but S. Matthew obserues the order of it also. Now in this second conflict we are to obserue three points: I. Satans preparation thereto: II. The assault it selfe: III. Christs answer and repulse thereof.

I. Point: Satans preparation to this conflict is conteined in the 5. verse: wherein we are to note, both the time, and the parts thereof; The time in the first word Then: that is, so soone as the Diuell had receiued a foile of Christ in his first assault, presently hee addresseth himselfe vnto a second.

Heerein behold, the exceeding malice of Satan, in that the end of one temptation with him, is but the beginning of another; he ceaseth not with one assault, but as hee is a deadly foe to the Church of God, so he shewes himselfe by his continuall seeking whom he may deuour; he will neuer make truice with any child of God, vpon any condition lesse than the hazard of his soule; neither is he weary of his worke, but day and night is either plotting or performing some mischieuous attempt against the child of God. The consideration whereof must teach vs, vpon our victorie and conquest ouer one temptation ptation, presently to prepare for a new. This was the state of the sonne of God our head, and we his members may not looke for better; our life in this vale of teares is a continuall warfare against the enemies of our soules; we must not therfore heere looke for rest and ease, but euer keepe watch and ward against their assaults. If this duty were well learned and put in practise, it would preuent much impatience & becom the ground of much peace in our soules: mans nature cannot brooke the doubling and renuing of sorrowes; when one euill lights in the necke of another, oh then hee thinketh neuer any was in his case; but looke vnto Iesus the author and finisher of thy faith, he endured no lesse; and heerein he is an example that thou shouldest follow his steps. If therefore thou wilt be his disciple, prepare to take vp thy crosse * euery day and follow him. * Luk. 9. 23.

The parts of Satans preparation are two; First, he conuaies Christ from Ierusalem to the wilderneſse; Secondly, hee placeth him on a pinnacle of the temple. For the first, in these words, The diuell tooke him vp into the holy city, that is, into Ierusalem, as Luke expoundeth it, chap. 4. 9. This the Diuell might doe three waies; In vision; or leading him vp the ordinary way; or carrying him through the aire. I. It might be in vision; for that was vsuall with the Prophets; so * Ieremie went to the riuer Perath; and Ezekiel was carried from Mesopotamia to * Ierusalem: but Christ was not thus transported; for then Satans perswasion vnto Christ To cast himselfe downe, could haue beene no temptation. II. Christ might bee led of the Diuell the ordinary way from the wildernesse to Ierusalem, so much the words will beare: but (as I take it) he went not so; for if Christ were ledde by the Diuell, it was either willingly of his owne accord, or by the Diuels perswasion; but of his owne accord he would not goe; for hee came into the wildernesse to bee tempted, which as yet was not fully accomplished, and therefore would not willingly depart thence before that worke for which he came were ended. Againe, he would not depart thence vpon the Diuels perswasion, for Christ would neuer gratifie the Diuell so much, as to do ought himselfe, which the Diuell would haue him, as in all his temptations doth appeare; for this is a rule to be obserued, we must not do any thing which the Diuell perswades vs to in his temptations, though in it selfe the thing be lawful and good. III. The Diuell might carry the body of our Sauiour Christ thorow the aire, by his power through Gods permission. This is the most likely way, & so thought to be of the best diuines: and the words following confirme it much, for it is said, the Diuell set him on a pinnacle of the temple. Now if hee had power to set him there, why might hee not also cary him thither, God ordaining this as well as his temptation?

Rule. Do nothing Satan perswades thee to in temptation.

* Ier. 13. 4.

* Ezek. 8. 3.

The vse. By this we see, that men may be transported by the Diuell from place to place, as the records of all ages do report: this one thing yet obserued (wherin the common opinion faileth) that the Diuell cannot convey a man aliue so far in a little time, as many men thinke; as a thousand or two thousand miles in an houre; for no man is able to endure such violent motion and yet liue, as experience teacheth; let a man fall from some high steeple, and his breath wilbe gone and hee dead before hee come at the ground, by reason of the violence of his motion. Indeed the Diuell can carrie a man very swiftly, but yet for the safetie of mans life he must prolong his time far more, than otherwise of himselfe hee needs to doe.

Secondly, hence wee learne that by Gods permission, the Diuell may haue power ouer the bodies of Gods owne children which are true beleeuers, to transport them from place to place; for dealing thus with the head Christ Iesus, why may hee not doe so with any of his members? besides, we find (that God permitting him) hee hath done more than this to the Saints of God; hee may possesse their bodies, as he did the woman of Canaans daughter, Mat. 15. 22. He may torment them long, as hee did exceeding grieuously bow the body of a daughter of Abraham eighteen yeare, Luk. 13, 16. Yea he may kill the body, Satans power ouer mens bodies if God permit.

as he did to Iobs children, who no doubt were holy persons, Iob. 1. 19. And therefore much more may hee transport them from place to place.

Heere this question may fitly be answered: whether a true beleeuer may be bewitched. Answ. Hee may: there is none vpon earth so faithfull and holy, but if God permit, Satan can afflict their bodies grieuously; and therefore also they may be bewitched. It is but the fancy of presumptuous persons, when they say, their faith is so strong, that all the witches in the world cannot hurt them: for if God permit, Satan can grieuously afflict mans body, as he did the body of Iob; yea he can kil the body, as hath been shewed. Salomon, speaking of outward things saith truly, [a] All things come alike to all, and the same condition is to the just and to the wicked: now the wicked man may be bewitched, as al will grant; why then may not the godly also, seeing it is but an outward euill? This therfore must abate their pride that stand so much on their strong faith: behold this fact of Satan to the holy body of Christ, and heereby learne for thy humiliation, that if God permit, Satan is able to bring vpon thy body great affliction.

[a] Eccles. 9. 2.

Further, obserue the place whither Satan caries our Sauiour Christ, into the holy city, that is, Ierusalem. Quest. Why is it called holy, seeing now it was a polluted place full of sinful people? Answ. It is called holy for these causes. 1. because heere was the Lords temple the place of his solemne worship, wherein were the holy rites and ceremonies prescribed for Gods worship. Secondly, in Ierusalem, as also in all the synagogues of Iudea, was Moses chaire, the law and the Prophets were read & expounded. Thirdlie, Ierusalem was the mother City of all the world in respect of religion; heere God ordained that his church should first be planted, and from hence must religion bee deriued to other nations.

The vse. Hence we may obserue, that at this time Ierusalē was the true church of God: indeed it was very corrupt both for doctrine and maners, as Christs seuere reproofe of both doth plainely shew, Mat. 5. 21. &c. and Mat. 23. 13. 14. &c. and yet a true Church, else the holy ghost would not haue called it the holy city. Now if Ierusalem at this time were the true church of God then, then may wee well say, that in England God hath his true church: for, let the corruptions of our Church bee as they are; yet shall it match Ierusalem in the prerogatiues of Gods church. They had the law and the Prophets read and expounded; so haue wee, and the Gospel also which is the power of God to mans saluation. They had the Sacraments and ceremonies of the Law; answerable thereto wee haue the Sacraments of the Gospell, and also a true and holy forme of seruing God. Their Ierusalem was a mother city; and though wee cannot say so much in that behalfe, yet hath our Church beene a nurce to neighbour Churches in Germany, France and other places round about, for many yeares; in regard whereof, the Lord, no doubt, hath bestowed many blessings vpon vs. And therefore though our sinnes and abuses be many and grieuous, yet in regard of Church prerogatiues we may be called a holy nation, and a true member of the Church of God; so that as our Sauiour Christ and his Disciples ioined themselues to the congregations of the Iewes in their legal seruice, and forsooke them not till they became no Church; so ought it to be among vs, till we separate from Christ, none should seuer themselues from our church ministery & seruice of God. Those therefore that make a separation from our Church because of corruptions in it, are farre from the spirit of Christ and his Apostles. If any shal say, this makes wel for the church of Rome, if so corrupt a place as Ierusalem, in regard of Church prerogatiues were an holie city, for they haue as many prerogatiues for religion, as the Iewes then had, and therefore are the church of God, and so we do not well to separate from them. Answ. Some indeed that are no Papists, say the Church of Rome is the Church of God: but the truth is, the present Church of Rome is spirituall Babylon, the mother of abhominations, minations, no ſpouſe of Chriſt but a ſtrumpet. But they pleade their prerogatiues: as firſt, their ſucceſſion from Peter: Secondly, true baptiſme for ſubſtãce according to the firſt inſtitution: Thirdly, the Apoſtles Creed which they hold and beleeue: Fourthly, the word of God, in the writings of the Prophets & Apoſtles; And Laſtly, that theirs is the mother church. Anſw. All this is nothing when the truth appeares; for firſt, ſucceſſion in perſon without ſucceſſion in doctrine is no note of a church: now let them ſhew ſucceſſion in the Apoſtles doctrine, and we yeeld. Secondly, their baptiſme alone, though for ſubſtance true baptiſme, cannot prooue them a true Church: Circumciſion was the Sacrament of Gods church, yet Samaria and Colchis were not the Church of God, though they vſed it: againe, the thiefe may ſhew the true mans purſe, but that proueth him not to be true and honeſt; no more doth baptiſme iuſtifie the church of Rome to bee a true church. Laſtly, though they haue outward baptiſm, yet indeed they ouerthrow inward baptiſme, the life of that ſacrament, to wit, imputed righteouſneſſe and renued holineſſe, which in Gods Church muſt goe together with the outward element, elſe it is nothing. Thirdly, for the Apoſtles Creed, they haue it in word, but they deny it in deede; For though they ſay, they beleeue in God the father, and in Ieſus Chriſt, yet in effect they deny both God and Chriſt. For the God of the Papiſts is an idol God, and the Chriſt of the Papiſts a falſe Chriſt, as we haue ſhewed in handling of the Creed. Fourthly, for the ſcripture; wee muſt know the word of God ſtands not in bare words and letters, but in the true ſenſe and meaning of the Holy ghoſt contained in the ſcriptures of the Prophets and Apoſtles. Now though they haue the bookes of Scripture, yet in ſundry main grounds of religion, they ouerthrow the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles. Again, they keep the ſcripture as a lantern holds a candle, not for it ſelfe but for paſſengers: ſo is the ſcripture with them, not for their ſynagogue, but for Gods ſecret ones among them, for euen in the midſt of Poperie hath God euer had ſome of his elect, who haue not embraced their curſed doctrine. Laſtly, for their plea to be the mother Church, we muſt diſtinguiſh between the ancient Church of Rome, and the ſtrumpet that now is; the ancient Church of Rome to whom Paul writ, was a true and famous church, and a mother Church; but ſhe is now dead and buried; and the now Roman Church is no mother Church, no ſpouſe of Chriſt, but the whore of Babel the mother of abhominations, from which we are commanded to depart, Reuelat. 18.4.

2. Vſe. Secondly, in that Chriſt is brought to Ieruſalẽ, that holy City, there to be tempted, wee learne, that no holineſſe of place on earth can debarre the Diuell from his temptations; he brings Chriſt from the wildernesſe to tempt him, in the holy city euen vpon the holy temple hee will thruſt himſelfe * on Iehoſhuahs right hand to reſiſt him, though Iehoſhuah ſtand before the Angell of the Lord to miniſter to the Lord. And therefore the follie of Papiſts is egregious, that thinke the ſigne of the croſſe, holy water, reliques, and ſuch Maſſing inchantments haue vertue in them to free their houſes, or their bodies frõ the aſſaults of Satan. * Zak. 3.1.

Laſtly, heereby wee ſee that change of place is but a ſillie cure for a troubled mind; indeed change of aire may much further bodily cures; but a troubled mind hath conflicts with the diuel, who will not leaue for change of place, Ieruſalem will fit his turne as well as the wildernesſe.

The ſecond part of the Diuels preparation to this conflict is this, and ſet him on a pinnacle of the temple: The word tranſlated pinnacle, ſignifieth properly a wing of the temple; whereby, ſome take to be meant, the ſharpe brouches and ſpires on the top of the temple; whereof there were diuers; but theſe (as I take it) are not heere meant; for ſuch a ſpire cannot wel be called a wing; others take it for ſome part of the battlement, made on the top of the Temple, which was flat, as the Iewes vſed to build, to kẽepe men from falling; others take it for any top corner of the Temple; and whether of

of these it was we cannot certainly define; but this we must holde, that it was some dangerous steepe downe place on some corner of the Temple, or on the battlements, from which a man might easily cast himselfe; whereby we see the Diuell will omit no aduantage that may further his temptations; which should make vs the more carefull of our standing against him.

VERSE 6. And said vnto him, If thou be the sonne of God cast thy selfe downe: for it is written, that he wil giue his Angels charge ouer thee, and with their hands they shall lift thee vp, lest at any time thou shouldst dash thy foot against a stone.

THese wordes containe the second maine point in this conflict, to wit, Satans assault vpon Christ: wherein we are to obserue, first his temptation: then the reason whereby he doth enforce it. His temptation heere is framed as the former was, in a kind of reasoning, thus:

If thou be the sonne of God, then shew the same by casting thy selfe downe from this pinnacle of the temple:

But as I see thou art certainly perswaded, that thou art the sonne of God: Therefore cast thy selfe downe, and thereby declare it.

Seeing this is a distinct temptation from the former, I doubt not but it must be thus framed with this conclusion: for if it had the same conclusion with the former it should be the same temptation. Satans meaning then is this, as if he had said; I haue made triall to see expresly whether thou be the sonne of God or not, and it seemes thou doest vndoubtedly beleeue that voice of thy father to be true, which said, This is my welbeloued sonne in whom I am wel pleased: Now if this be so indeed, it is conuenient thou shouldest confirme the same by some miracle, and the fittest place thou canst doe it in, is this; therefore cast thy selfe downe headlong from this pinnacle, and yet preserue thy selfe in safety without all hurt in the fall.

The drift of Satan in this temptation was, to bring our Sauior Christ to a vaine confidence in his Fathers protection, and indeed to flat presumption vpon his extraordinarie prouidence in the neglect of lawfull ordinary means, as by Satans conclusion, & the answer of Christ will easily appeare. And hereby we may obserue that one maine drift of Satan in his ordinarie temptations in Gods church, is to carry men to presumption, and vaine confidence in the loue, fauor, and mercy of God: this appeares by the strange reasonings for libertie in sinne which many frame to themselues, and some are not ashamed to vtter; as first, God is mercifull, and Christ shedde his bloud for their redemption, and therefore they will not be so strict and precise in hearing sermons, and reading & conferring about the word as many are, but they wil take the pleasures and seeke the profits of this life. Thus reasoned some in the Apostles daies: [a] Let vs continue in sin that grace may abound: of such Iude complaineth, saying, [b] They turne the grace of God into wantonnesse. Such there haue beene euer since, & at this day they doe euerie where abound. Secondly, some say, they are either ordained to saluation or damnation; now if to saluation, they are sure of it how euer they liue; and if to damnation, they cannot escape it, though they liue neuer so holily, for Gods decree is vnchangeable; and therfore they will take their pleasure and liue as they list. Thirdly others say they haue euer found Gods goodnesse towards them, and they are perswaded he will neuer see them want, and therefore they will not toile themselues with labor & care as others do, but take their ease and pleasure while they may haue it; and so neglect their charge and calling, and giue themselues wholly to their sports and pleasures, to company keeping or such like. Yea, by this temptation to presumption, Satan oft preuailes with the better sort; for if a man fauour the trueth, and giue himselfe to know religion in any sort, the Diuell will straight way go about to perswade him, that that which he doth is sufficient to his saluation, & thus wil keepe him from vsing further means to come by the certaine knowledge of his election, and full affiance in Christ Iesus, to become a

Seeing this is a distinct temptation from the former, I doubt not but it must be thus framed with this conclusion: for if it had the same conclusion with the former it should be the same temptation. Satans meaning then is this, as if he had said; I haue made triall to see expresly whether thou be the sonne of God or not, and it seemes thou doest vndoubtedly beleeue that voice of thy father to be true, which said, This is my welbeloued sonne in whom I am wel pleased: Now if this be so indeed, it is conuenient thou shouldest confirme the same by some miracle, and the fittest place thou canst doe it in, is this; therefore cast thy selfe downe headlong from this pinnacle, and yet preserue thy selfe in safety without all hurt in the fall.

The drift of Satan in this temptation was, to bring our Sauior Christ to a vaine confidence in his Fathers protection, and indeed to flat presumption vpon his extraordinarie prouidence in the neglect of lawfull ordinary means, as by Satans conclusion, & the answer of Christ will easily appeare. fiue foolish virgins, who carried burning lamps, but tooke no oile with them, neuer minding that till it was too late; and so doe most men content themselues with the blazing lampe of an outward profession, neuer looking for the oile of grace, till the time of grace be past.

The vse. Heereby then wee are all taught, in speciall maner to beware of presumption; this is the common snare of the Diuell wherein he intangles many a soule. It is true indeed that he oft preuailes by bringing men to desperation, but a thousand perish through presumption, almost for one by desperation; for despaire is a painfull thing to flesh and bloud, and as the Diuell knowes well, doth sometimes turne to a mans more sound conuersion; but to presume is sweet and pleasant to the flesh, and most agreeable to mans corrupt nature: in regard whereof wee ought to keepe our heart with all watch & ward, as Dauid praieth, Keepe thy seruant from presumptuous sinnes, Ps. 19. 13.

Againe, obserue the order of Satans temptations by comparing this with the former. There he sought to ouerthrow Christs faith & to bring him to distrust the trueth of Gods word vttered from heauen; but finding hee could not that way preuaile, heere he takes the cleane contrary course, and seekes to bring him to presume.

Satans cunning in tempting.

This serues to discouer vnto vs, the deepe guile and subtilty of the Diuell, that can so cunningly turn himselfe from one extreame vnto another. And looke as he dealeth here with Christ the head, so doth hee continue towards all his members, if he cannot bring them to one extreame, he will assay them hard in the other. If hee cannot bring a man to couetousnesse, and keepe his heart to the loue of money, then let him beware of riot and prodigality. Is a man giuen to pleasures and delight, and at length is depriued of them? then let him beware, the Diuell swallow him not vp with ouermuch griefe, as he sought to do with the incestuous person of Corinth. Doth a man come to loue religion, that formerly was giuen to looseneſse of life? then if it be possible the Diuell will carne him to schisme & heresie. The Diuel cannot abide that a man should keepe the meane according to Gods word, Isay 30. 21. He would haue our first parents to be Gods, or no body, Gene. 3. 5. And so still he laboureth to bring a man to some extreame. We therefore in all estates during life, must labour to keepe the golden meane, as Christ heere did, neither doubting on the one hand nor presuming on the other, but retaining still that blessed faith, whereby his blessed heart was firmly setled in these assaults. Thus much for Satans drift. Now come to the words of this temptation.

*2. Cor. 2. 7. 11.

If thou be the sonne of God, then cast thy selfe downe: that is, shew by this miracle that thou art the sonne of God. Marke here, the Diuell perswades him not, to shew himselfe to be the sonne of God by doctrine in the execution of his ministerie; but Cast thy selfe downe, shew a miracle: wherein we may beholde the very liuely image of that naturall disposition which is in all impenitent persons; they affect Christes miracles, but they care not for his doctrine. Herod longed to see Christ, b and was glad of his comming, when Pilate sent him; yet not to heare his doctrine, for that he could not endure; els he would not haue imprisoned Iohn, and also put him to death; but he hoped to see a miracle. The wicked Iewes desire a signe, that put Christ to death for his doctrine; yet if he will come downe from the crosse, and so miraculously saue himselfe, then they will beleeue, Mark. 15. 32. And this venom of the olde serpent hath poisoned the hearts of many students in the Scriptures, who care not at all to ground themselues in the fundamentall points of religion, as faith and repentance; and yet are woonderfull eager after quiddities and difficulties, wherein may appeare some outward shew of wit and learning; like the hypocriticall Pharisies, that would tithe mint and rue, and yet passe ouer iudgement and the loue of God, Luk. 11. 42. And the cause hereof is the want of sound grace, for naturall men indeed can not sauour the things of the spirit of God; the knowledge of Christ crucified seemes foolishnesse vnto them.

Secondly, the Diuell tooke occasion of his former temptation from Christs infirmitie of hunger: but perceiuing Christs sure faith in his fathers word by his gratious answer to that assault, heere he borrowes his temptation from that profession of his faith; as if he should say, thou seemest to be resolued of the trueth of thy fathers word that thou art the sonne of God; and if that be true indeed, then shew it by this miracle, Cast thy selfe downe.

Heere then beholde another tricke of Satan; if he cannot preuaile by assaults drawen from our infirmities, then will he assay vs by temptations drawen from Gods good gifts and graces in vs; If he cannot keepe a man in ignorance that hath good gifts of wit & memory, then will hee seeke from his knowledge to puffe him vp with pride, and so mingling his poison with Gods good gifts, doth cause many a one to become a bane to Gods church, that otherwise might haue prooued an excellent instrument therein; as might easily be shewed in sundry particulars.

Satans malice restrained.

Thirdly, heere marke how Satans malice is restrained, and his power limited: By Gods permission he is able to carrie Christ from the wildernes to Ierusalem, and there to set him in a most dangerous place on a wing of the temple; the thing hee now desireth is his destruction by casting downe headlong, but that he can not doe, and therefore perswades Christ to cast himself down: wherein we see the speciall prouidence of God ouer Christ Iesus in all these temptations, restraining his enemy in the thing he most desired. And the same prouidence doth he still continue ouer his Church for the effectuall preseruation of Christs members in all their temptations. The Diuels vnwearied desire & drift is, to bring contentions, hurliburlies and ruines into all societies in Church and Commonwealth; therfore the peace and tranquillity of these is, and so must bee acknowledged, a notable fruit of Gods blessed prouidence restraining the spite and malice of Satan. Againe, hence it is euident, that in temptation Satan cannot go beyond the permission of God: he can tempt Christ, yea transport his body, and set him in a dangerous place, for thus far God permits him to goe; but to cast Christ downe from the pinnacle he cannot, therein comes Gods restraint. So it fareth with Gods children; for the triall of his graces in them, and to chastise them for some sinnes, he suffers Satan to buffet them; but yet one iotte of his malice beyond Gods permission he cannot shew, as in Iobs affliction by him may notably appeare. Which wee must carefully remember for our special comfort in our most grieuous assaults; Gods will permitting Satan so farre must make vs patient, and yet his power restraining Satan from doing worse, must giue vs comfort. Thus much for the temptation it selfe. Iob. 1. 12.

The reason whereby Satan enforceth his temptation is taken from a testimony of Scripture: For it is written he shall giue his Angels charge ouer thee, &c. Satan hearing Christ alledge scripture for his defence against the first assault, comes now vpon him with his owne weapon, that if it were possible he might foile him, after this sort: Thou shewest thy selfe to be the Doctor of the Church, by thine alleadging of Scripture, and that, it seemes, thou makest the rule of thine actions: well then thou maiest well and safely cast thy selfe downe hence if thou bee the Sonne of God, for it is written, he shall giue his Angels charge ouer thee, and with their hands they shall lift thee vp &c.

From this dealing of Satan, wee are taught, not to embrace an opinion in religion, because a shew of proofe by testimony of Scripture may bee giuen for it. But we must trie the spirits, that is, the doctrines of men, whether they be of God, or not, 1. Ioh. 4. 1. For the Diuell can alleadge Scripture to moue Christ vnto presumption, and it is his vsuall practise, when he caries men into schisms, errors, and heresies. Reason with a man that minds to liue in sinne, and tell him of that dangerous state, by reason of the shortnesse and vncertainty of this life: will he not tell you straight, he will doe as he does, and repent when he is old? for it is written, [a] At what time soeuer a sinner doth repent him of his sinne, I will put all his wickednesse out of my remembrance, saith the Lord: And some thinke three or foure good words at a mans last end wil serue his turne: for the thiefe on the crosse said no more, but, [b] Lord remember me when thou comest into thy kingdome. And all such as are trained vp in the schoole of Satan, can easilie alledge scripture to further them in euil.

[a] Ezek. 18. 17.

[b] Luk. 23. 42.

But let vs come to the scripture which the Diuel doth notoriously abuse by his allegation: it is written in the 91. Ps. v. 11. In the alledging whereof he would seeme very carefull and precise, at the first not omitting so much as this particle [for] which might haue beene left out, and yet nothing haue been wanting to the force of his reason: But heerein is the deepenesse of his policy, to cause Christ not to suspect any falshood afterward; for towards the end, hee leaueth out that, on which the promise is grounded of being kept by the Angel: to wit, to keepe thee in all thy waies, that is, in all the good duties of thy lawfull calling wherein thou shalt glorifie God and doe good to others; to such as so walke in their waies doth that promise belong.

Satans mincing of the word of God.

Heere then behold Satans notable fraud and craft, that can so cunninglie leaue out that which makes not for his purpose, and so peruert the true meaning of scripture; this is his vsuall practise, in enmity against the word to deprave the true meaning by cutting off some part, when hee cannot vtterly ouerthrow the whole. The like is the dealing of all heretickes, who by cutting off and leauing out, play legerdemaine with the scripture. The Arrian holds the Bible for the word of God; but such places as serue to proue the godhead of Christ, he doth notably abuse and peruert. The familie of Loue also, doth hold the bible for the word of God; but come to the true meaning of it, therein they faile, turning all into Allegories, euen most true histories, as the fall of our first Parents, and such like, which are maine grounds of religion in their naturall sense: and the Apostaticall Church of Rome, doth hold with vs the bookes of the old and new Testament; but yet they put in and take out at their pleasure, and take from it all sense and meaning which agrees not with the determination of their holy father the Pope; and thereby they ouerturne the word of God, and strongly maintaine their mystery of iniquity.

This dealing of Satan and his wicked miscreants with the scripture, must make all Gods children willing to spend their strength in searching out the Scripture; for that is the onely way to descrie their fraude in deprauing of it. This caused Christ to bidde the people in his time to search the Scriptures, to learne to know him to bee the true Messias, which the Iewish teachers did then deny. In regard whereof wee must say with [a] Moses, oh that all the Lords people were Prophets, and that the Lord would put his spirit vpon them! oh that all could reade and vnderstand the word of God! This is it, wherein all that either be, or intend to be ministers must labour especially, euen to get sound knowledge and iudgement in the text of Scripture. The Minister must not only be able to teach the truth, but also to discerne, to discouer, and to confute errors and heresies, which hee can neuer soundly doe without good vnderstanding in the text it selfe. The Diuell knowes the whole Scripture, and he will spare no text therein if hee can corrupt it; therfore to rescue Gods truth out of his hands who is the father of lies, the Minister must shew himselfe a good souldier of Iesus Christ, as Paul exhorteth Timothy, giuing such attendance to the word that all men may see his profitting therein; yea with Ieremie, the Minister must eat the bookes of God, and digest them in his vnderstanding, and reioice therein, labouring to feele them the ioy of his heart. The Diuell knowes that Scripture truely vnderstood and well applied, is the onely engine for the battery of his kingdome; and therefore, euen from the beginning, but specially since the comming of Christ hee hath laboured by all meanes to keepe men from the knowledge and true vnderstanding of them: hee it is that hath brought men from the reading of the Scriptures, to betake themselues to the writings of men, as schoolemen, fathers, and such; by this meanes hee hath for many yeares euen to this day in the Church of Rome, locked vp the Scripture in an vnknowen tongue: yea euen in Gods church the Diuel works mightily this way, by stealing away the affections of yong students from the Bible, and rauishing them with delight in the writings of men; for thus he keeps them from the fountaine of truth, that they either fal into error themselues, or be lesse able to discerne and confute it in others. And hence come dissentions and errors into the schooles of the Prophets, which cannot be auoided while men leaue the text of scripture & addict themselues so much to the writings of men, for thereby hee can more cunningly conuey strange conceits into mens minds: and therfore euery one that would maintain the truth in purity and syncerity must labour painfully in the text.

Secondly, Gods ministers must heereby be admonished, to be carefull in alleadging any text of Scripture, that the same be fit and pertinent: for to wrest the same from the proper meaning of the holy Ghost to serue their owne conceit, is the practise of Satan, which euery seruant of God must be farre from, and therefore must not do it hand ouer head. Which also may serue for a good aduertisement to those that vse to heape vp manifold allegations of Scriptures in the doctrine of a sermon, for as [a] in many words there cannot want iniquity, as Salomō saith; so in affected multiplicity of quotations can the abuse of Scripture bee hardly escaped. If we deliuer but a mans testimony, honesty will compell vs as neere as we can to keepe both his words and his meaning; much more should conscience moue vs in alledging the testimony of the Lord, to haue carefull respect to the euidence of truth: and therfore that sparing course is very commendable, whereby in quoting of Scripture men make sure to keepe themselues to the Lords true meaning, lest by depraying his word they become followers of Satan: And thus much for the maner of Satans allegation.

[a] Prou. 10. 19.

The true and proper meaning of that text is now briefly to be discussed. The ninety-one Psalme, from whence it is alledged, is a most heauenly part of scripture, penned for the comfort of Gods people in the time of some grieuous plague or sickenesse; and it containes a notable preseruatiue against the plague, and by consequent against any iudgement of God, to wit, true affiance and confidence in the Lord, that is the ground of all comfortable safety; thereto, among many other, is [a] this gratious promise made of the protection of Gods holy Angels, (which the Diuell doth heere alledge) who shall be as carefull for the safety of Gods children in common calamities of famine, plague, pestilence &c. as the nurse is ouer her tender child to hold it in her hands, and beare it vp in her armes, lest it should fall and hurt it selfe; alwaies prouided that the child of God keepe himselfe in his waies, that is, in obedience to Gods commandements and in the duties of his lawfull calling. It is true indeed, that iudgement begins at the house of God, and the righteous are taken away from the euill to come, yea many times the same outward iudgement lights vpon the good, that doeth vpon the bad: yet this taketh not from Gods child the comfort of this protection in common calamities, for all promises of temporall blessings must be vnderstood with the exception of the crosse: as heere, Gods Angels shall guard his children in time of plague, famine and pestilence, vnlesse it please God heerewith to chasten them for some sinne past, or to preuent some sin, or greater euill to come, or to make triall of their faith and patience: in which cases also the child of God doth greatly differ from the wicked; for through the fruition of Gods loue in Christ the euill of the punishment is taken away, and the outward smart thereof [b] sanctified to the greater good of his soule: but out of this case their protection is certaine: see Exod. 12. 23. Psal. 105. 16. 17. & Ezek. 9. 4. 6.

[a] Vers. 11.

1. Pet. 4. 17.

[b] See Iob. 23. 10. Ps. 119. 71.

The vse. The consideration of this gratious gratious protection of Gods Angels ouer such as keepe themselues in their waies, must moue euery one to labour to know and practise the duties of his calling both generall of Christianity, and particular for the state of his life, in all good conscience; so doing, let come what will, in all dangers hee shall haue safety; for Gods angels pitch their tents about him, they are as watchfull ouer him as a nurce ouer her child; but if wee forsake our waies wee lose the comfort of their protection, & expose our selues to all Gods iudgements.

VERSE 7. Iesus said vnto him, Againe it is written, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

HEere is the third generall point in this conflict: to wit, Christs answer and repulse made to Satans assault, taken, as the Diuels temptation was, from a text of scripture; for hee saith, Againe it is written; where yet hee meaneth not to oppose scripture to scripture, but to confute the abuse of scripture by scripture; after this sort, as if he had said to Satan, It is true indeed that God hath made many worthy promises of aid and protection to his children in his word, yet they shal not be performed to those that presume to tempt God, as thou wouldest haue me to do.

Scriptures are sufficient to expound themselues.

From this dealing of Christ with Satan we may obserue; that the scriptures of God are sufficient in themselues, truely to interpret and expound themselues. The Diuel alledging scripture did wrest it from the true sense; this our Sauiour Christ sheweth by alledging another [a] text out of Moses, which being applied to the place which the Diuel abused, doth shew the true meaning thereof. So Ezra, expoũding the law vnto the Iews, read distinctly in the law of God, and (as the words do signifie) [b] gaue the sense by scripture, and caused the people to vnderstand: much more then at this day may the scriptures be thought sufficient for the expounding of themselues, sith to the Canon thereof since Ezra his time there is added the whole new Testament by the hand of God, wherein the deepe things of God are plainelie reuealed.

[a] Deut. 6. 16.

[b] Ezra. 8. 8.

The Church of Rome cannot away with this, that Scripture should be sufficient to expound it selfe. And therefore against it they reason thus: That which must expound Scripture, must haue iudiciall power to determine of the sense thereof: but the scriptures haue no such Iudiciall power; for they are but a dumb letter, and therfore no sufficient iudge to determine of their owne sense and meaning. Answ. The Scriptures haue iudiciall power to determine of their owne true sense and meaning, for they speake euidently, to all that are inlightned by Gods spirit, and therby made able to know what the Scripture saith: wee know a man may speake to his friend not only by word of mouth but also by letter, and thereby expresse his meaning sufficiently; euen so, though God speake not now vnto his Church by created voice, yet by his written word he speakes sufficiently for the cleare manifestation of his will and pleasure concerning them; and therefore it is a shamefull slander and blasphemy against the Scriptures to call them an inkie letter and dumbe iudge. And let them shew, if the Scripture be not, where is that speaking iudge who hath power iudiciall to expound the scripture. Indeed their answer is, that the Church is this Iudge, and that we must consult at her mouth for the true meaning of the Scripture. Answ. The church hath a ministery and dispensation committed vnto her, in the execution whereof she deliuereth the meaning of the Scripture vnto Gods people, but that is not from any iudiciall authority committed vnto her, to determine of the sense of Scripture of her selfe; but onely by comparing scripture with scripture, and expounding one place out of another; euen as the Lawyer giues the sense of the law, not from any iudicial power giuen vnto him aboue the law, but by obseruing the words with the scope and circumstances of the law. But heere I would know, if the Church must needs bee iudge; by what meanes must she determine? They answer, by the rule of faith; the consent of Councels and Fathers; and if these faile, then by the Pope: Answ. By their rule of of faith, they vnderstand, vnwritten traditions, that is, such truth beside Scripture, as hath beene kept by tradition from hand to hand since the primitiue Church. But these are meere forgeries, and shame it were to subiect the truth of God to the deuice of man; if these bee made iudge of Scripture, then shall the faith of the church depend vpon the wisedome of man, and not vpon the power of God, a thing abhorred of the Apostle 1. Cor. 2. 5. The onely rule of faith is the Scripture, and true faith will admit no other iudge beside the Scripture to determine of that whereon it must depend. Secondly, for their consent of Fathers and Councels, that is no sufficient meanes to determine of the true sense of Scripture; for their seuerall errors and contradictions one to another, & many times to themselues, shew, that they wanted the immediate assistance of the Spirit. And the same is true of the Pope, as might easily be proued at large, by their grosse ignorance & errors. And therfore it remaines that the true iudge and expounder of Scripture, is Scripture it selfe, as Christ himselfe by his practise sheweth in this place.

The place alledged by Christ, is this commandement of God vnto his people, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. For the vnderstanding whereof we must search out three things, first what the tempting of God signifieth: secondly, the manner how God is tempted: and thirdly, the cause and root thereof. For the first, to tempt God signifieth, to make triall and experience of God, and to proone whether hee be so true, iust, mercifull, prouident and powerfull as his word reporteth him to be. Thus did the Israelites often tempt God, as the Lord saith, [a] When your fathers tempted me, proued me, and saw my workes; which latter words shew what it is to tempt God, euen to seeke to haue proofe by his works whether he be such a one as his word saith he is. If any shall say we are commanded, to taste and see how gratious the Lord is, Psal. 34. 8. yea the Lord bids his people proue him, Malach. 3. 10. Answ. Those places do sufficiently expound themselues, for Dauids taste and sight is by the grace of true faith and affiance, for in the same verse he pronounceth such blessed; and in Malachie the Lord bids them proone him, but yet in their way of obedience in prouiding for his Sanctuary according to his ordinances. Therefore we must know for the second point, that euery triall of God is not simply euill, but that which is needlesse, when without warrant from his word we presume vpon him beyond the meanes of his ordinary prouidence. Thirdly, the root of this sinne, is an vnbeleeuing heart, whereby a man doubts of the truth of Gods word, of his power, presence and prouidence. Psal. 78. 18. The Israelites tempted God in their hearts; there is this sinne: the maner how followeth, in requiring meat for their lusts &c. not contenting themselues with Gods present prouidence; the root & ground whereof is set downe, vers. 22. because they beleeued not in God and trusted not in his helpe. When a man doubts of the fidelity of his seruant he wil lay something in his way, as a peece of siluer, his purse &c. to trie him withall; so when a man begins to doubt of Gods goodnesse and fidelity towards him, hee will easily be brought to make needlesse triall of him by some worke of God beside his ordinary prouidence. The meaning then is this, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God, that is, thou shalt not make any needlesse triall of Gods goodnesse, mercy, power or prouidence, from a distrustfull heart in the truth of his word.

Deut. 6. 16.

To tempt God.

[a] Psalm. 95. 9.

Heere yet further for our instruction wee are to know that God is tempted fiue waies, as the word of God doth manifest: first, when a man shall appoint vnto God, either the time when, the place where, or the maner how God shall helpe him, and performe his word vnto him; heerein he seeks experience of the truth and power of God. Thus the Israelites tempted God in the wildernesse when they wanted water; saying, [a] Is God among vs or no? God had promised to bee with them in all their iourney to Canaan, but that they will not now beleeue vnlesse he wil shew his presence by giuing them water in that place. And so likewise they tempted him in the want of God is tempted fiue waies.

[a] Exod. 17. 7.

offoood, Pſ. 78. 19. Can God prepare a table in the wildernesse. The conſideration whereof muſt teach vs in all our petitions which we make vnto God for the accompliſhment of his promiſes vnto vs, to beware of [b] limiting God, as the Iewes did, by preſcribing vnto him time, place & maner for the accompliſhment thereof; but wait with patience his good leaſure. For hee that beleeueth will not make haſte, but wil commit his way to the Lord: Pſ. 37.5.

[b] Pſal. 78. 41.

2 Secondly, God is tempted when men require a ſigne at his hands. Thus the Phariſies tempted Chriſt: Matt. 12. 38. Maſter we would ſee a ſigne of thee: meaning thereby to be certified whether hee were the Meſſias, and Luke ſaith, they tempted him; Luk. 11.16. And thus doe all thoſe tempt God, which refuſe to embrace the doctrine of the Goſpel, becauſe they cannot ſee the miniſters thereof to confirme the ſame by miracles. Thus do many Papiſts plead againſt our religion, embracing rather the myſterie of iniquity, becauſe it is confirmed vnto them by lying wonders; not conſidering that the truth which wee profeſſe was once ſufficiently confirmed to bee the truth of God, by his owne teſtimony thereunto in ſignes & wonders through the hands of his Apoſtles. Queſt. Is euery asking of a ſigne a tempting of God? for Gedion asked a ſigne when he was to be a Iudge and deliuerer of gods people, Iudg. 6.17. And ſo did Hezekiah to bee aſſured of the lengthning of his daies, 2. King. 20. 8. And yet we reade not that God charged them with tempting him, but did condeſcend to their requeſts. Anſw. There be two cauſes in which we may require a ſigne of God & not tempt him: firſt, when God commands a man to ask a ſigne at his hands: ſo might Azah haue asked a ſigne of God, for his aſſurance of victorie according to Gods promiſe, yea he is [c] blamed for not asking it when the Lord commanded him. Secondly, a man may aske a ſigne of God, when it ſerueth for the neceſſary confirmation of an extraordinary calling, or of ſome ſpecial promiſe of God made to man: in this caſe did Gedion aske a ſigne of God for the further confirmation of his extraordinary calling to bee a Deliuerer vnto Gods people. And ſo did Hezekiah for his further aſſurance in the lengthning of his life, by an extraordinary promiſe, fifteene yeares. But out of theſe caſes to aske a ſigne of God is to tempt him; as the Phariſies did, who would preſcribe vnto God what kinde of miracle they would haue, euen a ſigne from heauen, not contenting themſelues with thoſe miracles which Chriſt did ordinarilie worke among them.

[c] Iſai. 7. 11.12. 13.

Thirdly, a man tempts God, when he goes on in any ſinne againſt Gods commandements, for hereby he makes needleſſe triall of Gods iuſtice, mercy, and patience. The Lord ſaith of his people, they [d] tempted him ten times, and haue not obeied his voice: Mal. 3. 15. The people murmuringly ſay, they that worke wickedneſſe are ſet vp, and they that tempt God are deliuered; where working wickedneſſe and tempting of God are al one. Which ſerues to admoniſh vs, that with al ſpeed we break off the courſe of our ſins by repentance, for while we continue in ſinne we tempt God, and ſo lie open to all his iudgements, depriuing our ſelues of the guard and protection of Gods holy Angels, nay they will become our enemies, and inſteed of protection, execute gods heauy vengeance vpon vs. 3

[d] Num. 14.22.

Fourthly, they tempt God, that impoſe vpon Gods people, the religious obſeruation of legall ceremonies aboliſhed by Chriſt: Act. 15. 10. Why tempt ye God (ſaith Peter) to lay a yoake on the Diſciples neckes, which neither our Fathers nor we were able to beare? This is to make triall of Gods power in the ſauing of his people. Whereby we may ſee how wicked and damnable the Romiſh religion is, which wholly ſtands in the obſeruation of ceremonies, partly heatheniſh, and partly Iudaical, whereto when men ſubmit themſelues, they do nothing elſe but tempt God. 4

Fiftly, they tempt God, that refuſe or neglect the ordinarie and neceſſarie meanes of their preſeruation, either for body or ſoule: as hee that being to goe ouer a water, will leaue the bridge which is the ordinarie way, and aduen- 5

ture dangerously through the water: for heerein he seekes a needlesse experience of Gods power: so doe they also that neglect or contemne Gods holy ordinance for the saving of mens soules in the ministery of the word. Now to this kinde of tempting God doth Christ apply this commandement in this place; as if he should say, when God hath affoorded vnto men an ordinarie meanes for their helpe and safety, they are not to refuse the same, and seeke for safety from God extraordinarily. I am now in a dangerous place I confesse, vpon this pinnacle, yet there is some ordinarie way to get downe as staires or ladder; and therefore vnlesse I would tempt the Lord my God, I may not cast my selfe downe and thereby seeke for extraordinarie preseruaiton, as thou perswadest me. Thus also they sinne that goe into places of great danger without a calling: so Peter sinned in thrusting himselfe into Caiphas hal, a place of temptation, as by lamentable experience he found too true. Thus Dauids three Worthies sinned in aduenturing vpon their enemies host, for the fetching of a little water out of the well of Bethlehem; & therfore when it was brought vnto him, Dauid would not drinke thereof, but powred it out for a sacrifice vnto the Lord, 2. Sam. 23. 16.

Heere some may aske, whether they do not tempt God, that aduenture to clime on high places, to stand on spire steeples, to runne on the ridge of high houses, and to goe on ropes a great height from the ground. Answ. Men may doe such things in a twofold estate, either hauing a lawfull calling thereto, as Carpenters and Masons, who are to worke vpon high buildings; now they without tempting of God may clime and stand on high and dangerous places: or else hauing no lawfull calling thereto, as they who vse to doe such things to make knowen their actiuity, or only to affoord delight and admiration vnto others for their priuate gaine and aduantage; and such tempt God fearefully; for Christ was better able to haue cast himselfe downe from this pinnacle, and haue preserued himselfe without hurt, then these men are to saue themselues in their aduentures, and yet hee refused so to do, because hee would not tempt the Lord his God. Thus much for the meaning of this commandement.

The doctrine for instruction hence, is to be gathered from this command applied to the text which the Diuell alledgeth; and it is this: whosoeuer looketh for the accomplishment of Gods promises vnto him, must be carefull to walke before God in the waies of his commandements, and in the workes of his calling with all good conscience. God indeed hath made many gratious promises in his word, of blessings temporall and eternall, but they that tempt God shall not find the comfort of them; mens sinnes hinder these things from them; Gods goodnesse is to bee seene and tasted in the waies of faith and obedience. God hath promised the guard of his Angels to his children while they keep themselues in their waies: if therefore thou wouldest haue this protection thou must keep thy selfe in those waies that God would haue thee to walke in. Also in the richesse of his loue God hath made a promise of euerlasting life with freedome from eternall perdition, to those that beleeue in Christ, Iohn 3. 16. Thou therefore that wouldest enioy the comfort of this promise to thine immortality and life, must get true faith into thy heart and thereby liue all the daies of thy life. The same may bee said of euery promise of God pertaining either to soule or body, the fruition of them doth depend vpon the practise of some part of obedience; which if thou doest neglect thou doest but presume in making title to the promise: Peter tels Symon Magus plainely, he had no part with them in the gifts of the spirit, while his heart retained a purpose to liue in sinne, Act. 8. 21. Breake off therefore the course of sinne, and inure thy selfe to the practise of obedience, so shall Gods promises be sweet vnto thine heart; and the more thou proceedest in obedience, the more comfort thou shalt find in Gods gratious promises: but if thou doe lay hold on sinne, the comfort of the word will depart from thee. And thus much for the second temptation.

VERSE 8. Againe the Diuell tooke him vp into an exceeding high mountaine, and shewed him all the kingdomes of the world, and the glory of them;

9. And said vnto him, all these will I giue thee, if thou wilt fall downe and worship me:

10. Then said Iesus vnto him, auoid Satan, for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue.

THese words containe the third conflict betweene our Sauiour Christ and Satan; wherein consider three points; I. Satans preparation: v. 8. II. Satans assault vpon Christ: v. 9. III. Christs answer thereto: v. 10. For the first, before wee come to the handling of it in particular, wee are to consider that vnto euery assault the Diuell prepares himself afresh: which should teach vs to labour to furnish our hearts euery day afresh to be able to repulse his new assaults. Now particularly; this preparation hath two parts: first, Satan takes Christ into an exceeding high mountaine: secondly, he shewes him all the kingdomes of the world and the glory of them all. For the first, it may bee demanded what way Satan tooke vp Christ into this high mountaine? Answ. He might do it two waies; either by vision, or by reall and locall transportation of his body from the temple to some high mountaine. Some thinke this was done by vision only in Christs mind, as [a] Ezekiel was caried by the Lord from Babylon to an exceeding high mountaine in the land of Israel. But I rather thinke that Christ was really and locally transported by the Diuell in body from the temple to some high mountaine; for Christs temptations were not imaginary, but true and reall. Againe, the words import a true and reall transportation without any mention of a vision.

[a] Ezek. 40. 2.

The reasons why the Diuell carries Christ to an high mountaine may bee these: first, the Diuel hath a great desire to imitate God in his glorious workes, that so hee may disgrace the workes of God, yea and God himselfe as much as he can. Now we read [b] that God tooke vp Moses into mount Nebo, from whence hee shewed him all the land of Canaan; so Satan, that he might seeme to go beyond God, takes vp Christ into an exceeding high mountaine to shew him all the kingdomes of the world and the glory of them. Secondly, he did it for the furtherance of this last assault wherewith hee tempted Christ, for hee meant to entice Christ with the glory of the world, and therefore brings him where hee might take the faireſt view thereof.

[b] Deut. 34. 1. 2. &c.

Now in that Satan transports the body of our Sauiour Christ this second time, wee see that by Gods permission, Satan may haue power ouer the bodies of Gods children, to transport the same from place to place, or otherwise to vex them, and that not once onely, but sundrie times. This we must obserue, and remember carefully as a stay and prop against distrust & despaire, if God should suffer Satan to vex vs, by such transporting of our bodies from place to place, or by any outward calamity; & that not once or twise but diuers times; for that which befell the head Christ Iesus, may well befall any of his members.

Satan may haue power ouer the bodies of Gods children.

The second part of the Diuels preparation is this: he shewes vnto Christ all the kingdoms of the world, & the glory of them. This he could not do actually, for there is no mountaine so high in all the world, whereon if a man were placed, he could see one halfe or one quarter of the kingdomes of the world, as they are seated and placed vpon the face of the earth; nay if a man were set in the sunne, and from thence could looke vnto the earth, yet hee could not see past the halfe thereof. And therefore wee must know that the Diuel did this in a counterfet vision, for heerein hee can frame an imitation of God.

Now the Diuels visions bee of two sorts; either in the outward senses, or in the mind and vnderstanding. His visions in the outward senses be delusions, whereby he makes men beleeue they see that, which indeed they do not see; this might easily be proued by manifold examples recorded in the histories of all times, but that one shall suffice, of his coun-

counterfait resemblance of [a] Samuels formie and attire to the witch of Endor for the deluding of Saul; when as indeed Samuels true body was in the graue, and his soule with the Lord.

[a] 1. Sam. 28. 14.

Secondly the diuel hath visions whereby he deludes the vnderstanding. Zak. 13.4. The Lord saith heereof, the Prophets shalbe ashamed euery one of his vision. These visions the Diuell shewes to men sometime sleeping, and sometime waking; euen as the Lord doth shew his visions to his owne seruants. The visions of Satan shewed to men sleeping are called dreames: Deut. 13.1. the false Prophet hath his dreame. His visions shewed to men waking, are to such as haue crazed braines, whom he perswades strange things of themselues, as some, that they are kings or princes; others, that they are Christ, Iohn Baptist, & such like; examples heereof in all ages are many. Now touching this vision of Satan to Christ; some thinke it was inward in Christs minde; but I rather take it to haue beene in his outward senses only, as the words of the text do import; the Diuell by his art did cunningly set forth and represent vnto the eies of Christ a notable shew and representation of all the kingdomes of the earth, and the glory of them.

Heerein the Diuell sheweth great power and skill in that he can represent vnto the eie in his counterfet visions such strange and admirable sights. And it teacheth vs, that the practises of sorcerers and magicians, vndertaking to represent vnto the eie, partly in the aire, and partly in glasses, either the persons of men that liued long since, or actions done in farre countries, or long before, are not meere fancies as some thinke, who deny altogether that such things can be shewed: for the Diuell can resemble things done long since and a far off; for if he could set such a sight before the eie of our Sauiour Christ in vision, as the view of the whole world, and the glory thereof, then much more can he represent vnto the eie of man strange and marueilous things.

The Diuels drift in this resemblance vnto Christ is this; heereby he intended most cunningly to insinuat himselfe into the heart of out Sauior Christ: for before he propounds this third assault, hee shews vnto Christ all the kingdomes of the world and the glorie of them, that Christ might take a liking of them, and so desire them, and at length accept of them vpon Satans offer. Thus he dealt with our first parents; [a] vpon their first communication he shewes vnto Eue the outward beauty of the forbidden fruit, that it was faire to looke vpon, and tels her of the good estate they should attain vnto by eating of it, and so at length brings her to yeeld to his temptation.

[a] Gen. 3. 6.

Hence we must learne to haue speciall care in the good ordering of all the outward senses of our bodies, specially the two senses of learning, seeing and hearing; for by them the Diuell can cunningly conuey his temptations into our hearts: the senses (specially these two) are the windowes of the heart and soule, and if we keepe them not well, Satan will be sure to conuay some euill into vs. We must therefore obey Salomons counsell, [b] keepe thy heart aboue all watch and ward; this we cannot do, vnlesse we looke well to our outward senses, for they are the doores of the heart. This made Dauid to pray, [c] Lord turne away mine eies from beholding vanity: and Iob [d] to make a couenant with his eies. And so must wee make conscience of hearing and looking, lest thereby wee giue aduantage to the Tempter.

Looke well to seeing and hearing.

[b] Prou. 4.23.

[c] Psa. 119.37.

[d] Iob. 31.1.

Further, in this sight obserue the deep policy of the Diuell; there are in the kingdomes of the world besides glory and dignity, many troubles, turbulies and vexations; now these the Diuell conceales from Christ, and shewes him only the glory, pompe, wealth and dignity of the world, that so hee might the more easily winde his temptation into the heart of our Sauiour Christ. And this same course he still obserueth in tempting men to sinne; he hides from their eies all the miseries, plagues and punishments which are due to sin and that will follow vpon it; and shewes them onely all the profits and delights that they may reape thereby: thus hee sugars ouer the poison of his temptations, that men neuer feele the bitternesse of them till their ſoules be thereby deadly infected: but then he takes a cleane contrary courſe, and ſhewes to the wounded ſoule all the woes and terrours of Gods wrath, that if it be poſſible he may bring a man to deſpaire. And therefore we muſt be moſt watchfull of being inſnared with the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne in the falſe ſhew of profit and pleaſure.

Secondly, the diuels policy doth notably appeare in reſeruing this temptation for the laſt place; for he knowes full well how forcible with man be the temptations of profits, pleaſures & honors. From whence we may alſo learne, that temptations fetched on the right hand from honour, pleaſure and commodity, are the moſt dangerous and doe ſooneſt creepe into the heart of man, preuailing far more then temptations on the left hand, which are taken from aduerſity.

Temptations from the right hand moſt dangerous.

[a] 2. Sam. 11. 2. The Diuell foiled [a] Dauid worſe in the time of peace & eaſe, then euer he could do during the time of Sauls grieuous perſecution againſt him. And he preuailed more againſt the Church by errours and hereſies vnder Conſtantine and other chriſtian Emperours, then he could do by moſt bloudy perſecution for the ſpace of three hundred years before. Yea in theſe our daies wordly hopes haue drawn thoſe from the ſyncerity of religion, whom outward violence could not moue: proſperity is a ſlippery path wherein a man doth ſoone catch a fall, and therefore we muſt learne to be moſt watchfull ouer our owne harts when we haue faireſt weather with the world.

[b] Luk 4 5. Laſtly, S. Luke [b] addeth this circumſtance of time, that the Diuell ſhewed all theſe things vnto Chriſt in as ſhort a time as might be, euen in a moment or point of time: whereby we may perceiue the Diuels great celerity & ſpeed in doing any thing he takes in hand, herein he goes beyond all men in the world: for being a ſpirit hee is able to worke wonders, and though he cannot go beyond the ſtrength and compaſſe of nature, becauſe his power is finite, yet by reaſon of his agility and ſpeed he can goe beyond the ordinary courſe of nature in the maner of working the things hee takes in hand. And this exceeding quicke ſpeed the Diuell heere vſeth, to ſtirre vp in Chriſt a more eager deſire after thoſe ſtrange & goodly things wherof he had but as it were a glimpſe, that ſo by degrees he might worke in Chriſt a liking of them; for the nature of man doth more eagerly affect ſtrange things when they be ſudden, and the eie of man doth more wiſtly behold them. And this alſo, as the former, muſt make vs watchful againſt all Satans crafty wiles, that wee be not beguiled by him. Thus much for Satans preparation.

The ſecond point in this conflict, is the temptation it ſelfe, in theſe words; verſ. 9. And ſaid vnto him, all theſe will I giue thee, if thou wilt fall downe and worſhip me. The drift of Satan in this aſſault (which we muſt carefully obſerue) is to draw Chriſt to commit idolatry by the hope of wordly kingdomes and the glory of them: heerwith he proues him when he could neither weaken his faith by his firſt temptation, nor worke preſumption in him by his ſecond. And looke how he dealeth heere with Chriſt, ſo doth he commonly in the world; many a ones conſcience and religion doth he quite ouerthrow by wordly hopes of riches, pleaſures and preferments: heerby not only ordinary profeſſours, but miniſters and preachers of the Goſpell haue beene drawen to abiure and renounce that truth which formerlie they haue taught, and to betake themſelues as the Popes vaſſals to profeſſe and maintain his blaſphemous idolatries: heerby alſo Proteſtant merchants, are drawen to become very ſeruiceable to the Popiſh Churches, by tranſporting among them wax and ſuch like merchandize, which ſerue as neceſſary helps & furtherances to their idolatrous ſeruice. And what elſe is it that makes the people generally to change religion with the times and ſtates, but becauſe they would ſtill enioy their wordly commodities? And the more men doe poſſeſſe in the world, ordinarily the leſſe courage and reſolution they haue for the religion of God, as experience in Queen Maries daies hath ſhewed; which in generall may admoniſh vs how dangerous an enemy the world is to the power of true religion.

Satan would bring Chriſt to idolatry.

This

This temptation hath two parts: A promise made to Christ; and the condition thereof. The promise in these words, All these will I giue thee: he saith not, I will procure God to giue them vnto thee, but I will giue thee them: where we may see, that Satans drift is to cause Christ to take him for his Lord, to depend and wait on him for his kingdom, and to acknowledge him to be the giuer thereof: which notably bewraies his egregious boldnesse, that dares thus challenge to himselfe the Lords owne right, euen in the presence of him who was true Lord & King of heauen and earth. Let no man therefore thinke, that Satan will lose ought for want of aduenture; but in regard thereof be better armed against him.

Now that which the Diuell aimed at in Christ doth hee commonly effect in the world, he makes men beleeue that he is the giuer of all things and so brings many a one to relie vpon him. Indeed with their lips men wil confesse that God giues them their daily bread, euen all things they haue; but their dealings and practises speake aloud that the diuel is gouerner and giuer of all; for how do many men get their liuings? Is it not by lying, fraud, and oppression? Doe not most men heereby seeke to inrich themselues? Wel, the iust Lord neuer approueth such meanes: the diuel setteth such courses a flote, and him they serue, and on him they rely that walke therein.

Secondly, note a further reach of Satan in this promise of these earthly kingdomes, euen to ouerthrow Christs spirituall kingdome. Satan knew well that if Christ were the true Messias he should be a King, and haue a kingdome, though not earthly, yet spirituall in the hearts and consciences of men, which should be the ruine of his kingdome; and therfore he labours with Christ to entertaine an earthly kingdome, that so his spirituall kingdome might not be looked after. And looke as hee seekes to deale with Christ the head, so he persueres against the church which is his body; for Gods Church hath it ministery, which in it nature is a soueraigntie, to be exercised in the dispensation of the word: now the Diuell hath laboured by all meanes to bring this ministerie wherein the Churches spirituall soueraignty doth consist, to become an earthly lordship and dominion, that by this meanes he might ouerturne it, and make it fruitlesse in the building and vpholding of Christs spirituall kingdome: and how he hath preuailed this way the Church of Rome doth shew to all the world.

Thirdly, obserue the largenesse of the Diuels promise: he will giue to Christ, all the kingdomes of the world and the glorie of them: but this is more then he meant to our Sauiour Christ, at leastwise more then he could perform, for all these were not in his power. Now because in all things we must be as vnlike the Diuell as may be, hence we must learn to be wary and watchful to our promises, that therein we be not like vnto Satan, promising that which we neuer meane to performe, or neuer can performe though we meant it. In all our promises therefore we must looke to two things; First, whether the thing we promise be in our power; Secondly, whether it be lawfull and meet for vs to performe: And thus making promises we must endeuour alwayes to make good the same. This fidelitie in keeping promise is a fruit of the spirit, called by the Apostle, faith, Gal. 5.25. and a propertie of him that must rest in Gods holy mountaine, Psal. 15.4. not to change from a mans lawfull oath or promise, though the performance of it tend to his great hinderance.

Fourthly, in this promise of Satan we may obserue, that hee knowes all the kingdomes of the world, else he could not haue shewed them to him which heere he offers to giue: yea his offering of them, with the glory of them al, which hee could so speedily represent, doth shew vnto vs that hee is most expert in the policies and regiments of states and kingdomes; hee goes not to and fro for nought compassing the earth, Iob. 1.7. And his promise of them to Christ, was made to inflame his heart with ambition after those kingdomes and glories, that he might enioy some of them at the least. Wherein we may note that one speciall practise of the Diuell is to ouer-turne ſtates and kingdomes, by putting ambition into mens hearts after earthly kingdomes, and glories: his ſtudy is to do miſchiefe, and in the ruine of kingdoms he ouerthrowes many, and therefore hereunto hee endeuours himſelfe with might and maine. Hence come inſurrections & rebellions in kingdomes, which no time nor age could euer eſcape: looke as he ſtirred vp the Chaldeans and Sabeans to inrich themſelues by the ſpoiling of Iob, ſo dealeth he by ambitious and couetous perſons in all eſtates, as true records of times do fully teſtifie. We may ſee the truth hereof in our own land, in the manifold complots and treaſons both at home and abroad that haue been conſpired and attempted against our * Prince and State, by profane men ſtirred vp by the diuel through ambition & diſcontent: howſoeuer by Gods mercy themſelues haue beene taken in the ſnare that they laid for others. In regard whereof we are all bound to yeeld all praiſe and glory to God for his gratious preſeruation and defence both of our prince & ſtate; and to ſhew forth our thankfulneſſe by all holy obedience vnto that God who hath brought to nought the diueliſh conſpiracies & treacheries of the ambitious inſtruments of Satan. Secondly, we muſt pray vnto God continually for the preſeruation of our Prince & State; crying aloud vnto God as the people did at the coronation [a] of Salomon, for the ſafety of our Prince: yea we muſt daily intreat the Lord to bring to nought the counſell of Achitophels, & of all that think euil againſt the Lords anointed among vs. Queſt. But how comes it to paſſe that any Prince or State can ſtand, if the Diuell haue ſuch malice againſt them? Anſw. Through the good prouidence of God, who giues his good Angels charge to guard and defend, not only his children in particular, but alſo whole Kingdoms and States. And one part of their office is for the good of Gods Church to repell the rage of Satan and his inſtruments, yea to ſtand with Gods church in the execution of iudgements vpon the enemies thereof. In the ſiege of Iericho an heauenly [b] captaine of the Lord of hoſts came to helpe Ioſhuah: and when the king of Syria ſent a mighty hoſt to take the Prophet Eliſha that was in Dothan, the Lord ſent for his defence horſes & chariots of fire which filled the mountaines. And in the dayes of Hezekia, for his comfort, and the ioy of Gods people, an Angel of the Lord ſlew in the hoſt of Zenacherib, that came againſt Ieruſalem, an hundred fourefcore and fiue thouſand in one night. And wee want not ſure teſtimonie of this good prouidence of God, in the ſtrange diſcoueries of many diueliſh conſpiracies.

Fiftly, Satan ſaith, all theſe will I giue thee. This is the voice of the great red Dragon: and the ſame is the voice of the Pope of Rome, both regiſtred in their canons and daily attempted in practiſe, to diſpoſe of all the kingdomes of the earth; whereby he ſhewes euidently, that he is that [d] beaſt comming out of the earth hauing two hornes like the Lambe, but he ſpake like the Dragon. For the Lambs hornes he ſhewes in calling himſelfe the ſeruant of ſeruants; and the voice of the Dragon, that is, of the Diuel, in taking vpon him to diſpoſe of the ſoueraignties of theſe earthly kingdoms.

Laſtly, Saint Luke recordeth a reaſon, which the Diuell addeth to his promiſe, to preuent all conceit of impoſſibility in him to performe the ſame; to wit, for that [e] the power and glory of all the kingdomes of the world is deliuered to him, and to whomſoeuer he will he giues it. Wherein obſerue in Satan two notorious ſinnes: firſt, a groſſe lie; for Daniel ſaith, [f] that it is Iehouah, the moſt high God, who beareth rule ouer all the kingdomes of men, and giueth them to whomſoeuer he wil. Secondly, arrogant and ſhameleſſe boaſting, to vaunt himſelfe euen to the Lords owne face, as though he were ſoueraigne lord of that which belongs to God alone. The conſideration whereof muſt moue vs, who in all godlie conuerſation muſt be contrary to Satan, to renounce all lying, and to make conſcience to ſpeake the truth from our hearts. And alſo to abandon all vaine boaſting of our ſelues what we are, or what we can do, yea rather to ſpeake baſely of our ſelues that ſo God in all good things we do may haue the glory. Lying and bragging are the properties properties of Satan, and therefore can not beseeme the tongue and heart of the children of God.

The second point in this temptation, is the hard condition which Satan would haue Christ to yeeld vnto for this gift; If thou wilt fall down & worship me: euen to commit most abominable idolatrie in worshipping the Diuell himselfe. Heerein we may obserue sundrie things:

Firſt, that it is a principall part of the Diuels endeuours against Gods church, to seeke the ouerthrow of true religion, and the pure worship of God, by sowing therein the seeds of heresies and idolatries; for if he dares be thus bold with Christ the head, as to seeke to draw him from the worship of his Father to such abominable idolatrie, what will he not attempt with silly and sinfull men? The Scriptures are plentifull in shewing his indeuours this way. Michaiah saw in vi-

[b] Zak.3.1. [b] the high Priest stood before the Lord, Satan stood at his right hand to resist him, hee sought to hinder the building and worship of the materiall temple; much more therefore will he seeke to hinder the building of the spirituall temple, euen the worke of the ministery in conuersion of soules whereby they are pulled out of Satans kingdome, and made pillars in the temple of the liuing God.
[c] Matth.13. 39. Satan is that [c] enuious man that soweth tares of errors and heresies in the church of God which is the field of the good husbandman. He hindred [d] Paul from [f] Iohn saw three vncleane spirits like frogges come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false Prophet. These are spirits of Diuels, working miracles, and going to the kings of the earth: thither they go for the stoppage of the Gospell; for if kings oppose themselues they become greatest hinderers to the Gospell of all other. And these frogges, by the common consent of Catholike expositors, are the rabble of Popish Friers, Priests, and Iesuites, who seeke the infection of States throw all the world. By all which, the Diuels enmitie against the Church is most apparent.

The vse. I. This shewes what care and diligence Gods Ministers should shew for the building of Gods Church and the furtherance of the Gospell: for they should seeke to the vttermost of their power to counteruaile the enuious practise of Satan against the Church.

II. Euery Christian must hence learne, to pray not only for their owne good estate, but also for the welfare of Gods Church euery where, in the free passage of the Gospell, in the establishing of true doctrine, and in the continuance of constant obedience therunto. For Satans endeuour is to subuert and corrupt the truth, and to draw men from obedience; and vnto him Gods children must euer oppose themselues, the rather because their welfare stands in the good of Gods Church.

Secondlie, in this condition of Satans offer to Christ wee may obserue that his endeuour is to bring men to worship him: for if he durst attempt a demaund heerof at the hands of Christ, who shall thinke to escape this assault when oportunity serues him? And howsoeuer men thinke it impossible, that Satan should thus far preuaile with any, as to bring them to worship him; yet doubtlesse (though hee could not preuaile with Christ) heerein hee attaines his purpose in the world, and that with the greatest part thereof: for the three religions of the Iew, Turke, and Papist, doe at this day ouerspread the greatest part of the face of the earth; and in them all, such a worship of God is propounded vnto men, wherein God is not worshipped but the Diuell. For the euidence where-of marke these two rules; Firſt, that all doctrines deuised by men in the matter of religion, which either directly or by iust consequence oppugne the word of God, are doctrines of Diuels: 1. Tim. 4.1.3. Do-

Two rules for trial of religions.

ctrines repugnant to the word, touching mariage, and meates, are doctrines of Diuels; and so by proportion are all
2. such like. Secondly, all deuised worship of God by man, against Gods word, is no worship of God, but of the Diuell: 1. Cor. 10. 20. The things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice vnto Diuels and not vnto God. Doubtlesse, the Gentiles intended to worship God in their images, but because that worship was not according to Gods wil, the Apostle respects not their intent, as a thing that could nothing auaile in this case, but saith peremptorily, their worship was done vnto the Diuell. And in reason it must bee so, for why should wee thinke, that God should accept that for his worship which is not agreeable to his will, but deuised by man according to the will of the Diuel?

From these two rules it will follow, that the best of the three forenamed religions, is no worship of God, but of the Diuell: for all of them haue such worship as is deuised by man, & not of God; The Iew worships God out of Christ; and so doth the Turke: yea and the Papists worship God, but yet out of the true Christ; for (as hath beene shewed elsewhere) the Christ of the Papists is a counterfet Christ. And in many other points of their religion, there is apparent repugnancy to the word of God: yea of their sacrifice of the Masse, wee may as truly say as the Apostle did of heathen idol worship, that they sacrifice not vnto God, but to the Diuell; for therein is as vile, accursed and abominable idolatrie, as euer was deuised by man. So that it is plaine the Diuel doth mightily preuaile in causing men to worship him. Yea hee preuaileth thus not onely in the world, but in Gods Church; for all such as (notwithstanding their outward profession) haue their hearts set vpon the world, more eagerly affecting the honours, profits and pleasures thereof then God and his word, do in deed and truth a 2. Cor. 4. 4. worship the Diuell; for hee is the a God of this world, ruling in the heart of the children of disobedience, by the baites of honour, profit and pleasure he steales mens hearts from God, and so heerein they doing the will of the Diuell, must needs worship him; for looke whereon a man setteth his heart, that hee maketh his God.

Thirdly, heere obserue that the Diuell would faine make a couenant with Christ; for worship at Christs hands, he wil giue Christ the glory & riches of the world; heereto is nothing wanting but Christs consent. Whereby we see that it may bee true which sundrie times wee heare of, and many histories do record, to witte, that some persons doe make a league with the Diuell, wherein the Diuell couenanteth to be serviceable vnto them in procuring them honour, riches, pleasures, or great renowme for some strange actinities, wherto he will enable them, vpon condition that they for their parts giue vnto him, their bodies, their soules, or their bloud. Some indeed are of mind, that such things are meere forgeries and delusions of the Diuell, and that no league can bee made betweene him and man; but they are deceiued, for hee attempted in effect such a thing with Christ, what will hee not therefore do with silly and sinfull men, especially when he finds them cast downe with discontents? And thus much for the Diuels assault. Some make a league with the Diuell.

The third point in this conflict is Christs answer. vers. 10. Then Iesus said vnto him, Auoid Satan; for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serue. This I will handle as the words do lie in order.

Before his answer hee propoundeth a speech of indignation and detestation both of the Diuell and his offer, auoid Satan, as if he should say, I haue heard thee Satan to speake iniuriously against my fathers word, and against my selfe; and now againe, thou vttereſt blasphemy against my father, wherein thou goest about to dishonour him greatly; but I abhorre thee Satan, and these thy temptations, therfore hence, auoid, and haue no more to do with me.

In this detestation of Christ towards Satan, for vttering blasphemie against his father, in his chalenge to haue power to dispose of all the kingdomes of the world as being his own; we are taught, not onely to greeue at such blasphemies How to behaue our selues towards blasphemers.

as we shall heare vttered against God, but to testifie our detestation and indignation towards them. The world is full of blacke mouthed Rabshekaes, who wil not spare to blaspheme the glorious name of our God, & to scoffe & deride his sacred word: now whē we meet with such, we must not be like Stoicks without affection, but in Christian wisdome from bleeding harts for the reproch of God, shew forth godly zeale and indignation for the rescue of his glorie. The Hypocriticall practise of wicked Iezabel [a] in proclaming a fast vpon the false accusation of Nabothes blasphemie against God and the king, may teach Gods Church to be zealous indeed against all blasphemers. When Rabshekа [b] railed on the God of Israel, good king Hezekiah rent his clothes, and humbled himselfe in great measure for that reproch against his God. Teares [c] were Dauids meat day and night, while the heathen among whom he was constrained to liue, said vnto him where is thy God? And iust Lot [d] vexed his righteous soule from day to day with the vnlawfull deeds of the filthie Sodomites, liuing among them. The practise of these godly men must be a president for vs to follow, that we heare no blasphemie against God without detestation. And as all Gods children must practise this duty, so especially Masters of families: Dauid [e] would not suffer a lier or a slanderer to come in his sight, or to abide in his house; much lesse would he haue endured a blasphemer of God, or a slanderer of his word. The law commanded that the [f] blasphemer should be stoned to death, who wittinglie and willingly spake a word against God; and no doubt this law is perpetuall. Let a man but speake a word of disgrace against an earthlie prince, and it costs him his life, and that iustlie: how much more then should he die the death though he had a thousand liues, that shall blaspheme the king of kings? Shal one that hath been baptized into the name of Christ, say there is no God, and that the Scriptures are but a deuice of man, and yet liue? God forbid. for this hellish sinne defiles a kingdome. And therefore the Magistrate with the sword of iustice must cry out against such wretches, Away from vs blasphemers.

Secondly, in this Assent of Christ giuen to Satan, wee learne how to behaue our selues against enticers from religion and the obedience of God; wee must hold them as limmes of the Diuell, and in that regard haue nothing to do with them, but with Christ bid them auoid from vs. The [g] Lord commanded that in this case, Parents should not spare their owne children; nor children spare their Parents, if they were enticers to idolatrie, but their owne hands must be first vpon them to put them to death: Our Sauiour Christ would not spare Peter when he gaue him bad counsell, to spare himselfe from suffering that which God hath ordained for him, but saith vnto him, [h] get behind me Satan. So that we are without excuse if we shal reiect this counsel of Salomō, [i] Heare no more the instruction, that causeth to erre from the words of knowledge.

[g] Deutr. 13. 6-9.

[h] Matth. 16. 23.

[i] Prou. 19. 27.

Thirdly, heereby we also learne how to behaue our selues towards satan when he is violent and importunate in his temptations, to wit, that howsoeuer we may reply to them out of Gods word when they are more milde, yet when Satan begins therein to shew his force and violence we must not reason with him; for Christ would not endure his blasphemy, though hee answered his temptations. In schooles of learning it is counted a simple part to hold alwaies to the conclusion; but in the schole of Christ when the conscience is to deale with Satan, the safest way is by both hands of faith to lay fast hold of the conclusion, cleaue fast to Christ, let the Diuell say what he wil, be not drawen thence one iot.

After Christ hath shewed his detestation to Satans blasphemy he answers his temptation; saying, It is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, &c. And whereas he saith the third time, it is written, taking his answer from the Scripture; it teacheth vs that Scripture of it selfe is of power sufficient to vanquish the Diuell. This the Church of Rome wil not admit; for they make Scripture to bee of two kinds; inward and outward; By inward Scripture they meane, the vniuer-ſall conſent of all Catholikes in all ages. And by outward Scripture, they vnderſtand the written word contained in the Bible. Now they ſay, inward Scripture is the more excellent; for the outward Scripture they call a dead letter, of ſmale or no power; & they make generall councels equall with them for ſubſtance of doctrine. If this were true, Chriſt would not haue alledged outward Scripture, as they call it; but hee knew the written word was the powerfull weapon, ſufficient to vanquiſh the Diuell. And therefore heerein they doe ſhamefully blaſpheme the truth of God, and ſo God himſelfe.

Secondly, this allegation of Chriſt teacheth vs, how to behaue our ſelues againſt all enemies to the truth, that would allure vs to hereſie, as to Popery, Anabaptiſme or ſuch like; namely to ſtick faſt to the text of Scripture, and not to ſuffer our ſelues by any meanes to bee drawen from it. It may bee thou art vnlearned and thine enemie both learned and eloquent; yet heere is thy refuge, cleaue the faſter to this written word, and if thou haue one text for thy truth, make more account thereof, then of all the teſtimonies of councels, fathers, or men whatſoeuer. This inſtruction is needfull, for it may bee God will ſuffer ſeducers to try his children, and then, vnleſſe they keep ſure this ground of faith, they ſhall ſurely be ſeduced.

The text which Chriſt alledgeth for his anſwer, is taken out of Deutr. 6. 13. where the words are thus read; Thou ſhalt feare the Lord thy God, and ſerue him. At the firſt, it may ſeem that Chriſt miſalledgeth that text, and corrupteth it: for where Moſes ſaith, Thou ſhalt feare the Lord thy God; Chriſt ſaith, Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God: and to the latter part Chriſt addeth the word onely; ſaying, him onely ſhalt thou ſerue, for that which Moſes ſaith, and ſerue him. But the truth is, heere is no corruption, but a moſt worthy allegation, as wee ſhall plainly ſee, if wee conſider two things: firſt, that Chriſt and his Apoſtles in alledging the Scriptures of the old Teſtament, did not ſo much reſpect the words as the true and proper meaning of the place. Secondly, that they oft expound the places which they alledge, and therupon do ſometimes vary in word, but ſtil retaine the true ſenſe and meaning. So it is in this text alleaged: Moſes ſaith, thou ſhalt feare the Lord thy God, vnderſtanding by feare, religious awe and reuerence: And Chriſt ſaying, thou ſhalt worſhip or adore the Lord thy God, vnderſtandeth by worſhip, outward adoration in bowing of the body, whereby we teſtifie the inward awe and reuerence of the heart, as when we humble our ſelues to call vpon God by praier. And this change of words by Chriſt, ſerues for excellent vſe in this place, to wit, to let vs more clearly ſee what this feare of God is. To feare God in that place is from a reuerent awe of the heart towards God to humble a mans ſelfe in proſtrating his body before the Lord, either to praiſe God for benefits receiued, or to pray vnto him for gifts and graces needfull. Againe, for the word which he addeth, therein is no fault at all, for the ful ſenſe and true meaning of Moſes text muſt needs include ſo much, as the prohibition annexed in the verſe following doth plainly ſhew: for ſaying thou ſhalt feare the Lord thy God and ſerue him: and adding, Thou ſhalt not walke after other Gods, verſ. 14. is it not all one, as if hee had ſaid, thou ſhalt ſerue him only? ſo that we haue iuſt cauſe to bleſſe God for the true and plaine explaning of the words, and not to ſurmiſe the leaſt corruption in the alledging of them. Verſ. 13.

Now then for our further inſtruction in this text alledged, conſider two points: firſt, what worſhip and ſeruice is: ſecondly, to whom it belongeth. Firſt, worſhip in generall betokeneth, the exhibiting and giuing of reuerence and honour to another. This worſhip is two-fold; Ciuill, or Diuine; Ciuill worſhip is that outward reuerence and honour which one man giues to another, as by proſtrating the body, bowing the knee &c. The end of Ciuill worſhip is, to teſtifie and acknowledge ſuperiority and prehemineence in another, either for authority and office, as the ſubiect worſhips his king and gouernour; or for gifts and graces, or for old age; as inferiours in gifts Worſhip in generall. Ciuill worſhip.

gifts and yonger in age by due reuerence must acknowledge. In this Ciuill maner did Iacob bow himselfe seuen times to his brother Esau, thereby acknowledging him for his superiour and better, Gen. 33. 3. Thus also did Abraham bow himselfe before the Hittites, Gen. 23. 7. And Lot vnto the Angels that came into Sodome, taking them to be but men, Gen. 19. 1. And in this ciuill maner it is lawfull to kneele before Kings and Princes, to testifie our subiection vnto them, and loyall acknowledgement of their preheminence ouer vs vnder God.

Diuine worship. Diuine worship is the ascribing of Diuinity to the thing we honour, wherby we make it vnto vs some diuine thing aboue the order of any creature. A man may ascribe Diuinity vnto a thing foure waies: first, by attributing the Godhead vnto it, or giuing vnto it such honour whereby he acknowledgeth the same to be God. Secondly, by ascribing vnto it the attributes of God, as omnipresence, omnipotency, to bee most iust, to know all things &c. Thirdly, by accepting and acknowledging it to be the Creator and Gouernour of all things. Fourthly, by acknowledging it to bee the giuer of all good things, the defender and deliuerer from all euill. And to whatsoeuer thing in worship a man ascribes any of these, to the same doth he ascribe Diuinity. This diuine worship doth principally consist in religion and piety; for by religion, which indeed is Gods worship, and by piety, do men ascribe vnto a thing diuine and religious honour.

Diuine worship is two fold: Inward in the mind; or outward in the body. Inward diuine worship is, whē a man giues his heart & soule to any thing, deuoting thereto the affections of his heart, as loue, feare, ioy, hope, faith and confidence, and that becaus he conceiueth it to be God, hauing diuine properties, as omnipotency, infinite wisedome, iustice, mercy, &c. or being the Creator and Gouernour of all; or the giuer of all good things vnto him, and his preseruer from all euill. This deuoting of the heart and soule vnto God with the faculties & affections therof, is the ground and substance of all diuine worship, and indeed can be giuen to nothing but to that which is God, or conceiued of as God. Outward diuine worship is, when a man shall any way bow, prostrate, or cast downe his body to any thing, thereby to testifie, that his mind and heart are deuoted to it: as that hee holds it to be God, to be omniporent, &c Creator and gouernour, and his preseruer; and therfore hee doth repose his trust and affiance therein, set his loue, ioy, and feare thereon aboue all other things. And heere wee may obserue a difference betweene Ciuill worship and Diuine. By outward ciuill worship we only acknowledge preheminence and superiority in another, in regard of authority, of gifts, age or such like. But by outward diuine worship wee acknowledge diuinity to be in the thing wherto we bow or prostrate our selues. Againe, wee must heere also remember, that outward diuine worship serues onely to testifie the inward, euen to make knowen what thing it is which wee conceiue to be God, and whereto wee haue denoted the affections of our hearts.

Difference betweene ciuill worship and diuine.

Thus we see what worship is, and the kinds thereof. And heere we must vnderstand our Sauiour Christ to meane, outward diuine worship, as if hee should say, Thou shalt religiously submit, bow or prostrate thy body vnto God in praier or thanksgiuing, thereby testifying that thou hast deuoted thy heart and soule vnto him, not onely conceiuing him to be the diuine essence, omnipotent, infinite &c. but also that thou doest rest and relie on him as on thy Creator, who doth blesse thee with all good things and preserue thee from all euill.

Besides this worship, Christ doth mention a serving of God, which being distinguished from worship must needs import some other thing. Seruice in generall, is nothing else but the giuing and performing of obedience to the commandement of another. This seruice is twofold; absolute, or in part. Absolute seruice is, when a man obeies the commandement of another without any condition or exception, and that not only in body outwardly, but in soule and conscience, in thought, will & affection.

Seruice.

Absolute.

And

And this absolute seruice is proper to God alone, for wee must neuer call his commandements into question, but looke what God commands and as hee commands it, so must we simply and absolutely yeeld obedience thereto, not only outwardly in body, but inwardly in soule and spirit with the powers and faculties thereof, and in all the affections of our heart. Seruice in part, is that which is due to gouernours and superiors from their inferiours in the Lord: for God hath giuen power to magistrates heere on earth to make lawes for the good of ciuil estates, in yeelding obedience whereunto, their inferiors must doe them seruice; yet not absolutely, but with restraint, to wit, in the Lord, so far foorth as their commands agree with the wil of God, and crosse not his command. Againe our obedience vnto them is in body and outward conuersation: indeed we must from the heart yeeld seruice and obedience vnto them: but yet the conscience properly cannot bee bound by mens lawes, they only concerne the outward man in speech, gesture and behauiour. Now of these two kinds of seruice, our Sauior Christ speaketh here, of simple and absolute seruice, whereby both soule and body with all the powers and parts thereof yeeld absolute obedience and subiection to the will and commandement of God.

In part.

Wee see what worship and seruice is heere required: Now wee must obserue the person to whom the same is to be giuen, in these words: The Lord thy God: Diuine worship whether inward or outward, and absolute seruice of the whole man, must be giuen to no creature, Angell or man, be they neuer so excellent, but to the true God alone. The scope and drift of the first and second commandements, is to bind euery man to giue so much to his God, and to beware of giuing the same to any other besides the Lord. And the practise of the good Angell that talked with * Iohn, doth shew the same thing, for when Iohn fell before his feet to worship him, the Angell said, see thou do it not: —worship God. Where we see the good angels do striue for the furtherance of Gods right in these duties, howsoeuer this wicked spirit tempting Christ, doth heerein seeke Gods great disgrace. And thus we may perceiue that Christs applying of this text against Satans temptation is most pregnant; for Satan requiring of Christ the prostrating of his body before the Diuell, in token that he did worship him as the giuer of those kingdomes which he offered vnto Christ, is iustly repulsed by this text, which bindeth euery man to giue outward diuine worship, whereby the inward worship of the heart is signified, to God alone and not to any creature.

* Reu. 19.10.

Heere then we may learne, that it is not lawfull to giue to Saint or Angel, or any creature whatsoeuer, outward diuine worship or adoration, whereby the inward deuotion of the heart is testified. This text is plaine to the contrary, and the reason we haue heard, because diuine prostrating of the body to any thing, is a testification that we ascribe diuinity vnto it some way; which without the guilt of idolatrie cannot bee done to any creature: for let a man worship Saint or Angell by praier or thanksgiuing, and therein he doth ascribe vnto them some propriety of the diuine nature, as, to know the heart, to be able to heare, to helpe or such like. The Papists heere say, they doe not thinke the Saints to whom they pray, to be God, neither do they worship them as God. But this will helpe them little: for the Diuell moouing Christ to yeeld vnto him outward diuine worship, neuer meant, that Christ should adore him for God, but onely desired, that by this outward adoration of prostrating his body before him, Christ would acknowledge him to be the giuer of those kingdomes, (for he durst not be so bold as absolutely to desire to be worshipped for God) and yet Christ tels him, that outward diuine worship euen in respect of the acknowledgement of such a gift is proper to God alone. And yet the church of Rome do giue vnto Saints, that which the Diuell demands and Christ denies by appropriating it vnto God: for they make seuerall saints deliuerers and protectors from seuerall diseases and dangers: as the

the Virgin Mary[a] from shipwracke; S. Roch[b] from the pestilence; Raphael[c] from sore eies; [d]Apollonia from the tooth-ach; And [e]Catharine for al maner of afflictions. Yea they make them patrons and protectours of whole countries and kingdomes, as Saint Iames for Spaine; Saint Denis for France; Saint Patricke for Ireland, &c. Now sith many a one may giue a kingdome that cannot defend it, let all men iudge whether they doe not giue more vnto Saints, than Satan demanded to be acknowledged vnto him by our Sauiour Christ: yea they make them intercessours for the procuring of the fauour of God and life euerlasting: they call the Virgin Mary, the Queene of Heauen, and pray to her, that by the authority of a mother, she would command her sonne to heare their praiers; which is to make Christ a punie and vnderling vnto her; which are greater matters then the disposing of earthly kingdomes. Heere they say, that they may do that to the glorious saints in heauen, which is done to earthly Princes; for men adore them and in their absence fall downe before their chaire of estate. Answ. The adoration giuen to Princes, is but a ciuill acknowledgement of their preheminence: and kneeling before their chaire of estate, is only a ciuil testimony of loyaltie and subiection; it is not directed to the Princes person being absent, but only serueth to testifie his subiection to that authoritie and power which is set ouer him in the Lord; there is no diuine propriety ascribed by either of these vnto the person or authority of the Prince. But now in bowing down to pray to Saints, there is religious adoration giuen them, for therein be ascribed vnto them these diuine properties, that they can know the heart, heare and helpe afarre off, pray for them in particular, and such like; by all which God is robbed of his honour.

And though we condemne the Papists for giuing to Saints diuine worship, yet wee must beware of despising the Saints of God in Heauen: for there is due vnto them a threefold honour: first thanksgiuing to God for them, who inabled them by his gifts and graces, to be in their times, speciall instruments of good vnto Gods church. Secondly, we are to carrie a reuerent estimation of them being now in heauen, as of the friends of God and temples of his holy spirit. Thirdly, we are to follow the example of their godly conuersatiõs in the duties of godlinesse: But from giuing vnto them diuine worship we must carefully abstaine.

Worship of reliques vnlawfull.

Againe, if the diuine worship of saints be heere condemned, then much more is the worshipping of their reliques: then also is their instituting and obseruing fasting daies and holy daies vnto their saints heere iustly reproued. Neither can our Church heerein be condemned with them, though wee retaine the names of such daies among vs, because it is for another end; our fasts are meerely ciuill on such daies; and our holy dayes turned from the adoration of saints to the seruice of God, whereon also our conscience knowes her libertie giuen of God for honest labour in a lawfull calling as neede requires.

Further, obserue how Christ heere ioines the worship of God and the seruice of God together: teaching vs not to content our selues with doing the duties of Gods worship, but withall wee must yeeld vnto him absolute seruice and obedience. Men commonly thinke they haue done enough, if on daies appointed they come to the Church and there performe outward worship vnto God in hearing the word, in praier, and receiuing the Sacraments; these, I confesse be worthy workes if they be well performed: but heerein is the common errour, that when they haue performed this outward worship they make no conscience of absolute seruice, the thing which Christ heere ioines to worship; they thinke that in their callings they may liue as they list, either idly or vniustly, by fraud and dissembling: but seuer not thou seruice from worship, which Christ hath ioyned together, lest God say vnto thee for thy worship as hee did once to the Iewes * My soule hateth your new moones and your appointed feasts, they are a burden vnto me, &c. What, doth God hate that worship himselfe appointed?

* Isay. 1. 14. 15.

ted? no, but he hates the seuering of it from seruice and obedience wherein they should shew foorth to their brethren, loue, iustice and mercy: he rejects all seruice at their hands, because their hands were full of blood, v. 15. Read Micha. 6. v. 6. 7. 8. The offering of sacrifice was a speciall part of worship vnder the Law, and yet though a man should bring for his sacrifice thousands of Rammes, or ten thousand riuers of oile, nay though he brought his first borne, the fruite of his body for the sinne of his soule, yet all is nothing without iustice, mercy, humbling himselfe and walking with his God, vers. 8. Let vs therefore serue God sincerely in our conuersations, as wee seeme to honour him in duties of religion; let vs shew the feare of God in our liues; for worship without seruice, is like the cutting off of a dogs head, or offering swines flesh &c. as Isay 66. 3. which is abhomination to the Lord.

Thirdly, obserue that Christ addeth only to Moses words, for the better clearing of Moses meaning; which may serue for our iust defence against the Papists; they blame vs greatly for teaching that a man is iustified by faith only, saying the word only, is not in any place ascribed to iustification by faith. We answer, in all the old testament this word only is not ioyned to this command, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and serue him, and yet Christ saith, it is written, him only shalt thou serue, because the restraint and inhibition annexed, from giuing this worship and seruice to any other, doth in effect include only; euen so, though in letters and syllables we doe not find this word only, adioyned to this sentence, man is iustified by faith; yet because of the exclusion of workes vsually annexed to that phrase, as that, we are iustified by faith without the workes of the Law, Rom. 3. 28. and are iustified freely by his grace, v. 24. and that a man is not iustified by the workes of the Law, but by faith, Gal. 2. 16. hereupon I say we may hold and teach, and that truly, according to the true sense thereof, following Christs example in this place, that the scripture saith, a man is iustified by faith only.

Lastly, from this commandement we must learne our duty touching Gods seruice: in word we wil all acknowledge our selues to be his seruants, but if herein we will approue our selues to be his seruants, we must resolue and labour to yeeld vnto him absolute obedience, as well in hart, mind, will and affection, as in outward conuersation. The end of the ministery of the word is not onely to reforme the outward man, but [a] to cast downe the inward holds of sinne in the imagination; and to bring into captiuitie euery thought to the obedience of Christ. And this is done when after true repentance a man endeuoureth to yeeld vnto God totall obedience, and that from the whole man in soule and body and spirit, not for a time, but continually. [a] 2. Cor. 10. 4. 5.

VERSE 11. Then the Diuell left him, and behold the Angels came and ministred vnto him.

THese words containe the third part of this description of Christs temptation; to wit, the happie euent and issue thereof, in Christs glorious victory ouer the Tempter; which is the principall part, wherein consists the maine comfort of Gods church; for as in temptation Christ stood in our roome and stead, so is this victory not his a lone, but the victory of his Church. This issue conteines two parts. First, Satans departing from him. Secondly, the ministery of good Angels vnto him. Christs happy issue in these temptations.

For the first, Then the Diuell left him: that is, after that by temptations he could nothing auaile, then he betakes himselfe to flight. In this appeares the vnspeakeable mercie of God vnto his Church, in mitigating, and in due time putting an end vnto the afflictions and temptations thereof; for the case of Christ the head in this conflict, is the case and condition of all his members. Now heere we see what a gratious issue, the Lord put to these great assaults of Satan; in due time his enimie flies: and so will the Lord deale in all the miseries of his Church, & children: God promiseth to Dauid concerning Salomon, [a] that if he sin, hee will chastise him with the roddes of men, and with the plagues of the children [a] 2. Sam. 7. 14.

children of men: that is, with such punishments as he shall be able to beare, but his mercy he will not take from him. The Prophet Habacucke in his complaint against the wrong & violence of the wicked done to the iust, is somewhat impatient towards God for his delay, Hab. 1. 2. 3. Therefore in the vision afterward shewed vnto him, he is bid to waite for deliuerance, for though it tary, yet it shall surely come and shall not stay, Cha. 2. 3. Thus Paul comforteth the Christian Corinthians, God is faithfull, and will not suffer you to be tempted aboue that which ye are able to beare, but will giue an issue with the temptation that ye may be able to beare it ;1. Cor. 10. 13. [a] The bodies of the two Prophets who were slaine for the testimony of the Lord Iesus, are suffered to lie in the streetes vnburied, for three daies and an halfe, that is, for some short time; which being expired, the spirit of life comming from God shall enter into them and reuiue them; then feare shall take their enimies, but they shall ascend vp to heauen, and their enemies shall see it. All these doe plainly manifest Gods great mercie in giuing a gracious issue to the troubles of his childrē, yea by good experience we may see the truth heereof in the happy issue that the Lord hath put to the most fearefull temptations of sundry in our time, who haue beene exercised therein, some for a yeare or two, other for longer time euen many yeares together, and yet in the end haue sung the song of ioyful deliuerance: it may be some of Gods children beare the Crosse to their dying day, yet the Lord sustains them in it by his grace, and in the end shewes them mercy and peace.

[a] Reu. 11. 8. 9. 10.

Secondly, in this departure of Satan from Christ, we may obserue a notable difference between the first Adam, and the second. The first Adam was tempted and ouercome therein; Satan preuailed in that conflict, and brings him captiue into his kingdome, hauing spiritually taken possession of him. The second Adam is tempted also, but the Diuell can find no meanes whereby to preuaile with him: the prince of this world commeth, but hath nought in mee, saith Christ, Iohn 14. 30. But after his assault is faine to flie away.

Further, in this departure of Christ note two circumstances: when Satan departed, and for how long a time. First, when he departed is noted in this word then, that is after the third temptation; when Christ in indignation for his blasphemy against God had said, Auoid Satan; and withall had answered his temptation out of the written word, then he departs. Hence we learne:

Giue Satan no ground.

First, that the best way to vanquish Satan is to giue him no ground, but to withstand him manfully at the first: Iam. 4. 7. resist the Diuell and he will flie. Now Satan is resisted, when from our hearts we cast our soules on the promises of God conteined in his word, and in the whole course of our liues pray for strength of grace to stand against all his assaults: whereby wee may see the great error and deceit of those, who accompt of Satans temptations as of fits of melancholie, and thinke they may bee remooued by musicke, merrie company and such like; but these are no weapons to driue away the Diuell. Secondly, this also shewes their dangerous course who yeeld to Satans temptations for a time, taking their pleasure in their youth, purposing to resist him when they are olde and then to repent: too many take this course, but it is fearefull: for thus doing, they set open al the doores of their heart to the Diuel, and suffer him to take quiet possession, little considering that it is beyond their power to dispossesse him at their pleasure: For indeed heereby they become like to a man that is sick of the dropsie, who the more he drinks, the more he desires; so hee that willingly giues place to Satans temptation, the more he sinnes, the more he may; for the longer he is tempted, the more by yeelding is he weakened, & the greater is the danger of his endlesse confusion: therefore learne of Christ to resist betime.

Secondly, in this circumstance, note that when Christ rebuketh Satan and bids him auoid, hee departs and is presently gone. Was this any vertue in Satan that hee doth thus readily depart at Satans obedience is not commendable.

Christs command? no verily, though he obey, it is not praise worthy: for obedience is twofould, voluntary, and constrained; voluntary, when the creature doth Gods command without compulsion, thus Adam did before his fall, and all holy ones that are iustified and sanctified doe thus in part in this life: Constrained obedience is, when the creature is made to obey God, wil he nil he. This is like to the obedience of rebels, who being attached and arreigned for their treasons, in suffering are made to obey the Princes lawes. And such was this obedience of Satan, forced vpon him by the powerfull command of Christ, who is Prince and Lord of all creatures. And this is to be marked, that when Christ giues foorth his powerfull command, then Satan must obey whether he wil or not. This is euident by his manifold dispossessions of vncleane spirits, who came foorth at his command, though they accompted him as their tormenter. Now that which heere befals the Diuell, shall one day bee verified of all wicked men; if they will not now obey God willinglie, while in the ministerie of the word he bids them repent, and beleeue the Gospell; they shall one day bee compelled, euen at the dreadful day of Iudgement, wil they, nil they, to obey that wofull voice of Christ, Depart from mee yee cursed into euerlasting fire, Mat. 25.41. In regard whereof, wee must euer be carefull, now in the daie of grace, to yeeld vnto Christ voluntary and cheerefull obedience, vnto all his commandements both of the Law and Gospell, lest one day wee be constrained to obey in going to our endlesse wo: Satan who is a thousand-fold stronger then man, could not resist his power; how then shall wee that are but dust and ashes stand before so great a God?

This circumstance of time is more fully noted by S. Luke, saying, * and when the Diuell had ended all the temptation, he departed from him: whereby thus much is signified, that look what knowledge, craft, or power the Diuel had, that did he imploy to the vttermost in these temptations before he left our Sauior Christ. Whereby it appeareth that Christ was tempted in the highest degree and measure that Satan possibly could attain vnto: herein did the Diuell shew the extremity of his fraude and malice against Christ; which further appeares by this, that the Angels of heauen came and ministred vnto him for his comfort; so as though Satan could not taint the sacred heart of our Sauior Christ with the least spot of sin; yet in these temptations Christ was troubled with the same sorrowes, griefes & vexations, which Gods children vsually feele in their temptations: The consideration whereof serues for speciall vse.

A good ground against despaire

First, to keepe all Gods children from despaire in the greatest extremity of their temptations, euen when they shall feele their conscience (as it were) set on an Iron racke, and the flashings of hell fire alreadie kindled in their soule: for Christ Iesus the head of the Church was tempted by Satan in the highest degree, so as the Angels came to minister comfort vnto him, and yet he still remained the welbeloued sonne of God; and so may any of Gods children remaine Gods deere elect, euen then when the violence of Satan shall seem most to preuaile against them.

Secondly, this teacheth vs to suppresse all rash iudgment in our selues, of all such as shall bee exercised by Satan in extreame temptations: for oft it will fall out that the conscience of Gods child shall bee so exceedingly tormented in temptation, that hee shall cry out, he is forsaken of God, and shalbe damned; when as indeed he stil remains the deare child of God, as Christ our Sauiour did Gods welbeloued in the deepest assaults of Satan. And therefore the relation Francis Spira. published of Francis Spira his desperation, doth inconsiderately taxe him for a cast-away; considering that nothing befel him in the time of his desperation but that which may befall the child of God: yea our owne land can afford many examples which match Francis Spira, whether we regard the matter of his temptation, or the deepnesse of his desperation, who yet through the mercy of God haue haue receiued comfort. And therefore in this case Christian charity must euer bind vs to thinke and speake the best.

Lastly, Satans departing vpon the ending of these three temptations, giues vs to vnderstand, that howsoeuer the Diuel abound with temptations of all sorts, yet these three are the ground of all, and the most principall temptations that Satan hath; for in this combate he did his worst, & shewed the violence of his rage and wrath. And therefore it wil be needfull for vs to take special notice of them, as also of Christs repulses giuen vnto them, that so wee may be the better armed against them and the like. Thus much for the time when Satan departed.

The second circumstance touching his departure is, for how long the Diuel left him, noted by Saint Luke, not for euer, but for a season. Some may say, we doe not find that Satan tempted Christ euer after this, saue only vpon the crosse, where he spoiled principalities and powers, Coloss. 2.15. Answ. The Diuell tempts men two waies: sometime by himselfe, as he did our Sauior Christ in this place and vpon the crosse, and our first mother Eue in the garden, Gen. 3.1. sometime by men whom hee vseth as his instruments; thus he tempted Adam by Eue; and Iob, by the Chaldeans and Sabeans that robbed him, and by his friends who sought to draw him from his integrity, Iob. 27.5. now though Christ were not often after this tempted immediately by the Diuel, yet by Satans instruments he was many times sore assaulted to the greefe of his heart, as by the Iewes, the Scribes, and Pharisies, Herod, and Pontius Pilate, who required signes of him, mocked and persecuted him.

Luk. 4.13.

The state of Gods Church on earth.

Heere we may see a notable patterne of the state of Gods Church & children in this world, for looke as Christ their head is sore tempted, and then let alone, and yet but for a season, being tempted againe by Satans Instruments; so fareth it with them, one while they are exercised with outward temptations, and another while with inward assaults; then through Gods mercy they haue freedome for a season; but afterward Satan comes vpon them againe, either by himselfe or by his instruments: which must teach vs wisdome in regard of the state of our own Church in particular, to wit, that we must not dreame of a perpetuall freedome from trials and temptations, howsoeuer through Gods mercie wee haue inioyed admirable peace and tranquillity for many yeares together; for being a part of Christs mystical body we must looke for the same condition with our head Christ Iesus, who being sore tempted of Satan was left but for a season, and after tempted againe: and therfore wee must resolue our selues vndoubtedly that trials will come; what way, God only knoweth; but the winter of affliction will follow our haruest of ioy and peace: and the yearely visitations, by plagues & famine, are symptomes, that is, signes & forerunners of more heauy iudgments, vnlesse we prepare to meete our God in the practise of speedy and vnfained repentance. And as this is the state of our Church in generall, so is it the particular condition of euery Christian, whose life is a continuall intercourse of trouble and peace, and therefore euery child of God must be watchfull against security, and with the end of one assault, ioyne his preparation for a new: This was the state of Christ, and the seruant must not look to be aboue his master. And thus much for the Diuels departure.

The second part of the Issue of this conflict is the ministery of the angels vnto Christ; And behold the Angels came and ministred vnto him. In saying Behold, the Euangelist commends to our consideration the view of a great wonder, to wit, that that person whom the Diuel would haue had to haue worshipped him, is here worshipped and serued of the holy Angels of God. Let no man therefore iudge of himselfe, by that which Satan would perswade him to in temptation; Christs estate doth now appeare farre different from that which Satan would haue brought him to, & so shall all Gods children find it to bee with them after temptation, if therein they fight manfully after the example of Christ.

Touching the miniſterie of theſe Angels, here obſerue three points. Firſt, the bond that cauſeth the good Angels to miniſter vnto Chriſt. Secondly, their number. And thirdly, the time of their miniſtery.

I. Point. The bond of their Miniſtery, is Chriſts ſouereignety ouer the Angels, not onely as hee is God their Creator, but as hee is mediator God and man, euen the man Chriſt, (I ſay not the manhood of Chriſt) but Chriſt (as I may ſay) the man-God, is Lord of all Angels, and they doe him homage and ſeruice. And though the man-hood of Chriſt be not Lord of Angels, yet being receiued into the vnity of his Godhead, it is thereby exalted aboue all Angels by many degrees. Wherin we may behold the endleſſe goodneſſe of God, in aduancing our nature, which by ſinne was made more vile then al earthly creatures, far aboue the Angels in degree, by reaſon of this coniunction which it hath with the nature of God in the perſon of Chriſt.

Now as by this bond the Angels are made miniſters vnto Chriſt, ſo by vertue of the ſame, they become miniſters to all his true members. Iacobs ladder is thus expounded by our Sauiour Chriſt: Ioh. 1. 51. verily, verily, I ſay vnto you, heereafter ſhall ye ſee heauen open, and the Angels of God aſcending and deſcending vpon the ſon of man. This ſonne of man is Chriſt, who being God and man reacheth from heauen to earth, and from earth to heauen; to him the Angels miniſter, and by him they deſcend to miniſter to all the ſaints of God heere on earth.

The vſe. 1. This teacheth vs to admire the endleſſe goodneſſe of God vnto his Church and children, not onely in beſtowing heauen and earth vpon them, but euen giuing his glorious Angels to become miniſtring ſpirits for their protection, defence, & comfort. II. This their miniſtery, muſt admoniſh vs to carry our ſelues reuerently and holily in all maner of conuerſation. If we were in the preſence of an earthly Prince, oh how carefull would we be to our behauiour both for words & actions? Much more then ſhould the preſence and attendance of Gods glorious angels, who pitch their tents about vs if we be Gods children, make vs circumſpect to all our waies; and the rather, becauſe their miniſtery is for our comfort and protection, while wee keepe our ſelues in the ſtraight waies of God.

II. point. Their number. It is not ſaid one Angel, but angels came and miniſtred vnto him. Indeed when hee was in his Agonie in the garden a little before his paſſion, * one Angell came and miniſtred comfort vnto him: ſo that ſometime one, ſometime moe attended on him; euen as the euill ſpirits come to tempt, ſometime one alone, as Satan did heere to Chriſt, and ſomtimes moe, as they did when he was vpon the Croſſe. And as it befell Chriſt, ſo doth it to Gods children, they haue ſomtime one good Angell to attend vpon them, and ſometime many: ſo likewiſe haue they ſometime one euill ſpirit to aſſault them, and ſomtimes many, as the man in whom the legion was. And heereby falleth to the ground this common opinion, that euery man hath one good Angell and one bad attending vpon him, the one to protect him, the other to tempt him. But this opinion doth not wel ſtand with the tenour of the ſcripture, which thus ſets out the ſtate of men in regard of his attendance by Angels, that there are ſomtimes moe about him, and ſomtime fewer; whether we ſpeake of good Angels, or of euill ſpirits. * Luc. 22. 43.

III Point. The time when theſe good Angels came and miniſtred vnto Chriſt, is noted in this word Then; that is, when the Diuel had done all he could againſt our Sauiour Chriſt: they came not in the time of his aſſaults, but when Satan had ended his temptations and was gone. There is no doubt, but the good Angels were alwaies about our Sauior Chriſt attending on his bleſſed perſon, but at this time it is like they tooke vpon them ſome viſible ſhape, that ſo their miniſtery might be the more comfortable vnto him; as it is like, the diuel appeared in ſome ſhape for Chriſts greater terrour in his temptations.

In

God will sometime hide his mercy from his children.

In this circumstance of time, we may obserue a worke of Gods prouidence which he pleaseth to exercise in the time of temptation vpon his owne children; to wit, for a time to hide his mercy from them, withdrawing the sensible feeling of his fauour. Thus he dealt with his beloued sonne Christ Iesus, during the time of Satans violent temptations he concealed from him the sensible assistance of the ministerie of his Angels, they shew not themselues till Satan is departed. And so fareth it many times with Gods deere children vpon whom he bestowes the good graces of his spirit, as a nourcing-mother to try the affection of her childe, will sometime hid her selfe from it, leaue it alone, and suffer it to take a knocke or a fall; so wil the Lord leaue his children to themselues & conceale from them the signes of his fauour, suffering them to be buffeted in temptation for a time, that they may find thereby what they are in themselues without Gods grace, and by feeling the bitternesse of that estate, the more to hunger and thirst after his grace and fauour, the more ioifully and thankfully to embrace it when it is renued, and the more carefully to keepe it all the daies of their life. What made Dauid to accompt so highly of the courts of Gods house, as that he esteemed the [a] Psa. 84. 1. 2. 3. silly [a] birds happy that might build their nests by Gods altar, but his banishment thence, by the persecution of Saul wherein hee was constrained to remaine in [b] Psal. 120 5. [b] Meshech, and to dwell in the tents of Kedar? And so when the people of God were in Babell, remembring Zion they [b] Ps. 137. 1. 5. 6. wept; oh then, [b] let my right hand forget to play, if I forget thee O Ierusalem; let my tongue cleaue to the roofe of my mouth if I prefer not Ierusalem to my chiefe ioy.

But vnto many this doctrine of temptations will seeme to small purpose, nay altogether needlesse, for that they neuer felt any such conflicts with the Diuell, they defie him from their harts, and they trust to God neuer to be troubled with him: this is the common estate of most men (those onlie excepted who haue felt how hard a thing it is truly to repent and beleeue) thus to blesse themselues in a carnall peace; but sillie soules, they know not their owne hearts nor the fearfull case in which they stand; for all the true members of Christ must be made conformable vnto their head; now he was consecrated the prince of their saluation through afflictions, Heb. 2. 10. his soule was heauie vnto the death, before he could finish the worke of our life: yea he is tempted by Satan before he is comforted by the Angels; those therefore that were neuer tempted haue yet no fellowship in his afflictions, they haue not begunne any conformitie with Christ, so as it is like they are still bondslaues vnto Satan, for if they had escaped out of his snare, they should feele his assaults to get them in againe: in regard heereof the childe of God is constrained to buckle hard with Satan in temptation, and to pray many a time to be deliuered from his buffeting. And indeed howsoeuer for the present this be not ioyous, yet they may count it exceeding great gladnesse, as the [c] Apostle saith, [c] Iam. 1. 2. not onely for this triall of their faith which bringeth forth patience, but also because herein they become like vnto Christ in his humiliation, which may giue them assurance that they shall be like him in glorie: [d] for if we be dead with [d] 2. Tim. 2. Christ we shall also liue with him, and if we 11. 12. suffer we shall also raigne with him. Adde further that these men that neuer felt the assaults of Satan, are as yet vnder a most fearfull iudgment of God in hardnesse of heart. When Christ fedde fiue thousand men with fiue loaues and two fishes, [e] he distributed it by the hands of his [e] Mark. 6. 41. disciples; But after it is said, they perceiued not this matter of the loaues, and this reason is rendred, because their harts were hardned, vers. 52. And so it is with them that neuer feele the temptations of Satan, for he goeth about continually, like a roaring Lion seeking whom he may deuoure, as they whose hearts are not hardned do well perceiue. To conclude therefore, let these men who yet neuer felt in themselues these assaults of Satan, vnfainedly endeuour to change the course of their liues by the practise of true repentance in eſchewing euill and doing good; let them giue themſelues ſincerely to the exerciſe of praier for the remouall of their ſtony hearts, and the renuing vnto them hearts of fleſh, let them heare the word and doe the ſame; and then they will ſhortly ſing another ſong, to wit, that whoſoeuer will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſu muſt ſuffer temptations and be aſſaulted by the Diuell; and then will they finde that this doctrine is needfull, yea they wil bleſſe God for this worke of his ſpirit that cauſed theſe temptations of Chriſts to be ſo particularly recorded, with his happy iſſue and victory ouer them all, not only for himſelfe but for all his members, that in their temptations they may looke vnto Ieſus, leſt they ſhould faint in their minds, for in that he ſuffered and was tempted he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted, Heb. 2. 18.

TO THE RIGHT VVORSHIPFVLL AND VERTVOVS Ladie, the Ladie ELIZABETH MONTAGV of Hemington in Northamptonshire; Grace and Peace.

IVST cause there was (Right worshipfull) as well in respect of the reuerend Author, whose rest is now in glory; as also of the godly Reader, whose good herein claimes speciall stroke; that some refining hand should recommend vnto the Church of God, a more perfect coppie of this godly Exposition, than the first edition hereof did affoord: and yet no cause I find, why your worthie children, who no doubt for the Authors sake, did more gratefully accept the former dedication, should by me be deprived of their right: Nay rather, as they in heart (I am perswaded) did highly honour the Author, for his double labor in Christs vineyard; so do I reioyce, this recompence is returned for their loue, That with this worke, their memorie with posteritie shall long endure. And sith my paines herein yeelds me this right, to make choyce of some, to whom I also may commend the patronage hereof; I presume to present the same vnto your Ladiship. If this bee any kindnesse on my behalfe, I confesse it is farre short of your desert, and of my desire: some others (I know) may challenge me herein, as vnmindfull of their loue; yet because God may offer me opportunitie hereafter, to giue them good content this way, I will intreat their patience for this time, that I may ioyne the mother with the children, in this worke of loue, to affoord tuition to these godly labours of the dead. It fits you best (good Madam) in many respects, for neither will your children complaine of your admission into the society of their right, nor you esteeme the lesser hereof, because of their claime hereto by former possession. They are your owne, and you theirs; this comes vnto you all, as vnto one, accounting your vnited loue far greater safetie: and looke what grace it finds by your protection, like grace it yeelds by many a good instruction. Salomon saith, [a] Good vnderstanding maketh acceptable, (meaning to such as feare God, for [b] fooles hate knowledge) how welcome then will this be vnto you, who [c] haue sayd vnto Wisedom, thou art my sister, and do esteeme the words of her mouth, [d] The ioy and reioycing of your heart; sith herein you shall find on euery leafe, some pleasant fruit of the tree of life: a tast whereof I will here set before you, that you may iudge the better of the store. When the Disciples harts were full of greefe for Christs departure then at hand, Philip sayd vnto him in the name of all, [e] Shew vs the father and it sufficeth. Loe [f] here, behold and you shall see, not the father father alone, but with the father, the spirit of grace; and with them both the [a] Son of God, so liuely described to your view, that you may truly say of this knowledge (God sanctifying the same vnto your soule) [a] It is eternall life. When Christ would harten his Disciples for the great worke of their ministerie, hee doth it by the promise of his presence, saying, [b] Behold I am with you alway. The euidence and fruit whereof, you shall [c] hereby so well perceiue, that hereupon I trust, both you and many moe, will learne to say with Dauid in temptation, [c] I haue set the Lord before me alway; for he is at my right hand, therefore I shall not slide: And with Ieremie in affliction, [d] The Lord is with me like a mightie Gyant, therefore my persecutors shall be ouerthrowne, and shall not preuaile. What shall I say more? It would be too long to speake of the dignitie of Christs Church and ministerie here handled at large: and to instance in particulars through the seuen Epistles to these seuen Churches of Asia: onely this, in the Preface of each Epistle learne what Christ is in himselfe, and to his Church; In the Matter, behold the state of euery Church, and see what Christ approueth, and what his soule detesteth; In the Conclusion, see his bountie towards his children, and the dutie of all to him againe. The handling of these things will much delight your Christian heart: for beside the [e] Plaine euidence of the spirit, in opening the text, which is best pleasing vnto God, and most profitable to his Church (wherein this godly Author had a speciall grace) the application is so fit and pertinent to our times, that I had welnigh sayd, He did foresee what we now behold; and hath foretold, what we for our lukewarmenesse, and decay in loue, may iustly feare: [f] Consider what I say, and the Lord giue you vnderstanding in all things. Hold fast that which you haue, bee faithfull vnto death, and the Lord will giue you the crowne of life, [g] For God is not vnrighteous, that he should forget your worke and labor of loue, which you haue shewed towards his name, in that you haue ministred vnto the saints, and yet do minister. Now the God of hope, [h] fill you with all ioy and peace in beleeuing, and increase your ioy by the constant [i] walking of your children in the truth: Yea the same Lord, [k] make all grace so to abound towards you all, that alwayes hauing all sufficiencie in all things, you may abound in euery good worke, [l] which is by Iesus Christ vnto the praise and glorie of God; vnto whose gracious protection both now and euer, I humbly commend your Ladiship, with your godly familie.

Sidney Montagu Esquire, the Ladie Susan Sandys, and the Ladie Theodosia Capel, children of that right worthie and religious Sir Edward Montagu of Boughton in the Countie of North-hampton Knight, and of the Ladie Elizabeth his worthie wife, sister to the right Honourable Sir Iohn Harington, Baron of Exton, and father to the vertuous Ladie the Countesse of Bedford, Grace and Peace.*

RIght Worshipfull, as the Patriarch Iacob had [a] twelue sonnes, so Christ the Messiah had [b] twelue disciples: but as Ioseph was beloued aboue [c] all those sonnes; so Iohn was beloued aboue [d] all the disciples. Ioseph was apparrelled better than the rest, and Iohn was inspired farre better than the rest. [e] Had it not been for Ioseph Egypt had wanted her food temporall, and had it not been for Iohn, the Church had wanted her food eternall. [f] The future state of Egypt was reuealed to Ioseph, and the future state of the Church was reuealed to Iohn. The one was [g] exiled, because his father loued him; and the other exiled, because his maister loued him. The place of his exile was into the [h] Iland of Pathmos, being before by Traian put into a vessell of [i] scalding oyle. But that God who shewed his visions to [k] Abraham in the mount, [l] to Iacob in the field, [m] to Ioseph in the stockes, [n] to Moses in Midian, [o] to Ieremie in the prison, [p] to Daniel in Babylon, [q] and to the Apostle Peter in the house of a Tanner, euen he sheweth his visions to Iohn in his exile.

He is not bound to persons, he can aduance whome he list, he is not bounden to place, he can reueale where hee list. For persons, hee can preferre [r] Abel before Cain, [s] Iacob before Esau, [t] Dauid before Eliab, [u] Matthias before Iudas. He can make [w] Moses a Courtier, [x] Iob a Potentate, [y] Samuel a Iudge, [z] Dauid a King, [a] Salomon a Soueraigne, [b] Elysha a plowman, [c] Amos a Neat-heard, [d] Ieremie a Priest, [e] Daniel a Prince, [f] Isaiah of the bloud Royall, [g] Matthew a Publicane, [h] Peter a Fisher, [i] and Paule a Tent-maker, to be penners and preachers of the word of God. For place, as no time can prescribe against the King of a nation, so no place can prescribe against this King of all nations. It pleaſed Chriſt, who is called in this Reuelation, [a] that faithfull witneſſe, that firſt begotten of the dead, [b] that Prince of the kings of the earth, [c] Alpha and Omega, the firſt and laſt, [d] he that hath the keyes of hell and of death, [e] which hath that ſharpe ſword, [f] his eyes like fire, [g] his feet like braſſe, [h] the ſeuen Spirits of God, the ſeuen Starres in his hand, [i] the key of Dauid, who is called here [k] Amen, the beginning of the creatures of God; and in Daniel, hee that [l] reuealeth ſecrets, it pleaſed this Chriſt to reueale ſecrets to Iohn. Not by dreame as to [m] Iacob, or apparition, as to [n] Moſes, or by voice as [o] to Adam; but partly by viſion, and partly by voice, as he did when he turned [p] Saule into Paule. This Iohn was Legatus à Latere, that embaſſadour who leaned on his Lords breaſt. He writeth Chriſts hiſtorie, there he ſheweth his loue to Chriſt: hee writeth the Churches hiſtorie, there Chriſt ſheweth his loue to him: eſpecially in this, that he will doe nothing, which he doth not reueale to his [q] ſeruant this Prophet. For the Church in his time, wee may ſee how it ſtood, in the three firſt Chapters: and what condition it ſhould haue for the time to come, it is plainely ſet downe in the reſt of this booke. If we reſpect the generall eſtate of the Church, after Iohn had deſcribed the authors of this Reuelation, which are God the Father, chap. 4. and Chriſt his Sonne, chap. 5. hee commeth to the workes of God, which are predictions, chap. 6. obſignations, chap. 7. indignations, chap. 8, 9. Predictions of things to come, obſignations of ſuch as muſt be ſaued, and indignation on things to be deſtroyed. And for the more particular eſtate of the Church, hauing (chap. 10.) ſhewed his warrant to write, he commeth to her actions: firſt, in her Prophets: ſecondly, in her bodie. In her Prophets, their fighting, falling, riſing, chap. 11. In her bodie, comparing her to a woman clothed with the Sunne, chap. 12. and deſcribing her by her combats, conqueſts, triumphs: her combats defenſiue, chap. 13. and offenſiue in Chriſt, by words, chap. 14. threatnings, chap. 15. and iudgements, chap. 16. her victories gotten againſt that [r] whore, chap. 17. and 18. the [s] Beaſt, chap. 19. and the [t] Dragon, chap. 20. And all that glorie which ſhee ſhall haue in the kingdome of God, is vnder the type of Ieruſalem moſt comfortably ſet downe, chap. 21. 22.

The things in this booke were (I grant) very darke to them that liued in the dayes of Iohn, as the Prophecie of Daniel was to them who liued in the time of Daniel. But as that Prophecie being fulfilled, wee can now tell what was foretold in it: ſo many things being fulfilled which were foretold in this booke, we may eaſily ſee what is meant by it: and the poſteritie to come ſhall better vnderſtand this booke than wee doe, becauſe it may bee all things are not yet fulfilled. Neither is this booke like the cities of the [u] Anakims, or the [w] tree of knowledge which may not be reached to: for [x] bleſſed is hee that readeth the words of this booke. But to come to theſe three Chapters written by Iohn ſurnamed the Diuine, and expounded by one a moſt worthie Diuine. The firſt Chapter is a Proeme or Preface to the booke: the two latter are Epiſtles dedicating this booke. The dedication is made to [y] ſeuen ſeuerall Churches, and by name to the Miniſters which are called Angels. In the word of God Miniſters haue many excellent titles giuen them, (though now they are ſcarcely graced with titles) they are called [z] Prophets, [a] Seers, [b] Remembrancers, [c] Trumpets, [d] Watchmen, [e] Husbandmen, [f] Stewards, [g] Maydens, [h] Fiſhers, [i] Leaders, [k] Elders, [l] Salt, [m] Starres, [n] Angels, and [o] Shepheards. Prophets to teach, Seers to foretell, Remembrancers to put in mind, Trumpets

Theſe Churches were then like [i] Dauids Worthies, excellent aboue all the Churches of the world: but becauſe they loſt their firſt [k] loue, [l] were not faithfull to the death, [m] maintained the doctrine of Balaam, [n] ſuffered women to teach, [o] bare a name onely to liue, [p] had but a little ſtrength, [q] were neither hote nor cold, and [r] repented not as they ſhould haue done, of all their ſinnes, they are reprehended by Iohn, threatened by Chriſt, and the Candleſticke of the Goſpell is now taken away from them. Iam ſeges eſt vbi Troia fuit: Now Mahomet rageth, where Meſſiah did raigne. Are they reprehended? let vs hearken: are they threatened? let vs feare: are they fallen? let vs labour to continue. From Iohns reprehenſion we ſee, that (as one ſaid) hereof our Elders haue complained, hereof doe we complaine, and hereof they which liue after vs will complaine, that men waxe worſe, and liue not according to the doctrine of Gods word. From Chriſts threatning we ſee, that God is mercifull, [s] who firſt offereth peace before he fight againſt vs, that we being forewarned, might be forearmed. And by the wofull downefall of theſe ſeuen Churches, let [t] vs that ſtand take heed that we fall not: for if God ſpared not the [u] old world who deſpiſed Noah, the Sodomites who vexed Lot, [w] Ieruſalem which abuſed the Prophets, [x] Coloſſa, Hierapolis, and Laodicea, who reiected Paule, and theſe Aſian Churches who did not grow in righteouſneſſe as they did in riches, how ſhall wee eſcape [y] if we neglect ſo great ſaluation? and for this cauſe theſe Sermons are moſt worthie to be conſidered of in this preſent age. O then let vs now [z] conſider this ſeaſon: [a] redeeme the oportunitie, [b] not harden our hearts, but regard the time of our preſent viſitation. As the day openeth and ſhutteth with the Sunne, ſo ſaluation openeth and ſhutteth with the Goſpell. [c] Whileſt it is called to day let vs heare his voice: [d] He that laboureth in Summer is the ſonne of wiſedome, but he that ſleepeth in harueſt is the ſonne of confuſion.

All things in the world doe take their time, the bird to build her neaſt, the husbandman to ſow his ſeed, the mariner to goe to ſea, the gardener to ſet his trees, the ſicke patient to take phyſicke, the cooke to ſeaſon meats, and the dreſſer of the vineyard to gather his fruit. It will bee too late to build in Summer, to ſow in harueſt, to go to ſea when the ſhip is launched, to tranſplant trees when they are old, to take phyſicke when we are dying, to ſeaſon meates when they are vnſauorie, and when winter is come to gather fruit. The [a] fiue fooliſh virgines came too late, Dines [b] in hell repenteth too late, the time preſent is onely ours. Is the figge-tree fruitleſſe? it ſhall heare that ſentence, [c] Neuer fruit grow on thee any more. [d] Get thee then righteouſneſſe before thou come to iudgement: vſe Phyſicke before thou be ſicke, and whileſt thou maieſt yet ſinne, ſhew thy conuerſion, as the wiſe man exhorteth euery man. But alas, whereunto ſhall I liken this generation? We are like the Epheſians, wee haue [e] loſt our firſt loue; or the Laodiceans, we are [f] neither hote nor cold: or the twilight, neither day nor night: or the Autumne, neither faire nor foule: or one ſicke of an ague, one day well, another ill: or a man in a Lethargie, neither aliue nor dead: or Hermaphroditus, neither male nor female: or to thoſe creatures called Ἀμφίβια, which liue in water or on land: or the Lioneſſe, which the oftener ſhee breedeth, the fewer cubs ſhe beareth: or the Mariner, who is onely good in a ſtorme: or the Marigold, that ſhutteth and openeth with the Sunne: or the Mermaids, which are halfe fleſh, halfe fiſh. I would to God wee were either hote or cold: that as the hoteſt regions bring foorth ſweeteſt ſpices, ſo moſt zealous people might be moſt fruitfull in good workes: that as the Sunne in the heauen is ſwifteſt at her ſetting, ſo the ſonnes of God might bee beſt at their ending. But is it ſo? no: the more wee are taught, the more ignorant are many; and the older we are, the colder in religion. We haue indeed many of vs, as it was ſaid of Ariſtogiton, Martem, or rather religionem in lingua, religion in tongue: but when triall is made of vs, euery [g] Phocion can eſpie our halting: and then with [h] Archilochus we thinke it better clypeum abiicere quàm interire, euen to caſt off all religion, than to vndergoe the leaſt diſgrace for religion.

[i] The Moone deſiring to be apparelled as the reſt of the Planets, anſwer was made her, That her diuerſe chaunges could admit no kind of habite: and we deſiring to be attired with the robes of Chriſtians, it is to bee feared, that ſince we tread [k] not the Moon vnder our feet, we ſhal neuer be clothed as the Church was, with the [l] Sunne. [m] Who is wiſe, and he ſhall vnderſtand theſe things; and prudent, and he ſhall know them. Let vs therefore labor to [n] grow in grace, to abound in knowledge, to be full of good works, and to ouercome all the vnderminers of our future ſaluation. Then ſhall we [o] eat of the tree of life, not be hurt of the ſecond death, taſt of the hidden Manna, haue power ouer nations, bee clothed in white, made pillars in Gods temple, and ſit with Chriſt Ieſus in the throne of his father. And though the [p] ſonne of Iſhai cannot make vs Captaines of thouſands, yet that Sonne of Dauid will [q] make vs the ſonnes of God. That we may doe ſo, we muſt beleeue the Goſpell, put on Chriſt Ieſus, and bee renewed by repentance; The firſt is neceſſarie, the ſecond comely, the third profitable. To come to the firſt; it is neceſſarie we ſhould beleeue: for hee that [r] beleeueth not, is condemned alreadie, he is condemned in the counſell of God, in the miniſtery of the word, and in his owne conſcience, & he ſhall be condemned in the day of iudgement; for [s] the wrath of God abideth vpon him. The more I conſider the fruits of faith, the more I ſee the neceſſitie of faith. [t] Through it we are ſaued: [u] by it we are iuſtified: [w] in it we liue. We are ſaued from Sathan, iuſtified before God, & liue in the Church. In the Church? nay, by it we liue in heauen: for [x] hee that beleeueth in the Sonne of God, hath euerlaſting life. Faith is that which [y] purifieth the heart, maketh the whole man to [z] run the wayes of Gods commaundements,

[a] gineth entrance to grace, [b] acceſſe to God in prayer, [c] made the Elders well reported of, and each Chriſtian to [d] ſtand to the profeſsion of Chriſt. It is that [e] hand by which wee muſt apprehend Chriſt: that [f] ſhield by which wee reſiſt all the fierie darts of the diuell: and that [g] meanes by which we do good to others. [h] By faith we receiue the ſpirit: [i] ate members of Chriſt: [k] we are riſen with him: [l] he dwelleth in our hearts: [m] we feed on him continually: [n] reſiſt Sathan: [o] are the children of God: [p] and the word which we heare becommeth profitable. And what ſhall I ſay? faith is of ſuch a qualitie, that it [q] vniteth vs to Chriſt, [r] maketh vs certaine of our ſaluation, [s] bold in our profeſsion, miniſtreth [t] true ioy, [u] gi-ueth temporall bleſſings, [w] ſanctifieth our gifts, and maketh vs refuſe the [x] plea-ſures of this preſent world. In a word, no ſinne can condemne him who hath this true faith, and no vertue can ſaue him who wanteth it.

To come to the ſecond, which is Chriſt, the obiect of faith. The moſt comely garment that euer we can weare, it is to be couered with the [y] robes of Chriſts righteouſneſſe. [z] Iacob was bleſſed by Eſaus garments; and we are bleſ-ſed by Chriſts garments. What wee ſee through a greene glaſſe, ſeemeth all to be greene: and what God ſeeth through Chriſt it is all amiable. We muſt put on this apparell, not as the Church in the Canticles: [a] I haue put off my clothes, how ſhall I put them on againe? or as a gowne, that wee caſt off when we come to our home: but we muſt ſo put him on, that we neuer put him off againe. Wee muſt put him on by imputation, imitation, infuſion, and profeſſion: by imputation of his righteouſneſſe, imitation of his vertues, infuſion of his ſpirit, and profeſſion of his name. Thus we muſt labour to get Chriſt: for what though a man could command the earth with Alexander, the [b] ſea with Moſes, the [c] fire with Eliah, and the [d] Sunne with Ioſuah? What though he were as rich as [e] Salomon, as wiſe as [f] Achitophel, as ſtrong as [g] Sampſon, as ſwift as [h] Ahimaaz, as beautifull as [i] Abſolon, as fortunate as [k] Metellus, and deſcended as [l] Paul was of the bloud royall of Princes, yet hauing not Chriſt hee hath nothing. Yea ſay a man had the abſtinence of Ariſtydes, the innocencie of Phocion, the holineſſe of Socrates, the almes deedes of Cimon, the moderation of Camillus, the honeſtie, iuſtice, and faithfulneſſe of both Catoes, all theſe out of Chriſt, were but [m] ſplendida peccata, and to be eſteemed as [n] dung, in regard of Chriſt. For haue him and haue all things, want him and want all things: he is in, at, and after death aduantage. I come to the laſt, it is profitable to repent: for if we [o] turne to the Lord, he will turne to vs: and that wee may turne, conſider his [p] mercies in forgiuing, his [q] benefits in giuing, his [r] patience in forbearing, and his [s] iudgements in puniſhing. [t] The word preached, [u] ſinnes committed, and that [w] few ſhall be ſaued: [x] the ſhortneſſe of life, [y] the vncertain-tie of life, [z] and the certaintie of death: [a] the ioyes of heauen, [b] the torments of hell, the [c] comfort of the elect, and that elſe wee can haue no [d] com-fort in death: [e] pray wee cannot vnleſſe wee repent, and [f] periſh wee ſhall vnleſſe we repent: but bleſſed ſhall we be if we do repent. But manum de tabula Magiſter adeſt: this diſcourſe following will teach vs theſe things: and it am I bold to preſent to your worſhips. Iohn ſent his Reuelation to manie Churches; and I preſent his Epiſtles to manie worthie perſonages: and to whom may I better preſent them then to you. Iohn was a Diſciple full of loue, and you are brethren full of loue. The Preacher of theſe Lectures was well knowne to manie, but to none better than to many of you, eſpecially to thoſe who were in my time worthie members of that moſt worthie [g] Colledge with him. And the rather I do it, that times to come may reioyce in the Lord, that from one honourable roote haue iſſued ſo manie profitable branches to the Church. You are ſix brethren as pillars of your houſe, there were three ſiſters as fruitfull vines of the ſame: one is not, but is with the Lord, and her I knew a Ladie of admirable vertues: the other two are, and long may they be ſo. You are all brethren by nature of one venter, nation of one countrey, grace of one ſpirit, affection of one heart, fortune in great fauor, and of one hope by your holy behauiour. And [a] concerning brotherly loue, I need not to write vnto you: for you are taught of God to loue one another. Your [b] Scilurus at his death need not to teach you concord, by giuing to each of you a ſheafe of arrowes, which cannot well bee broken whilſt they are conioyned: for you by your amitie make your ſelues inuincible. If [c] Chilo the Lacedemonian died for ioy to ſee one ſonne crowned at Olympus, and [d] Diagoras Rhodius did the like, when his three children got the garland at a wreſtling: and [e] Iacob ſo reioyced to heare of his ſonne Ioſeph, to bee aduanced greatly in the kingdome of Ægypt: how might that happie father of yours reioyce, to ſee at one time, one ſon ſitting as high Sheriffe of the ſhire, another preaching before the Iudges of Aſſize, and the third pleading as Councellor at the barre, and all the reſt of great expectation in the kingdome? Thus [f] wiſe ſons are a ioy to their parents, and all may [g] behold how good and comely a thing it is for brethren to dwel together in vnitie. Ariſtotle could ſay, that parents were not bleſſed, vnleſſe they were after their death bleſſed in their children. And ſurely it is no ſmall part of a fathers bleſſednes, to ſee his children like to flouriſh when he is gone. Nay of all monuments that parents can leaue behind them, there is none (as one ſaith) like to a vertuous ſon. But all parents are not to be bleſſed. [h] Adams two ſonnes could not agree in one field, [i] Abrahams in one houſe, [k] Iſaaks in one wombe, [l] Dauids in one pallace, nor [m] two brethren in the diuiſion of an inheritance. And though concord amongſt brethren (eſpecially ſuch as deuide the inheritance) be very rare, yet do you, euen in this, moſt comfortably agree. You are not as Simeon & Leui, Romulus and Remus, Eteocles and Polynices, Atreus & Thyeſtes, Æta and Perſeus: but as Caſtor and Pollux, Dauid and Ionathan, Ioſeph and Beniamin; and (as a true friend is deſcribed to be) [n] one ſoule in two bodies: It ſeemeth that as Agrippa the brother of Auguſtus was beholding to Saluſt for that one ſentence, Small things increaſe by concord, but periſh through diſcord: ſo you haue all learned the ſame leſſon, as being perſuaded, that as the members of a body being once diſmembred, they cannot poſſibly be ioyned againe: ſo if naturall brethren be once vnnaturally diſioyned, no glue will conioyne them faſt againe. It were infinit to ſhew examples of brotherly loue and hatred, [o] and others haue eaſed me of this paines. Now that good God, who hath brought you from one roote, placed you in one countrey, aduanced you to like credit, and giuen you one heart, giue you alſo one inheritance in the kingdome of heauen. Thus right worſhipfull, I am bold to ſpeake vnto you, and the world knoweth I ſpeake the truth, and the Lord knoweth I deſire not to flatter. Go on therefore I beſeech you, continue in loue, bee ſetled in the truth, and labout to honour him who thus honoreth you. Be not caried away with the [p] ſhew of this world, but thinke religion the beſt nobilitie, and that as [q] Prudentius ſayd:

Generoſa Chriſti ſecta nobilitat viros,
Cui quiſquis ſeruit, ille verè eſt nobilis.
He noble is that comes of Chriſt his race:
Who ſerues this Lord, he ſurely is not baſe.

And this made Theodoſius more to thanke God, that he was a Chriſtian than a king; conſidering that hee muſt loſe the one, hee could not loſe the other. Now as to one of you I am bounden in particular, and by him, being a Miniſter, the deſpiſed miniſterie is not a little graced; ſo for him I pray, that hee may be an [a] Abraham to our Abimeleth, a [b] Nathan to our David, a [c] Iehoida to our Ioaſh, [d] an Ebedmelech to Ieremiah, an [e] Eliſha to the widow of this Prophet deceaſed, a light in the Court, a trumpet in the Church, and that [f] Ahaſhuerosh may long hold out his golden Scepter vnto him; that by his meanes [g] great men may not want ſuch as will tell them the truth: no [h] earthly Alexander accounted a ſonne of Iupiter, and that no man may be more reſpected than a good [i] Paſtor: and that he may euer remember that ſaying of wiſe Salomon: [k] He that loueth pureneſſe of heart, for the grace of his lips the King ſhall be his friend. His Cyrus will not be ſpoken to verbis biſſinis in ſilken words, to his Alexander he needeth not ſpeake ἁ ἄκιστα ἀ δεῖ ἰσα, either ſweet words or no words. For if one Antiochus might bee ſurnamed holy, and another good Prince called the Good King: much more may he, whoſe religious knowledge ſurpaſſeth all the Princes that haue beene of this nation: and whoſe humilitie is ſuch, that hee will haue his ſonne to remember, [l] that hee differeth not in ſtuffe, but in vſe from the reſt of his people, and that by Gods ordinance. I am the bolder for that one to make choyce of all in the dedication of this booke: no man knew, loued, conuerſed with, and reſpected this Author more than he. He reſorted to him in his health, viſited him in ſickneſſe, and preached a learned Sermon for him at his death. Concerning this author, as he ſayd of Carthage, I had rather bee ſilent then ſay little, and his worthie labours doe ſpeake enough for him, by name that his [m] Poſthume, dedicated to his excellent Maieſtie, by [n] an excellent Diuine. In a word therefore, whatſoeuer this man did, he deſired to profit others by it: he thought (as it is written [o] of Bernard in his life) that hee was not his owne man, but deputed to the ſeruice of others. He was neuer idle, but as [p] Hierome reporteth of Ambroſe, and Bernard of himſelfe, he did either reade, or meditate, or pray, or conferre, or counſel, or comfort, or write, or preach. And thus (as the [q] Embleme is of a faithfull Teacher) he, like a waxe candle, in giuing light to others, in a ſhort time extinguiſhed himſelfe. Yet in this ſhort time of his, what art was he not maiſter of? what vertue was hee not endued with? He was a complet Diuine, and hath his bleſſings in the Church, that no mans writings are read of all ſorts, and in all countries with greater grace and profit than his. Hee was peaceable in the Church, patient of wrongs, and free from ambition. For as Ierome ſayd of Nepotian, Aurum calcans, ſchedulas conſectabatur: hee regarded not his purſe, but followed his booke, and as Bernard ſayd, he liued in terra auri ſine auro, in a kingdome of gold without gold. An excellent gift he had to define properly, diuide exactly, diſpute ſubtilly, anſwere directly, ſpeake pithily, and write iudicially: and how hee preached, if theſe Sermons doe giue a teſtimonie, what witneſſe had they who often heard him themſelues? I haue publiſhed of his now two Diſcourſes, and I onely did it, that theſe his labours might not periſh: I haue no benefit by them, but exceeding great paines. And ſince I vnderſtand that his other labours are in the hands of his friends, to make benefit for his children, I will eaſe my ſelfe of the like labour, and be a meanes that they may haue the benefit of the future impreſsions of this booke: the which, how faithfully I haue publiſhed, I appeale to the godly and indifferent Reader, and I hope no honeſt minded

To the Godly and Christian Reader

Grace and Peace.

I Am not ignorant (good Reader) how vngratefull a thing it is, to deale by way of Censure or reformation, in those things wherin others haue gone before; and many times for the smart that followeth, do men beshrew their owne fingers. Yet the warrant of a good calling will breed peace in his conscience, that herein shall endeuour the obseruance of these rules of Loue, to wit, [a] Iudge the best of that which is done; and [b] referre his owne paines to the glorie of God in the good of others: Hereto I aime in this second edition of this booke. For my calling to this worke, when mine accusers stand forth, the executors of the dead shall answer for my discharge. And for mine indeuour to doe good; the small gaine of this reuised worke, was truly returned to the right owners thereof: If thou therefore returne glorie to God, for good receiued to thy soule, in this behalfe I haue my desire. Here onely rests the doubt, how this second edition should not be preiudiciall to his good estimation that published the former: I answer, well inough: For I hope he intended [c] the glorie of God in the good of his Church, and the credit of the reuerend Author of this worke: Now if any addition be brought hereunto, his intent is furthered, and wherein then can he be greeued? If one man should helpe poore Orphanes to some lands or liuing, he would not thinke himselfe wronged by another, that should enlarge their iust claimes, or settle their possession in a better tenure: so I trust it fareth in this worke; where thou shalt find vpon thy diligent view, in some doubtfull [d] things the Authors meaning truly cleared, his method rectified, many repetitions omitted, and the matter (specially towards the latter end) somewhat enlarged. If any thing be dissonant to the Authors iudgement in his liue-works (which I hope thou shalt not perceiue) rather charge the fault on me through ignorance, or misunderstanding, than entertaine in thy heart the least conceit of wauering lewitte in so godly, learned, and iudicious a Diuine, who hath so well deserued of thy loue, if thou loue the truth. Thus craning thy fauourable acceptance of my helping hand, to do thee good, I end with him, That is the beginning, and the end: Let him that hath an eare heare what the spirit saith vnto the Churches.

A GENERALL ANALYSIS OF the Vision shewed to John.

A GODLY AND LEARNED Expoſition of the three firſt Chapters of the Reuelation.

REVEL. 1. 1.

The Reuelation of Ieſus Chriſt, which God gaue vnto him, to ſhew vnto his ſeruants things which muſt ſhortly be done: which he ſent, and ſignified by his Angell vnto his ſeruant Iohn.

BEfore wee come to the words, wherin is contained ſinguler matter fit for the time & age, this queſtion muſt be handled: Whether this booke of the Reuelation be canonical Scripture: for ſome haue heretofore, as alſo in our time called the authority of it in queſtion. But we are without all doubt, to reſolue our ſelues that it is canonical Scripture, of equal authority with the reſt of Gods book. Our reaſons be theſe: firſt, the doctrine contained in this booke is Apoſtolicall, as any ſhall perceiue which ſeriouſly reads the ſame. Secondly, the ſtile of this booke is Apoſtolicall, that is, plaine, ſimple and eaſie, if we conſider that the matter thereof is Propheticall. Thirdly, this booke hath bene approued and receiued for Canonicall by the common conſent of Gods Church in all ages ſince the dayes of Iohn, and was neuer refuſed of any whole Church, but onely of ſome priuate men. Fourthly, the things foretold in this booke, came to paſſe as they were foretold: as among the reſt (in one for all) may appeare by the propheſie of the two beaſts; whereof one came out of the ſea, the other out of the earth, Chap. 13. the one prefigured the Romane Empire, the other the Hereticall Apoſtaticall Church of Rome: both which in all things are come to paſſe in theſe latter ages anſwerable to the Propheſie.

The contrary reaſons brought to improue the authoritie of this booke, are of no moment. 1. Reaſon. Iohn nameth himſelfe ſundry times in this booke; whereas in penning the Goſpell he did not once mention his own name, though he had iuſt occaſion ſo to do: therefore, it was not penned by Iohn but by ſome other, and publiſhed afterward in Iohns name.

Anſw. The reaſon is not good: for there is great difference betweene an Hiſtorie and a Propheſie. The Goſpell of Iohn is an hiſtorie of Chriſt: now there is no neceſſarie reaſon why one man penning the hiſtory of another ſhould name himſelfe. But this booke of the Reuelation is a Propheſie, in penning whereof it is more requiſite the prophet ſhould put to his owne name; ſo did the former prophets: Ieremy mentioneth his name in his booke at leaſt an hundred times, ſo doth Iſay and Daniell almoſt in euerie chapter. Then ſeeing they do it ſo often, it is no maruell if S. Iohn repeat his name fiue ſundrie times in this whole booke.

2. They obiect, that his ſtile in this booke is not the ſame with that he vſed in the penning of the Goſpell. Anſ. The difference of the ſtile ariſeth from the difference of the matter, ſeeing there he writes an hiſtorie, here he pens a Propheſie. Againe, he writes not his owne words, but thoſe which hee receiued from Chriſt by particular reuelation.

3. They ſay, this booke hath bene reiected in diuerſe ages, as not Canonicall. Anſ. It cannot be proued that it was euer refuſed of any whole Church, but of ſome particular men. Now the diſallowing of any priuat man, cannot make a whole booke to be reiected: for then the Epiſtles to the Hebrewes of Iames, and of Iohn, ſhould not be Canonicall; which yet be receiued of all Churches for the pure word of God.

Now come to the words, The Reuelation of Iesus Christ, which God gaue vnto him, &c. These three first Chapters consist of two parts: A Preface, and a Vision. The Preface is an entrance to the Vision, contained in the beginning of the first Chapter, from the first verse to the ninth. The Vision it selfe is set downe in the rest of these three Chapters. The Preface hath two parts: First, the title of the booke: Secondly, the inscription thereof. The title in the three first verses. The inscription, from the fourth to the ninth verse. The title in these words, The Reuelation of Iesus Christ, &c. A Reuelation is nothing else but a manifestation, or discouerie of things secret in respect of men, for the common good of the Church: and so this word is taken in this place.

Reuelations from God in Scripture, were shewed three wayes: First, by dreames: Secondly, by vision: Thirdly, by created voyce of God face to face: as we may see, Num. 12. 6, 8. Now this was not by dreame, nor by vision, or voice alone; but it is a mixt Reuelation, receiued partly by vision, and partly by voyce vttered in the vision from the Lord.

In the three first verses, this Reuelation is described by seuen arguments: First by the author: Secondly, the end: Thirdly, the persons to whom it was directed: Fourthly, the matter: Fifthly, the instruments: Sixtly, the maner of deliuering it: Seuenthly, the fruit of the Reuelation. First, the Author is Iesus Christ: It comes from him, and it is called his Reuelation in these respects: First, not to exclude the father, and the holy Ghost, but to shew the speciall office of Christ, the second person in Trinitie; which is, to reueale, to publish, and to manifest the will of God the father to his Church: and for this cause he is called the (a) Angell of the Couenant, the (b) doctor of the Churh, the (c) wisedom of the father, & the (d) word of God.

(b) Mat. 23. 8.
(c) 1. Cor. 1. 24.
(d) Ioh. 1.

Secondly, it is called the Reuelation of Iesus Christ, to teach vs to put difference betweene this, and all Satanicall Reuelations: for as God hath his true Reuelations, so Sathan (who herein may be called Gods ape) hath his counterfeit visions, and deliuers them in shew like to gods, but they differ much: First, the Diuels Reuelations be for the most part ambiguous, doubtfull, and vncertaine in speech and phrase, so as a man cannot tell which way to take them: But the Reuelations which come from Christ, the author of truth who knoweth all things, and the reasons of them are certaine and in plaine termes deliuered. Secondly, the Diuell sheweth his visions to none but to the wicked, and bad men that be his instruments: But the Lord chuseth the godly, which feare his name, and to them he reuealeth his secrets, as to Iohn in this place. Thirdly, the Diuels Reuelations euermore tend to set vp, and vphold heresie, wickednesse, Apostacie, and idolatrie, Deut. 13. 1, 2. but these that come from God serue to erect, and maintaine truth, according to godlinesse; euen pure Apostolicall doctrin, and the sincere worship of God.

Thirdly, it is called the Reuelation of Christ, to shew vnto vs his speciall kingly office in heauen: for being ascended, and exalted to the throne of Maiestie, he sitteth at the right hand of his father, far aboue all principalitie and power, might and domination; and there doth direct, rule, and gouerne his Church vpon earth according to the good pleasure of his will: for all these visions serue to direct his Church in their obedience to his command.

The Vse. Whereas Christ Iesus is author of this Reuelation; and after his ascention, and exaltation, giues the same vnto his Church: We may obserue his constant care ouer his Church in this last age of the world. Before his Incarnation euen from the beginning, he gaue vnto his people such doctrine of faith and manners, as was needfull for their saluation, and still fom time to time reuealed such prophesies of things to come as were meete for them to know.

And now behold the continuance, or rather the increase of this his care, in the new Testament: for beside the perfection of the former prophesies, and the full manifestation of his blessed will by his Euangelists and Apostles, for all things needful to be beleeued, and done, vnto eternall life; Loe here is added the Reuelation of this worthie Prophesie, concerning things to come, for the great good good, and comfort of his children to the end of the world.

Which God gaue vnto him. Theſe words be added to ſhew how this became the Reuelation of Chriſt: namely by the gift of God, that is, of God the father the firſt perſon in Trinitie: for this is a rule to be obſerued, That where the title, God, in any ſentence of Scripture, is oppoſed to Chriſt, there it importeth the firſt perſon the father: though this bee alſo true, That ſundry times in Scripture, the father alone is tearmed God, without any addition of the other perſons; becauſe he is the firſt in regard of order, and the fountaine of the deitie: for the ſonne receiueth the Godhead by communication from the father, and the holy ghoſt receiueth it from them both: but the father hath his godhead of himſelfe, and receiueth it not by communication from any other.

Here ſome will ſay, this ſeemes ſtrange, that any thing ſhould be giuen to Chriſt, ſeeing he is God, and hath all things of himſelfe. Anſw. We muſt conceiue of Chriſt two wayes: firſt, as God, ſecondly, as Mediator, and head of the Church. As Chriſt is God, the father giueth him nothing: for ſo he is of himſelfe the ſame with the father, and hath all things belonging vnto him that the father hath (excepting perſonall properties) and is no way inferior to the father, neither receiueth any thing from him, but giueth all things as well as the father doth. But yet as Chriſt is Mediator, hee is not God ſimply, but God incarnate, or God made man: and ſo is ſaid to receiue of his father, in reſpect of his manhood, as himſelfe confeſſeth, All power is giuen to me, Matth. 28. 18. And Paule ſayth, God gaue him a name, aboue all names, Philip. 2. 9. hee receiued of his father the promiſe of the holy Ghoſt, ſayth Peter, Act. 2. 33. And God made him both Lord and Chriſt, ver. 36. and ſo God gaue him this Reuelation in this place.

If it be ſaid, this makes Chriſt inferiour to his father, for the receiuer is vſually inferiour to the giuer. Anſwer. As Chriſt is God, he is equall with the father, but as he is Mediatour, God incarnate, and made man, he is inferiour, and receiueth of him. So much himſelfe confeſſeth, My father which gaue them mee, is greater than all. Iohn. 10. 29. And in the ſame reſpect, Paule calleth God the father, The head of Chriſt. 1. Cor. 11. 6. And as Chriſt now ſitteth at the right hand of his father, being Mediator, and ruler of his Church, he is inferiour to his father, and receiueth his kingdome from his father, which he muſt giue up at the laſt day. 1. Cor. 15. 24.

And here we muſt conſider in what manner God giues his Reuelation to his ſonne. Firſt therefore Chriſt Ieſus, as he is Mediator, is made Lord of this Reuelation: ſo as hee may ſay, it is his owne right, and royaltie being a part of that law, whereby his Church is now gouerned, whereof he is Lord and King. Againe, this Reuelation was reuealed vnto Chriſt as he is man, before it was euer knowne to any creature, man, or Angell, by reaſon of the vnion of his manhood, with the godhead.

In this which hath been ſaid, we may obſerue, that this booke of the Reuelation is Chriſt his right, and belongeth vnto him as his owne royaltie and priuiledge. For as the lawes in any kingdome belong to the prince thereof, and are called his lawes alone, and no mans els: So this booke, being a part of that law whereby Chriſt gouerneth his Church, is his royaltie alone, for God gaue it him, and he hath by his Angell ſent it to his Church. And that which is here ſaid of this booke, muſt be vnderſtood proportionally of all other books of holy ſcripture, Chriſt is made Lord of all, and they are all of them his royalties and poſſeſsions. And from hence will follow neceſſarily; Firſt, That no man in the world hath authoritie aboue this booke, or any other part of Canonicall Scripture: indeed Monarchs and princes haue great authoritie and preheminence in their dominions ouer all perſons, and ouer all cauſes of men: but in the Church they with all others owe homage vnto Chriſt: there hee hath the Canonicall Scriptures to be his laws, whereto euery one muſt ſubiect himſelfe. The diſpenſation of the word, and the adminiſtration of the Sacraments, bee his royall ordinances, ouer which none may dare to claime rule or authoritie; for ſo ſhould the Scriptures haue beene giuen vnto them for their prerogatiues, as they were to Chriſt; but God gaue them to him alone, and hee diſpoſeth thereof, as pleaſeth ſeth him. And therefore the Pope in taking vpon him to diſpence with the word, and to mangle the Sacraments, doth herein ſteppe into the roome of Chriſt, and ſo declare himſelfe to be that man of ſinne, by ſeeking to rob him of that princely royaltie which belongs to him alone.

Secondly, that the ſoueraigne power and authoritie of expounding Scripture belongeth to Chriſt alone, and to none other with him. True it is, that man hath a miniſterie committed vnto him, by vertue whereof he may expound Scripture by ſcripture: but men haue no power of themſelues to determine of the proper ſence of Scripture. And therefore the Popiſh practiſe in giuing to the Church abſolute authoritie to determin of the ſence of Scripture, of themſelues without Scripture, is flat robbery againſt Chriſt: for therein they giue vnto men that ſoueraigne power which is proper to Chriſt.

Thirdly, herein wee obſerue the excellencie of this booke, and of the whole Scripture of God: for all of it is the gift of the father to the ſonne, and of the ſon vnto his Church. The like cannot bee ſaid of any writings of men whatſoeuer, bee they neuer ſo excellent: herein the Scriptures ſurpaſſe them all. Whereby we are taught to eſteeme more reuerently of the Scriptures of God, than of all the writings of men in the world. Here then behold the ſinne of this age, which more delighteth to ſpeake and heare the ſayings of men in the publicke miniſterie, than the glorious word of the euerliuing God. Whereas the writings of men be full of darkeneſſe, of errour, and deceit: but the word of God is moſt holy and pure, and euery way perfect, proceeding wholly from the father of lights vnto his beloued ſonne, who hath faithfully diſperſed the ſame, for the good of his Church.

To ſhew to his ſeruants things that muſt ſhortly be done. Theſe words containe the ſecond, third, and fourth Arguments, whereby this Reuelation is deſcribed, viz. the end of it, the perſons to whom it muſt be ſhewed, and the matter which it containeth.

Arg. II. The end of this Reuelation is, To ſhew, that is, to make knowne, and manifeſt things to come, for the good of the whole Church. Whence we may obſerue, that the Papiſts erre exceedingly in debarring lay people (as they call them) from the reading of the Scripture; for the end of this booke is, To make manifeſt to Gods ſeruants things to come. And who are Gods ſeruants? Are the Cleargie onely, and not lay people alſo? God forbid: the lay man is Chriſt his ſeruant, as well as one of the Cleargie. And therefore, it is Gods will, that he ſhould learne to know and vnderſtand this booke, like one of his ſeruants. And here conſider, that if this booke of Scripture, which is hard and difficult, muſt be learned of the lay man, then much more muſt he ſearch into all other bookes of God, which bee more plaine and eaſie, as the hiſtories of Goſpell, Epiſtles, &c.

Arg. III. The perſons to whom it muſt be ſhewed, viz. The ſeruants of Chriſt. This Reuelation was not giuen of God for all men indefinitely, but for all his ſeruants, that is, ſuch alone as repent of their ſinnes, and truly beleeue in Chriſt for the pardon of them, and ſhew forth the ſame by new obedience. So hee teacheth elſewhere: The ſecret of the Lord is with them that feare him, and his couenant to giue them vnderſtanding, Pſalm. 25.14. The Lord will reueale his ſecret to his ſeruants the Prophets, Amos 3.7. And, God will not keepe backe from Abraham the thing hee was to doe vnto Sodome and Gomorrah, becauſe hee knew Abraham would doe his will, and teach his familie after him. Geneſ. 18. verſ. 17. 19. The conſideration whereof ſhould admoniſh vs not to content our ſelues with the bare hearing of the word and outward participation of the ſacraments: but to labor principally to become Gods ſeruants, and to ſhew the ſame by the practiſe of that which we heare. Hereby ſhall wee receiue inſtruction from the Lord, and grow in knowledge dayly more and more: our vnderſtandings ſhall more eaſily conceiue the will of God, for they that will doe the will of his father, ſhall know his doctrine. Iohn 7.17. Here then is the cauſe why moſt hearers after long teaching profit little, but remaine as blind and ignorant as euer they were, euen their owne impietie; they liue in their ſinnes, and labour not to become Gods ſeruants.

Second-

Secondly, in this argument we may obſerue, that Chriſt Ieſus is true God: for here he is made the head of the Church; euery true beleeuer is his ſeruant, and he his Lord: the angels of the Churches be his angels, as after we ſhall ſee: which prerogatiue none can haue, but he that is true, and very God.

Thirdly, in this Argument are thoſe confuted, which hold, that God would haue all to bee ſaued, and cals all men without exception. For if hee called all effectually, then hee would offer the meanes to all: to wit, his holy word, that ſo they might bee called to the ſtate of grace. This he doth not: for as wee ſee, this booke is giuen not to all, but to his ſeruants: and that which is ſaid of this booke, is true of the whole Scripture. The Lord ſhewed his word (ſayth Dauid) not to all the world, but to Iacob, that is, his people with whome hee made a couenant, Pſal. 147.19,20.

The fourth Argument whereby this Reuelation is deſcribed, is the matter thereof, viz. Things which muſt ſhortly bee done; that is, things to come. Whereby in generall we may obſerue a difference of this booke from the reſt of holy Scripture, which treats of things preſent or paſt: this being a prophecie of things to come.

The matter of this booke is deſcribed by two Arguments: firſt, by the neceſſitie of theſe things to come, They muſt be done: ſecondly, by the circumſtance of time when, ſhortly, or quickly.

For the neceſſitie of theſe things, they be ſuch as muſt needs be done. So ſpeaketh the holy Ghoſt elſewhere of ſundry things to come: of offences, It muſt needs be that offences ſhould come, Mat. 18.7. Of hereſies: There muſt bee hereſies in the Church. 1. Cor. 11.19. And of afflictions: Through manifold afflictions we muſt enter into the kingdome of heauen, Act. 14.22. And, They that will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus, muſt ſuffer perſecutions. 2. Timoth. 3. 12. From whence I gather, That things which come to paſſe concerning Gods church, and the enemies thereof, doe come to paſſe neceſſarily. This doctrine muſt be well obſerued: for though it be the truth of God, yet the reaſon of man will not agree vnto it: for ſome will ſay, If all things come to paſſe neceſſarily, then in their actions and proceedings men haue no free will: for neceſſitie and libertie of will cannot ſtand together. Anſw. They may: indeed conſtraint and mans free will cannot ſtand together, but mans will and vnchangeable neceſſitie may well accord: As I ſhew thus; In God there is moſt abſolute freedome of will, yet he doth many things of neceſſitie: as he willeth that which is good neceſſarily (for he cannot poſsibly will that which is euill) and yet he willeth the ſame moſt freely. So Chriſt died neceſſarily, he could not but die, if we conſider the counſell of God, and yet he died moſt freely; For he laid downe his life of himſelfe, and no man tooke it from him. Iohn. 10.18.

It will be ſaid againe, if things come to paſſe by neceſſitie, then it is in vaine to vſe any meanes for the effecting of them, for Gods will muſt be done, do we what we will. Anſw. This is mans corrupt reaſon: theſe men muſt conſider, that as God hath appointed what things muſt come to paſſe; ſo he hath appointed the meanes how they ſhall bee effected: and ſeeing the Lord hath appointed as well the meanes as the end, wee ſhould by this neceſſitie rather be induced to vſe the meanes, than any way moued to neglect the ſame. To make this more plaine, wee muſt know there is a double neceſſitie: one is abſolute; another in part. I call that abſolute neceſſitie, which cannot be otherwiſe poſsibly: as that God liueth, and cannot die, is omnipotent, infinite, &c. Neceſſitie in part is, when any thing done is neceſſarie onely, becauſe it depends on neceſſarie cauſes: as fire to burne is neceſſarie, in regard of that order which God hath ſet in nature by creation: yet this neceſſitie is not abſolute; for fire would not burne, if God ſhould pleaſe to change that order ſet in nature, as he did when the three children were caſt into the hot fierie ouen, Dan. 3. 27. Now, whereas wee ſay, Things to come muſt neceſſarily be done, it muſt bee vnderſtood of neceſſitie in part, and not of abſolute: for in themſelues they be changeable and contingent, and neceſſarie only in regard of Gods decree, appointing them which is vnchangeable: in regard whereof all things to come bee neceſſarie. And yet we may not thinke, that the vnchangeableneſſe of Gods decree doth take away freedome from mans will, it onely inclines the ſame to one part, & ſo diſpoſeth, that man ſhould freely will that to bee, which God eternally hath decreed.

The ſecond thing whereby the matter of this booke is ſet out vnto vs, is the circumſtance of time when theſe things muſt be done; Shortly, muſt be well obſerued: and howſoeuer ſome things foretold were not to be done till many hundred yeares after, which ſpace of time might ſeeme verie long, yet in two reſpects it is but ſhort. Firſt, in regard of God, to whom a thouſand yeares are but as one day, 2. Pet. 3. 8. Secondly, in regard of men, to whome a hundred, or two hundred yeres ſeeme but a ſhort time when once they bee expired, though before they ſeemed long.

This circumſtance of time is ſet down for two cauſes. Firſt, to terrifie all carnal and careleſſe men: for this booke foretelleth iudgements, plagues, and deſtructions for the enimies of Gods church, which muſt ſhortly come vppon them: which is a thing worthy our carefull conſideration in this ſecure age of the world, wherein men bleſſe themſelues in their ſinnes, without fear of Gods iudgements, and ſay they ſhall haue peace, though they walke after the ſtubborneneſſe of their owne hearts, putting farre from them the euill day; ſaying, ſpare thy ſelfe, this ſhall not come vnto thee. But ſhall the lyon rore, and the beaſts not tremble? Yet the Lord threateneth his iudgements, but men will not repent. Well, let vs conſider this, whether we be young or old, high or low, that Gods iudgements are ſhortly to come: and let this bee a motiue to raiſe vs out of the ſleepe of ſinne, and of ſecuritie. That which Peter ſaid of falſe teachers, is alſo true of all impenitent ſinners, vnleſſe they preuent the ſame by ſpeedie and vnfained repentance, Their iudgement long agoe is not farre off, and their damnation ſlepeth not. 2. Pet. 2. 3.

Secondly, this circumſtance of time ſerueth greatly to comfort the ſeruants of Chriſt, and to furniſh them with all patience, and long ſuffering vnder any aduerſitie, or diſtreſſe that may befall them in bodie or mind, or both. Indeed many are brought to impatience and diſtruſt by afflictions and croſſes: But the child of God in ſuch a caſe muſt call to mind what the holy ghoſt hath here ſet down concerning the prophecies of this booke, which foretell deliuerance for Gods Church, and for euerie member thereof: namely, That they muſt ſhortly be brought to paſſe: yet a very little while, and hee that commeth for their deliuerance, will come, and will not tarrie, Hebr. 10. verſ. 37.

Thus much for the matter of this reuelation: now followe the inſtruments whereby the Lord doth conuay the ſame vnto his Church, which is the firſt argument whereby it is deſcribed, in theſe wordes. Which hee ſent, and ſhewed by his Angell vnto his ſeruant Iohn. Where two points muſt be obſerued, firſt the action of Chriſt, which is the ground of their imploiment: ſecondly the perſons imploied therein as his inſtruments. For the firſt: Chriſt ſent and ſhewed this reuelation. This action of Chriſt is noted by the holy ghoſt for two ſpeciall cauſes; firſt to ſhew, That S. Iohn did not pen and publiſh this booke raſhly, but by calling and warrant from God. This teacheth vs what muſt be our behauiour in all our actions whatſoeuer we take in hand: we muſt looke we haue warrant from God for the doing of the ſame, by vertue of our calling, and without this we ſhould not dare to enterpriſe any thing.

If this dutie were practiſed, there would be more conſcience of the ſeruice and worſhip of God, and more care of iuſt dealing with men then there is in the affaires of this life.

Secondly, this action of Chriſt is noted to get more reuerent acceptance, and greater authoritie to this booke: for which cauſe alſo it was ſent by an holy Angell. If an earthly prince ſhould write his letter to his ſubiect, and withall ſend it by one of his guard, we doubt the ſubiect would receiue it moſt reuerently. Behold this booke is the Epiſtle and letter of Ieſus Chriſt, ſent by his Angell for the benefit of his Church. What reuerence therefore, and acceptation ought this to find? ſurely a thouſand fold more with euery one, then the writing of any earthly prince whatſoeuer.

The

The ſecond point to be obſerued, is the perſons whom Chriſt imployeth about this Reuelation, and they be two. An holy Angell, and Saint Iohn. For the firſt. It hath pleaſed God in all ages to vſe the miniſterie of Angels, as a meanes whereby hee would conuey the knowledge of his will vnto his Church. The law in mount Synai was giuen to Moyſes by the miniſterie of an Angell, Act. 7. 38. Gal. 3. 19. and Daniell receiued the expoſition of ſundry dreames and viſions by an Angell, Dan. 8. 19, and 9. 21. and 10. 14. And the ſeuen viſions which conteine the ſubſtance of this booke were ſhewed to Iohn by an holy Angell. But here we muſt take heed that we do not like the papiſts ground hereupō the inuocation of Angels, becauſe they be about vs, and bring vnto vs particular meſſages from the Lord: for before we may pray vnto them, wee muſt haue from God a particular commandement ſo to do, and alſo a promiſe to be heard in that wee aske, or elſe our prayer is not of faith: but the whole Scripture affoords no word of command, or promiſe for any ſuch action, and therefore we cannot do it without ſinne.

The ſecond inſtrument here imployed by Chriſt, is Iohn. This Iohn was ſonne to Zebedeus, and ſo kinſman vnto Chriſt; a bleſſed Apoſtle, and Euangeliſt which penned one of the Goſpels, and the three Epiſtles which beare his name. This was that Diſciple whom Ieſus loued. And to procure the more credit and reuerence to this booke, he deſcribeth himſelfe by two arguments: Firſt, by a propertie, calling himſelfe Chriſt his ſeruant: Secondly, by an effect, or action, in bearing record to Gods word, verſ. 2.

For the firſt, note that Iohn doth not call himſelfe that Diſciple whom Ieſus loued, nor the kinſman of Chriſt, which he might haue done, being allied vnto him (for Iohns mother was ſiſter to Ioſeph Chriſts ſuppoſed father, and coſin german to the virgin Mary) Iohn had learned of Chriſt himſelfe, that the hearers, and doers of the will of his father were eſteemed more deere and neere vnto him than any bond of outward allyance could poſsibly make them, Math. 12. 50. Luk. 11. 28. But he cals himſelfe Chriſts ſeruant, hauing yeelded vp himſelfe to do his will: for herein ſtands the dignitie of a Chriſtian to do ſeruice vnto Chriſt. The bleſſed Virgine had neuer found ſuch fauour with God to haue beene Chriſts mother, if ſhe had not withall become Chriſts ſeruant: She bare him in her heart by faith, as well as in her wombe by conception, or elſe ſhe had neuer beene ſaued by him. Hence we learne that outward dignities, as bloud royall, noble parentage, and ſuch like, will nothing further a mans ſaluation: he that would bee acceptable vnto Chriſt muſt become his ſeruant by beleeuing his word, and doing his will, hauing caſt off the old man, which is corrupt, and put on the new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe. So Paul ſaith, Circumciſion is nothing, and vncircumciſion is nothing, but keeping the commandements of God, 1. Cor. 7. 19. and henceforth know I no man after the fleſh, but if any man be in Chriſt, he is a new creature, 2. Cor. 5. 16, 17.

Againe, conſider in what regard Iohn is here called the ſeruant of Chriſt: not onely for that he beleeued in Chriſt, and obeyed his will as all true chriſtians do; but more ſpecially becauſe hee was an Apoſtle, and did ſeruice vnto Chriſt in the worke of his miniſterie, which was his particular calling. So Paul writing to the Romans, calleth himſelfe an apoſtle, & ſeruant of Chriſt: Cap. 1. 1. And he rendreth a reaſon thereof verſ. 9. Becauſe hee did ſeruice vnto him in preaching the Goſpell. Hence we are taught that we muſt not onely ſhewe our ſelues Chriſts ſeruants in our generall calling of chriſtianitie: but eſpecially in our particular callings and offices, after the example of Chriſts bleſſed Apoſtles. It is a good thing to profeſſe ſeruice vnto Chriſt, by hearing his woord, receiuing his ſacraments, and keeping his Saboathes: but vnleſſe therewithall we ſhewe the power of godlineſſe in our particular callings, our outward profeſſion is flat hypocriſie. This, magiſtrats, miniſters, husband, wife, parents, children, maiſters, ſeruants, buyer, ſeller, and euerie one in his lawfull calling ſhould carefully obſerue: for vnleſſe in the particular duties of their ſpeciall callings (as the magiſtrat in the duties of a magiſtrat, &c.) they do ſeruice vnto

Chriſt, their publicke ſeruice in the outward duties of religion ſhall neuer commend them vnto God, be it neuer ſo glorious, Micha, 6.6,7,8.

Verſ. 2. Which bare record of the word of God, and of the teſtimonie of Ieſus Chriſt, and of the things that he ſaw.

Here is the ſecond argument whereby Iohn deſcribeth himſelfe; namely, by this action, or effect, in bearing record to the word of God, for partly by writing the goſpell, and partly by preaching, hee bare witneſſe, and teſtified that the word of God was true. And becauſe the word of God hath diuerſe parts, the Law and the Goſpell, he ſhews in the next words, that hee meanes eſpecially the Goſpell, adding, and of the teſtimonie of Ieſus Chriſt, that is, of thoſe things which Ieſus ſayd and did. And that no man might cal into queſtion the truth of his teſtimonie, hee profeſſeth himſelfe to haue bene an eye witneſſe of all thoſe things whereof he bare record, ſaying, and of all thoſe things which he ſaw. And here he alledgeth his teſtimonie to the Goſpell, to proue himſelfe a faithfull pen-man of this booke, that ſo it might haue more reuerence: for hee which was faithfull in penning the Goſpell of Chriſt, the ſame alſo is faithfull in penning this Propheſie of the Church.

In this teſtimonie we may obſerue, that the doctrine of Gods word is an infallible marke whereby to know the true Prophet of God, and alſo to diſtinguiſh him from all falſe prophets. God foretold his people, that falſe Prophets ſhould come among them for their triall, Deut. 13. But how ſhall they diſcerne them? ſurely by their doctrine: for though they ſhew wonders, yet if their doctrine tend to draw men from the true God to idolatrie, they are falſe prophets and ſhould die. When our Sauior Chriſt was asked, By what authoritie hee did thoſe things. Luk. 20.2,3. He approoued his authoritie by the teſtimonie of Iohn, (who bare witneſſe of him, Iohn. 1.15.) and confirmed the calling of Iohn by the truth of his doctrine, which (themſelues being witneſſes) was from heauen, Luke 20. ver. 4,5.

Hereby then we ſee the error of the Papiſts, who teach, That the onely note of a true Prophet, is to confirme his doctrine by a miracle, and that hee which cannot doe ſo, is a falſe Prophet. But this note of difference is not true: for falſe Prophets may confirme their lying vanities by ſignes and wonders, as we may ſee Deut. 13. And ſo doth Antichriſt, 2. Theſſ. 2.9.

The ſixt argument by which this Reuelation is deſcribed, is the order and maner of propounding it to the Church, and it ſtands in foure degrees. First, God the father giueth it to Chriſt the mediator, and head of the Church. Secondly, Chriſt giueth it to an Angell. Thirdly, the Angell conueyes it to Iohn the Apoſtle. Fourthly, Iohn inſtructed and aſſiſted by the holy Ghoſt, deliuereth it to the Churches.

Now as this particular booke was, ſo no doubt all other holy Scriptures were conueyed to the Church: from whence we may obſerue. First, the conſtant loue of God to his children, by this his ſpecial care, in propounding and deliuering his will and word to his Church.

Secondly, that this booke, and ſo all other parts of holy Scripture, are in their kind moſt perfect and excellent.

Thirdly, that the Church of Rome blaſphemeth in calling the written word of God, a deadll letter, and dumbe Iudge; matching generall councels with it for authoritie, and teaching, that the vniuerſall conſent of the Church is aboue Scripture, for interpretation, and giues life and ſence thereto: which otherwiſe of it ſelfe were but an inckie letter, and dumbe word.

Verſe. 3. Bleſſed are they which reade, and they that heare the words of this propheſie, and keepe thoſe things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.

Here is the ſeuenth and laſt argumēt whereby this Reuelation is deſcribed, to wit, the fruit, effect, and the profit which comes of it, euen true happineſſe. This propheſie concerneth the preſent and future ſtate of the Church: the reading and hearing whereof ioyned with carefull keeping, bringeth with it true bleſſednes, that is, fellowſhip with God, and life euerlaſting.

In this argument we may obſerue, First, the end of this booke, and ſo of all other bookes of Scripture, viz. to bring men to happineſſe, to fellowſhip with God, and life life euerlasting. These things were written (saith S. Iohn) that yee might beleeue that Iesus is the Christ, and so beleeuing, might haue eternall life. Iohn 20. 31. Againe, hee declared to them the word of Christ, that by it they might haue fellowship with God the father, and with his sonne Iesus Christ. 1. Iohn. 1. 3. In which fellowship is true happinesse: Christ himselfe sayth: Search the Scriptures, for in them you thinke to haue eternall life. Iohn. 5. 39. And in this they differ from all other bookes and writings of men, for mens writings bee penned either by the light of nature, and so be erronious, and misse the end of true happinesse: or els they be penned by them which haue direction from the word, and so all the truth they haue, leading to true happinesse, is borrowed hence; when as the Scriptures of themselues doe directly guide men thither.

From the consideration of this blessed end of holy Scripture, wee may obserue, first, That the opinion and practise of the church of Rome is damnable, who barre the people of God from reading and hearing the Scriptures in their vulgar tongue. For in depriuing them of this meanes (as much as in them lieth) they barre them of their saluation, and they doe directly crosse the purpose of S. Iohn, who doth therefore pronounce him blessed, that shall heare and reade this booke, with conscience to keep and obey it, that he might allure and draw al men to doe it with delight.

Secondly, we are hereby admonished with all care and diligence to reade and meditate in Gods word: That place before named is most excellent: Search the Scripture, Iohn 5. 39. Euen as wee would search for gold or some precious thing which we would fain find. (So the word imports.) And he addeth the reason: For in them you thinke to haue eternall life. The same is wisdomes counsell, Prou. 2. 4.

But some will say, I cannot reade, I was neuer brought vp in learning, and therefore I cannot search. S. Iohn cuts off his excuse in the next words, saying, Blessed he is also which heares the words of this prophesie. As if he should say: though hee cannot reade, yet if hee heare and keepe it, he is blessed. Here then is the dutie of those which cannot read the Scriptures, they must procure others to reade vnto them, and by hearing and keeping they shall be blessed.

Thirdly, by this scope and end of Scriptures, wee must learne to carrie in mind this plaine difference between the bookes of God, and writings of men: Gods word bringeth a man which keepes it, to happinesse; but mans writings of themselues cannot doe so, vnlesse they haue light from the word of God. If this distinction were imprinted in our harts, we should not bee so delighted as many are, to heare or speak the words of God mixed with the wordes of sinfull men, specially in the publicke ministerie. In former times the Lord forbad his owne people to sowe their field with mingled seede, or to make them garments of diuerse things, as of linnen and woollen, Leuit. 19. 19. And no doubt the same God doth mislike, that the pure seed of his word should be mingled with the sayings of erroneous and sinfull men, when the same is sown vpon the furrowes of mens hearts.

Secondly, in this seuenth Argument wee may obserue the right manner and way of hearing and reading the Scriptures; a point worthie all serious consideration. It standeth in two things: First, we must set downe with ourselues a certaine end, why we reade, and heare the Scriptures, which is, that we may attaine to true happinesse, standing in fellowship with God, and life euerlasting. This end must bee the motiue to induce vs to heare, and reade the word of God; and when this takes place in our hearts, it will be of force to make vs reade, and heare with care and conscience, which beseemeth Gods word. Secondly, wee must keepe in mind the things wee reade or heare; so sayth the text: And keepeth the things which are written: which word imports, that by diligent obseruation, wee should lay them vp in our hearts. This is a weightie dutie, and seriously commended vnto vs of God. Binde vp the testimonie, seale vp the law among my disciples, Isay. 8. 16. And Marie is therefore commended, because she kept in her heart the words of Iesus, Luke 2. 19. 51. It was Dauids practise: I haue hid thy saying in my heart. Psal. 119. 11. And hereto tendeth Christs encouragement, pronouncing them rather blessed, which heare the word and keepe it, than those which haue Christ and gaue him sucke. Luk. 11.

27.28. And Iames calleth it the ingraffed word, Iames 1.21. becauſe it ſhould abide in our hearts like a ſyence in a ſtock, and neuer be remooued, but there grow, and fructifie vnto life eternall.

Now becauſe this is a point of great difficultie, and the want hereof the cauſe of ſo little profiting after much hearing and reading: I will therefore ſhew how (by Gods grace) in hearing and reading the word of God, a man may keepe the ſame in memorie.

First, a man muſt learne the grounds or elements of religion, commonly called the Catechiſme, for they are the foundation of all knowledge: without which a man ſhall neuer vnderſtand the Scripture to his comfort, nor keepe the ſame in memorie. The Apoſtle ſayth the Hebrewes were dull of hearing (the deepe things of God in Chriſt) becauſe they had not well learned the firſt principles of the word, Hebr. 5.11.12. This all ignorant perſons ſhould well obſerue, ſpecially the aged, that they may find in themſelues the cauſe of their ignorance and dulneſſe, euen want of knowledge in the Catechiſme. They thinke it a diſgrace to bee brought vnto it now they are old: but if they would not be euer learning, and neuer come to the knowledge of the truth, they muſt lay in themſelues this good beginning, and learne the principles of religion.

Secondly, wee muſt not ruſh vpon Gods holy ordinance, but before we either come to heare, or reade, with reuerence prepare our ſelues thereto. Moſt men at this day vſe to prepare themſelues before they come to the Lords table; and ſo they ought to doe before they come to heare the word: for God ordained both for this end, to bee meanes to bring men to true happineſſe: they differ onely in this, that the Sacraments are the viſible, and the Scriptures the audible word of God. At the giuing of the law, The people that muſt heare it, were ſanctified three dayes before. Exod. 19. And when they did offer ſacrifice, or eat the Paſſeouer, both prieſts and people muſt bee ſanctified: and the ſame thing for ſubſtance muſt we perform before we come to heare the word of God. This preparation ſtands in two things: First, wee muſt put out of our hearts all by thoghts, all delights, and cares of wordly affairs, and ſet our hearts (as Ezra did) to ſeeke the Law of the Lord, Ezra 7.10. Secondly, we muſt make our earneſt prayers to God, that he would open our eyes, that wee may ſee his will, ſoften our hearts, and make our eares attentiue, as Lidias were; and alſo giue vs grace to embrace his word, and keepe it: for Chriſt is the onely doctor of the heart by his ſpirit, without whoſe inward teaching wee can neuer learne vnto ſaluation.

Thirdly, when we are about the holy exercise of Gods word, the frame of our heart ſhould be thus diſpoſed.

I. It muſt bee an humble heart: for the Lord reſiſts the proud, and giues grace to the humble, Iam. 4.6. Them that be meeke, will be guide in iudgement, and teach the humble his way, Pſal. 25.9. A proud heart is ſo ſtuffed with ſelfe loue, that there is no room for the word of God to lodge in. But the heart that is lowly in it ſelfe, through the conſcience of ſinne, that is the heart in which the Lord by his graces will take vp his abode, Iſay 57.15.

II. It muſt be an honeſt heart; ſuch as hath no manner of purpoſe to liue in any one ſinne whatſoeuer, but (though it feele corruption in it ſelfe) is reſolued to pleaſe God in all the wayes of his commandements, and that continually: ſuch an heart haue the good hearers, reſembled by the good ground, Luke 8.15. As on the contrarie, that is a wicked heart, which reſolueth to cheriſh, though it be but any one ſinne whatſoeuer.

III. It muſt bee a beleeuing heart. The old Iewes heard the word, but it profited them not, becauſe they mingled it not with faith in their hearts: Hebrewes 4.2. where he compares the heart to a veſſell, in which there muſt bee both the word, and faith: theſe two muſt be mingled together, and then it will be a word of power, of life, and ſaluation. Therefore when we heare the threatenings of the law, or the promiſes of the Goſpell, we muſt labour to reſolue our hearts of the truth thereof. But incredulitie whereby men except againſt the word, as not pertaining vnto them, is the mother of forgetfulneſſe. The old world knew nothing of the flood, becauſe they did not beleeue, Matth. 24.39.

IV. It muſt bee an hearing heart: ſuch as is pliable to the word: Sacrifice and burnt offerings (ſayth Dauid) thou wouldeſt not, but mine eares haſt thou prepared, Pſal.40.6. As if hee ſhould ſay, beſide thoſe bodily eares which thou haſt giuen me by creation, thou haſt bored new eares in my heart, ſo as I can by thy grace attend and liſten to thy word. And when God ſaith Seeke ye my face, this hearing heart will anſwere, I ſeeke thy face O Lord, Pſal. 27. verſ.8.9.

Fourthly, after we haue heard or read the word, we muſt become doers of the ſame, euen in the duties of our vocation. We ſee euery man more skilfull in the works of his owne trade, by reaſon of his dayly exerciſe therein: euen ſo the conſtant practiſe of Gods word will make vs expert in it, and cauſe vs to keepe it in perfect memorie. And theſe are the right meanes to become good hearers and readers of the word of God.

Thirdly, this benediction pronoũced vpon them that heare, read, & keepe the prophecies of this booke, ſerues to induce euery child of God (as much as in him lieth) to keep in memory the whole word of God, but ſpecially theſe prophecies of things to come that concerne the ſtate of the Church; for therefore did God reueale them, that they might bee remembred. When the Angell had told Daniel the ſtate of the church, from his time to the comming of Chriſt; hee bids him, Shut vp the wordes, and ſeale the booke, till the end of the time, Dan.12.4. meaning, that he for his own comfort ſhould hide them in his heart. And Chriſt ſayth to his diſciples, When ye ſee the abhomination of deſolation, ſpoken of by Daniell the Prophet: let him that readeth, conſider it, Matth.24.15. Behold I haue told you before, meaning things to come verſe 25. ſhewing, That hee would haue his children to marke, and remember thoſe weightie things that are foretold, concerning the ſtate of the church.

For the time is at hand. Here is a reaſon of the former benediction, for ſeeing the time of the accompliſhing of this prophecie, is at hand, & muſt ſhortly be fulfilled: therefore thoſe be bleſſed which reade and keepe the ſame in memorie. And it is an anſwere to a ſecret obiection; for they might haue ſaid, we need not to reade or remember this prophecie, ſeeing it ſhall not be fulfilled in our dayes; but he addeth: The time is at hand, wherein they muſt be fulfilled, and therefore it muſt bee marked. Theſe wordes for ſubſtance were in the firſt verſe; where it is ſaid, The Reuelation was of things that muſt ſhortly be done. And here they be repeated againe. Whereby hee would teach vs, That theſe prophecies containe weightie matter, to be deepely conſidered, and earneſtly thought on. And S. Iohn repeates the ſame for two cauſes: firſt to awake the members of the church out of the ſleepe of ſecurity, and make them ſtand vpon their watch continually: for though they cannot fall into the dead ſleepe of ſinne, yet the ſlumber of ſecuritie may ouertake thē: the wiſe virgines ſlumber, as well as the fooliſh, Matth.25.5. And the ſpouſe of Chriſt, the true Church, confeſſeth, That ſhee ſleepeth, though her heart waketh, Cant.5.2.

Secondly, to confirme and hearten the church, and all true members of Chriſt, againſt the afflictions to come: for herein is the common ſaying true, He that is forewarned, is fore-armed.

Now in theſe words (The time is at hand) Chriſt would teach vs to obſerue, That whatſoeuer thing may befall the members of Chriſt in this life, whether afflictions, temptations, death, or the laſt iudgement it ſelfe, all will come ſhortly. This conſideration ought to take place in our hearts, being of great vſe in our liues: as to ſtay vs from many ſinnes, ſo to mooue vs to doe all things with good conſcience. And the want hereof is the cauſe of much euill: The bad ſeruant beates his fellowes, becauſe hee thinkes his maiſter doth deferre his comming. Matth.24.48.49. The old world went on in ſinne, neuer regarding Noahs prophecie, and ſo knew nothing till the flood came and ſwept them all away, Matth. 24.39. We ſhould lay theſe to our harts, and alwayes thinke with Paule (a) the Lord is at hand. The rather, becauſe wee haue had the Goſpell, and peace with all temporall bleſsings theſe eight and thirtie yeares: now the ſtate of the church is interchangeable, one while peace, and then trouble: ſo as it is like, this peaceable ſtate will not long continue, but we muſt bee tried. And the time of our triall is at hand, for whatſoeuer muſt befall the Church, will come ſhortly. We muſt therefore prepare for trouble, and ſo wee ſhall finde it the leſſe greeuous.

Verſ.4. Iohn to the ſeuen Churches which are in Aſia, Grace be with you, and Peace from him, which is, and which was, and which is to come, and from the ſeuen Spirits which are before his throne.

Here beginneth the ſecond part of the Preface, to wit, the inſcription of this viſion, and it hath two branches: Firſt, a dedication, in theſe words: Iohn to the ſeuen Churches which are in Aſia. Secondly, a ſalutation, in the next words: Grace be with you and peace, &c. to the ninth verſe. In the dedication obſerue firſt the penman, that dedicates this booke: ſecondly, the parties to whom it is ſent. For the firſt, the penman is Iohn, who here againe repeats his name, to ſhew and certifie euery reader of this booke, that he was without al doubt the true penman of the holy ghoſt, in writing this Reuelation. But though he repeat his name, yet he doth not adde any titles of honour, or commendation, as hee did in the firſt verſe. Wherein he giues vs a true patterne of modeſtie and humilitie, which is neuer to ſpeake in our owne cauſe to our owne praiſe, but onely in caſes of neceſsitie, when Gods glory may bee aduaunced, and the credit of our particular callings maintained. This Paule practiſed, who often humbles himſelfe, and cals himſelf (a) the leaſt of all the Apoſtles; yea (b) chiefe of all ſinners: yet when the credit of his Apoſtleſhip came into queſtion, then he ſets out himſelfe, ſhewing he was a true Apoſtle, one of the chiefe, and aboue thoſe which did falſely call themſelues ſo, as wee may find in both of his (c) Epiſtles to the Corinthians.

(a) 1. Cor. 15. (b) 1. Tim. 1. 15. (c) 1. Cor. 9. 1, 2. 2. Cor. 11. 5.

Secondly, the perſons to whom hee wrote, were, the ſeuen Churches in Aſia: concerning them note two things: firſt, hee writes to churches, ſecondly to the churches in Aſia. For the firſt: why writes he to the churches, rather thã to the church, ſeeing there is but one only Catholicke church? Anſ. The church may be conſidered diuers waies; firſt, as it is the whole companie of the elect, & ſo it is but one: ſecondly, as the ſame is parted into ſeuerall branches and companies, one part being in one countrey, and another part in ſome other. Wherein alſo, euery ſeuerall congregation, profeſsing the goſpell, is a particular Church. And ſo there may bee many Churches, all of them beeing members of one Catholicke Church: As the ſea is onely one, yet it conſiſteth of many parts, which taking their names of the countreyes whereto they adioyne, are called ſo many particular Seas; as the Engliſh Sea, the Spaniſh ſea, French, Italian, Scottiſh Seas, &c. And of particular Churches muſt Iohn bee vnderſtood in this place.

Now Iohn chuſeth rather to write to Churches, than to particular men. Firſt, becauſe the matter of this booke concerneth the Church, being a Prophetical hyſtorie, touching the ſtate of the Church to the end. Secondly, becauſe particular Churches, which bee true members of the Catholicke Church, are the pillars and ground of truth, 1. Timoth. 3. 15. And the Church is ſo called, not that her authority is aboue the word, but firſt, becauſe it is the treaſure houſe wherein the Scriptures are preſerued, from age to age, againſt the rage of Gods enemies. Secondly, becauſe the Church giues teſtimonie to the truth of Gods word. And thirdly, becauſe it publiſheth the truth of Gods word by vertue of that ordinary miniſtery which God hath ordained therein.

Secondly, in the dedication of this booke, among all particular Churches God directs him to make choiſe of thoſe ſeuen in Aſia: no doubt for ſpeciall cauſe. Firſt, becauſe they were then moſt famous Churches, as the chapters following, and the hiſtories of the Church doe plainely ſhew: Secondly, that the calling of the Gentiles to the light of the Goſpell, which long before had beene foretold, might bee more euident: for here the Iewes are paſſed by, and the Gentiles ſent vnto.

Laſtly, we may here obſerue, That S. Iohn knew no prerogatiue of the church of Rome aboue other churches: for if it were the mother church, whereon all other churches ſhould depend, as the Papiſts would haue it; I would know of them why Iohn paſſed by it in the dedication of this booke, which containeth matter needfull for al churches to know.

Grace be with you, and Peace from him which is, and which was, and which is to come: and from the ſeuē ſpirits which are before his throne. Here begins Iohns ſalutation of the ſeuen churches. Salutations be of two ſorts, Ciuill, and Religious. Ciuill, is that which men vſe ordinarily one to another, wiſhing health welfare, and ſuch like. Religious, is that, which is peculiar and proper vnto the church, comprehending in it a benediction alſo. And ſuch is this here vſed by S. Iohn. It may alſo be called Apoſtolicall: becauſe it is ſo vſuall with them in their Epiſtles. And they vſed it the rather, becauſe it is ſo correſpondent to their miniſterie: which ſtood in two things; firſt, in preaching, which is the miniſterie of grace and reconciliation, the things here deſired: ſecondly, in prayer, whereto belonged the dutie of benediction, to pronounce a bleſsing vpon the people; as did the prieſts in their miniſtration vnder the law, Num. 6. 23. and our ſauior Chriſt with his Apoſtles, when they preached the goſpell; and as euery miniſter ſhould doe to his whole congregation, before they depart. And this is alſo included in this ſalutation: for hereby they bleſſed thoſe churches to whom they did write.

But to come to the words, which bee moſt excellent, and containe in them the ſumme of the goſpell. Grace, in ſcripture ſignifieth two things: firſt, Gods fauor; ſecondly, ſome gift of God freely beſtowed. Now here by Grace is meant not any particular gift of God, but the gracious fauor and good will of God, whereby he accepts of ſome in Chriſt for his owne: for it is here oppoſed to peace, a gift of grace, and therefore cannot ſignifie the ſame thing.

Now marke, S. Iohn in this ſalutation begins with grace, becauſe it is the foundation of all happineſſe, and of all Gods bleſsings: whatſoeuer wee are, and all that wee haue, is of grace; our election, redemption, vocation, iuſtification, and ſanctification: our faith and repentance, & our perſeuerance in thē both proceed from this fountain of Gods free grace. It is the beginning, and the end of all, yea it is all in all in the matter of our ſaluation: firſt we muſt haue this, and then we may looke for all other bleſsings.

And Peace. Peace is taken ſundry wayes in the ſcripture: firſt, for welfare & good ſucceſſe in things of this world by Gods bleſsing, Exod. 18. 7. Moyſes and Iethroe ſaluting, aske each other of their peace, that is, of his welfare; and ſo it is partly taken in this place. Secondly, for that vnitie and bleſſed concord which is in the kingdom of God, among Gods children: and ſo it is eſpecially taken here. And in this ſence it hath ſix parts, euery one wherof is a moſt worthie bleſsing.

The firſt is peace with God: which is, when we ſtand in the fauour of God, reconciled to him in Chriſt Ieſus, Rom. 5. 1. Secondly, peace with Gods Angels, for they guard ſuch as be in Gods fauour, and carrie them as a nurſe doth her child in her armes, That they hurt not their foote at any ſtone, Pſal. 91. 11. and they reioyce at our good eſtate. The third, is peace with a mans ſelfe, when his conſcience will not accuſe him, but excuſe and cleare him, being waſhed in the bloud of Chriſt: This is that peace of God, which paſſeth all vnderſtanding, Philip. 4. 7. The fourth is, Peace with Gods Church, notably prefigured by the peaceable habitation of wild beaſts, and tame together, as the Lyon and the Calfe, the Wolfe and the Lambe, the child and the Cockatrice, &c. Iſay, 11, 6. And plainely to be ſeene among the beleeuers; Acts. 4. 32. Who were all of one mind and heart. The fift is, Peace with the enemies of Gods Church, ſo farre as it is for the good of the Church, and the glorie of God. So Ioſeph had peace in Pharaohs court: ſo Daniell had peace in the court of Nabuchadnezzar: for when the three children were caſt into the ouen, wee muſt not thinke, that hee did reuolt vnto idolatrie, or hide himſelfe: but being in fauour in the Court, obtained priuiledge to bee excuſed. The ſixt is, Peace with all the creatures of God: with the beaſts of the field, foules of the aire, and fiſhes of the ſea. This the Lord promiſeth in the couenant that he will make for them with all his creatures, Hoſea, 2. verſ. 18. yea, The child of God ſhall tread vpon the Lyon and the Serpent, and they ſhall not hurt him, Pſalm. 91. Verſ. 13. And this his peace ſtands herein, That by Gods bleſſed prouidence hee ſhall find helpe, and comfort from all Gods creatures.

In this place, whether we take peace for outward welfare, or for the concord of Gods church, yet it is placed after grace, because it followeth as a fruit thereof: First, a man must bee in Gods fauour, and then come all the blessings of peace vnto him. This then is the meaning, Grace be with you and peace. That is, I wish you the fauor of God in Christ with peace, the blessed fruit thereof, euen all outward welfare, and especially the concord of Gods church, hauing peace with God, with his holy Angels, with his church, with your owne hearts, with your enemies (as farre as may bee for Gods glorie) and with all his creatures.

The Vse. Whereas S. Iohn wisheth grace vnto the churches in the first place; he would teach vs, That the fauour of God is to be sought for aboue all things; for the Apostles practise must be our precept. So did Dauid: Many say, who will shewe vs any good: But Lord lift thou vp the light of thy countenance vpon me, Psal. 4. 6. As if hee should say, Let the most of the world seeke what they will, as riches, pleasure, &c. yet my desire is of thy loue and fauour aboue all. And oftentimes hee calleth God his portion, his rocke, and castle of defence, the thing that he longeth for; to shewe, that all his ioy was in Gods fauour. And so it should bee with vs: but wee little practise this, because we bring from our cradles natural presumption, which persuades vs, that we bee in the fauour and loue of God. But wee must cast off this false persuasion, and take a new course; and labour first to see, that we be out of Gods fauour, lost sheepe, prodigall childrē in our selues, yea, the very firebrands of hell: and this, to see our owne want of grace, is the first step to grace. Secondly, feeling this want and miserie in our selues, we must earnestly desire, and in our soules hunger and thirst after the loue and fauour of God in Christ aboue all earthly things. Thirdly, we must by the hand of true faith lay hold vpon the grace and mercie of God in Christ, propounded in the promises of the Gospell, and apply them to our selues particularly.

Secondly, after grace he wisheth vnto them Peace: where note, the true order of seeking for the blessings of this life, we must not begin with welfare and prosperitie, but our first and chiefest care must be, to obtaine the grace and fauour of God. So Christ bids vs, first, to seeke the kingdome of God, and his righteousnesse: for when we are in Gods kingdome of grace reconciled to him in Christ, then all things needfull shall bee ministred to vs, Matth. 6. 33.

The Vse. This discouers the bad practise of most men euery where, who in seeking the blessings of God, begin at the wrong end. They will toyle themselues in their callings to get wealth, honour, pleasures, and preferments; but the fauour of God in Christ is not regarded: which notwithstanding is the true and right foundation of all outward welfare.

Here some will say, if God giue mee wealth, honour, and reputation, then hee loues me: for these be signes thereof. I answere, These be no sure tokens of his fauour in Christ, for those that bee his enemies, may enioy them all, as Iob. 21. 7. to the 14. This Dauid perceiued, how the wicked might flourish in their outward prosperitie, hauing more than heart could wish, Psalm. 73. 3. 7. And yet they stood but in slipperie places. And therefore, let no man herewith deceiue himselfe: hee that wanteth Gods fauour in Christ, is but a cursed wretch, and a firebrand of hell, though he had all the world for outward things, at his commaund. For all earthly things seuered from Gods speciall grace, are but an heape of miseries. The wicked mans peace is no peace, sayth the Lord, Isay, 48. 22. And the man that hath Gods grace in Christ, though hee want all wordly benefits, yet hee hath more than all the world without it: for hereby alone hee is truly blessed and happie.

From him which is, and which was, and which is to come: and from the seuen spirits which are before his throne. Here is set down the first cause and author of these two, Grace and Peace, to wit, God himselfe, distinguished into three persons, the father, son, and holy ghost. The Father is noted in these words: Which is, and which was, and which is to come. The holy ghost in these: And from the seuen spirits which are before his throne. The Sonne in the fift verse: And from Iesus Christ, which is a faithfull witnesse: and first begotten of the dead, and Lord ouer the kings of the earth, vnto him that loued vs, and washed vs from our sinnes in his owne blood, &c.

S. Iohn in the first place describes the father, by a distribution, which expresseth the true nature of God in these words: Which is, was, and is to come. In which he alludes to that, Exod. 3. 14, 15. where Moyses demaunds of God, If the people should aske who sent him, what he should answere? The Lord bids him say, Ehieh, Iehouah hath sent me: which two names serue to one end, namely, to expresse the nature of God. They are translated, I am, and the Lord: but these English words doe not fully expresse their signification. Yet S. Iohn expounds the here, making Ehieh to signifie him which is, which was, and is to come. Which words of Iohn also in the originall be more full in sence than our English tongue can well expresse. And yet they may be thus explained: Grace and Peace be from him, which is in himselfe, and of himselfe a most perfect and absolute substance: which was a most perfect substance, and which is to come, a most absolute, perfect, simple substance, and essence. In these words are touched sundry weighty points.

First, touching the nature of God, namely, That God is a most absolute perfect substance, and essence, which hath his being in himselfe, of himselfe, and from none other. Paule sayth, An idoll is nothing. 1. Cor. 8. 4. that is, nothing subsisting in nature, but a meere fond deuice of mans braine: But the true God is an essence subsisting, and that of himselfe alone perfectly; and herein differeth from all Idols and false Gods.

Secondly, hereby we see a differenee betweene God and all his creatures. Euery creature is a substance, as Angels and Men: likewise mans bodie and soule are substances: yet none of these haue being of themselues, but from God, and of God. And yet wee must not conceiue, that the creatures are parts of God, though they haue their substances and being of him; for then each creature should be God: for the communication of the diuine substance cannot be without the diuine nature. But Gods substance is indiuisible, and incommunicable to the creature. My meaning then is that God made the creatures out of himselfe of that matter which he created by his word; and preserueth them being made. Which by the way should teach vs to returne our bodies and soules by obedience vnto God, in lieu of thankfulnesse, endeuouring his glory all the daies of our life.

Thirdly, hence wee learne, that the Lord is Eternall euery way, without beginning or ending: for it is hee which is, which was, and which is to come. Angels and the soules of men they bee eternall, but not euery way: though they be eternall in that they shall neuer die, yet had they a beginning. Secondly, they are eternall, not absolutely, but by participation; for God made them eternall: but the Lord is most absolutely of himselfe eternall.

Fourthly note, he sayth not from him which shall bee, but from him which is to come, that is, to iudgement; to giue vs to vnderstand, That this Eternall God is also a iudge of all his creatures, especially men and Angels. A point of speciall vse, to moue vs to walke before God, with all good conscience. If any shall flatter himselfe, thinking, hee shall bee dead before that day come: I answere, it may be so. What then thinkest thou thereby to escape his iudgement? no verily: for this God commeth to iudge thee particularly by death, and thereby to reserue thee to the iudgement of the great day. Oh, that wee could seriously thinke on this, it would be a meanes to moue vs to repentance, by breaking of the course of sinne, and endeuouring to keepe a good conscience in all things, Acts 24. 16. And so shall we be readie to meete him at his comming, whether by death or iudgement.

And from the seuen spirits which are before his throne. These words commonly are expounded of seuen Angels of God, which stand before the throne, and minister vnto him. But it cannot be meant of them, for two causes: first, because Grace and Peace is here said to proceed from these seuen spirits; but it cannot come from the holy Angels, which attend to minister before the Lord. Secondly, in this verse, which is a benediction, or a salutation of Iohn to the Church, the seuen spirits, are set before Iesus Christ, the second person of the Trinitie; but there is no reason nor respect, for which the Angels should bee placed before Christ. The words are rather thus to be expounded. And from the seuen Spirits, &c. that is, from the holy ghost. This exposition is most agreeable to all the circumstances of the text; and the holy ghost may be called by the name of the seuen Spirits for two causes: First, because though he be onely one in substance, yet he is seuen, that is, manifold in regard of gifts and operations which proceed from him. Secondly, saint Iohn here speaketh of the Father, Sonne, and Holy ghost, as hee saw them in vision: (for here he setteth downe one vision which he saw) now he beheld the holy ghost in forme of seuen lights in a vision, Reuel. 4. 5.

Which are before his throne. This he speakes by comparison take from earthly kings: which sitting in their thrones, doe there shew their glorie and maiestie. So S. Iohn saw in vision God the father sitting in his throne, and Christ at his right hand; and before the throne the holy ghost. Which manner of appearance proueth not, that the holy ghost is inferiour to the father and to the sonne: but hereby is expressed the office of the holy ghost: which is, to be sent from the father, and from the sonne to the church, to enlighten the members thereof.

This then is the meaning of the words, and from the seuen spirits which are before his throne; that is, Grace and Peace bee with you from the holy ghost, the spirit of the father, and of the sonne, who from them both is sent vnto the Church, to enlighten, to sanctifie, and to gouern the members thereof.

The Vse. First, hence we learne, that the holy ghost is God: for looke from whome commeth grace and peace, that same is very God: but here grace & peace proceed from the holy ghost, and therefore he is very God.

Secondly, wee learne, that wee may and ought to direct our prayers to the holy ghost: for by whome grace and peace is giuen, to him we may direct our prayers: but grace and peace are giuen by the holy ghost; therefore wee may pray to him for them. This is the rather to be obserued, because there bee some which doubt, whether wee may pray to the holy ghost: but they may as well doubt whether he be God. They say, we haue no example hereof in scripture. Ans. It is not true: for in this benediction Iohn prayeth to the holy ghost, saying, Grace be with you, and Peace from God the father, &c. For in substance it is as much as if he had said thus: Thy grace and peace, O father; and thy grace and peace, O holy ghost; and thine O sonne, be with thy Church.

Thirdly, in this description of the holy ghost, by standing before the throne of the father, we may obserue, That the holy ghost is a person subsisting, and not a qualitie. Some heretickes that acknowledged the godhead of the father, denied the godhead of the sonne and of the holy ghost: and concerning the holy ghost, haue held, That he is nothing but the vertue and qualitie of the father. But this is most false: for as the father is a substance sitting vpon the throne; so here we see the holy ghost is a substance standing before the throne.

Fourthly, here we learne, that the holy ghost is a distinct person from the father, and from the sonne: for hee sitteth not in the throne, as doth the father, nor sitteth at the fathers right hand, as doth the sonne: but standeth before the throne apart from them both.

Verse 5. And from Iesus Christ, which is a faithfull witnesse, and first begotten of the dead, and Lord ouer the kings of the earth; vnto him that loued vs, and washed vs from our sinnes in his owne blood.

That is, grace and peace from Iesus Christ. Where Christ Iesus is ioyned with the father, and the holy ghost in bestowing grace and peace on his Church. Here some may aske, Why is Christ the second person of the Trinitie placed after the holy ghost, the third person? Ans. For two causes. First, in regard of his office, for Christ is to be considered two wayes: first, as he is the sonne of the father: secondly, as he is the mediator of the Church. As he is the sonne of the father, he is the second person in Trinitie, and so before the holy ghost in order. But as he is mediatour, so he is after the holy ghost, Isay 61. 1. The Spirit of the Lord is vpon me, because he hath sent me to preach. Where Christ confesseth himselfe to be sent by the holy ghost, as he is mediatour, and in that respect he is set after him. Secondly, hee is placed after the holy ghost, for the fitter progresse of the hystorie: for the manner of them which pen the scriptures, is, to set them in the last place of whō they mean to speak most, as Matth. 1. the Euangelist setting downe the genealogie of Christ from Abraham (thogh among them all was none so excellent as Christ) yet placeth him the last, because he intended to goe on with the hystorie of his life and death. So Iohn placeth Christ the last, because hee purposed to make a large description of the person, and office of Christ, which hee could not so fitly haue brought in, if he had placed him before the holy ghost.

From this fift verse, till the ninth, hee describes Christ at large: First, by his offices: secondly, by the execution ther-of. His offices are three: First, his propheticall office in these words: which is that faithfull witnesse. Secondly, his priestly office: The first begotten of the dead. Thirdly, his kingly office: And that prince of the kings of the earth.

The execution of all his offices is particularly set downe in the words following, To him that loued vs, and washed vs from our sinnes, and so forth to the ninth verse.

Touching his offices. In his Propheticall office wee may note three things: First, he is a witnesse. Secondly, A faithfull witnesse. Thirdly, that faithfull witnesse. First he is a witnesse, Isay. 55.4. I gaue him to be a witnesse to the nations. By his witnesse bearing is signified two duties of his Propheticall office: First, to reueale the will of his father to his Church: secondly, to certifie the Church of the certaintie of the same: & in these two stand his whole office propheticall.

For the first, to reueale his fathers will to the Church immediately, is his office as he is a Prophet: for none hath seen God, but he which came from the bosome of the father, and he hath declared him, Iohn 1.18. Now Christ declares the father, by making knowne his will: and that he hath done not onely in his owne person, while he liued on earth, but from the beginning by all the Prophets, and so will do to the end by all true preachers: for in the Church the father doth all things by the sonne. When the Lord rained fire on Sodome, Gen. 19.24. there Iehouah the father rained downe by Iehouah the sonne. So when the couenant was made to our first parents, it was made in Christ the promised seed. It was renued to Noah, Abraham, and the patriarkes, from the father by the sonne: for that Iehouah, which appeared to Moses in the bush, Exod. 3. is by S. Paule called Christ. 1. Cor. 10. The Prophets and the Apostles wrote as they were inspired by Christ; they were but his instruments to speake and write that he put into them by the holy ghost. The matter, and the style, and phrase of the Scripture, all came from Christ. Nay, when any particular man comes to vnderstand the Scriptures, this is by the working of Christ, he opens his eyes. Hee gaue the disciples vnderstanding, as they went vnto Emaus to vnderstand the Scriptures. Luke 24.

The second dutie of Christs propheticall office is, to certifie men in conscience of the truth of his fathers will. This certificate is two fold, generall, or particular: generall, when he certifieth men in conscience, That the word written or spoken by man, is the word of God: neither nature, nor learning can doe this, but it is proper to Christs propheticall office. And for this he sayth to his disciples, (a) He will send them the comforter, which shall lead them into all truth: that is, reueale Gods will vnto them, and assure their heart that the same is true. Vnto this assurance two things are required. The outward meanes, which is the word it selfe: and an inward cause, which is the principall, to wit, the operation of the holy spirit. (a) Ioh. 16.13

The Vse. By this doctrine three points are resolued: First, this demaund of the Papists, How a man can come to know, that the Scriptures read and taught, be the word of God? Answ. Wee must here haue recourse to this faithfull witnesse, and desire of him his spirit, whereby the mind must bee enlightened, and made able to discerne the things of God: for naturall man can doe it of himselfe. Secondly, wee must haue Christ his testimonie of Scripture, in the Scriptures themselues: for in them he setteth downe his testimonie of the Scriptures.

But ſome will ſay, if Chriſts teſtimonie of ſcripture bee ſet downe in the ſcriptures, why doe not all men know this teſtimonie, and receiue it? I anſwere, The ſhining of the ſunne before a mans face, is not ſufficient to cauſe him to ſee, vnleſſe he haue in his eyes the gift and ſence of ſeeing: Euen ſo, it is not ynough for a man to haue in Gods word, the teſtimonie of Chriſt, that ſcripture is ſcripture; but withall, hee muſt haue in himſelfe the light of the ſpirit, reuealing that teſtimonie to his conſcience: and then in reading or hearing the ſcripture, in marking the manner, and ſtyle, the maieſtie, and power thereof, he ſhall bee able to ſee in euery ſentence the teſtimonie of Chriſt, aſſuring his conſcience, that the ſame is vndoubtedly the word of God.

A ſecond doubt reſolued by this doctrine, is this, How can a man know the true religion, ſeeing the Turke, Papiſt, Iew, and Proteſtant, haue their ſeuerall religions, and die in them? I anſwere, Wee muſt haue recourſe to Chriſt, this faithful witneſſe: and looke whereto hee giues his teſtimonie, that we muſt hold for true religion. Now the ſcriptures be as a letter ſent from heauen to the Church, wherein Chriſt hath ſet downe his owne teſtimonie of the true religion: which in triall ſhall be found to bee the religion of the Proteſtant, and not the religion of Iew, Turke, or Papiſt.

A third doubt to be reſolued by this doctrine, is, How to know the particular truth in matters of religion, when as ſundry men profeſſing the ſame religion, bee of diuers opinions. Anſw. Still wee muſt haue recourſe to this faithfull witneſſe and Prophet of the Church, he is the Iudge of all controuerſies in religion; and in the ſcriptures, if we marke them, we ſhall ſee his iudgement. Queſt. But if there be diuers opinions about ſcripture it ſelfe, and euery one giue a ſeuerall ſence vnto it, who muſt then be Iudge? Anſw. In this diuerſitie of opinions, yea, of the ſcriptures themſelues, we muſt ſtill haue recourſe to Chriſt, and that in the ſcriptures alone: for though there were a thouſand diuerſe expoſitions of one place, yet by the ſcope and circumſtances thereof, conferring it with other like places of ſcripture, a man ſhall bee able to find out the true ſence; for Chriſt in the ſcripture expounds himſelfe.

The particular certificate of Chriſt belongeth alſo to his propheticall office: and that is, to aſſure men in their conſciences, that the promiſes of the Goſpell, with all the benefits therein contained, as Iuſtification, Sanctification, and life eternall, which in the word be generally expounded, doe belong vnto them particularly; as to Peter, to Iohn, &c. And this aſſurance (as the former) is principally wrought by the word, not barely read, but preached: for therein by the inward worke of the ſpirit, the generall promiſes be particularly applied. This Paule imports, ſaying, Yee haue the ſpirit of adoption, which teſtifies with our ſpirit, we be the ſonnes of God, Rom. 8. 15, 16.

The Vſe. Hence we learne, that the doctrine of the Church of Rome, and of all others which hold, That men cannot bee aſſured of their ſaluation by faith, is wicked and damnable: for hereby they cut off a part of Chriſts propheticall office, wherein the dignitie thereof doth conſiſt, that is, to aſſure a man particularly of the truth of Gods promiſes vnto himſelfe. And in this he differs from all other Prophets and Apoſtles, which bee witneſſes: for they can witneſſe onely outwardly to the eare; but he can ſpeake and teſtifie to the conſcience: Neither can any of them certifie any man particularly, though their miniſterie tend to that end.

Secondly obſerue, Chriſt is not only a witneſſe, but a faithfull witneſſe; and ſo he is for theſe cauſes: Firſt, becauſe hee teſtifies not his owne will, but his which ſent him; namely, his father, Iohn 8.26. Secondly, he teſtifies all his fathers wil, neither adding thereto, nor detracting from it, Iohn 17.4. Thirdly, becauſe he teacheth his fathers will ſincerely, in the ſame maner which hee receiued it, not altering, changing, or depraying any part therof: As my father taught me, ſo I ſpeake theſe things, Iohn 8.28.

Thirdly, Chriſt is called that faithfull witneſſe, to diſtinguiſh him from all other witneſſes. The Lord hath ſundry faithfull witneſſes; as the Prophets, Apoſtles, the Church, nay the Sun and Moone, Pſalm. 89. 37. but Chriſt alone is that faithfaithfull witnesse; First, because his wit-

1.Ioh.5.14. nesse is (a) authenticall, sufficient of it selfe, and needs no other confirmation. The testimonie of the Apostles and Prophets is not of it selfe authenticall and certaine, but as it consents with Christs witnesse, and proceedeth from his spirit. Secondly, hee is that witnesse, because hee is the Lord of that house, whereto he giues witnesse, namely, the Church; but the Apostles and Prophets are but seruants there, *Hebr.*5.5,6. Thirdly, Christ his witnesse is inward: it speakes directly to the conscience, and there giues vndoubted assurance: but the witnesse of men, as of the Prophets and Apostles, is outward only; it comes to the ears, it neuer binds and assures the conscience of it selfe. And thus wee see why he is called here that faithfull witnesse.

The 1st. First, whereas Christ the Doctor and Prophet of the church is called that faithfull witnesse, we learne, That all ministers of the Gospell ought to be faithfull witnesses: for euery minister of the Gospell, when he preacheth Gods word is in the roome of Christ, and speaketh that vnto the church which Christ wold speake. That they may be faithfull witnesses, sundry things are required at their hands. First, they must deliuer the testimonie of Christ aboue all other things, and before all testimonies of man in the office of their ministerie. This was
(b) Ioh.4.34. meat and drinke to Christ, to (b) teach his fathers will. Eleazar, Abrahams eldest seruant, shewed his fidelitie, in that he would not eate or drinke till hee had done his masters message. Gen.24. 33. Much more ought the ministers of Christ haue speciall care of that weightie message committed vnto them. Secondly, they must testifie all the will of God concerning matters of saluation, as faith, obedience, and a godly life: among men, wee count him a faithfull witnesse, which testifies all the truth, and no more but the truth: so shold it be with all ministers, that be Gods witnesses to his church. Herein Paule clea-
Act. 20.26, red himselfe, That he was free from al mens 27. blood, seeing he deliuered the whole will of God in matters necessarie for saluation, and kept nothing backe. Thirdly, he must neither add vnto, or take away, much lesse in any case deprave the word of God. And this is the true marke of a faithfull witnesse: For false prophets teach some truth, but withall they adde something of their owne, or detract from Gods truth something that they ought not. In the church of Rome a man may hear things concerning morall vertues handled soundly: but come to Iustification, and thereto they adde the merit of mens works, & so they deale with Faith, and Repentance, matters of saluation: they take away one part, and adde another to the scriptures: they hold the Creed in word, yet in deed they denie the same, as by their doctrine may appeare, & so shew themselues false witnesses. Fourthly, a faithfull witnesse must deliuer the testimonie of Christ in that spirituall manner which best beseemeth the maiestie of God, and which he best approoueth, that is, in a plaine, easie, and familiar kind of speech, that the conscience of the sinner may be touched, & the vnderstanding of the simple may be edified. When the word is otherwise deliuered, as in the entising words of mans wisdom, or for ostentation of wit, or much reading, though nothing be said but the truth, yet he that so dispenseth it, is an vnfaithfull witnesse, because he corrupteth the word by his vaine deliuerie. And this is the sinne of this age in many ministers, who teach the truth indeed, but yet in such sort, as it may appeare, they seeke themselues, and not Gods glory, respecting little the edification of the simple, so themselues may bee famous for wit, eloquence, and learning. But these men make marchandise of the word, like to huxters, that by starching, blowing and spicing, set a glosse vpon their ware, to make it seeme that which it is not: which is a greeuous sinne, and such as will banish the Gospell out of our land, vnlesse it be reformed.

Secondly, this title of Christ, That faithfull witnesse, doth discouer vnto vs the damnable practise of men in the sinne of vnbeleefe: for Christ this faithfull witnesse hath giuen testimonie to his word which is preached, that the same is true. And therefore (a) they that beleeue it not, doe (a) Ioh 5.10. make Christ a false witnesse, and a lyar, than which, what can be more horrible? & yet this is the common sinne of this age. For when the law is applied, who is afraid? and when the gospell is preached, yet who beleeueth our report? Gods ministers may ſay with the little children, We haue piped vnto you, but you haue not daunced, we haue mourned vnto you, but you haue not wept. This deadneſſe of heart, whereby men are not mooued with the word preached vnto them, is an euident argument of this fearfull vnbeleefe, whereby they make Chriſt a falſe witneſſe. This therefore ſhould moue vs to conſider in our ſelues, the heinouſneſſe of this ſinne, that ſo we may ſtriue againſt it, and labour to giue free paſſage to the word into our hearts, trembling at the law, and reioycing in the Goſpell, that ſo each part thereof may haue his perfect worke in vs: for which end alſo wee may conſider, That amongſt thoſe which ſhall haue their portion in the burning lake, vnbeleeuers are ſet in the firſt ranke, Reuel. 21. verſ. 8.

Thirdly, ſeeing Chriſt Ieſus is that faithfull witneſſe, which giueth teſtimonie to mens conſciences in particular of their ſaluation; we learne, That euery one which profeſſeth himſelfe to repent, is bound in conſcience to beleeue that the promiſes of the Goſpell, and the benefits thereof, as Election, Redemption, Iuſtification, Sanctification, and Saluation, belong to him particularly. And though this be againſt all humane ſence and reaſon, yet ſeeing we haue a faithfull witneſſe, auouching the ſame, wee muſt ſubmit our ſelues vnto his teſtimonie: for by vnbeleefe we greatly diſhonour our witneſſe bearer, by denying truth vnto his record. Here then wee ſee, it it no preſumption (as the Papiſts ſay) to beleeue our election and ſaluation in particular: nay, it is an horrible ſinne in euery one that repenteth, not to beleeue it; ſeeing Chriſt, a moſt faithfull witneſſe, teſtifies the ſame to our conſciences by his holy ſpirit. Hereto alſo ſerue the ſacraments inſtituted by God, to ſeale vp vnto euery worthy receiuer, Chriſt and all his benefits. The miniſters giuing of the bread and wine to them that truly repent, is as much as if Chriſt ſhould ſay, Beleeue thou, and life eternall belongs to thee.

And the firſt begotten of the dead. In theſe words is contained the ſecond office of Chriſt; namely, his Prieſthood: the principall actions whereof ſtand in dying, in riſing againe from the dead, and making interceſsion for vs. And here S. Iohn alludeth to the eſtate of the families amõg the Iewes, comparing Chriſt to the firſt borne: for as among them, hee which was firſt borne, and eldeſt of the familie, had many priuiledges and preheminences aboue his brethren; as Lordſhip, right of the Prieſthood, and double portion, &c. ſo Chriſt he hath his priuiledges, yea euen Chriſt crucified, hee hath his prerogatiues among the dead, aboue all that are dead. So Paule expounding this title, calleth him, The firſt borne, and beginning of the dead, that hee might in all things haue the preheminence. Coloſſ. 1. verſ. 18.

The priuiledges of Chriſt dead, and buried among all the dead, are two: firſt, That he was the firſt that euer roſe from death to life, and ſo to glorie. Some indeed haue riſen before Chriſt from naturall death to naturall life, as Lazarus, but it was to die againe. And Moyſes and Elias aſſumed their bodies in the Mount with Chriſt in his transfiguration: but yet they laid them downe againe to the former miſerie of corruption, for a time. But Chriſt Ieſus roſe from death, to life eternall, neuer to die againe: And his reſurrection was the firſt ſteppe into his glorie. Secondly, that by his owne power he raiſed vp himſelfe, and by the vertue of his godhead quickened his manhood. The moſt godly man that is, or euer was, cannot doe ſo: but all the ſaints of God are raiſed from death by vertue of Chriſts reſurrection, through that myſticall vnion which is between Chriſt the head, and all his members; by meane whereof, the power of Chriſt his godhead, which raiſed vp his manhood, is conueyed to all his members in their reſurrection frõ death to life. And therefore is Chriſt called (a) The firſt fruits of them that ſleepe, becauſe as the firſt fruits of corne which was offered vnto God, did ſanctifie the whole crop: ſo Chriſt his reſurrection, did make acceptable vnto God the reſurrection of all his members. (a) 1. Cor. 15.

In this title is compriſed a notable comfort for all Gods children, againſt the immoderate feare of death. If Iohn had ſaid, Chriſt is the firſt borne among the liuing, it had beene a great comfort: for then had he ſhewed, that the liuing ſaints on earth were children in Gods familie, hauing Chriſt for their eldeſt brother: but calling him the firſt begotten of the dead, here is a further comfort: the Lord ſheweth hereby, what ſpeciall regard he hath to the faithfull that be dead: for euen then, when they be dead, they continue members of his familie, and haue Chriſt Ieſus dead and buried, reckoned among them for their eldeſt brother. In regard whereof, Chriſt hath a double right among the dead: firſt, of a King; ſecondly, of a Prieſt. The right of a king hee hath, to commaund his members to riſe againe, and to enter into glorie after him. The right of a prieſt, whereby hee offered vp himſelfe in death, a ſacrifice acceptable to God for the ſanctifying of the death of all his members: for by his death he tooke away the ſting of death, and hath made it vnto them a ſweet ſleep in the graue, as in a bed of downe, out of which they ſhall one day riſe to eternall life and glorie.

And Prince of the kings of the earth. Here is the third title, giuen to Chriſt, wherein his kingly office is expreſſed. He is called a Prince of the kings of the earth, in two reſpects: Firſt, as he is God, the ſonne of God, equall with the father, and ſo is king, together with the father and the holy ghoſt, gouerning all things with them by the ſame diuine power, in heauen, in earth, and in hell. Secondly, as hee is Mediatour and Redeemer, God and Man, in two natures. In this reſpect hee ſayth of himſelfe; All power is giuen to me in heauen, and in earth, Matth.28.18. And Paule ſayth, God gaue him a (a) name aboue euery name, at which euery knee ſhould bow, euen as he is Mediatour. And in this ſecond reſpect he is called, A Prince of the kings of the earth in this place. Now Chriſt being a king, muſt needes haue a kingdome, which is not of this world, ſtanding in the might and policie of man, as earthly kingdomes doe, but it is ſpirituall, directly concerning the hearts and conſciences of men, where he ruleth by his lawes. And this is his priuiledge, which cannot be giuen to any creature, man, or Angell, to rule and raigne ſpiritually in the heart and conſcience. This ſpirituall kingdome of Chriſt is exerciſed not by dint of ſword, or force of armes, but by his holy word, through the worke of the ſpirit: for hee is as a king, which carrieth his ſceptre in his mouth, euen his word, Iſay. 11.4. That is the rod of his power, by which hee rules the heart, and conſcience, euen in the middeſt of his enemies, Pſal.110. verſ.2.

(a) Philip.2. 9,10.

Now Chriſt is here entituled, Prince of the kings of the earth in two reſpects: Firſt, becauſe he (and he alone) as Mediator, can giue lawes to bind the conſciences of men; yea of the greateſt Monarch in the world. Secondly, becauſe he hath ſoueraigne power ouer all kings and potentates, as well as ouer others, to ſaue, and to deſtroy: for not onely hath hee power to make a law to bind their conſciences; but alſo if they keepe it, to ſaue them: if they breake his law, hee hath power to deſtroy them, bee they what they may bee. He hath the keyes of heauen, and of hell, to open, and to ſhut at his pleaſure. Reuel.3.7. He can, if he will, lead them to life, and ſaue them; or els leaue them to their owne mind, and ſo deſtroy them. Hence ariſe ſundry inſtructions.

First, ſeeing our Sauiour Chriſt is a prince of the greateſt Monarchs of the world, and is farre aboue them: we muſt then with all feare and trembling reuerence his high maieſtie. Great is that reuerence which men yeeld to earthly princes: Oh then what reuerence ſhould we performe to him which is prince and Lord of all the kings of the earth? We cannot conceiue, what honour wee owe vnto him, which is aduaunced in the throne of all maieſtie. And this our reuerence wee muſt ſhew, by hearing his word, with trembling and beleeuing hearts, as Iſay ſayth, cap.66.2. We muſt not dare to thinke, or ſpeake of Chriſt, without great reuerence: At his name euery knee muſt bow; that is, at the conſideration of the great maieſtie whereto hee is now exalted, euery heart, euen of the greateſt Monarchs, ſhould be touched with ſubmiſſion, awe, and reuerence. If this tooke place in mens hearts, the name of Chriſt would not bee ſo prophaned and blaſphemed as it is; in ieaſting ſports, in curſing, and ſwearing, whereby men toſſe it like a ball, without all reuerence to ſo great a prince as is the king of kings.

Secondly, ſeeing he is king of kings, wee muſt giue him abſolute obedience.

Princes on earth must be obeyed, so far as they commaund in Christ, but he must be obeyed without exception, not onely absolutly, and perpetually: in all his commaundements, but most willingly and freely (as it is said) his people come freely in the day of assembling, Psal.110.3. Men will say, they beleeue in Christ, as he is their Sauior, but that is not ynough, they must obey him also, as he is the king of princes. Many persuade themselues, they haue a good faith in Christ their sauiour, which little regard obedience to him, as their King and Lord. But they deceiue themselues: for none can haue Christ for their Sauiour, which haue him not for their Lord & master: neither doth that man beleeue in Christ, which will not striue to doe his will. And this our obedience must bee shewed in performing those duties which we heare, and learne out of his holy word.

Thirdly, seeing Christ is king of kings, all princes must doe him seruice: for they be all inferiour and subiect to him, *Psal.*72.11. This is the counsell of the holy ghost: (a) Be wise now, O yee kings, be learned, yee Iudges of the earth: kisse the Sonne, &c. that is, inwardly reuerence, and outwardly obey him. This their homage must bee shewed, in all the affaires of their kingdomes; They must frame their lawes after the lawes of Christ Iesus; they must shew mercie, exercise iudgement, keepe courts, assises, begin, end, and continue warre according to his commaundements. And so in euery thing, the direction of Christ should be their guide, as it was to Dauid, Thy lawes, O Lord, haue beene my counsellours, Psal.119.24.

(a) Psal.2.10, 11, 12.

Fourthly, if Christ bee soueraigne king, then all earthly princes are bound to plant, and establish in their kingdomes the religion of Christ, else how can they shew themselues his loyall subiects? Many imagine, That earthly princes may admit vnto their subiects any religion for the peace of the ciuile state: but this is against the equitie of Gods word in this place, for wherein can earthly princes doe homage vnto Christ, if they maintaine not his religion? And their dutie in this behalfe is signified plainely in the parable of the mariage. For when they that were bidden, did not come, the king sent forth his (b) seruants (which may be vnderstood of Christian magistrats) to compell men to come to the mariage: for that is the magistrates dutie, in respect of the outward profession of true religion.

(b) Luk 14.23.

Fiftly, seeing Christ alone is prince of the kings of the earth: hence we learne, that kings on earth in their dominions are soueraigne gouernours ouer all persons, and in all causes next vnder Christ, he is king of kings absolutely, and they are vnder him alone, and haue no other head but him. Whereby wee see the presumption and arrogancie of the Pope, and Sea of Rome, in claiming supremacie aboue all kings and princes in the whole church vpō earth. This is a deuice of the diuell, and high treason against Christ: for hereby hee is robbed of this royall prerogatiue, to be the only prince of the kings of the earth.

Lastly, seeing Christ is king of all kings, we must not be discouraged, when we be called to suffer any affliction for his truth: let the tyrants of the earth rage and bend their force to hurt vs, yet wee haue a king aboue them al, for whom we suffer: he is their king, hee can stay, and bridle them, and if hee please, confound and bruise them in peeces. They cannot do any thing, but that which he permits; for hee rules in the middest of all his enemies, Psal.110.2. he can breake them in pieces like a potters vessell. Thus much of the offices of Christ.

The second part of Christs description is by the execution of his offices, which consists in foure works. The first contained in these words, Vnto him which loued vs; the second, in these, Which washed vs in his bloud: the other two, in the two verses which follow, *viz.*6 and 7. For the first, which loued vs, that is, Iohn and the churches of Asia, & by proportion, all other churches, being parts of the true church. The loue of Christ hath three degrees: the first is a generall loue, wherby he loues all his creatures, approuing the same to be good as they be his by creation. The second, is the loue of mankind, in that he was content to become a redeemer for mankind, after their fall, and not for any other creature; no not for the Angels, which fell as well as man: who therefore remaine without all hope of saluation.

The

The third and principall, is that wherby he loues his elect and chosen children; which is that speciall fauour, whereby he accepts of them to life euerlasting. This third degree hath two parts: First, it is taken for his purpose to loue: as when he saith, I haue loued Iacob, and hated Esau, Rom. 9. 13. Secondly, for the act of louing; which is the declaration of his purpose by spirituall benefits, 1. Iohn 3. 1. Behold, what singular loue God hath shewed vnto vs, that wee should be called the sonnes of God: noting the declaration of his loue in the gift of adoption. So in this verse, by the loue of Christ vnto his church, is meant the actuall declaration of his speciall fauour, in accepting them for his children, and bestowing many singular blessings vpon them.

Whereas S. Iohn placeth this in the first place of all the benefites of Christ, That he loued vs; hee would teach vs, That this speciall loue is the very ground of mans redemption; which excludeth all foreseene faith and workes from being motiues of mans election in Gods eternall councell, and so proportionally, all foreseene sinnes from being motiues in God of mans reprobation.

It may be obiected, The loue of God as also of man, respects a thing as it is good: First, the thing must be good, and then it is loued: and so in mans redemption God first foresees their goodnesse, and therefore chuseth them. Anſ. There is great difference betweene the loue of the creature, and of the creator. The loue of the creature followes the goodnesse of a thing; because he seeth it is good, therefore he loues it. But God the creator first loues the creature before it bee good, and hence it comes, that it is good, because he loues it.

Secondly, whereas Saint Iohn and all the churches of Asia, as other true churches do, beleeue, and are assured that Christ loues them (for that Saint Iohn taketh for granted) this should moue all men to haue this care, to labour aboue all things to be rooted and grounded in the loue of God, seeing hee placeth that in the first place. This is the principall thing, wherein the Apostle would haue the Ephesians rooted and grounded: and therefore prayeth, That with all Saints they may be able to comprehend, what is the breadth and length, depth, and height thereof. Ephes. 2. verse. 17, 18, 19. This we doe when we are assured in heart and conscience, by the working of Gods spirit, that he loues vs in Christ. So that he which denies vnto vs the assurance of Gods loue in Christ, takes away the very ground of our saluation.

Now that we may haue this assurance of Gods loue; wee must in all good duties to God and man draw neere to God with our hearts, keeping a good conscience in all things, and then will God draw neere to vs. If any man loue me (saith Christ) he will keepe my word, and then my father will loue him, and we will come vnto him, and dwell with him. Iohn 14. 23. meaning by the holy ghost; which shall shed this loue into our hearts, Rom. 5. verse. 5. causing vs to increase in the feeling thereof, as wee grow in faith and obedience towards him.

And hath washed vs from our sinnes in his blood. Here is the second benefit and action of Christ to his church. Where first of all the very phrase, hath washed vs, doth import, that the sinnes of men are as filthie spots in their soules: and that himselfe and this church of God were touched with a serious consideration of their vilenesse, by reason of their sinnes: for washing presupposeth former filthinesse and pollution. Thus did Dauid most sensibly feele his owne filthinesse, and see his miserable estate, when he desired the Lord to (a) wash him throughly: confessing thereby, that his soule and body were so foulely stained, and polluted with sinne, that onee washing was not ynough: but sayth hee, Wash mee againe and againe, rince, bathe, and swill me in the bloud of Christ, till I be purged and cleansed from all my sinnes. And this same affection should be in euery one of vs: wee should labour, that our hearts may bee touched with a liuely sence of our vile estate, by reason of our sinnes, which make both bodie and soule most vgly and filthie in Gods sight; and that the staine hereof is so deepely set in our soules, that we can neuer be cleansed, but by the washing of Christ his own hand, and that in his owne hearts bloud: yea, that one washing will not serue, but wee must be rinced and bathed therein. For till such time as this consideration doe in ſome meaſure take place in our hearts, it is not poſsible that we ſhould loath ſinne as we ought: or come to this comfortable aſſurance of Gods loue, that he hath waſhed away our ſinnes in his bloud: for this humilitie in our ſoules by reaſon of our ſins, is the beginning of all true grace and comfort. Now this worke of Chriſt in waſhing vs from our ſinnes, doth comprehend a double benefit.

Firſt, the remiſsion of our ſinnes, whereby the guilt and puniſhment due to them is taken away. Secondly, the mortification of ſinne, whereby the corruption of ſinne is remooued and aboliſhed. And we muſt obſerue, that S. Iohn propounds this benefit generally without limitation, ſaying, Which waſhed vs from our ſinnes. That is, from all our ſinnes: to giue vs to vnderſtand, that if any beleeue truly in Chriſt, hee hath pardon of all his ſinnes without any reſtraint or limitation, either of number, or qualitie, bee they neuer ſo many, or neuer ſo great.

By his bloud. How can bloud waſh away filthineſſe? nay, it rather defiles a man. Anſw. This waſhing ſtands not in the ſubſtance of Chriſts bloud, but in the merit thereof: for that ſubſtance of bloud which was ſhed is loſt, and wee know not what is become of it, whatſoeuer the Papiſts ſay: but the merit thereof remaineth ſtill. And Chriſts bloud deſerues to purge away ſinne, rather than any other mans bloud, as of Peter, Iohn, &c. becauſe his bloud was the bloud of God (not of the godhead) but of him who was both God and man. For the manhood of Chriſt was receiued into the vnion of the ſecond perſon. And ſo it may be called the bloud of God, as Paule ſayth, (a) God redeemed his Church by his bloud, that is Chriſt, God incarnate. And ſo it being the bloud of him, that is God, is more meritorious than the bloud of any creature whatſoeuer. Beſides Chriſt was appointed by God to be a publicke perſon in the worke of redemption, and in his death and paſsion he ſtood in the roome and ſtead of all his elect, ſo as when his bloud was ſhed, their bloud was ſhed, becauſe it was ſhed for them. But the bloud of other priuate men cannot anſwer for any beſides themſelues, becauſe it is ſhed onely for themſelues. Then damnable is the doctrine of the Papiſts, who hold the bloud of Martyrs, can merit for others, being applied vnto them: for ſeeing they be but priuate men, and ſuffered in their owne perſons onely, they cannot profit any other thereby.

(a) Act. 20. 28

By bloud we muſt vnderſtand the paſsion of Chriſt, a part for the whole, and withall his fulfilling of the law vpon the croſſe; for in his ſuffering hee fulfilled the law, and in fulfilling the law he ſuffered. Theſe two cannot be ſeuered, ſaue onely in thought. And ſo this word containes the whole obedience of Chriſt, whereby he procured the remiſsion and mortification of our ſinnes. Here then wee ſee two notable benefites of Chriſt vnto his churche; his loue, & the waſhing away of ſinnes: which S. Iohn ſets downe to moue the churches with reuerence & diligence to reade, and delight in this booke. All of vs will ſay, wee are ſure God loues vs, and hath pardoned our ſinnes in Chriſt: why then doe wee not ſhew our loue againe to him by hearing and reading his word, ſet downe in this, or any other booke of Scripture, and by yeelding anſwerable obedience thereto? Why then do we not offer vp our ſelues, ſoules and bodies, to ſerue him, as the Apoſtle requires, Rom. 12. 1. by way of recompence for his mercies and loue ſhed out vnto vs? But alas, that is more common, which is moſt ſhamefull, to turne Gods grace into wantonneſſe: for when men ſay God loues them, and hath waſhed away their ſinnes, yet they rebell againſt him: when as theſe two benefites are here recorded to bee inducements of continuall loue, and obediende to his holy word.

Verſe 6. And made vs kings and prieſts to God, euen his father, to him be glory and dominion for euermore. Amen.

In theſe words is ſet downe the third worke, and benefit of Chriſt, beſtowed on his church, and on euery true member thereof. For the better vnderſtanding whereof, we muſt conſider in them foure points: Firſt, the dignitie and excellencie of all true beleeuers and members of Chriſt, They are kings and prieſts. Secondly, when they be made kings and prieſts in this life, noted by the phraſe of ſpeech, hath made. Wherein hee ſpeaketh of the church church on earth, and vseth a word that signifieth the time past. Thirdly, the maner how they become kings and priests, they are not so borne, but Christ hath made them such. Fourthly, to whom they be made such, to God euen the father.

For the first. The dignitie of all true beleeuers hath two heads; first, They bee kings, secondly, Priests. They are called kings, not in regard of an earthly kingdome, for vsually the condition of most beleeuers on earth is base and contemptible: but in regard of a spirituall kingdome, the kingdome of heauen, whereto the Lord giues them right, title, and interest, in, and by Iesus Christ. So our Sauiour Christ speaketh to his disciples: (a) Feare not, little flocke, it is your fathers will to giue you the kingdome. And againe, Behold I giue vnto you a kingdome. Now the faithfull are kings in these respects; first, because by Christ they bee lords and conquerours of all these enemies, sinne, Sathan, the world, death, hell, and their owne flesh. Secondly, because in, and by Christ, they are partakers of the glorie of Christs kingdome and saluation: for they receiue of Christ grace for grace, and so answereably, glory for glory, and felicitie for felicitie. Thirdly, because they be made lords of all things in heauen and earth (except good Angels, and the church) All things are yours, whether it be Paule, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, whether things present, or to come, euen all are yours, and yee Christs. Quest. But if Christ bee king, and all his members kings, how do they differ? Answ. In two points: First, Christ is the sonne of God by nature, and so a king by nature, hauing the right of the kingdome of heauen by inheritance: but the members of Christ are the sonnes of God by adoption in his sonne, so that our right to that kingdome is not by nature, but by grace. Secondly, Christ is an vniuersall king ouer the Angels in heauen, the church on earth, and all other creatures whersoeuer; his regiment is absolute in the hearts and consciences of men, and hee can by his word bind all things: but true beleeuers bee not vniuersall kings, for they haue no superioritie aboue good Angels, and the church. Neither are they absolute kings as he is, nor of themselues; but by Christ Iesus, and as they participate with Christ in his kingdome.

(a) Luk. 12, 32

1 Cor. 3. 22, 23.

The second part of the dignitie of true beleeuers stands in this, That they bee priests consecrate and set apart by Christ, to the worship & seruice of God here in this life in spirit and truth, and in the life to come, to serue and praise him eternally. Christ hee is a priest, so are all his members; but yet there is difference. First, Christ hee is an externall and reall priest of the new Testament, which offers vp a true, reall, and externall propitiatorie sacrifice to God the father for the sinnes of mankind. As for beleeuers, they are not reall and externall priests, but spirituall, offering vp spirituall sacrifice vnto God. As when any member of Christ giues an almes; hee offers a sacrifice to God, not a corporall sacrifice, though the thing giuen bee a bodily substance; but it is euery way spirituall: for to offer a reall outward sacrifice in the new Testament is proper to Christ. Againe, our Sauiour Christ he is a perfect priest, and offers vp a perfect sacrifice, but we being imperfect, doe offer vp imperfect sacrifices, tainted, and blemished with sinne; yet accepted as perfect, for the worthinesse of Christs sacrifice.

The second point to be considered, is the time whē beleeuers be made kings and priests; namely, in this life. For as in the entrance into an earthly kingdome there bee degrees: first, to haue good right and title to it: secondly, to get possession of it, which is more than title only; and yet if a mans title be good, though hee want possession, he may be called a king. So it is with Gods children, they haue the right giuen them of the kingdome of heauen in this life, and in that respect are kings. Further, in the possessing of a kingdome there bee two degrees: first, the entrance vpon some part, secondly, the full and perfect enioying of all. Now euery true beleeuer begins to enter possession of the kingdom of heauen in this life: for it stands (c) in righteousnesse, ioy, and peace: and they which haue these things in their harts, haue the kingdome of God begon in them in this life. But the full fruition and perfect possession of this kingdome is reserued to be giuen at the end of this life, and at the day of iudgement. And as true beleeuers be kings in this world: so likewise bee they priests, in offering spirituall sacrifice to God, and dedicating and consecrating themselues to his seruice all the dayes of their life.

The third point is, the manner how true beleeuers become kings and priests: they are not such by nature, neither doth this dignitie come by descent in bloud or birth-right, or by any other priuiledge they haue from man, but onely from Christ Iesus, who by diuine calling makes them spirituall kings and priests, like as vnder the law, by solemne election and ordination, some were made earthly kings and priests. Now in this calling of Christ, two things concurre: First, Christ giueth his members right to his owne kingdome and priesthood: yet not so, that they can execute the regiment sustained by Christ, or perform the office of his priesthood; but because they haue right in part to these offices, and the benefit of them both redoundeth to them wholly. And this right they haue, is brought to passe in the couenant of the Gospell: wherein they are bound to beleeue in God through Christ; and God is bound againe to giue vnto them Christ with all his benefites: among which, these two must be accounted: for indeed, euery thing which belongs to Christ, as he is mediatour, is conueyed in some sort to euery true beleeuer. Secondly, in this diuine calling, Christ endues all his members with gifts and graces, whereby they are enabled for the duties of spirituall kings and priests vnto God. For as Christ is annointed, so are all his members. So the Psalmist speaking of Christ sayth, He is anointed with the oyle of gladnesse aboue his fellowes, Psal. 45. vers. 7. Therefore his fellowes (that is beleeuers) are annointed with the same oile, though in lesse measure. And Saint Iohn sayth; Yee haue receiued the annointing, 1. Iohn 2. 27. yea, God himselfe chargeth wicked men, not to touch his annointed, Psal. 105. 15. meaning not onely Patriarkes, Kings, and Prophets, but all true beleeuers, who are then annointed when they are endued with the gifts of the same spirit, in some measure, wherewith Christ in his manhood was filled aboue measure.

The fourth point: To whom hath he made them kings and priests? Answ. To God, euen the father. This is added for speciall cause, to preuent that carnall libertie which mans nature might claime from this spirituall royaltie: for men might say, if all beleeuers be kings, then may they liue as they list: but these words (vnto God) do shew, that the right of their kingdome, with the offices of their priesthood, must all bee referred to the honor and prayse of God, vnto whom they are made kings and priests.

Lastly, he addeth, Euen his father, by way of exposition, to shew more particularly to which of the persons they are first of all made kings and priests: for the title, God must not here be taken absolutely for the diuine nature, but with restraint to the first person, the father: vnto whom all true beleeuers are made kings and priests in the first place, and from the father to the sonne; and from them both, to the holy ghost. And the first person in Trinitie is here named aboue the rest, not as being aboue them in degree or honour, for so they bee equall: but because he is the first in order, and the fountaine of the Godhead, which is conueyed from him to the Sonne, and from them both to the Holy ghost.

Thus much for the meaning of the words: Now follow sundry vses, from the consideration of these two dignities of beleeuers. And first their kingly dignitie affoordeth matter both of instruction and consolation.

Instruct. 1. Whereas all true beleeuers are made true kings in this life; hereby euery one that professeth Christian religion is taught, to carry himselfe as an enemie to all those that are of the kingdome of darkenesse: as namely to sinne, and Sathan, to the flesh, and the world, euen through the whole course of his life: for by calling, euery Christian hath title to the kingdome of heauen. What affinitie then can wee haue with those that bee both enemies of this kingdome, and of Christ himselfe, that made vs kings. Now, that wee may so carry our selues, as enemies, wee must do these three things: First, haue care to keepe, guard, and defend our selues, as kings against all our enemies, sin, Sathan, our own flesh, and the enticements of the world. As kings protect their kingdoms, ſo muſt we labour to keepe our ſouls and bodies, and euery facultie and part of them, our wils, affections, thoughts, and inclinations, from the power of ſinne. He which is borne of God, keepeth himſelfe (as with watch and ward) that the euill one, that is, Sathan, touch him not by the aſſaults of ſinne. 1. Iohn. 5. 18. Secondly, wee muſt make warre continually againſt Sathan, ſinne, our owne fleſh, againſt all our ſpirituall enemies, and all the enticements of the world: we muſt make no truce with the, becauſe they will neuer be reconciled to vs, ſo long as wee haue intereſt vnto the kingdome of heauen: and if we yeeld to them, wee looſe our kingly dignitie, and become their vaſſales, and bondſlaues. Thirdly, wee muſt labour to kill and deſtroy theſe our enemies as much as poſſibly we can, by that power we haue from Chriſt our head, and like valiant kings ſeek to haue the bloud of theſe enemies, and from day to day ſtriue to vanquiſh Sathan, his power & might, to ouercome the world, and to weaken our owne corruption.

Inſtruct. II. If in this life we be kings, then muſt wee become lords ouer our ſelues, and keepe in ſubiection vnto God our wils and affections, and the ſecret thoughts and inclinations of our ſoules. We muſt not looke for rule ouer earthly kingdomes: but herein ſtands our kingdom in this world, That wee can ſubdue our corrupt affections, and keep our bodies and ſoules in obedience vnto God. If a man were prince ouer the whole earth, and yet could not rule himſelfe, he were but a poore prince, nay he were no prince indeed. But though a man haue not ſo much as a foot of ground in this world, and yet can rule and maſter himſelfe, his thoughts and affections, this man is a valiant prince, and one whom Chriſt hath conſecrate to be king in heauen.

Inſtruct. III. Seeing we be kings, wee muſt doe the duty of Iudges: for to him that is a king belongeth ſoueraine iudgement. In the day of iudgement the (a) ſaints ſhall iudge the world, and Angels alſo: but wee muſt bee Iudges in this world. And yet here we can neither iudge men nor Angels, but wee muſt bee our owne Iudges. Wherefore as Iudges ſummon, arraigne, condemne, &c. ſo muſt wee examine our ſelues, call our ſelues to account, and as guiltie perſons accuſe and condemne our ſelues for our ſinnes; acknowledging we be worthy to be caſt into eternall damnation with the diuel and his angels: And withall plead for pardon, and approch to the throne of grace, & forgiueneſſe in Chriſt: and in this wee ſhew our ſelues vpright ſpirituall iudges, and by this meanes wee ſhall bee free from the iudgement to come.

(a) 1. Cor. 6. 2, 3.

Inſtruct. IIII. If wee bee kings by Chriſt, we muſt carry our ſelues as kings courageouſly, and conſtantly in the afflictions and miſeries which we ſhall ſuffer for Chriſts ſake. For herein among the reſt ſtands the royaltie of a king, that he beares with valour and courage all the troubles which befall him. Hence it is, that Saint Paule exhorts vs to reioyce in afflictions, becauſe wee are partakers of Chriſts ſufferings, 1. Pet. 4. 13. and ſo are made conformable vnto him that was conſecrate the prince of our ſaluation through afflictions, Heb. 2. 10.

Inſtruct. V. Seeing wee bee ſpirituall kings, wee muſt aboue all things labour and ſeeke to haue our part in the kingdome of Chriſt, and in his righteouſnes. A Chriſtian muſt not haue his heart glued and faſt tied vnto the things of this world, it is againſt his calling: but hee muſt ſo vſe this world, as though he vſed it not. If a king ſhould lay downe his crowne, and go and become a ſhepheard or of ſome manuall trade, all men would maruell at it. So it fareth with them that profeſſe themſelues to be Chriſtians, and yet bend their wits and endeuors wholly for theſe worldly things, they doe as it were caſt aſide their kingly crowne, and abaſe themſelues to ſlauiſh bondage. But we muſt euer after haue our hearts fixed in heauen, ſtriuing to come to our inheritance there.

Inſtruct. VI. Seeing all the true members of Chriſt be kings and princes: this ſhould be an inducement to al backward perſons to loue and embrace true religion. In theſe careleſſe dayes Religion is counted preciſeneſſe, and the profeſſion thereof made a matter of reproch. But this ought not to bee ſo, ſeeing that by it wee come to haue right and intereſt vnto the kingdome of heauen, and to bee lords of all creatures. And why ſhould we not eſteeme the goſpell preached as a moſt precious iewell, ſeeing that wee which are vaſſales of Sathan, and firebrands of hell (as all men are by nature) become thereby the members of Chriſt, yea kings and princes to God? Yea verely, the conſideration of this ſhould make the miniſters of the Goſpell to ioy in their callings, and to take all paines to preach the word, ſeeing by it men become of vaſſals of Sathan, the true members of Chriſt, and heires of the kingdome of heauen. In this world it is counted great honour to conſecrate and eſtabliſh one in an earthly kingdome: What a bleſſed and honourable thing then is this, to conſecrate ſpirituall kings for the kingdome of heauen? And this is done, when by the word preached men are conuerted and brought to vnfained repentance for their ſinnes, & to true faith in Chriſt Ieſus.

Thus much for the duties. Now follow the conſolations to euery true beleeuer onely. It is an heauie croſſe, which breeds much anguiſh to the ſoule, to bee in pouertie and contempt among men; yet herein may the child of God ſtay his heart, and leſſen his griefe, by conſidering that euen in this ſtate of miſerie, he is a king vnto God; though hee ſeeme baſe to the world, yet it appeareth not what he ſhall bee, for hee is heire to the kingdome of heauen. If a man bee in ſickneſſe, he muſt conſider it is but Gods meſſenger, to call him out of this world to the full poſſeſſion of the ioyes of his kingdome. If he be in trouble of mind, hauing his owne conſcience tormented fearefully by Sathan with his ſinnes; yet he muſt not deſpaire, the Lord will giue him an happie iſſue: he muſt remember he is a king, and therefore ſhall one day haue full conqueſt ouer ſinne, Sathan, and his own corruption, yea, ouer all his enemies whatſoeuer. If he be in the heat of perſecution turmoiled and toſſed from poſt to pillar, which fleſh and bloud cannot brooke: yet then hee muſt conſider his holy calling to bee a ſpirituall king, whoſe propertie it is in the moſt violent afflictions, euen vnto death it ſelfe (as Paule ſayth) to be more than conquerour, Roman. 8. 37. Laſtly, in the very pang of death, when nature muſt needs be diſſolued, and ſoule and body ſeparated, then muſt the child of God remember, that hee is a king in Chriſt, and this will ſtay his heart againſt the feare of death; for herein ſhall hee ſee, that by death, as through a ſtraight paſſage, he ſhall enter into the full poſſeſſion of his kingdome. And thus much in that wee are kings.

From the ſecond dignitie of beleeuers, which is to be prieſts vnto God, we are likewiſe taught ſundry duties.

Firſt, to teach and inſtruct one another. It was the office of the prieſt vnder the law to teach the people the will of God. The prieſts lips ſhould preſerue knowledge, Malach. 2. verſ. 7. And now vnder the Goſpell not onely the miniſter, but euery true beleeuer is a ſpirituall prieſt, and therefore ought to teach, and admoniſh one another. Coloſſ. 3. 16. When the Lord ſayth, Touch not mine anoynted, and doe my prophets no harme, Pſa. 105. 15. He calleth all his faithfull by the name of Prophets, becauſe they ought to haue the knowledge of his wil, and bee able alſo in due time and vpon iuſt occaſion to teach the ſame to others, that ſo the Goſpell of Chriſt may flouriſh. And as this dutie belongs to all men; ſo eſpecially to gouernours, as parents and maſters, they muſt ſhew themſelues prieſts to their charges. Abraham did it, Geneſ. 18. Dauid did it, Prou. 4. And Bathſhebath did it, Prou. 31. And all muſt doe it, that deſire an holy generation to ſucceed after them. We teach them other things, why not religion?

Secondly, ſeeing wee bee prieſts, wee muſt pray vnfainedly, not onely for our ſelues, But (a) for all men, eſpecially the members of Chriſt. The prieſt in the old Teſtament muſt pray and make requeſt, not onely for himſelfe, but for the people alſo. And herein ſtands the praiſe of a Chriſtian, to pray for his brethren. Hence it is that Paule ſayth: Pray for all the Saints, and for me, Epheſ. 6. 18. Moyſes is highly commended for this dutie, eſpecially when he prayed for the Iſraeliter, and ſtood before the Lord in the gap, to turne away his wrath, Exod. 32. Elias for his power in prayer and propheſie, is called the chariot and horſemen of Iſrael. 2. King. 2. 12. And this is recorded for the praiſe of Hezechia, That when the people were vnprepared at the eating of the Paſſeouer, He prayed to the Lord for mercy, and was heard, 2. Chron. 30. 18. And ſo when we find any commended mended in ſcripture for his gift in prayer, it is not ſo much for that hee prayed diligently for himſelfe, as for the whole church of God.

Thirdly, being prieſts we muſt offer ſpirituall ſacrifice vnto God, that is, dedicate our ſelues, our ſoules, and bodies, and all that is in vs, our wit, learning, knowledge, and euery gift of bodie or mind to Gods ſeruice. That we may doe all this to his glory, we muſt looke, that euery thing we take in hand haue his beginning from a pure heart, a good conſcience and faith vnfained, and be directed to a good end, to Gods glory principally, and the good of others, whom it may concerne.

Fourthly, we muſt be full of bleſſings. The prieſts in the old Teſtament, Numbers 6. vſed to bleſſe the people: ſo muſt we, if we be Chriſtians, becauſe wee are ſpirituall prieſts. We muſt take heede of all curſed ſpeaking, of ſlaundering and backbiting, of ſwearing and forſwearing: and giue our ſelues to bleſſed and gratious ſpeeches to all men, and of all men, friends, or foes, Rom. 12. 14.

Fiftly, wee muſt ſeeke to haue God for our portion: The Leuits had no portion in the land of Canaan, but the tenths onely, (a) The Lord was their portion. So we being prieſts to God, muſt bee content with any eſtate in this world, for God is our portion. We muſt not ſeek too much after any inheritance on earth, for then we carry not our ſelues like prieſts vnto God. The fauour of God in Chriſt muſt be the thing we long for, and therin muſt we reioyce.

(b) Deut. 10. 9. Pſal. 119. 57

To him be glory and dominion, for euermore, Amen. Theſe words are a thanks-giuing to God for the former benefits of Chriſt beſtowed on his church: Which S. Iohn putteth in before hee haue ended his record of the gracious workes of Chriſt for his church, as it were interrupting himſelfe, for the great deſire hee had to the glory of God. Whereby wee are taught, that the conſideration of Gods benefites towards vs, ſpecially ſuch as concerne the kingdom of heauen, ſhould ſtirre vp our hearts to giue continuall prayſe and glory to God. This was Dauids affection, when he felt in his ſoule the pardon of his ſinnes, and therefore hee breakes out into this thanksgiuing: My ſoule prayſe thou the Lord, and forget not all his benefits, Pſalme 103. 1. And ſo did Paule, after the bleſſed memory of Gods mercy in his vocation. 1 Tim. 1. 17.

Secondly, in this example of Iohn wee may learne, what is the true forme of giuing thankes to God, namely, to aſcribe vnto him all power, glory, and abſolute dominion for euermore. But alas, it is too too manifeſt, that our corrupt nature will not do this, but taking from God his due, beſtoweth it on creatures, yea, on our owne ſelues. It is a matter of grace to know what is due to God, and to aſcribe the ſame vnto him, and therefore we are charged to giue vnto the Lord glory and power, which in the next words he cals the glory of his name, Pſal. 96. 7, 8. So Chriſt, he teacheth vs to aſcribe all power, glory, might, and dominion to God, when wee ſay in the Lords prayer: For thine is the kingdome, the power and glory: that is, The kingdome of heauen is thine, all power in heauen and earth is thine, and therefore all glory is thine: and from our hearts wee doe aſcribe the ſame vnto thee.

Laſtly, S. Iohn addeth, Amen, that is, So be it. Let all glory and dominion bee giuen to Chriſt: which is the ſame he ſaid before. Whereby he doth teſtifie his feruent affection, and ſtrength of deſire, after the glory of Chriſt, elſe he would not haue doubled his thanksgiuing. And ſo ſhould it be with vs, we ſhould not freeſe in our thankeſgiuing for Gods benefits, but labour to haue our hearts & tongues to double the ſame, that thereby we may teſtifie our feruent and earneſt deſire after his praiſe and glory.

Verſe 7. Behold, hee commeth with clouds, and euery eye ſhall ſee him: yea, they which pierced him through: and all kinreds of the earth ſhall wayle before him, Euen ſo, Amen.

Theſe words are a declaration of the fourth action of our Sauiour Chriſt towards his church: and that is, his ſecond comming to iudgement, to iudge both quicke and dead. Wherein wee are to conſider ſundry points: firſt, this note of attention, Behold: ſecondly, the action of Chriſts comming it ſelfe, Hee commeth: Thirdly, the manner how, with clouds, amplified by the manifeſtation therof, Euery eye ſhall ſee him, euen they that pierced him: fourthly, the effect of his comming: All tribes of the earth ſhall waile. Fiftly, the concluſion of this narration, with two notes of aſſeueration, Euen ſo, Amen, to confirme the ſecond comming of Chriſt vnto all people.

I. point: Behold. Firſt, Saint Iohn beginneth this narration with a note of attention: The ſpirit of God is accuſtomed, when any thing is of ſpecial weight and worth our carefull marking, to prefixe before it this note of attention: Behold, or ſuch like. Hence then wee are taught this ſpeciall dutie, namely, often and euery day earneſtly and ſeriouſly to bethinke our ſelues of the ſecond comming of Chriſt to iudgement. This conſideration is a matter of great vſe, for it is a notable meanes to begin and continue the conuerſion of a ſinner vnto God. When the Scribes and Phariſes, obſtinat enemies, came to the baptiſme of S. Iohn, hee vſed this as a meanes to make them to turne, and beleeue in Chriſt, ſaying: O generation of vipers, who hath forewarned you, that you ſhould flie from the vengeance to come? Matth. 3.7. So Peter vſeth this ſame Argument, to bring the Iewes to repentance: exhorting them to turne, that their ſinnes might be put away, when the day of refreſhing (that is) the day of iudgement ſhould come, Acts 3.19. Paule perſuades the Athenians to repentance, Becauſe there is a day appointed in which the Lord will iudge the world by Ieſus Chriſt, Act. 17.30,31.

Secondly, this note of attention ſerues to ſtrike our hearts with a feare and reuerence of Chriſt Ieſus: for it giues vs warning that hee ſhall come to bee our Iudge. We are touched with awe and reuerence toward earthly magiſtrats when we conſider, that they haue authority to attach, apprehend, & to bring vs to their courts and aſsizes. How much more ſhould this worke in vs a reuerend awe towards Chriſt, when wee conſider, That one day wee muſt all bee brought before his Tribunall ſeat, and there bee iudged of him.

II. point: The comming of Chriſt himſelfe, Hee comes: that is, Chriſt locally deſcendeth from the higheſt heauen, in his manhood, to that part of the world, where the clouds be, there to giue iudgement vpon all mankind quick and dead. Here marke in what manner Iohn propounds his comming: hee ſayth not, he ſhall come, but in the preſent time, hee commeth. Whereby hee would teach vs: Firſt, that this ſecond comming of Chriſt is as certaine, as if it were now preſent. Secondly, that it is not long to, or far off, but will be quickly. Thirdly, that our dutie is, to conſider of the comming of Chriſt, as of a thing preſent. This Saint Iohn learned, and ſo ſhould wee by his example, for it is a matter of great vſe. For hence wee are taught, to deſire and doe that euery day, which we would deſire and doe in the day of iudgement, and bleſſed is hee that attaineth hereunto.

Now that we may come to the practiſe of this dutie, wee muſt dayly conſider of the comming of Chriſt, not as a thing to be delayed or farre off, but as a thing preſent. Wee muſt euery day call our ſelues to a reckoning and account, and perſuade our ſelues this may be the laſt day; and ſo ſhall we carry our ſelues euery day, as wee would in the laſt day. Now we would wiſh at the day of iudgment, that wee did repent and beleeue in Chriſt: and therefore euery day of our life, before the laſt iudgement come, we ought to repent and beleeue in Chriſt. If this dutie were practiſed, we ſhould find leſſe corruption, and more grace in our hearts, and leſſe ſinne, and more obedience in our liues euery day than other: but grace is wanting, and ſinne abounds, becauſe this meditation takes no place in our hearts. Againe, in that hee ſayth, Hee commeth, meaning in reſpect of his manhood; hence wee gather, hee is abſent from vs, in regard of bodily preſence; and the heauens muſt containe him vntill the day of iudgement: But if Chriſt were alwayes bodily preſent in the Sacrament, hee could not bee ſaid to come, but onely to manifeſt himſelfe, being before preſent. And therefore the opinion of thoſe, which hold the body of Chriſt to be really the bread, to bee in or about the bread of the Sacrament, is moſt falſe and friuolous, flat againſt that article of our Faith, whereby wee hold, That he comes from heauen onely at the laſt day, in regard of his manhood.

III. point: The manner of Chriſts com-

Christs comming, in two things: First, that he comes with clouds: Secondly, that his comming is open, and visible to euerie eye.

First, with clouds, here S. Iohn speaketh after the manner of the prophets, who to set out God in his maiestie and glory, say: Psal. 8. & 97. he comes with clouds, rides on the wings of the wind; as though he had sayd, he comes in exceeding maiestie and glorie. These words are added to make a distinction betweene the first and second comming of Christ. His first comming was in humilitie, borne of a poore virgin, entertained in a stable of an Inne: but his second comming is with glorie, maiestie, and dominion in the clouds. And the reason is because he came first to be a redeemer, and a sauiour by his suffering; and therefore came in the state of a seruant. But his second comming is to bee a Iudge of all men, yea of his enemies, and therfore he commeth with all might, maiestie and glory, to shew himselfe king and lord of all.

The vses of this his second comming are set downe in the 97. Psalme, to make the verie mountaines to tremble, to confound the wicked, and vngodly, and to comfort the godly in that day.

Secondly, for his open appearance; Euerie eye shall see him, he shall come in maiestie and glorie: not secretly, but in visible shew to all the world. All men shall see him with their owne eyes; All I say, which were since the world began to his comming.

In these words hee toucheth three points: First, he taketh it here for granted, that euerie man shall rise from death to life, though their death were neuer so strange, or neuer so long before. Secondly, that all men being raised againe, shall haue life, and motion, and their senses restored to them, as before they died. Thirdly, that all men, none excepted, shall come and stand before the tribunall seate of Christ, and there bee iudged of him in the clouds.

The consideration whereof is, First, an exceeding comfort to Gods children, in that they being dead, and rotten in their graues, shall rise, and receiue their life, and motion, and see Christ their sauiour, and iudge of all men. If a man when hee layeth him downe to sleepe, should bee told that when hee rose hee should see his dead father and mother, or his deareſt friends, whom he saw not of long before; this would bee a notable comfort to him, that now he should inioy them againe: but how farre greater comfort shall this yeeld to all the godly, who haue beene dead and rotten in the graue, That they shall be raised vp, and not onely to meete with godly friends, but enioy Christ Iesus the sonne of God, which is the friend of friends; who shall giue them not onely life and motion, but eternall life with his owne maiestie. This was Iobs comfort, that though he died, yet he beleeued he should see his redeemer with his eyes. And this should be our comfort against the feare of death, and last iudgement.

Secondly, this is a terror to the wicked, and to all impenitent sinners, that they shall (will they nill they) be brought to the barre of Christs iudgement seate, & there looke on him, who is their iudge whom they haue in their life contemned, and despised. And this consideration may serue to moue them to repentance which haue not begunne to repent, and to labour to become the members of Christ, & also to increase and further repentance in them, who haue by Gods grace begun the same. It may be some do thinke when they die, all is done, and there is no further account to follow: but though we lie rotten in our graues a thousand, or two thousand yeares; yet we shall rise and looke vpon our iudge with our owne eyes. And if we haue not in our life time repented, we shall heare him with our owne eares, giuing the dreadfull sentence against vs, Go ye cursed into euerlasting fire. And therefore it is best for vs in this day of grace to preuent this danger, and now repent, and beleeue in Christ: that then we may rise with ioy, and stand with boldnesse before Christ Iesus. No doubt if we were persuaded that we should thus appeare, it would moue vs to repent.

Thirdly, Euerie eye shall see him: that is, all men with their owne eyes shall looke on him. Hence it may bee gathered, that those who wanted their sight in this life, shall haue it then restored. It is granted of all Diuines, that the elect shall haue all their senses, and other defects restored, restored, wherein they were wanting in this life: And it may also bee added that the wicked shall then haue some of their senses restored, if they wanted the same in this life; as hearing, and seeing at the least: for the deafe shall heare, the blind shall see this Iudge. And this can be no glorie to them, seeing it is to increase their miserie: for the more senses they haue, the more punishment they shall feele, because by sense we apprehend miserie.

Euen those which peirced him. Here is added a further euidence of Christs manifestation of his comming, and that for three causes. First, to shewe that no power, or wisedome in the world, can free any one from his appearance. For if any could escape, in all likelihod it would be those Iewes and Gentiles who preuailed most against Christ, and put him to death. But none of those can escape his iudgement: for euen they which peirced him, they shall see this Iudge, and bee summoned before his maiestie: For though they had power to kill him, yet none of them shall haue power to absent themselues from before his bar of iudgement at the last day.

Secondly, to shew the case of all wicked men: namely, that such woe and miserie shall befall them as they neuer once thought of. The Iewes and Gentiles which crucified Christ, neuer dreamed of this; that he whom they then put to a temporall death, should one day be their Iudge, and condemne them to eternall death, vnlesse they had repented.

Thirdly, to shew the rufull and wofull estate of all impenitent sinners; they shall rise to iudgement, and haue the greatest enemie their Iudge, who will shew rigor vpon them, and iustice without all mercie: for this peircing of Christ is meant not onely of the Iew, which put him to death, but of all vngodly persons; because all such do by their sinnes, as with swords and speares wound him at the heart as the souldiers did. Impenitent sinners be as the Iewes which crucified Christ, as Iudas which betrayed him, and as the soldiers which goared his side: and vnlesse they now repent, they shall one day be iudged as his enemies.

Euen they which peirced him. Out of these words some gather, that the body of Christ hath still the wounds and scarres which were giuen him at his death, the print of the nailes in his hands and his feete, and that these shall be seene in him at the last day: adding withall, that it is no blemish to Christ to haue these, but rather an increase of his glorie. But this cannot be gathered hence, for though it be sayd, They shall see him whom they peirced; yet it followeth not, that they shall see him as he was peirced: what though they see the person whom they wounded, shal they therefore see his wounds? Manie shall see kings and queenes whom they crowned in this world, but it followeth not, that therefore they shall weare their crownes. So we shall see our fathers and mothers, but not as fathers and mothers.

IV. point. The fruite and effect of his comming, especially in the wicked in these words: And all tribes of the earth, shall waile before him. Where S. Iohn speakes of the whole world according to the condition of the land of Canaan: for only that part of the world was diuided into tribes. As in like case our Sauiour Christ setteth out the iudgement of the whole world, according to the state and manner of iudging the visible Church, Math. 25. So that his meaning is, that they which repented not, of what nation soeuer, of what state, or condition soeuer they haue bene, shall wayle, and mourne at that day. And hee addes a reason of this their mourning, in these words, for him, before him, or ouer him. That is, they shall wayle, and lament with exceeding lamentation, because they beleeued not his word, but contemned him, and his doctrine, and therefore now they want all help to free them from the punishmēt of their vnbeleefe, and contempt of the gospell: for this life is the only time of grace and mercie: afterward there is no worke, nor inuention that can alter mans estate. In' dativ.

Hence then we are admonished, first, that in this world we labour aboue all things to be reconciled to God in Christ, to get our sinnes pardoned, to beleeue and imbrace his holy word, and vnlesse we attaine hereunto in this life, we shall wayle eternallie; for when the last day is come, there is no hope of help, no way to escape, no time of grace to repent. Remember member the fooliſh virgins that ſought for oyle, when it was too late, and knocked when the doores were ſhut, Math. 25. But if by Gods mercie we can in this life get his loue and fauour in Chriſt, then ſhall we enioy the ſame eternally: yea, at this dreadfull day to all the wicked, we ſhall lift vp our heads, and our harts, when wee ſhall ſee Chriſt comming to our full redemption, all teares ſhall bee wiped from our eyes, when the wicked ſhall crie and houle, woe and alas for euermore. The diuell knowing the worth of this admonition, will labour by all meanes to keepe it from our hearts. But this ſhall bee our wiſedome, betime to ſue for grace, and ſo ſhall wee defeat Sathan, and preuent eternall wailing.

Secondly, here ſee what an euill conſcience is: It lieth aſleep here while a man liues, and neuer troubleth him, and ſo it may do in death alſo: but in the laſt day when he ſhall ſee his Iudge with his eies, then it will ſtirre, it will torment him, it will attach, accuſe, and condemne him, it will lay to his charge all his ſinnes, his contempt of Chriſt and his word, his vnbeleefe in the time of grace; and then it will breake his heart, being as good as a thouſand witneſſes to condemne him.

This ſhould cauſe all men to labour to get a good conſcience, waſhed and purged in the bloud of Chriſt, which will not ſuffer vs to lie in any one ſinne; and vpon our repentance will aſſure vs we be in the fauour of God: Which if it do in this life, then will it neuer make vs to waile at the laſt day, but it will excuſe vs, and make vs looke vp to our redeemer, and to reioyce in him. But take heed when thy conſcience lieth aſleepe, and accuſeth not for thy ſinnes, no not at death; that is an euill conſcience which will awake at the day of iudgement to torment and condemne thee.

V. point. The meanes whereby hee confirmeth the certaintie of the ſecond comming of Chriſt; that is, by a double note of aſſeueration: Euen ſo, Amen. One of theſe is taken from the Greeks, Euen ſo, the ſecond from the Hebrews, Amen: being both as much as Amen, Amen, or verily, verily. In which phraſe Saint Iohn teacheth vs, how to confirme the things we auouch. There bee three wayes wherby a thing may be auouched: Firſt, by a ſimple and bare affirmation, or negation: Secondly, by an earneſt aſſeueration: Thirdly, by an oath. Now S. Iohn vſeth theſe two notes of aſſuring in this weightie matter of Chriſts ſecond comming, ſaying, He commeth, euen ſo, Amen; that is, certainly and without all doubt it is ſo. Hereby teaching vs, firſt, that an aſſeueration muſt not be vſed, but only when the matter in hand is of great weight and moment. Here then we ſee that wretched is their practiſe, who vſe to bind euerie word with an oath; which is a degree aboue this aſſeueration. Yea, they alſo are here iuſtly reprooued, who in their ordinarie communication haue euer in their mouth ſome weightie aſſeueration. Our ſauiour often vſeth theſe words of aſſeueration, yet onely in matters of weight and moment, and when the hearers were to be moued to greater attention, and their hearts were to bee more fully ſetled in ſome truth of great importance.

Secondly, by theſe aſſeuerations Iohn would teach vs to hold againſt the practiſe of Atheiſts, that the comming of Chriſt is moſt certaine and vndoubted. Which thing we ſhould more ſeriouſly obſerue; becauſe in our corrupt nature there is bred this falſe perſuaſion, That either wee ſhall not bee ſummoned to iudgement; or elſe, that Chriſts comming is farre off: like to the euill ſeruant, who ſaith, My maiſter deferres his comming: which euill ſeruant by nature is euerie one of vs.

Thirdly, hereby Iohn giues vs to vnderſtand one ſpeciall note and marke of the child of God: namely, to deſire and long after vnfainedly the ſecond comming of Chriſt to iudgement: for as theſe words be an aſſeueration, ſo withall they containe a moſt earneſt deſire: Euen ſo, Amen, as if he ſhould ſay by way of anſwer to the proclaiming of his comming, Lord grant it be ſo, yea Lord, let it be ſo. Hence it is that Saint Paule deſcribes all thoſe, who muſt receiue the crowne of righteouſneſſe, by this propertie, that they loue his appearing, 2. Tim. 4. 8. As for the vngodly it is not ſo with them, they (being not iuſtified nor ſanctified, and ſo not reconciled to God in Chriſt) cannot loue this appearing. Nay they could wiſh with all their heart there were no hell, nor laſt iudgement. And by this one note we may well iudge of our eſtates; for if from our hearts we deſire and long for this ſecond comming to iudgement, and wiſh he would come (a) quickly, then it is a certaine token and ſigne we bee reconciled to God in Chriſt, and ſhall receiue the crowne of righteouſneſſe. But if as yet wee feele not this longing and hungering deſire in vs, then we muſt ſuſpect our ſelues, and labour euery day to feele it: for it is the deſire of the ſaints to ſay, (b) How long Lord. And with Iohn, Euen ſo, Amen.

(b) Reue. 6. 10.

Verſe 8. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end (ſayth the Lord) which is which was, and which is to come, euen the Almightie.

After Saint Iohn had deſcribed Chriſt at large in the former verſes: he bringeth him in ſpeaking of himſelfe by a figure, as may appeare by this clauſe (ſaith the Lord.)

The end and ſcope of theſe words in this verſe is to confirme that which was before ſpoken of Chriſt, being a proofe and reaſon thereof, after this manner to be conceiued. He which is the beginning and the end of all, &c. he is ſufficient to be a king, prieſt, and prophet to the Church, and is both able and willing to beſtow on them all bleſsings which ſerue for their good. The firſt part of this argument is omitted, the ſecond part is contained in this eight verſe: But I am the beginning, and the end; and therefore I am ſufficient, &c.

In this eight verſe are three points concerning Chriſt. Firſt, he is the beginning and the end. Secondly, he is, was, and is to come. Thirdly, he is Almightie. For the firſt: that Chriſt is the beginning, and the end, Saint Iohn expreſſeth by a compariſon taken from the Greeke alphabet: and it ſtandeth thus. As in the A, B, C, of the Grecians, Alpha is the firſt letter, and therefore the beginning of all the letters; and Omega is the laſt, and therefore the end of all the letters. So (ſaith Chriſt) am I the beginning of all things that are; and the end of all things. The firſt part of this ſimilitude is in theſe words, I am Alpha and Omega; that is, I am as Alpha and Omega. The ſecond part in theſe words, The beginning and the end.

From this and ſuch like manner of ſpeaking, the Papiſts gather that it is lawfull to worſhippe God in a ſtrange language. And that the Scriptures are to be read and deliuered to the people in an vnknowne tongue. But their collection is friuolous: For though the vnlearned Engliſh man know not what Alpha and Omega is: yet the Churches to whome this booke was written, being Grecians knew generally what was meant hereby.

Againe, though the ſpirit of God vſeth here and there a ſtrange word or phraſe; yet we may not follow that practiſe in the whole ſeruice and worſhip of God, whereby neither the word, nor prayer ſhould be vnderſtood of the people, as the Papiſts do.

I am the beginning, Chriſt is ſayd to bee the beginning for two cauſes. Firſt, becauſe he was the verie firſt of all things: there was nothing before him; he had a being when all creatures were not; then was he the ſame that he is now: and for this ſaith Saint Iohn Chap. 1. verſ. 1. In the beginning was the word, that is, the ſonne of God, he had his beeing, and ſubſiſting when all other creatures wanted it, and began to be.

This proueth the eternitie of Chriſt, becauſe hee had his being before any creature; he was a ſubſtance and eſſence begotten of the father before all worlds, not created as other creatures are, or made of any other.

Secondly, he is called the beginning; becauſe he giueth a beginning to al creatures: For all things which were created and had a being, were created by him, and had their being from him. So ſaith the Apoſtle, All things are from him, and for him, Coloſ. 1.16. And hence we learne, that when we go about any buſineſſe in word or deed, we muſt begin it with inuocation on the name of Chriſt: for Chriſt he giues the beginning, and proceeding to all things. And without his helpe we cannot haue in any thing good ſucceſſe.

Secondly, the ſame Chriſt is the end of all things, and that for two cauſes: Firſt, becauſe he is the laſt of all things, and after him is nothing in ſubſiſting, and being ing: for all creatures if they were left to themſelues would come to nothing. And whereas ſome creatures be eternall, it is not of themſelues, but by him, and from him which is the end. But though they all ſhould come to nothing, yet Chriſt would remaine the ſame hewas for euer, namely, the eternall ſonne, and word of the father. This then ſhould make vs with full purpoſe of heart to cleaue vnto Chriſt in all things, if wee would enioy eternall happineſſe: for without him is nothing but changing; and vnleſſe wee haue our ſtableneſſe from him, wee cannot but come to an end.

Secondly, hee is the end; becauſe all things in heauen and earth were made to ſerue him: For him were all things created, Coloſſ. 1. 16. that is, to ſerue for his glory and prayſe.

The ſecond thing here ſaid of Chriſt is this, Which is, was, and is to come. Theſe words were expounded in the fourth verſe, where the very ſame are affirmed of the father. The meaning is, that Chriſt is in preſence a perfect ſubſtance, and eſſence or being, ſubſiſting in, by, and from himſelfe, and ſuch a ſubſtance hee was in time paſt, from all eternitie: and ſuch as ſhall continue in time to come for euermore.

Hence we learne three things. Firſt, That the ſecond perſon in the Trinitie is conſubſtantiall with the father, that is, of one and the ſame ſubſtance and nature with him. The reaſon is, becauſe there can be but one only ſubſtance or eſſence, which hath being in and by it ſelfe, and from it ſelfe alone: neither can we conceiue how there ſhould be two, or more, but onely one; as there cannot bee two eternals, or two infinits, two omnipotents and abſolute lords, which haue nothing one of another. Now in the fourth verſe it is ſaid of the father, That he is a ſubſtance of himſelfe, in himſelfe, and from himſelfe alone. And here the ſelfeſame thing is ſaid of the ſecond perſon, the ſonne. And, therefore hee is of the very ſame ſubſtance with the father: for though they bee diſtinct perſons in the godhead, yet they haue but one and the ſame ſubſtance, one and the ſame diuine nature, and Godhead.

Secondly, hence we may gather, That Chriſt is God of himſelfe: becauſe as the father is, was, and ſhall bee; ſo the ſonne is, was, and ſhall bee; and that in the ſame reſpects: So that as the father is God of himſelfe, and from none other, ſo the ſon is God of himſelfe, and from none other. Indeed as he is the ſonne, the ſecond perſon, ſo hee is of the father, and hath his being from him by eternall generation: but as hee is God, hee is conſubſtantiall with the father, and coequall with him, and hath his eſſence of, and in himſelfe alone. And the ſame is to bee affirmed of the holy ghoſt; as he is the third perſon, he proceeds from the father and the ſon, but as hee is God, hee is of himſelfe, and from none other.

Thirdly, hence we learn, That Chriſt is coeternall with the father, being euerlaſting as the father is, and euery way coequall, hauing the ſame attributes of the godhead that the father hath.

The third point touching Chriſt is, That he is the Almightie. There is in God, and ſo in Chriſt, a double power: Firſt, a Potentiall; ſecondly, an Actuall power. Potentiall is that, whereby hee can doe many things, moe than euer hee did, or will doe: as hee could raiſe children to Abraham of the ſtones, but he would not: hee could haue deliuered Chriſt from death, but hee would not. Now Chriſts omnipotencie is not to be vnderſtood of his potentiall power here principally, but rather of his actuall power, whereby he bringeth to paſſe without let and impediment whatſoeuer hee decreeth, willeth or promiſeth.

From this omnipotencie of Chriſt ariſeth a double comfort to his church: Firſt, That whatſoeuer hee hath promiſed in his Goſpell, is yea, and Amen: that is, ſhall bee brought to paſſe effectually without ſtop and let, as aſſuredly as hee promiſed it. Now Chriſt hath promiſed in the Goſpell to all penitent ſinners remiſsion of ſinnes, mortification, iuſtification, and life euerlaſting; euery one whereof, ſhall in due time bee done to euery true beleeuer, which is a ſingular comfort to them; for all men and Angels cannot giue one of theſe to any one man: but Chriſt hee is omnipotent, and he both can and will effect them all to his elect.

The ſecond comfort: that Chriſt both can and will giue his church ſufficient ſecuritie and protection through all the miseries of this life: hee can defend and guard her against all the furie and malice of Sathan, and all her enemies: hee is aboue them, and can bridle their might when and how he pleaseth.

Hence also, that Christ is Almightie, we are taught two duties. First, vnder the crosse, and in tribulation to humble our selues vnder his mightie hand: for it is he which correcteth vs, who is almighty, able to do what he list, and more than he will, resistance or repining will doe vs no good. Secondly, this should mooue vs to performe heartie obedience vnto Christ in all things, both in our generall and particular callings to walke vprightly before him: for he is Almightie, & seeth whether we walke sincerely before him, or not, if wee doe not, hee is able to punish vs. By this Argument God perswadeth Abraham to walke vprightly before him, because he is Almightie, able to correct and destroy those which refuse to obey him, Genes. 17. 1.

Vers. 9. I Iohn, euen your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdome and patience of Iesus Christ, was in the Ile called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the witnessing of Iesus Christ.

Hetherto wee haue entreated of the Preface of this booke, containing the title and inscription thereof. Now from this ninth verse, to the end of the third chapter, is contained one of those seuen visions which were shewed vnto Iohn, and are set downe in this booke. In this first vision two things are to bee noted: first, the circumstances; secondly, the parts thereof. The circumstances in the ninth and tenth verses: the parts from thence to the end of the third chapter.

The circumstances of this vision are foure: first, the person to whom this vision was shewed, namely, Iohn: The second, the place where, at Patmos: The third, the manner how it is propounded, It was deliuered to him being rauished in the Spirit: The fourth, the time when, on the Lords day.

For the first: Iohn is the person to whom this vision befell; who doth therefore name himselfe, to shew, that it was giuen him of the Lord: for as the Lord hath his visions and reuelations (as hath beene sayd) so the diuell hath his: but they may bee distinguished by the persons to whom they be giuen. God giueth his visions not to all men, but vnto those which are most fit for them; such as bee most holy men for life, endued with exceeding gifts of God, as knowledge, wisdome, constantie, zeale, pietie, and religion. So in the old testament hee deliuered not them to all, but vnto his seruants the Prophets, men of singular gifts and graces, and of exceeding holinesse & pietie. Indeed the Lord reuealed some particular things by wicked men, as by Balaam and Caiphas, but they neuer knew what those things meant which were shewed vnto them. It is a propertie belonging to the seruants of God, to receiue a vision, and to know the same to their comfort. And for both these was Iohn throughly qualified, he was a man of exceeding holinesse of life (for Christ loued him) and of singular and rare gifts, full of zeale, loue, and pietie, and also had the knowledge of this vision made knowne vnto him. But the diuel maketh no such choise, his visions befall men which are Heretickes, wicked notorious sinners, who haue no such rare and spetiall gifts as the other haue: so that wee must esteeme of this, as a singular gift of God to his owne Apostle S. Iohn.

Now Iohn hauing named himselfe to bee the receiuer of this vision: for the greater credit hereof, he describes himselfe by two modest teames: First, a brother: secondly, a companion: First, hee cals himselfe, their brother; that is, of them who by faith were all members of the mysticall bodie of Christ. For the Church of God is a familie, whereof God the father is head and house-holder, Iesus Christ is the elder brother, and all beleeuers are fellow brethren in and by Christ, being by faith the adopted sonnes of God, members of that familie, and brethren each to other.

By this title (your brother) first hee setteth out his humility, and great modestly. For hee was a man at that time aboue all men which liued, in regard of his gifts and holinesse of life; hee was the last Apostle, and had Apostolicall authoritie, being a most zealous and constant professour, yet hee calleth himselfe a brother to al true beleeuers, and maketh himselfe but equall with them, though they were farre inferior to him. And ſo ſhould we eſteeme better of our brethren than of our ſelues, and make our ſelues inferiour to them.

Secondly, by this title we ſee he had his heart full of brotherly loue to all the members of the church of Chriſt, he loued them as brethren. So we are bound to loue all men, euen our enemies, as they be of the ſame fleſh with vs, but thoſe that bee of the ſame faith and religion with vs, to theſe eſpecially ſhould wee ſhew our loue and affection. So Paule ſayth to the chriſtian Romans, Be affectioned to loue one another with brotherly loue, Rom. 12.10. And great reaſon: for beleeuers are linked each to other with the neereſt bond, they haue the ſame father, which is God, the ſame redeemer, the ſame faith, hope, baptiſme, and the ſame benefit by Ieſus Chriſt, his death and obedience.

But this dutie is not practiſed; there be that call themſelues brethren, who (as Iſay ſaith) hate them that tremble at the word; and mocke them euen for the profeſſion of the ſame religion, whereby they thinke to be ſaued. Iſa 66. 5. If any ſeeme to make more conſcience of their wayes than others, they are reuiled and hated for the name of Chriſt; which ought not to bee, for among all true Chriſtians ſhould bee brotherly loue.

The ſecond title, Companion, or copartner in three things; in tribulations, in the kingdome, and in the patience of Chriſt. He cals himſelfe Copartner with them in tribulations for two cauſes. Firſt, becauſe at that time when hee wrote this viſion, the whole church was in perſecution and tribulation vnder that cruell tyrant Domitian, about foureſcore or an hundred years after Chriſt: who baniſhed Iohn into Pamos: where he was not vnmindful of the afflictions of the church whereof he was a member: and therefore cals himſelfe a partner with them in affliction.

By which he ſhews what is that ſtate of Gods church in this world, namely, to be vnder the croſſe: and the members thereof muſt not bee companions of peace and eaſe, but copartners in affliction and tribulation. And therefore Chriſt teacheth thoſe which will bee his Diſciples theſe leſſons. Firſt, to deny themſelues, to take vp his croſſe daily and to follow him. And becauſe of this eſtate, the church in this world is called The Militant Church, being in continuall fight againſt the diuell and his inſtruments. The conſideration whereof is of ſpeciall vſe: For we in this land haue had peace and quietnes for many yeares without perſecution, which wee muſt acknowledge for a ſpeciall bleſſing vouchſafed to vs for this end, that now in the time of peace wee might prepare our ſelues againſt the day of triall. For ſeeing the eſtate of the church is to bee vnder afflictions; wee are all in duty bound to waite continually when God will call vs out to ſuffer for his ſake. No man can define the time, or the manner of our triall: but yet that it will come we muſt reſolue; becauſe of the vſuall eſtate of the church. God hath for a long time ſent foorth labourers into his harueſt, whereby no doubt many sheaues are gathered into the Lords barne. Now after this long gathering there will come a day of fanning: The Lord will take into his hand the fanne of affliction, and put it into his corne, and thereby try the chaffe from the wheat. It ſtands vs therefore in hand to prepare our ſelues in this time of peace, that wee may bee found good corne in the Lords ſieue, and not chaffe, which muſt be caſt into vnquenchable fire.

Secondly, he cals himſelfe their copartner in afflictions: becauſe his pitifull heart was moued with the bowels of compaſſion, towards all his fellow members, when he remembred their perſecution, and affliction vnder the cruell tyrant Domitian. And the ſame affection ſhould be in euerie one of vs towards the poore afflicted ſeruants of Chriſt: ſeeing they bee our fellow members, wee ſhould haue a fellow-feeling with them, weeping with them that weepe, and ſhew our compaſſion in pitying them. If the foote be pricked, the head ſtoopes, the eye beholds and looketh on it, the finger puls it out, the hand applies the plaiſter, the other foote is readie to runne for helpe, the tongue to aske for counſell, & all the members are readie to affoord their mutuall helpe in pitie and fellow-feeling: ſo when any members of the church ſuffer affliction, be pricked with perſecution for Chriſts cauſe; then ſhould we as members of the ſame body, be readie to do all the helpe wee can to them, eſpecially in ſhewing our fellow-feeling with them.

The ſecond thing wherein he is this copartner is, in the kingdome of Chriſt, that is, the kingdome of heauen. Where obſerue that he placeth fellowſhip in affliction, before companion in the kingdome: to giue vs to vnderſtand, that through afflictions & croſſes for Chriſts ſake, is the readie way to the kingdome. It is that way which is beaten and troden by the Prophets, Apoſtles, and the Saints of God: as the Apoſtle ſaith, (a) through manifold tribulations we muſt enter into heauen. And this (b) momentarie affliction cauſeth to vs an infinit weight of glorie; not by deſeruing it, but by ſhewing the plain way thither. Wherby we are taught not to thinke it hard, when trials do befal vs, but rather to count it a good thing, yea exceeding great gladneſſe, when any affliction doth befall vs for Chriſts ſake: for herby we are brought like wandring ſheep into that beatē path which leadeth to heauen. Nay, we muſt rather marueil when we profeſſe the Goſpell, and haue no affliction; then we may (c) feare wee be out of the way, ſeeing the Lord afflicts euerie child which is his.

(a) Act.14.22.
(b) 2.Cor.4. 17
Iam.1.2.
(c) Heb.12.8.

Thirdly, hee is Copartner in patience: which he addeth, becauſe it is a moſt worthie vertue, whereby wee are made able to perſeuer in affliction till we come to heauen. Afflictions are the beaten way, heauen is our ioyfull end, patience is the meanes to make vs go on till wee come thither. Whatſoeuer things are written, are written for our learning, that we through patience, & comfort in the Scriptures might haue hope, Rom. 15.4. Where true hope to come to heauen is obtained by patience, which maketh a beleeuer to go on in ſuffering till he come to life eternall. There is much fruit in the good ground, but not broght forth without patiēce, & the true beleeuer is ſaued by hope in this world, yet cānot come to heauē without patiēce, *Lu.*5. for therby he muſt poſſeſſe his ſoule.

Matth.13.

Now becauſe men will ſay, patience is an hard matter, and ſo are diſcouraged from ſeeking for it; therefore to ſet an edge on ther deſire, he addes, It is the patience of Chriſt: and it is ſo called, either becauſe he commands it; or becauſe it is his gift; and commeth from the ſpirit of Chriſt; or chiefly becauſe hee himſelfe ſuffereth in his members, and as their miſerie and ſuffering is his, ſo is their patience. The conſideration whereof is a ſingular motiue to enduce euery child of God to patience, in bearing the croſſe for Chriſt his ſake: for they haue Chriſt their fellow ſufferer, he takes part with them, and puts vnder his ſhoulder. Who would not then be content to ſuffer with patience? And thus much of the branches of his fellowſhip ſeuerally.

Now conſider them ioyntly, and they containe a notable deſcription of the communion of ſaints, which is a ſpeciall article of our faith, ſtanding in three things: In tribulation, In the kingdome of heauen, And in patience. And marke well, that this communion begins in tribulation, therein we muſt be partners, and that with patience, before wee come to haue fellowſhip in the kingdome of heauen. That man therefore that hath afflictions layd on him, muſt beare them patiently; and when the members of Chriſt are vnder the croſſe, hee muſt in tender compaſsion be touched with their miſeries: and when he doth truly feele in his heart this Chriſtian patience and compaſsion, then may he aſſure himſelfe he is entred into this communion, and ſhall vndoubtedly with all ſaints be partaker of the ioyes of heauen. But if patience and compaſſion bee wanting, wee perſuade our ſelues in vaine of this communion: and therefore let vs ſtriue againſt impatience, and againſt the deadneſſe and hardneſſe of our hearts; that we may neither murmur againſt God in our owne afflictions, nor yet want compaſſion towards our brethren that any where ſuffer affliction for the name of Chriſt. Thus much for the circumſtance of the perſon.

Was in the Iſle called Patmos. In theſe words is the ſecond circumſtance, namely, the place where this viſion was giuen to Iohn. This Patmos is one of thoſe Iſlands, which the Geographers call Sporades, lying in the Weſt part of Aſia the leſſe, neere to the churches to whom Iohn writ, and by the ſea commonly called the Egean ſea. This Iſland was a ſmall, baſe, baſe, and poore Iſland, little or neuer a whit inhabited.

Saint Iohn had his viſion not at Ieruſalem, at Antioch, or Rome, but in Patmos, a baſe, poore, and little inhabited Iſland. By this we ſee, that in the new Teſtament there is no reſpect of one place aboue another, in regard of Gods preſence, and our fellowſhip with him, hee doth as well manifeſt himſelfe to Iohn by this viſion in Patmos, as to other his Prophets and Apoſtles in Ieruſalem the holy citie. In the old Teſtament there was difference of places, in regard of Gods ſolemne worſhip and preſence; as the Lord ſhewed his preſence, and tied his worſhip eſpecially to his Tabernacle and Temple at Ieruſalem. This Daniell ſheweth by his geſture in prayer: for being in captiuity, when he prayed in his chamber, He opened the window which was towards the Temple at Ieruſalem, and turned his face thitherward. But now in the new Teſtament, that difference of place is aboliſhed in reſpect of Gods worſhip. And therefore Paule willeth, That men pray euery where, lifting vp pure hands vnto God: and ſo for all the duties of religion wee muſt thinke the like.

Dan. 6.

1. Tim. 2. 8.

The Vſe. I. Then away with Popiſh pilgrimage to churches and chappels of Saints, or to their reliques. This is meere ſuperſtition: for God is preſent euery where, and a man that will worſhip God in ſpirit and truth, may haue fellowſhip with him in one place as well as another.

II. Alſo this may ſerue to correct a falſe conceit which many haue of our churches and chappels: for when they come to a dwelling houſe, they thinke it not their dutie, there to humble themſelues, to kneele downe, and call vpon God: but if they come into a church or chappell neuer ſo often, vpon ordinarie affaires they fall downe to prayer. The reaſon is, becauſe they thinke theſe places bee more holy, and God more preſent there, and they ſhall ſooner be heard in them than in their common houſes: which is vntrue: for in the new Teſtament all ſuch diuerſitie of place is aboliſhed in regard of Gods ſeruice and preſence: the dwelling houſe is as holy as the church. Indeed churches muſt bee maintained, becauſe in them the people may more orderly and conueniently meet together to ſerue God publickly in the word and prayer: for which time all due reuerence muſt be obſerued in them: but we muſt not think that they are more holy than other places.

More particularly, in this circumſtance of place note two things: Firſt, by what meanes Saint Iohn came thither: Secondly, to what end, and for what cauſe. The meanes was baniſhment by the emperour Domitian: the cauſe was, for the word of God.

For the firſt, hee came and abode in Patmos, being baniſhed thither for the Goſpels ſake. In this his baniſhment conſider many excellent things: Firſt, Saint Iohn was a moſt worthy Apoſtle, endued with rare gifts, a ſingular maintainer of the Goſpell, and a famous founder of the church of God, and chiefe pillar thereof in thoſe dayes when he wrot this booke: and for this cauſe moſt hated of the cruell perſecutor Domitian, and of the Romanes. And yet obſerue, That whereas many other true Chriſtians were put to the ſword, S. Iohn is not, but eſcapeth by baniſhment. The cauſe of this was Gods ſpeciall prouidence, by which hee reſerued him for the benefit of the church, that hee might receiue this Reuelation, and commit it to writing, for the perpetuall good of all his children. And ſo though Domitian was a cruell tyrant, and wanted no malice towards Iohn, yet hee could not kill him. God ouerruled him, that he did but baniſh him, and that into ſuch an Iſland, wherein he might quietly receiue theſe viſions, and pen the ſame for the good of the church. By this wee ſee the great care and prouidence of God ouer his church, that hee doth bridle and ouerrule the cruell minds and might of bloudie perſecutors, that they cannot for their hearts do any thing, but that which ſerueth for Gods glory, and the good of his church, though they intend the contrary. For Domitian intended onely the hurt of Iohn, yet ſee, by his baniſhment into that Iſle, he had fit place to receiue theſe viſions for the good of the church. So in the death of Chriſt, the Iewes and Gentiles, and all the people banded themſelues together, to put Chriſt to death, and the diuell he laboured to ſtirre them on to practiſe their intended malice. Yet the ouerruling power of God, who who bringeth light out of darkeneſſe, directeth and ordereth this their malice and wicked practiſe to the moſt excellent worke that euer was, euen the redemption of mankind. So Iosephs brethren intended no ſuch deliuerance as God wrought by him, in ſelling their brother. This conſideration ſhould comfort all Gods children in the time of any outward diſtreſſe, euen the remembrance of Gods ouerruling hand.

Secondly, in that Iohn went into baniſhment, when it was ſo appointed, wee learne, That when we are oppreſſed and perſecuted by tyrants for Chriſts ſake, we muſt not make reſiſtance, or offer violence, but ſuffer all iniuries with patience: for as one ſayth truly, The Chriſtians weapons in perſecution, are onely prayers and teares. And Saint Iohn often in this booke addeth this concluſion, after the foretelling of perſecution, Here is the patience of Saints; ſhewing that patience muſt be the complete armour againſt all our bloodie enemies.

Preces & lachrimæ, arma Chriſtianorum

Thirdly, here alſo obſerue, That Iohn came into this Iſland, not of his own accord, as chuſing a ſolitarie life to bee the moſt happie ſtate of perfection; but by violence and conſtraint. For if hee had come into it voluntarily, being little or not inhabited, hee could not haue done the duty of his Apoſtleſhip in preaching the Goſpell, and laying the foundations of the church. This then confuteth the Monkiſh life, which is no life of holy perfection (as Papiſts call it) but of glorious ſuperſtition and flat impietie before God: for hereby they forſake their callings, and vtterly diſable themſelues to do thoſe duties which God requireth of them in church, commonwealth, or familie.

Fourthly, whereas Iohn being baniſhed, receiued his viſions in a barren and baſe deſolate place: we ſee, that thoſe which honour God ſhall be honoured of God, euen then when men ſeeke moſt to diſgrace them: for what greater diſgrace could they haue put vpon Iohn, than to baniſh him into ſo baſe an Iſland? Yet becauſe it was for Gods glory, euen there doth the Lord appeare vnto him, and honour him much in reuealing vnto him theſe viſions. So when Ioſeph was ſold of his brethren, and moſt diſhonoured of them; then did God exhalt him moſt of all. The ſame may bee ſayd of Daniell in Babylon, whom God did moſt aduance, when his enemies ſought his greateſt ruine: and the ſame is true of all Gods children, Them which honour God will he honour.

II. point. The cauſe for which hee came into this Iſle, is expreſly ſet downe, for the word of God: that is, becauſe he was a publiſher and preacher of the word of God: for the performance of which dutie he was baniſhed. By which wee may note, That all naturall men (as Domitian and his court, and all the Gentiles, without Gods ſpeciall calling) doe beare a deadly hatred towards Gods word. For S. Iohn was a moſt worthy Apoſtle, a famous man for gifts, a ſingular preacher of the word of God; yet is hated, nay baniſhed, not for his owne cauſe, but for the word of God. This hatred hath appeared in the heathen emperours, by their bloudie perſecutions againſt the preachers and profeſſors of this word: and yet though men hate it naturally, the ſame word winneth them, and taketh place in their hearts for their conuerſion, and cauſeth them to loue it: ſo as ſucceſſiuely it hath beene ſpread ouer all the world. Which ſhews againſt the Atheiſt, That the word taught by the Prophets and Apoſtles, is indeed the true word of God, not the inuention of man: for mans word being hated, cannot win vnto it him which hateth it: but the word of God preuaileth by grace in the hearts of thoſe who hate it by nature, which it could not doe, vnleſſe there were in it ſome diuine power.

Againe, ſeeing Iohn was baniſhed for Gods word, all miniſters are to caſt their accounts, and make this reckoning, that they may and muſt ſuffer trouble & perſecution, yea, ſometime baniſhment it ſelfe, for the Goſpels ſake, if they will be faithfull. For that which befell the principall founders and chiefe builders of the church, cannot bee auoided of them which are ordinary miniſters, if they will be faithfull. Chriſt acquainteth his diſciples with this, telling them, That they are euen accurſed, when all men ſpeake well of them. Let none therefore thinke it ſtrange at this day, if for well doing, they heare and receiue euill: nay, let them Luke 6. 26.

feare the curse, when all men prayse them.

And for the witnessing of Iesus Christ. Here Iohn doth note more specially the cause of his banishment, to wit, for testifying the hystorie and doctrine of the gospell, the summe whereof is this, That Iesus Christ, the sonne of Marie, is the sonne of God, and redeemer of all that beleeue in him to the iustification of life. This testimonie S. Iohn puts downe, to giue vs to vnderstand, what part of Gods word that is, which is most hated of the world: and for the preaching whereof Gods ministers are persecuted and banished, to wit, the gospell of Iesus Christ especially: for the law is in part naturall, but the gospell is supernaturall, and to mans reason absurd; for the preaching whereof, men in all ages haue been persecuted. The reason hereof is this, God in the beginning made a couenant with man, promising, That the Gen. 3. seede of the woman should breake the serpents head. Now the gospell is that glad tidings, wherein is declared, that this promised seede is come; who hath indeede bruised the head of the serpent. Hereupon the diuell maligneth the gospel aboue all parts of Gods word, and accordingly hath laboured by al meanes to suppresse the same; partly by persecution, as hee did in the first three hundred yeares after Christ; and partly by bringing into the church damnable heresies, which did destroy the gospell by depraying the natures and offices of Christ, when by outward violence he could not preuaile.

Now seeing the diuell and his instruments doe thus hate the gospell, and labour to extinguish it: we on the contrarie must labour to know, and to beleeue to loue and embrace the gospell, that so we may vphold and maintaine the same.

Vers. 10. And I was rauished in the Spirit on the Lords day, and heard behind mee a great voyce, as it had beene of a Trumpet.

In this tenth verse are set downe the third and fourth circumstances of this vision. The third is the manner of receiuing and giuing this reuelation to Iohn, namely, in a traunce. The fourth is the time when it was giuen, on the Lords day.

Touching the manner, it is noted in these words: I was in the Spirit. That is, I was by the mightie and extraordinarie worke of the spirit of God cast into a traunce. That this is to bee so expounded, appeareth by comparing this phrase with the like in the whole propheste of Ezechiell, who vseth to say, I was in the spirit, when hee expresseth and signifieth that hee was cast into a traunce, and therein receiued some vision by the spirit.

To vnderstand this the better, consider two things: first, what a traunce is: secondly, the end of it. First, a traunce is an extraordinarie worke or action of Gods spirit. Wee must not thinke, that traunces come from the vertue of the starres, nor from the constitution of mans bodie, or by the strength of imagination, as some haue fondly thought: but they are wrought by the holy ghost. Secondly, it is not euery worke of the holy ghost, but an extraordinarie worke, aboue the order of nature. It is also powerfull and mightie, wherein the whole man, both in bodie and mind is altered: which Saint Iohn here expresseth, saying, I was in the Spirit. This extraordinarie worke of the spirit consisteth in two actions; one vpon the bodie, the other vpon the mind. First, in procuring a traunce, the spirit of God casteth the body of man into a dead sleepe; whereby all the sences, both inward and outward, are benummed: so Genes. 15. 12. when God renewed his couenant with Abraham, hee casteth him into an heauie sleepe: that is, into a traunce, wherein all his sences were benummed; onely his mind was waking. The action of the Holy ghost on the mind is, to draw it from fellowship with the body, and all the sences, to haue a neerer fellowship with God, that so the spirit of God may enlighten it with diuine light, that it may vnderstand the things which are reuealed to it: as wee may see in other extasies and traunces of the Prophets and Apostles. As in that of (a) Peter, when he saw the vision of beasts (a) Act. 10. 11 cleane and vncleane. And thus wee see what a Traunce is, namely, an extraordinarie powerfull worke of the spirit vpon the whole man, casting the bodie into a dead sleepe, and making the mind fit to receiue the things which are reuealed vnto it of the Lord. What a trance is.

II. point. The end of traunces. God for two causes reuealeth his will in traunces vnto his seruants, as to Iohn in this place. First, that they might know, that the things reuealed were not inuented of themselues, but giuen of God. Iohn herein had no vse of his bodily sences, hee neither heard, saw, nor felt, but they were asleepe. And therefore the vision must needs be from God, and the glory therof wholly his.

Secondly and chiefely, that the things reuealed might take the deeper impression in the vnderstanding: for the mind being freed from fellowship with the body, and not hindered by any phantasies of the sences (they being all asleepe, and quiet) doth then most liuely and sensibly apprehend and retaine the impression of things reuealed. Here then we see the great care of God, that his seruants might throughly vnderstand, certainely beleeue, and constantly keepe in memorie the things hee deliuered vnto them. The like care he shewed in reuealing his will to all his former Prophets, he would not haue their minds troubled with the fellowship of the body; nor hindered of the sences inward or outward, but wholly taken vp for the seruice of his spirit. And there is good reason of this: for if they must faithfully teach Gods will to others, to make them know and vnderstand, to beleeue & remember the same: is it not necessarie that they themselues should throughly vnderstand, soundly beleeue, and firmely keepe in memorie whatsoeuer God reuealeth?

This dealing of the Lord for this end with his holy Prophets, teacheth vs that the ordinarie ministers of the Gospell at this day ought to imploy themselues with all care and diligence, that they may throughly vnderstand the will of God in his word, and withall beleeue it soundly, and remember it carefully. We must not nowlooke for traunces and visions, as they had, but we must vse continuall study in the word, which is the ordinarie meanes to come vnto this knowledge. This dutie concerneth all students in diuinitie, and all others which desire a good vnderstanding in the word of God. And for their furtherance herein they must haue principall care to search into the text of Scripture throughly: thereby shall they best conceiue the proper meaning of the holy ghost, and with greater facilitie keepe the same in memorie. For one sayth truly, That euery good minister should bee a good text man. Whereby is descried a common fault of many students: who rather imploy themselues in the auncient writings of men, than in the word of God: nay, many spend their best time in the base writings of wicked & hereticall monks and friers. It cannot be denied, but many of the fathers were worthie members of Gods church: but if the fountaine be left, the ministerie will soone bee tainted with the filthie puddles of mens inuentions.

Againe, in this dealing of God with Iohn, we may obserue the truth of Christs saying, to him that hath, it shall be giuen. For though Iohn was endued with rare knowledge and singular gifts, yet the Lord addeth more knowledge to his former. The Lord found him faithfull in the duties of an Apostle; and therefore reuealeth the knowledge of many secrets vnto him in most full manner: euen so it is in Gods church at this day: all that haue care to know the will of God, and doe it, though their knowledge be small at the first, yet the Lord will helpe them, and adde dayly to their knowledge. And the cause why many heare the word of God and profit not; but wax worse, or stand at a stay, is, because they labour not to haue their knowledge encreased, by putting in practise that which they know: for if they did, then to him which hath, should more bee added, and hee should haue abundance. As on the contrarie, when we be negligent to heare or know and to obey the will of God: wee haue a spirit indeed sent vpon vs, yet not Gods spirit, but the spirit of slumber, of blindnesse & ignorance, so that we see, and see not; heare, and vnderstand not, Isay. 6. 9. Mark. 4. 25. Mat. 13. 9.

On the Lords day. In these words is the fourth circumstance, namely, the time when this vision was shewed to S. Iohn. This day which here is called the Lords day, among the Iewes was the first day of the weeke called by vs Sunday. It is called the Lords day for two causes: First, because on this day Christ rose from death to life: for Christ was buried the euen of the Iewes Sabboath, which is our Friday; and hee reſted in the graue their whole Saboath, which is our ſaturday, and roſe the firſt day of the weeke early in the morning, which is our Sonday.

Secondly, this firſt day of the weeke (according to the Iewes account) came in ſtead of the Iewes Saboath, and was ordained a day of reſt for the New teſtament; and ſanctified for the ſolemne worſhip of the Lord. And for this cauſe eſpecially it is called the Lords day, the manifeſtation whereof (as ſome thinke) Iohn chiefly intended in this title. And touching this time: for our better vnderſtanding, let vs conſider three points: Firſt, who changed the Iewes Saboath: ſecondly, for what cauſe; thirdly, whether the Church hath now in the New teſtament power to change the Saboath day we now celebrate, to any other day of the weeke.

For the firſt: it is commonly thought that the Iewes Saboath was changed into this Lords day by chriſtian emperours, long after the aſcention of Chriſt. But it is more conſonant to the tenour of the New teſtament to hold, that Chriſt himſelfe was the author of this change. My reaſons are theſe: Firſt, that which the Apoſtles deliuered and enioyned the Church, that they receiued from Chriſt, either by voyce or inſtinct, for they deliuered nothing of their owne head. But the Apoſtles deliuered, and inioyned this Saboath to the Church, as to be kept a day of holy reſt to the Lord as appeareth, 1. Cor. 16. 1. Where Paule ordained in the churches of Galatia and Corinth, that the collection for the poore ſhould be on the firſt day in the weeke: This hee left not to the choiſe of the church, but appointed it by authoritie Apoſtolicall from Chriſt.

Now the day of collecting for the poore (as appeareth in the hiſtories of the church) was the Saboath day; when the people were aſſembled for Gods ſeruice. For this was the cuſtome of the church for many yeares after Chriſt, Firſt to haue the word preached, and the Sacraments adminiſtred, then to gather for the poore: and for this cauſe in the writings of the church, the Lords ſupper is called a ſacrifice, an oblation, and the maſſe; not a reall ſacrifice as the papiſts vſe it; but ſpirituall, becauſe therewith was ioined collection for the poore, which was a ſpirituall oblation, not to the Lord, but to the church for the releefe of the poore; and it was called the maſſe, becauſe the collected releefe therat was ſent to the poore ſaints abroad. A ſecond reaſon is this: The Apoſtles theſelues kept this day for the Saboath of the New teſtament, Act. 20. 7. And it cannot bee proued that they obſerued any other day for an holy reſt to the Lord after Chriſts aſſention, ſaue onely in one caſe, when they came into the aſſemblies of the Iewes, who would keepe none other but the old Saboath of the law. A third reaſon is Iohn 20. 19. 26. The ſame day whereon Chriſt roſe from death being the firſt day of the weeke, he appeared to his diſciples, being gathered together, and taught them many things, which concerned the gouernement of his Church. And eight dayes after being the firſt day of the weeke, hee appeared vnto them for the ſame end. Now it is more than likely that Chriſt in his own perſon gaue them an example to celebrate and keepe that day wherein he roſe againe for a Saboath of the New teſtament.

II. point. The Saboath of the Iewes was changed for two cauſes. Firſt, to maintaine the libertie of the church, of the New teſtament whereof this was a great part, that they were freed from the ceremonies of the Iewes: For when this day was changed, the church was no more tied to the Iewes Saboath, neither had any ſuch regard of dayes and times.

Secondly, that there might be a more fit time for the memorie of the worke of mans redemption: For as God in the Old teſtament appointed the ſeuenth day to be a day of reſt to remember the firſt creation: So in the New teſtament it ſtands with reaſon there ſhould be a day to celebrate this worke of redemption, which is a wonderfull creation, wherein (as Iſay ſaith) are made a new heauen, & a new earth, Chap. 66. And wherby men become new creatures, 2. Cor. 5. 17. Nay this redemption is a more glorious worke than the creation; for in that creation Adam was the head, but in this redemption Chriſt Ieſus is our head. By the firſt creation wee receiued a temporall life; but by redemption wee receiue life eternall. In the creation Adam was eſpouſed to Eue, but in the worke of redemption euery chriſtian is eſpouſed to Chriſt Ieſus. By creation Adam had an earthly Paradiſe: In this redemption we haue an heauenly kingdome. In the creation Gods power, and wiſedom did principally appeare. In this redemption with power and wiſedome he ſhewed mercie and iuſtice: Iuſtice in Chriſts paſsion, and mercie in our forgiueneſſe. By creation he made man of nothing, but by redemption hee made him of worſe then nothing, and better then he was. Therefore ſeeing this worke of our redemption is farre paſsing the creation: it was meete a day ſhould be ſet a apart for the memorie thereof: Now no day could be more fit then the firſt day of the weeke, in which Chriſt roſe againe; whereby he confirmed the worke of our redemption: for he died for our ſinnes, and roſe againe for our iuſtification, Rom. 4.25.

III. point. Whether may the church of the New teſtament chaunge this Saboath day to any other day of the week, as to tewſday, wedneſday, &c. Anſ. The church hath no ſuch power, for time is the Lords, and the diſpoſing thereof is in his hands. Therefore Chriſt ſaith to his Diſciples, It is not for you to know the times and ſeaſons, which the father hath kept in his owne hands, Act. 1.6. As if hee ſhould ſay, The father hath kept times and ſeaſons in his owne power; and therefore it is not for you to knowe them: Now if that were a good reaſon, as no doubt it was; then is this alſo ſound and good. If God haue the diſpoſing of times in his hands, then it belongeth not to the church to diſpoſe of them: but God hath the diſpoſing of all times in his hands, ergo. And it may be otherwiſe hence gathered thus; If that which is leſſe belong not to the church, then that which is more doth not: But the knowledge of time and ſeaſons which God hath in his power belongeth not to the church, which is leſſe than the diſpoſing of times and ſeaſons. And therefore the church hath not power to diſpoſe of them; and ſo by conſequent may not alter the Saboath day. Obiect. In the Old teſtament the Iewes appointed feſtiuall dayes: as the feaſt of Dedication which Chriſt kept holy, Ioh. 10.22. inſtituted by the Machabees, in token of thankfulneſſe for their deliuerance: and for reſtoring of religion and the temple which Antiochus had pulled downe. And alſo Mardichay inſtituted the feaſt Purim: which was celebrated of the Iewes afterwards. 1. Mach 4. Eſth. 9 17.

Now if they had power to make holidayes, then they might alter the Saboath day; and ſo may the church in the New teſtament. Anſ. Theſe feaſts of the Iewes were no Saboaths ſet wholly apart for the ſolemne worſhip of God: but were onely daies of the ſolemnitie appointed by the church in token of ioy and thankfulneſſe for the repairing of the temple, & deliuerance of Gods people: And were onely celebrated as they ſerued to put the people in mind of theſe outward benefits. So that whereas ſome hold that the church hath power to alter the Saboath day: or to make two more Saboath dayes in a weeke if it were conuenient; it hath no ground in Gods word. For that authoritie which doth alter this day muſt not bee leſſe than Apoſtolicall. And thus wee ſee why this day was called the Lords day.

Now if the firſt day of the weeke bee the Lords day, ſet apart for his honor in the memorie of ſo great redemption, then here are three ſorts of men reproued. Firſt, thoſe that make the Lords day a day of vaine pleaſure and delight. This is the manner of all ſorts of men, but eſpecially of the yonger ſort and ſeruants, who ſpend this day in carnall reioycing, in riot, gaming, and wantonneſſe; neuer thinking of the worſhip of God, which is then to bee performed. But theſe ſin greatly againſt the Lord: for hereby they peruert the end of the Lords day: It ſhould be kept holy and glorious to the Lord, but they turne it to the worſhip and ſeruice of the diuell. The Vſe.

The ſecond ſort here reproued are thoſe which liue more ciuillie than the former; but yet they thinke they may do what they will on the Lords day: as to take their iourneys thereon, and imploy themſelues in their ordinarie affaires: perſwading themſelues they may ſerue God with as good an heart when they are alone about their buſines, as they do who go to the church. But theſe men

sinne grieuously against the fourth commandement: for hereby they make that their owne day which is the Lords.

A third sort here reproued, though not so bad as the former, are those who thinke it needfull to serue God at those ordinarie times of the Saboath which the lawes of the land inioyne vnto men; and therefore they will come duly to morning and euening prayer: thinking that they are not bound besides to heare the word of God preached, and that all the rest of the day they may doe what they will pertaining either to their profit or pleasure. Of this sort are our ignorant people, and a great number euerie where. But they sinne grieuously against God, for the Saboath day is called the Lords day, because it is wholly consecrated to his worship: but they part stakes with the Lord, and giue him but a part of his owne day, and that the lesser: taking the rest vnto themselues, which thee mispend vpon their lusts. Now as these vices must be abhorred so on the contrarie, wee must with all conscience keepe the Lords Saboath holy according to the fourth commandement. And therefore we must thereon cease from all workes of sinne, and from the workes of our callings; and sanctifie this day wholly by applying it all to the honour and worship of God. And here we must remember that there is a double sanctification of the Saboath: publike, and priuate. Publicke when men assemble themselues together publickly to heare Gods word for the increase of faith and knowledge: and to call on Gods name for further graces; as also to giue him thankes for his mercies, and to receiue his Sacramens. Priuate, when men in their priuat places imploy themselues in holy duties of prayer, reading, and meditation vpon Gods word & works: whereby God is honoured, and their souls edified: and both these must bee performed to the Lord euerie Saboath day of euery man: For wee may not abridge God of that time wherein glorie should be giuen to his name. If the officers should take our seruants in the weeke day from our priuat businesse, & imploy them in publicke affaires, wee would thinke much at it, though it were for the common good. And shall we not thinke that God will take himselfe dishonored of vs when we shall take either whole or part of his holiday, and imploy it in our businesse. A maine cause why many profit little by the publicke ministerie, is want of priuat sanctification of this day. Therefore we must learne to sanctifie the Saboath of the Lord, for else we shal neuer increase in faith, knowledge, or obedience as wee should: for the begetting and increase whereof this day hath beene set apart and sanctified from the beginning.

Obiect. 2. Why did the Lord shew this vision vnto Iohn rather on this day then any other? Answ. Though Iohn were absent from the church in regard of bodily presence: yet hee was present in spirit withall the faithfull, and therefore no doubt on this day hee gaue himselfe to prayer, and other duties which he could performe for the glorie of God in that solitarie place. Now it is the Lords manner when his seruants are thus humbled, then to come and reueale himselfe vnto them in speciall manner. So he did vnto Daniel, Dan. 9. and to Cornelius, Act. 10. and to Peter praying alone on the house toppe, Act. 10.11. And so doubtlesse finding Iohn thus imployed this Lords day, he reuealed his will vnto him touching the state of the church to the end of the world.

Hence we learne sundry instructions: First, whereas Iohn being in a sollitarie Island kept the Saboath: wee may obserue that all persons who are seuered from the assemblies of the church: as the prisoners and those which are sicke of a dead palsie, or other great diseases: As mariners though they bee in the middest of the sea should keepe holie the Lords Saboath by performing such duties as God requireth: as prayer, confession of sins, and thanksgiuing; whereby God may be glorified, though they cannot come to the publicke ministerie of the word.

Secondly, in that Iohn receiued his vision on the Lords day, when hee gaue himselfe to prayer and holie duties; Hence ariseth a consolation to Gods church, that God draweth neere vnto them, that draw neere to him, as Iames 4.8. And so let vs humble our selues and draw neere to the Lord by prayer, and thanksgiuing; and the Lord in mercie will ſhew himſelfe ſundry wayes, and draw neere vnto vs.

The cauſe why men haue ſo little taſt of Gods mercie and loue towards them, is becauſe they do not draw neere vnto him, by doing thoſe duties which he requireth at their hands. For when men draw backe from God, is it not good reaſon hee ſhould draw backe from them?

This therfore muſt ſtirre vp our harts, and moue vs to come often to God by prayer and thankſgiuing: for by vſe in theſe duties ſhall wee get acquaintance with the Lord. Thus much of the circumſtances of this viſion.

And I heard behind me a great voyce, as it had bene a trumpet. Firſt, here followeth the parts of this viſion, which are two: The beginning or entrance into it in this verſe, and part of the twelft. Secondly, the matter and ſubſtance thereof from the twelft verſe to the end of the third chapter.

The entrance into the viſion is a preparation, whereby the Lord maketh Iohn more fit to apprehend and receiue the things reuealed. In which preparation we muſt obſerue firſt the meanes: ſecondly, the parts thereof. The meanes whereby God preparerh him, is a voyce: And I heard a voyce. The like manner of preparation hath God vſed in former times when hee intended to make with Adam the couenant of reconciliation in the ſeed of the woman: Firſt, he prepared him by a voyce ſpeaking vnto him before he appeared, and by this voyce cauſed him to flie for feare. Then hauing rebuked him for his ſinnes, he made with him this couenant of grace, Geneſ. 3.

Exod. 19. & 20. And in mount Synai before the Lord gaue the law, hee firſt came downe in thundering and lightning, and with the ſound of a trumpet to terrifie the people: and then hee vttered his law to Moyſes, and to his people. So when the Lord 1. Sam. 3. would inſtruct Samuel touching the houſe of Elie, he awoke him by a voyce, again, and againe: and then ſpake plainely vnto him. And in all viſions vſually, and generally the Lord vſeth to prepare his ſeruants by voyces, by ſignes, and words, that they might bee more fit to receiue ſuch things as hee reuealed.

This dealing of God with Iohn, in preparing him to the worthy receiuing of this viſion, teacheth vs that wee much more ſhould bee prepared to heare and receiue the will of God; for wee come farre ſhort of thoſe excellent gifts of God, which were in Iohn, who yet muſt be prepared.

Our comming to heare Gods word is to learne the ſame, for the increaſe of knowledge, faith, and obedience. Now the word of God is hard, and we dull to learne; wee muſt therefore by all good meanes prepare our ſelues, that our minds and harts may be fit to receiue the ſame with profit. The cauſe of ſo little profit after long hearing is want of preparation: but hereof we haue entreated alreadie vpon the third verſe.

This voyce is here ſet out vnto vs three wayes: Firſt, by the place whence it came: Secondly by the qualitie of it: Thirdly, by the matter and ſubſtance which it contained. For the place: it was vttered from behind him: which the Lord obſerued to ſtirre vp more attention in Iohn; for vſually men doe more carefully marke thoſe things which come on a ſudden behind them, than thoſe which are ſpoken or done directly before their face.

Secondly, for the qualitie of it, this voyce was great; as is expreſſed further by a ſimilitude, Like the ſound of a trumpet; that is, full of power and maieſtie. Which alſo God added vnto it, to further attention in Iohn. For if it had beene an ordinarie voyce, or ſmall, hee would not ſo much haue regarded it: but being ſo ſudden, ſo great, and full of maieſtie, it could not but make him verie attentiue.

Now ſeeing Chriſt is ſo carefull to prepare Iohns mind with attention and diligence to receiue the things which ſhould bee told him: This teacheth vs, that when we come to heare Gods word, we muſt vſe all meanes of attention: for if it were needfull to Iohn, then is it farre more neceſſarie for vs, who are farre inferiour to him in all gifts of vnderſtanding and memorie. And here alſo is another cauſe of ſmall profit and little liking of Gods word, namely, want of attention tention in the heart. Wee muſt therefore like godly Lydia, Act. 16. ſtirre vp our dull and heauie ſpirits, and with all diligence marke the things wee heare. And here we muſt take heed of two enemies to attention: the firſt are by-thoughts: as when the body indeed is preſent, but the mind wandereth from the word, and is wholly poſſeſſed with thoughts of pleaſure, or other worldly affaires: For theſe bee thornes in the ground of our hearts, which choke the good ſeede of the word. Many will complaine they cannot marke and remember that which is taught; now the cauſe is in themſelues their wandering thoughts, which hinder both vnderſtanding and memorie: for the mind conceiuing other matters, cannot obſerue how one point dependeth on another, much leſſe remember them afterward.

The ſecond enemie to attention, is dulneſſe and heauineſſe in body & ſoule; a common fault in many hearers, which ſheweth it ſelfe by drowſineſſe and ſleepineſſe in the time of preaching, when they ought to ſtirre vp their bodies and hearts to all attention. If a man ſhould bee dull and heauie when his prince is ſpeaking vnto him of ſome weightie matter that is for his good, it would bee taken for a part of contempt and diſloyaltie towards his maieſtie. What diſloyaltie then is this vnto the king of kings, that we ſhould bee dull and heauy, when himſelfe vouchſafeth to ſpeake vnto vs out of his word, the myſteries of our ſaluation? And ſurely, among other things this drowſineſſe is one cauſe of ſmall profit, by the miniſterie of the word. And therefore if wee would encreaſe in knowledge, and in the gifts of grace vnto ſaluation, we muſt prepare our ſelues before we come, and in hearing caſt off all dulneſſe of fleſh and ſpirit, and with all might ſtirre vp our ſelues to attentiue hearing: ſo ſhall the word be bleſſed vnto vs; otherwiſe our hearing ſhall turne to our deeper condemnation.

Verſe 11. Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the firſt and the laſt: and that which thou ſeeſt write in a booke, and ſend it vnto the ſeuen Churches, which are in Aſia, vnto Epheſus, and vnto Smyrna, and vnto Pergamus, and vnto Thyatira, and vnto Sardis, and vnto Philadelphia, and vnto Laodicea.

Theſe words containe the third deſcription of this voice, whereby Iohns heart was prepared, touching the ſubſtance and matter which was vttered: which conſiſteth in two things. The firſt is a teſtimonie in theſe words: I am Alpha, and Omega, the firſt and the laſt. The ſecond a commanndement in the wordes following: That which thou ſeeſt write, and ſend &c.

I. Touching the teſtimonie, the ſubſtance thereof is ſet downe in the eight verſe, where the words were handled, and the meaning ſhewed. They do ſerue directly to proue the Godhead, and eternitie of Chriſt, which Chriſt himſelfe doth here auouch, to giue vnto Iohn, and vnto the Church full aſſurance, that the things now vttered and deliuered, were from God: for ſaying, I am Alpha and Omega, the firſt and the laſt, it is as much as if he had ſaid: I which ſpeake vnto thee am God, and therefore the things I deliuer, are from God.

In this teſtimonie note Gods ſpeciall care in regard of his truth, hee doth not content himſelfe with reuealing his will vnto his Church; but more ſpecially his care is, to certifie the Church of the truth thereof, that it is indeed from God. This hath beene Gods care from the beginning: When Peter receiued a viſion from God, withall (a) Gods ſpirit aſſured him, (a) Act. 10. 19 that the things reuealed therein were certen & ſure. And ſo when Chriſt preached the will of his father among men, hee did withall worke ſtrange miracles, to confirme and ſeale vp the truth of his doctrine, that it was from God.

The Vſe. This ſpeciall care of God ouer his Church doth firſt confute the Papiſts opinion touching Scripture. They hold the Scripture to bee certen in it ſelfe, but not vnto men, till the Church giue teſtimonie thereunto. But this is falſe: for God euer had this care ouer his Church, not onely to reueale his will vnto them, but alſo to vſe meanes for the aſſurance of their conſciences, that that which was reuealed was his vndoubted and perfect will. And therefore the word of God is certen, and euer was, not onely in it ſelfe selfe, but to the consciences of beleeuers, and that without the testimonie of the church: and so should bee, through the testimonie of the church should neuer come thereunto.

Secondly, hereby are confuted many carnall men, who will be of no religion; becausse (say they) there is no certainetie in the matters of religion: mens opinions therein are so diuers, that so many men, so many minds almost, and no man can tell who speakes the truth. Answ. It may be that men in sundry matters hold sundry priuat opinions: yet in the church of God, all the true members of Christ hold the same opinions touching the foundation of religion. But let it bee graunted, That all men on earth were of diuers opinions touching matters of religion, should religion therefore bee vncertaine? God forbid. For religion is certaine vnto men, by the meanes that God hath appointed to certifie the conscience of the truth thereof, and thereby might men come to the truth and certainetie of religion taught by the Prophets and Apostles, though all men in the world were of diuers opinions touching the same: Thus much of the Testimonie.

II. point. The commaundement giuen to Iohn is in these words: That which thou seest write in a booke, and send it to the seuen Churches which are in Asia. This commaundement hath two parts: First, To write the things seene in a booke: secondly, to send the booke to the seuen churches here named. And both these must Iohn do, being now disabled by his exile to preach these things vnto them personally, for these causes. First, that these churches might be edified in the faith, and strengthened in these most grieuous times of persecution. Secondly, that they might become keepers of this booke for the good of others: for the church of God is the pillar of truth: not onely, for that it publisheth Gods truth: but also becausse it keepeth it, and giueth testimonie thereunto.

In this commaundement note sundry things. First, that the word of God, written and penned by the hand of man, is a notable helpe to the church of God, and a worthy meanes to edifie the same, els Christ would neuer haue commaunded Iohn to haue written these visions, and sent them to the Churches. Which serueth to confute the blind Papists, which say the word written is but an inkie letter, and a nose of waxe; becausse the sence thereof may be turned euery way as man will. This also confuteth the Anabaptists, which so much magnifie their Reuelations, and make no account of the word written. If the Lord had thought it best, hee would haue taught these churches by reuelations: but they must learne by the word written.

Secondly, that the reading of Gods word either publickly or priuately, is an ordinance of God: for the Lord commaunding Iohn to write this booke, and send it to the churches, hereby implieth, that they must reade the same as they did other bookes of Scripture. The preaching of the word is indeede the most worthy instrument for the founding and confirming of Gods Church, whereby ordinarily iustifying faith is wrought in the heart: and yet reading must haue his due reuerence, as a meanes to confirme, and encrease true knowledge, faith, and repentance, where it is begun.

Thirdly, here note, that a man may be vnder the crosse, and in persecution, and yet remaine in the speciall fauor of God: for this banishment into such a desart place, was vnto Iohn a grieuous crosse: and yet the Lord vouchsafed there to reueale himselfe vnto him, and to make him the penman of this booke. Which honour hee vouchsafeth not to all, but to them that are most dear vnto him. Which thing each one should carefully obserue: for our nature is so corrupt, that when wee are vnder the crosse, it would persuade vs, we are cast out of the loue and fauour of God.

In the end of the verse, the seauen Churches, Ephesus, Smyrna, and the rest are named. Which seuen places, were seuen famous cities in Asia, wherein were planted the most famous churches that were in those parts, and for their excellencie are they named. And thus much for the meanes of Iohns preparation: Now follow the parts thereof, which are two: first is hearing, folded vp with the former meanes: And I heard a voyce. Second is Turning of himselfe, to see the the partie that spake vnto him in these words.

Verse. 12. Then I turned backe to see the voice which spake with me: and when I was turned, I saw seuen golden candlesticks.

That is, so soone as I heard this sudden and mightie voice, I turned my selfe to see who it was that vttered the same. In this behauiour of Iohn we are to learne our dutie: so to dispose our hearts towards God in the receiuing of his word, as Iohn disposeth himselfe towards Christ in the receiuing of this vision. So soone as the voice spake, Iohn hearkened, and because the sound thereof came behind him, he turned himselfe to looke on him that vttered it. Euen so must we doe, we are by nature strangers with God, slow to heare when hee speaketh, and readie to turne our hearts from God, when we heare. Therefore when God speaketh vnto vs in the ministerie of his word, we must harken: And though we bee going another way, yet wee must turne our selues from our euill wayes, and encline our hearts to his voice, that we may haue fellowship with him. Saint Iohn had not seene this maruellous vision, vnlesse hee had turned himselfe to behold him that spoke. No more shall wee at any time feele true fellowship with the Lord, vnlesse we turne our hearts vnto his word, and that betimes, while he speaketh vnto vs in the ministerie thereof.

Thus much for the first part of the vision, viz. the entrance thereunto. The second part is the matter and substance of the vision, containing a most worthie representation of Christ in his maiestie, as he is the Prophet, King, and Priest of his church: set downe at large by a description of Christ, continuing from this twelfth verse vnto the end of the third chapter; wherein Iohn sheweth what hee receiued of Christ, partly by hearing, and partly by seeing. And first he beginneth his description of Christ, as hee saw him represented in vision: and so describeth him by two arguments. First by the place where he saw him: Secondly, by his forme and figure wherein he appeared.

1. For the place, Iohn saw him in the middest of the seuen golden candlesticks. These seuen candlesticks here seene, are the seuen Churches of Asia: the particular churches of God, being compared to candlesticks, as Christ expoundeth himselfe, vers. 20. Now the particular congregations of Gods church bee called candlesticks, for that resemblance which is between them. For as the candlesticks serue to bear vp and hold forth the light that is set therein: so the particular churches of God on earth, they beare vp and shew forth the light of the gospell vnto the whole world, partly in the ministerie of the word, and partly in the profession of the faith of Christ.

From hence sundry things are to bee learned: first obserue, that the churches are rather called candlesticks than candles; To giue vs to vnderstand, that they haue no light of themselues, or from themselues, but onely are Gods instruments to beare vp and hold forth the light in the ministerie of the word, and profession of the faith: for Christ Iesus is the onely true lampe and candle that giueth light to the heart and conscience by his holy spirit in the word.

Secondly, hence euery one that professeth himselfe to be a true member of Gods church, must learne his duty, which is earnestly to labour to become a shining and burning candle. Indeed this principally concernes the ministers of the church: and therefore Iohn Baptist is called a burning and shining light, Iohn 5. vers. 35. but yet it must also bee verified of euery member thereof, as Saint Paule commaundeth: (a) Shine (sayth hee) as lights in the world, in the middest of a naughtie and crooked nation: holding forth the doctrine of life, that is, the gospell. Quest. How shall euery member of the church become a burning light? Answ. First, hee must haue his mind enlightened in the knowledge of Gods will and word: and then as a candlesticke hold out and send forth the beames thereof to others; partly by teaching within the compasse of his calling, and partly by example of an honest and blameless life and conuersation. Thus we should doe, if wee would be answerable to our profession. And to induce vs hereunto, let vs obserue the reasons following.

(a) Philip. 2. 15, 16.

First, it is Gods commandement, Shine

as lights (sayth S. Paule) in the world, Philip. 2. 15. And, walke as children of the light, Ephes. 5. 8. Secondly, consider the fruit hereof, which is wonderfull great. For by godly instruction in our places, and by answerable obedience in our liues we win many to the Lord: shewing forth such lights, whereby others may walke in this darke world to the kingdome of heauen, which is a most blessed light. In the Winter season, men thinke they doe others great pleasure, if in the night they hang forth a light to guide passengers a little way in an earthly walke. What a blessed thing then is this, that a man should alwayes hold forth that light which shall guide a sinfull wicked wretch to leaue the wayes of death, and to walke in the pathes of righteousnesse to eternall life? But on the contrarie, when men liue in Gods church like candles put out by reason of the blindnesse of their minds, and the badnesse of their liues; hence commeth great hurt and danger to others with whom they liue: for they lead others that depend vpon them to the pit of destruction, especially they who know the will of God and yet make not conscience to shew forth the same by good example of a godly life. For as in an hauen towne, if any man in the night time doe remooue the sea-marke which guideth the ships in the right channell, he doth as much as in him lieth cast away all the ships that are comming neere the shore, by causing them to run on rockes and sands: euen so they that should giue light in the church, if they giue either no light, or false light to such as depend vpon them who are sayling in the sea of this sinfull world, hereby they lead and direct them to a wrong hauen, and instead of heauen bring their soules to eternall perdition: which must terrifie vs from ignorance and euill workes, and make vs labour to shine as lights in this world by good instruction and godly conuersation. Third reason. Consider the fearefull iudgments of God against such as liue in his church as members thereof, and yet giue no light: they doe incurre the fearefull wrath of Christ. In the Temple, the keeping of the lampes and lights belonged to the priest, and therefore he had his snuffers, and other instruments to trim the same: which notably figured the dutie of Christ in the Church of the new Testament: for hee is our high priest, who looketh to euery light in the Sanctuarie, that is, to euery member of his church, who ought to shine as a lampe; and when they burne but dimly and darke, he hath his snuffers to trim them, and make them giue a better light, both by godly life and good instruction. But when hee hath snuffed them againe and againe, if still they burne darke and dim, and giue either no light, or else a false light, then surely he will either cast them out of the Temple, or else tread them vnder his feete. Wee graunt this libertie to euery gouernour, when hee hath light vp candles for his familie, if any of them will not burne clearely, he may snuffe it; if that will not serue, hee may cast it into the fire, and set another in it place. And shall wee denie to Christ Iesus the like authoritie in his Church, which is his house, ouer men and women, who ought to shine as lights? God forbid. The Minister therefore in his place, and euery other Christian in the compasse of his calling must labour to bee a shining candle, both for knowledge and godly life before all the world, that so hee may escape Gods fearfull iudgements. In common reason we ought to carry our selues as shining lights before others. It is an vsuall thing in the Winter time to hang forth lights for the guiding of mens bodies safe from place to place. Now if we haue such care ouer their bodies, wee ought to haue much more ouer body and soule both; that by the light of grace in vs, sinners and wicked men may bee guided in the darke and dangerous way of this world to the kingdome of heauen.

Here then all ignorant persons and loose liuers, who abound in euery place, must be admonished to reforme themselues, and labour to become lights in Gods church. They stand as candles, but they are extinct, and giue no light to others. Ignorant persons therefore must cast off their ignorance, and labour for knowledge: and wicked liuers must reforme their loosenesse of life, and become obedient to the word of truth, that so they may shine vnto others. If a man haue a candle set vp in his familie and ſhall aſſay to light it and ſnuffe it once or twice, and cannot get it burne, then in diſpleaſure he will trample it vnder his feete, or caſt it into the fire. Euen ſo Chriſt Ieſus ſeeking to enlighten the minds of theſe ignorant perſons, and to reforme the liues of theſe looſe liuers by the miniſtery of the word: when he ſhall perceiue that they refuſe the light, and will not bee reformed, vndoubtedly in furie of his wrath, hee will at length (a) plucke them from their places, and ſtampe them to powder, and caſt them to hell. Many be ignorant in euery place, and moe be prophane, and ſmall is the number of good ſhining lights: but wee muſt remember our duty, and walke worthie our calling. If we hold foorth the light of knowledge and obedience, we ſhall ſhine as the firmament in the world to come, Dan. 12. 3.

(a) Pſa. 52. 5.

Golden candleſticks. The churches of God are not baſe candleſtickes, but candleſtickes made of gold. There bee two cauſes of this reſemblance: Firſt, becauſe gold is the moſt excellent of all mettals: ſo Gods churches here on earth are the moſt excellent of all ſocieties. The companies and ſocieties of men in families, townes and kingdomes, and in other common affaires of this life, be the ordinance of God, and good in their kind; but yet the ſocietie of ſaints in the church of God, doth farre ſurmount them all, and that in theſe reſpects: Firſt, becauſe in Gods church ſaluation may be obtained, but in other ſocieties, as they are ſocieties, though ſundry benefits ariſe from them, yet ſaluation is not to bee had in them, vnleſſe they bee either particular churches as members thereof. Secondly, the church of God is the end of all other ſocieties; and they are all ordained to preſerue and cheriſh the church, which is the ſocietie of the ſaints. Thirdly, the church beautifieth all other ſocieties: the principall praiſe and dignitie of any towne, houſhold, or kingdome is this; that they are either churches of God, or true members thereof.

From this preheminence of the church we are taught aboue al things to labor to become true mẽbers of this ſociety. Men haue great care to become mẽbers of incorporations & towns of greateſt priuiledges; but few there be that ſeek for the priuiledges of Gods church: And commonly thoſe that ſeeke moſt for priuiledges in chiefe townes, haue the leaſt care to become the true members of Gods church; which is a wretched practiſe and ought not to be among vs, ſeeing the church hath priuiledges farre aboue all other ſocieties.

Secondly, hence we are taught aboue all things to haue care to preſerue the ſocietie of the church of God. True it is, the miniſter and magiſtrat muſt haue cheefe care thereof: and yet euery man in his place muſt doe his beſt indeuour hereunto, becauſe it is the moſt principall ſocietie.

Thirdly, in that Gods church is the moſt excellent ſocietie, giuing honor to all others; we are taught within the compaſſe of our callings, as much as we can to bring all other ſocieties vnto this. Thoſe that are members of a familie, muſt labour to bring euerie one in their familie to bee good members of the church: And ſo in ciuill ſocieties, men of gouernement muſt labour that the members of the ciuill body, become alſo members of Chriſts bodie. Thus gouernors of kingdomes ſhould labour that the parts of their dominions may be particular churches of God. And there is good reaſon of this duties; becauſe all other ſocieties without this are companions of men in the darke, ſitting in the ſhadow of death, being ſpiritually blind, and without all ſound comfort in their ſoules. Secondly, the church is compared to a candleſticke of gold, becauſe of all ſocieties among men it is moſt precious & deere vnto God: and therfore it is reſembled to a ſeale (b) on Chriſts heart, and a ſignit on his arme: yea, it is as deare vnto him as the apple of his eye, Zachar. 2. 8. The Church is the Queene that ſtands on Chriſts right hand in a veſture of gold, Pſa. 45. 9. Yea that which ſurpaſſeth all, Chriſt redeemed (c) the Church vnto himſelfe by his owne bloud. Oh then how deere and pretious is ſhe in his ſight: And hereby alſo wee are taught the ſame inſtructions that did ariſe from the former preheminence; namely to haue ſpecial care of Gods church to preſerue the ſame, and to labour to become our ſelues, and to bring others to be members thereof. And thus much of the title of the church.

(b) Cant. 8. 6.

(c) Act. 20. 28

Now

Now it is added that Chriſt the Meſſias is in the middeſt of the ſeuen golden candleſtickes: whereby is ſignified: Firſt, that Chriſt is preſent with his church at all times: And ſecondly, that being preſent he hath care to gather his church, and being gathered to preſerue the ſame againſt the gates of hell, and all other enemies.

From hence we learne ſundry things: Firſt, that the ſupremacie of the church of Rome, wherein one is made head of all the militant church, is needleſſe: For Chriſt is preſent alwaies with his church, hauing ſpeciall care to gather, guide, and preſerue the ſame, and hee needeth no vickar generall to ſupplie his roome, for in the preſence of the prince all commiſſions of vicegerencie doe ceaſe: though Chriſt had granted this ſupremacie to any, yet ſo long as Chriſt is preſent, their commiſsion muſt ceaſe; and it is as great pride, and greater, for any to preſume to be head of all churches in Chriſts preſence, than for a man to ſit vicegerent in the preſence of the prince.

Secondly, ſeeing Chriſt is alwayes preſent with his church, wee are taught to walke with God, and before God, as Enoch did, Geneſ. 5.22. Which duty ſtands in theſe points. Firſt, whatſoeuer we ſay, or take in hand, wee muſt do it as in the preſence of Chriſt. Secondly, we muſt continually depend vpon Chriſts prouidence, who is euer preſent with his church, prouiding all things for the good of his church, and of euery member thereof. Thirdly, we muſt do all our actions as looking for approbation at the hands of Chriſt: for which end wee muſt take direction for the ſame out of his word. The practiſe of this dutie is moſt excellent: for by walking with God we ſhall be enabled to many good duties; as namely, liue vnblameably in this wicked world, making conſcience of all ſinne, and approuing our ſelues both to God and man, in hart and life. And thus much for the place where Iohn ſaw Chriſt.

The ſecond argument wherby Iohn deſcribeth Chriſt, is his figure, or forme, in theſe words, One like the ſonne of man. Some thinke that theſe words are a deſcription of ſome Angell, not of Chriſt, becauſe he is ſayd to be like the ſonne of man, not the ſonne of man himſelfe, but they are deceiued. For he which is here deſcribed, is before called the firſt, and the laſt, it is he which was dead, and is aliue, which cannot agree to any but to Chriſt. Now the words may more ſignificantly bee tranſlated thus, One like to a ſonne of man: for if it be tranſlated that ſonne of man, then Chriſt muſt needs bee the reſemblance: for ſo hee is called Act. 7.56. But here Chriſt is ſayd to be like to a ſonne of man, by the vſuall phraſe of the Old teſtament: whereby is meant that he is like vnto a man. And Chriſt is not here called a man, but is ſayd to bee like vnto a man, becauſe hee appeared vnto Iohn not in his true manhood, which was then in heauen, but in the likeneſſe of his manhood. And note this, that as Chriſt here appeared to Iohn in this viſion, ſo did he alwayes appeare after his aſcention. Steuen indeed ſaw his true manhood, Act. 7. but it was in heauen: and Paul heard his voice when he was conuerted, Acts. 9.5. and ſaw the Lord, 1. Cor. 9.1. But no man can prooue that Chrſt appeared vnto him in his true manhood, vnleſſe it were in heauen. And in all theſe viſions Iohn ſaw not his true manhood, but a reſemblance thereof. Now Chriſt appeared thus for ſpeciall conſideration, For man is too much addicted to his bodily preſence: this was the fault of his owne friends and Diſciples. Therefore Chriſt would hereby teach vs, not to ſeeke for his bodily preſence, but rather to lift vp our hearts to heauen, and therefore ſeeke to haue fellowſhip with him by faith. For this cauſe he ſayd to Marie after his reſurrection, Touch me not, I am not yet aſcended to my father, Iohn. 20.17. This Paule had learned, Though we had knowne Chriſt (ſaith he) after the fleſh, yet henceforth know we him no more, 2. Cor. 5.15. Now if Chriſt after his aſcention neuer appeared in his true manhood, it teacheth vs, that the defence of Chriſts reall preſence in the Sacrament is needleſſe. For if Gods church haue ſpiritual fellowſhip with Chriſt by faith, it is ſufficient. Againe, whereas Chriſt appeareth in the ſhape and forme of man after his aſcention, the Papiſts gather, that wee may make images of Chriſt, and ſo anſwerably of the father, and of the holy ghoſt, in thoſe formes wherin they appeared: as of the holy Ghoſt in the forme of a (a) doue; and (b) of the father in the likeneſſe of an old man. Anſ. It is not vnlawfull full to make, or to haue an image of Chriſts manhood, ſo that it be out of religious vſe (though it bee doubtfull whether any now haue a true picture therof:) but if it bee to repreſent whole Chriſt, God and man, or bee vſed to remember Chriſt thereby, or to worſhip Chriſt therein, it is an idoll. As for the formes of an old man, or of a doue, they may bee made for the manifeſtation of the hyſtorie of the Bible, when it is painted or pictured: but then wee muſt conceiue, that theſe formes are no images of the father, ſonne, or holy ghoſt, but onely repreſentations of ſuch viſible appearances, as ſometimes were ſignes and pledges of the preſence of thoſe perſons. But now to abſtract thoſe formes apart from the hyſtorie, and to make them images of any perſon in Trinitie, is flat againſt the ſecond commaundement; which doth generally forbid all images of God, not excepting thoſe very ſhapes in which himſelfe tooke libertie to teſtifie his preſence for ſome time. And there being no exception againſt Gods cõmaundement, it is in vaine to ſeeke ſhifts & excuſes for a thing forbidden, ſpecially conſidering wee may not meddle with God beyond our commiſsion from God.

De Deo nil ſine Deo.

Clothed with a garment downe to his feete. Here Chriſt is further deſcribed by his attire. The firſt part whereof is, A long garment reaching to his feete. The cauſes why he ſo appeared, may be theſe. Firſt, to ſignifie that hee is the high prieſt of the new Teſtament, and ſo continueth, doing the offices of the high prieſt for his Church after his aſcention, in preſenting the merit of his one onely ſacrifice, and making intercеſsion to God the father for them. For the long garment was one of thoſe wherewith the high prieſt was cloathed in his miniſtration, vnder the law.

Secondly, to ſignifie that hee is The Prince of peace: for the long garment not onely in the Church of God, but among the Heathen, hath beene alwayes a note of peace: and ſo Chriſt is called, Iſa. 9. 6.

Thirdly, to ſhew that he had in his breaſt the (a) treaſures of the wiſedome of the father, and the (b) ſpirit of counſell. For this long robe alwayes pertained to them that excelled in counſell and wiſdome: and ſo Chriſt is deſcribed, Iſay 11. 2. Now in this example of Chriſt we may learne a dutie touching our attire: namely, that the outward garment of the body ſhould be ſutable to the good things that ought to be in the heart: as to our wiſedome, knowledge, feare of Gods name, to our ſobrietie, modeſtie, temperance, humilitie, and all other vertues whatſoeuer. Wee muſt not onely in ſpeech and action, as in hearing Gods word, and receiuing the Sacraments, ſhew our ſelues to bee burning lights; but euen by the geſture and attire of our body, both for matter and forme, ſhew forth the grace of our harts. But miſerable are theſe times, wherein mens attire is ſutable, not to the graces of God, that ſhould bee in their hearts, but to the common corruptions of the times. For ſuch it is generally, whereby a farre off (though hee neuer had acquaintance with the partie) a man may ſee the vanitie and lightnes of his mind, the pride, and folly of his heart, that weareth it.

(b) Iſay 11. 2.

The ſecond part of Chriſts attire is this: Girded about the pappes with a golden girdle. It hanged not looſe about him, but was girded cloſe to his body: whereby is ſignified, that he is a mediatour, euery way readie prepared to doe the office of a mediator for his Church: for in all ages the (a) girding of the attire to the body hath beene a ſigne of care and diligence in the buſineſſe they haue in hand; and the contrary, not girding, a ſigne of careleſneſſe, and negligence therein. When Chriſt was here on earth, hee was moſt pitifull to all penitent ſinners, he reiected none ſuch that came vnto him, but regarded them far more than the Scribes and Phariſees, that were the learned men among the Iewes. And ſince his aſſention hee hath not left off his care and diligence, but is alwayes ready, doing all ſuch duties which may pertaine to their ſaluation.

(a) Luk. 12. 35 36.

The conſideration whereof, is a matter of excellent comfort vnto all ſuch as haue any ſparke of grace. Firſt hereby wee learne, that when wee truly humble our ſelues, Chriſt is ready to receiue our prayers, and in all our troubles & temptations ready to relieue, to comfort, and deliuer vs: and in our death ready to receiue our ſoules, yea at all times prepared to doe whatſoeuer may further our ſaluation. Hee is not like vnto Pharaohs butler, who promised to remember Ioseph while hee was in prison with him, (a) but forgate him quite when he was aduanced to honour againe. But he is alwayes mindfull of vs, and euer readie to doe all the workes of a mediatour for vs. Whence wee are taught answereably, to haue our loynes girded, as Christ commaundeth, Luke 12. verse 35. being euer ready to doe all duties that concerne Christianitie: as to call on Gods name, and to praise God, to practise faith, repentance, and obedience; fit to die, and fit to liue: neuer suffering our selues to bee vnfit for any thing that concernes our saluation, but at all times so stand vpon our watch, that whensoeuer God shall call, we may bee readie to enter into the kingdome of heauen. But alas the case with most men goeth farre otherwise: they fit themselues for the world at all times: but few seeke to prepare themselues for the kingdom of heauen till death do come.

(a) Gen. 40. 23.

This ought not to be: It is a treacherous part in any subiect to bee vnprepared for the seruice of his prince, and yet euer readie to receiue a common enemy. And it is no lesse treason against God, to forslow our preparation for the Lord, by fitting our selues for the world.

Further he is sayd to be girded, not about the loynes, but about the pappes and breast. Whereby some say (and not vnfitly) is signified, that there is no defect, or aberration in any motion or affection of our Sauiour Christ, but euerie thought and inclination of his hart is kept in order by the fulnesse of the spirit which dwelleth in him bodily.

Verse 14. His head and haires were white as white woll and as snow: and his eyes were as a flame of fire.

In the third place: Iohn here describeth Christ by the parts of his body. The whitenesse of his head & haires, signifieth the eternitie of Christ. For howsoeuer as hee is man, he had a beginning: yet in regard of his godhead he is eternall, and therefore is called, The antient of dayes, Dan. 9. and is sayd to haue bene in the beginning, Iohn. 1.1. that is, to haue had a beeing before all other things had their beginning.

In this resemblance of his eternitie, by head and haires as white as wooll and snow, hee giueth vs to vnderstand an honour and prerogatiue in the aged man, whereby he excelleth the yonger sort: to wit, the horenesse and whitenesse of his haire, for which cause in the word of God it is set forth by most worthie comparisons: as by the white Almond tree, Eccles. 12.5. And by a glorious siluer crowne, not made by man, but by the hand of God set vpon his head. And herein doth this excellencie of the aged consist; that they beare the image of Gods eternity before all that are of yonger yeares. From whence all yonger men are taught to reuerence the aged by (b) rising vp before them: acknowledging thereby the preheminence of the hoare head. (b) Lev. 19.32.

Againe, hereby the aged are taught to carrie themselues answerable to their estate and condition, they ought to excell all their yongers in knowledge, wisdome, and experience of good things, 1. Iohn. 2.13. I write vnto you fathers (that is aged men, who by reason of yeares are fathers) because you haue knowne him who is euerlasting.

Also they must be holy, as hee that is eternall is holy, whose eternitie they shew forth: And therefore Salomon saith The white head is a crowne of glorie when it is found in the way of righteousnesse: that is, in one that walketh in the way of righteousnesse, Prouer. 16.31. for his white haire signifieth, that hee hath spent much time and care about good duties. But it is no ornament vnlesse it be ioyned with holinesse of heart and life. Which I say because many yonger men, excell the aged in the knowledge of God, & other vertues: which is a shame to the gray headed, for as they go before others in yeares, so they ought to excell in pietie, knowledge, and all vertues: Ignorance and loosenesse of life is a foule vice in any, but in him that bares the siluer crowne it is intollerable. For how can they looke for reuerence from the yonger, when as they bee farre inferior to them in gifts of grace? It is no excuse for old men to say, Their wits are not so ripe, as young mens are; and their memorie failes them. Their aged ignorance argueth that they spent the time of their youth loosly and prophanely: For they that be planted in the house of the Lord, ſhall bring forth fruit in their age, Pſal. 92.13,14. A plant is young, and therefore he that would weare the crowne of glory in his age, muſt receiue the ſap of grace in the houſe of God while hee is young.

Lord

And his eyes were as a flame of fire, here Iohn proceedeth in deſcribing the parts of Chriſts bodie. In the handling whereof it is hard for any to ſet downe certainely, what the holy Ghoſt intendeth in euery particular. It ſhall be ſufficient for vs to follow that interpretation which is moſt probable and beſt agreeing with the tenor of Gods word.

In this deſcription of Chriſts eyes, are ſignified to vs two things: firſt, that Chriſt the mediator and redeemer of his church, is of moſt quicke, ſharpe, and piercing ſight, ſo as hee beholdeth all things that are done vpon the earth: yea, he ſeeth into the very ſecret thoughts of mens hearts, thither can the eyes of his godhead more eaſily pierce, than fire can doe into the ſubſtance of bodily things. And there is great neceſsitie it ſhould be ſo, for being head and gouernour of his church, he muſt know all the parts and members thereof: he muſt behold their ſeuerall eſtates, and ſee the malice and practiſes of Sathan, and other enemies againſt them.

Now in that Chriſt our Sauiour hath this piercing ſight, we are taught to haue care, not onely of our words and actions, but alſo of the very ſecret thoughts, purpoſes, and deſires of our hearts: for the piercing eye of Chriſt ſeeth them all, therefore we muſt be ſure they bee well ordered. In the courts of men, thoughts and inward motions beare no action, but with God it is otherwiſe. Chriſt Ieſus hath a fierie eye, that ſeeth into all our thoughts, and there hee holdeth a court of iudgement. Therefore we muſt keep a godly watch ouer all the imaginations of our hearts, that they may be approued of Chriſt, leaſt for them wee bee iudged and condemned.

Secondly, this teacheth vs in matters of religion to bee that indeed which we ſeeme to bee in profeſsion. For though wee may deceiue men, which know not our hearts, yet we cannot deceiue Chriſt: for by his fierie eyes he ſeeth whatſoeuer is in vs. And yet the common practiſe of the world is here to be reproued, who tearmeth them hypocrits that take vpon them any profeſsion for the name and religion of Chriſt. But herein men goe beyond their calling: it belongeth onely vnto the piercing eye of Chriſt, to iudge and looke at mens hypocriſie of heart.

Secondly, by theſe fierie eyes is ſignified, That Chriſt is full of anger, wrath and iudgement againſt all ſinners, readie to take vengeance on all thoſe that will not yeeld ſubiection vnto him by turning from their ſinnes, and beleeuing in him: for Chriſt as he is a Sauiour, ſo is he a Iudge; and therefore in the parable he ſayth: Thoſe mine enemies that would not haue I ſhould rule ouer them, bring them hither, and ſlay them before mee. Luke 19.27. The conſideration hereof ſerueth to awake many an one out of the ſleepe of ſinne. This age is miſerable, if wee regard the practiſe of faith and repentance which God requireth; for men liue in ignorance without knowledge, they goe on in looſeneſſe of life without reformation; which is both ſcandalous vnto men, and odious vnto God: not one of an hundred turneth to God at the preaching of his word, renewing his wayes by dayly repentance. But vnto many it is meat and drinke to goe on in thoſe ſinnes wherein their harts delight. But let theſe men conſider, that Chriſt is a righteous Iudge, beholding his enemies with fierce and fierie eyes, alwayes readie to take vengeance on them that doe not repent: and therefore they muſt in time conſider their eſtate, for if they perſeuere in their euill wayes as they haue begun, the truth is, hee ſtill beholdeth them with his fierie eyes, and though in his great patience hee ſpare them for a time, yet at length he will put in practiſe the execution of his iudgement, and ſlay them for enemies: as it is in the parable, Luke 19.27. Let them remember what a fearefull thing it is to fall into the hands of God, if his wrath bee kindled neuer ſo little, Pſal. 2.12.

Verſ. 15. And his feete like vnto fine braſſe burning as in a furnace: and his voice as the ſound of many waters.

The word in the originall ſignifieth Braſſe that ſhineth, which for ſubſtance is pure and durable, a very choise and excellent kind of brasse. And hereunto Christs feet are compared, to signifie vnto vs his inuincible power, whereby hee is able not only to encounter with sinne, Sathan, and death; but also that hee hath alreadie entered combat with them, and hath bruised the heads of these his enemies. Yea hereby is signified, that hee hath not onely done these things in his owne person, but also will doe the same in all his members, by his inuincible power, vnto the end of the world. Which is a matter of exceeding great comfort to Gods church and people, neuer to be forgotten. If any man be exercised in any grieuous temptation of Sathan, hee must not be astonished and confounded therewith: but remember, that Christ our Sauiour hath the brasen feet, wherewith hee hath bruised the head of the serpent, and will (if hee seeke vnto him vnfainedly) bruise in him the serpents head: so by experience shall we find the benefit of his brasen feet.

If any be oppressed with the corruption of his nature, whether it bee in thoughts or affections: let him come vnto Christ Iesus, lay open his wants before him, shew his sinnes, and make knowne the strength thereof vnto him, and withall crie vnto him for helpe: and hee shall find by ioyfull experience, though they were neuer so many, or mightie, That the power of Christ in him, will vanquish, and subdue them all.

Againe, doth any feare the terrours of death (as all men doe by nature) let him consider, that Christ hath the feete of brasse, wherewith he did encounter with death vpon the crosse: and not content with that, went downe with him into his owne denne, and there did bruise his head, and subdue his power. Indeed if death were to encounter with vs in his full strength, it were a matter of feare: but considering that Christ hath bruised his head, this must stay our hearts against ouermuch dread. And as it serueth to minister comfort to the godly, so it is a matter of all terrour and woe vnto those that liue impenitent: for Christ hath feete of brasse to bruise the head of all his enemies, and such are all those that go on in sinne; vnlesse they turne, destruction will bee their end. Let euery one therefore looke vnto his soule, that hath led a course in any sinne. Let him forsake his old master Sathan, and the workes of darkenesse, and turne vnfainedly to Iesus Christ in the practise of faith and true repentance, and by all obedience in the duties of his callings. For howsoeuer the patience of God may stay for a time the execution of his iustice and wrath, yet in the end they shall feele by wofull experience the destroying power of these his brasen feet.

Burning as in a furnace. Feet ascribed to God and men in Scripture, doe oft time betoken their wayes: So here by Christs feete wee may vnderstand his workes and wayes. And whereas they are said to burne as in a furnace; thereby is signified the perfection thereof. All the counsels of God, with the execution thereof in the creation and gouernment of the world, with all his works therein, are all most holy & pure, like fine brasse purged in the furnace, Psa. 18. 30. The waies of God are vncorrupt, yea hee is holy in all his waies. Psal. 111. 7.

The consideration whereof, must teach vs to conceiue and speake reuerently of all the workes of God, euen of those most secret & strange iudgements, whereof we cannot comprehend a reason. Yet because they proceed from God wee must acknowledge them pure and iust. In sundry points of religion there is a learned ignorance, whereof this is not the least, to hold our selues content, and to reuerence the workes of Christ, though wee see no reason thereof; nay, though to vs they seeme against all reason: for all the wayes of God are vncorrupt. Though the blind eye of men cannot discerne the light of the Sunne, yet the Sunne is full of light: so though our blind eyes cannot behold the puritie of Gods workes, yet they are all done in iustice and equitie, yea they are iustice it selfe: for his will is the rule of iustice. And we must not thinke that God doth a thing because it is good and right: but therefore is the thing good and right, because God willeth and worketh it. Examples hereof wee haue in Gods word: (a) God commaunded Abimelech to deliuer Sarah to Abraham, or els hee will destroy him and all his houshold. In mans reason (a) Gen. 20.

this might seeme vniust: for why should Abimelechs seruants be punished for their maisters fault. So (a) Achan sinneth, and all the hoast of Israell is punished. Dauid committed adulterie, (b) and the child which he begat dieth. Dauid numbreth the people: but the people are smitten with the plague, 2. Sa. 24. All this to mans reason may seeme vnequall: yet being the workes of God, we are withal reuerence to iudge them most iust and holy. Againe, the (c) Scripture sheweth plainely, that God in his eternall counsell hath decreed to saue some, and to reiect others: and his reason moouing him thereto, is not any thing foreseene in them, but his will and pleasure alone. This in mans reason seemeth to be cruelty towards some: and therefore sundry men disclaime this doctrine as charging God with iniustice and tyrannie. But herein they greatly offend: for it is the manifest truth of God in his word: & therfore ought with reuerence to be acknowledged, though we can see no reason thereof, For who art thou o man, that pleadest against God, Rom. 9. 20.

(a) Ios. 7.
(b) 2. Sa. 12. 18
(c) Rom. 9.

And his voyce as the sound of many waters. The voyce of Christ is resembled to the sound of many waters for two causes. First, to signifie the loudnesse and greatnesse of it: the sound whereof hath bene heard through all the world in the ministerie of the Gospell. Secondly, to shew the power and efficacie thereof in the eares of his creatures: for such power it is of, that when the creatures were not, He but spake the word & they were made, He. 11. 3. This powerfull voice of Christ, brought (d) Lazarus out of the graue after he had bene dead foure dayes bound hand and foote. And by this voyce of Christ shall they that haue bene dead six thousand yeares before, be raised vp to life, The houre shall come, in the which all that are in the graues shall heare his voyce: and shall come forth to iudgement, Iohn. 5. 28, 29.

(d) Iohn 11. 43, 44.

Hereby then we may see the great securitie and the deadnesse of mens hearts in this age. For though the powerfull word of Christ be daily sounded into the eares of many; yet it entereth not into their hearts. They liue securely in their sinnes though they be daily exhorted to repentance. But shall dead Lazarus start out of his graue when Christ saith, Lazarus come forth? Nay, shall they that were consumed to dust many thousand yeares before, at the hearing of Christs voyce rise out of their graues? And shall we which liue in body bee no whit affected with it in our soules? Oh fearefull death in sinne. And yet this is the state of all those that will not bee mooued to leaue their sinnes by the ministery of the word. It may bee the outward eare receiueth the sound, but the dead heart receiueth no instruction. We must therefore apply our hearts to this powerfull voyce of Christ; and leaue the sinnes wherein we haue lien dead, that so the quickning power hereof vnto saluation may appeare in vs.

Verse 16. And he had in his right hand seuen starres: and out of his mouth went a sharpe two edged sword: And his face shone as the sunne shineth in his strength.

Here Iohn proceedeth further, to set out the parts of Christs body and the properties thereof. By seuen starres wee are to vnderstand seuen Angels: that is (as Christ expoundeth them verse. 20.) the seuen ministers of the seuen churches of Asia. And they are called starres for these causes. First, starres giue light to men on earth: And so the ministers ought to giue spirituall light to them that liue in the church, both by doctrine, and by an vnblameable conuersation. Secondly, starres haue their continuall abode in heauen and descend not vnto the earth: So ministers aboue all others ought to haue their conuersation in heauen. This indeed is the duty of euery christian; but especially of the minister, in regard of his calling. And this heauenly conuersation he must expresse: first, by seeking the conuersion of his owne soule: and then the conuersion of others, that they may haue an eternall mansion in heauen. Thirdly, they are called stars because (if they be faithfull) they shalbe honored of God, and made to shine as the starres for euer and euer, Dan. 12. 3.

It is added that they are in Christs right hand. Whereby is signified that to him belongeth the regiment, and gouernement, and the whole disposition of the ministerie for matters that concerne the church. From whence arise sundry in-ſtructions.

I. That it is Chriſt who giueth to his church miniſters which preach the Goſpell. For he (a) aſcendeth vp on high, and gaue gifts vnto men, ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, and Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtors and teachers for the gathering together of the ſaints, and for the worke of the miniſterie, and for the edification of the body of Chriſt. And for this cauſe we ought to pray daily vnto Chriſt, (b) that he would thruſt forth labourers into his haruеſt: that the remnant of Gods elect may bee gathered, and ſo we ſee an end of theſe miſerable dayes wherein we liue.

(a) Epheſ. 4. 11. 12.

(b) Mat. 9. 38.

Secondly, in that Chriſt holdeth them in his right hand, wee may gather that Chriſt giueth protection and defence vnto his miniſters, when they are faithful and walke in their calling according to his will: which is a matter to bee conſidered of al that are called into this office: For they haue ſundrie occaſions of diſcouragement: as the negligence and backwardneſſe of their people; the ſlanders and mockings of the enemies: But this protection of Chriſt muſt comfort them againſt them all; ſeeing they are in Chriſts right hand, they muſt go on with all godly boldneſſe.

Thirdly, this ſheweth the dignitie of this calling. Indeed it is deſpiſed and reputed baſe in the world; and hereby many are driuen from it. But let the wicked iudge what they will: Behold Chriſt honoureth it, for his faithfull miniſters are not onely preſent before him which were no ſmall thing: but hee holdeth them in his right hand; then which, what greater glorie can be done vnto them? This muſt bee an inducement vnto all thoſe that are indued with gifts fit for this calling, to affect the ſame.

Laſtly, euery miniſter of the goſpell muſt hereby learne to bee faithfull in his calling, and holy in his converſation: for by vertue of his calling hee is placed in Chriſts right hand. Now ſhall we thinke that Chriſt will long bear in his right hād any that are vnfaithfull, or prophane? Nay, he will take them out of his right hand and put them vnder his feete of braſſe, and there grind them to powder: For as they are honoured aboue others by their place, ſo ſhall their confuſion be the greater, vnleſſe they be faithfull. This wee may ſee in Nadab and Abihu, Leuit. 10. 1. and Hophni and Phineas, 1. Sam. 3. 13. And in the ſame reſpect ought all the people of God to be carefull to their wayes; for by their calling of chriſtianitie they be members of Chriſt. Now if they be not faithfull and anſwerable to their profeſsion, hee will ſurely deale with them, as with vnfaithfull miniſters, put them vnder his feet of braſſe & confound them for euer: They muſt therefore make conſcience of all ſin, and become not hearers onely, but doers of his will: ſo ſhall Chriſt protect them in this life, and ſaue them eternally.

And out of his mouth went a ſharpe two edged ſword. This ſword that came out of his mouth is nothing elſe but the doctrine of the Law and the Goſpell vttered and propounded in the writings and miniſterie of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Heb. 4. 12. The word of God is liuely, mightie in operation and ſharper than any two edged ſword. And it is thereto compared, becauſe as a ſword with a double edge entreth ſharply into the fleſh, and pierceth deeply into the bones, euen to the very marrow: So the doctrine of the Law and the Goſpell entreth ſharply and pierceth deepely into the very marrow of the heart of euery man, to the diuiding of the thought and the ſpirit. This two edged ſword, the word of God hath a twofold operation. One vpon the wicked: Another in the elect. It woundeth the wicked at the very heart with a deadly wound, and thereby brings them to eternall death, Iſay. 11. 4. Chriſt ſhall ſlay the wicked with the breath of his lippes: that is, with his word which is this two edged ſword. Herewith ſhall he conſume Antichriſt, 2. Theſ. 2. 8. viſit Leuiathan and ſlay the dragon, that is, the greateſt enemies of his church, Iſay. 27. verſ. 1.

Here conſider how the word of God ſhould kill an impenitent ſinner. There be three degrees of ſpirituall death. Firſt in this life, where an impenitent ſinner receiueth his deadly wound: The ſecond at the end of this life, when the bodie is laid in the graue, but the ſoule goeth to the torments of the damned: The third at the end of the world: when bodie and ſoule together go to hell eternally. Now a ſinner receiueth in this life his deadly wound after this manner: Chriſt in the giuing thereof hath a threefold worke in his heart by the miniſterie of his word, which is this two edged ſword. Firſt, hereby he reuealeth vnto him his ſinnes, as hypocriſie, pride, and rebellion of heart, with all other his horrible and damnable tranſgreſsions againſt the firſt and ſecond table, 1. Cor 14. 24. 25. When all Prophesie, and there commeth in one vnlearned, he is reproued of all, the Prophets by the word iudge him, and thereby lay open vnto him the ſecret ſinnes of his heart, with the ſinnes of his life. Secondly, Chriſt hereby reueileth vnto him his indignation and wrath, which is the curſe of the law due vnto him: In which regard the law is called (a) a killing letter, (a) 2. Cor. 3. 6 ſhewing no mercy, but onely thundreth out the fierce wrath of God vpon tranſgreſſors. Thirdly, hereby Chriſt awaketh his guiltie conſcience, ſharpneth the ſting thereof, and terrifieth him at the hearing of his word. Thus wicked Felix trembled when hee heard Paul preach (b) of temperance, righteouſneſſe, and the (b) Act. 24. 25 iudgement to come: So when king Belſhazzar (c) ſaw the palme of the hand writing (c) Dan. 5. 6. things againſt him vpon the wall, his countenance was changed, his thoughts troubled him, his ioynts were looſed, and his knees ſtood one againſt another. And al theſe are wrought in the wicked without apprehenſion of mercy, or reformation of life. It may pleaſe God to recouer one that is thus wounded, but whoſoeuer is in this eſtate hee hath receiued a deadly wound, and without vnfained repentance is already in the firſt ſtep towards eternal death: for theſe terrors of conſcience ſeuered from the apprehenſion of Gods mercie in Chriſt, are no grace but the flames of hell fire, and the beginning of eternall woe. And thus we ſee how Chriſt by this ſword woundeth his enemies.

Hence we are to learne ſundry duties. Firſt, how to carrie our ſelues towards them that after they haue heard the word preached vnto them, will rage and ſtorme againſt it, and the preachers thereof, becauſe it touched them. We muſt not deſpiſe or maligne them, but rather be mooued with compaſſion towards them. For thy their behauiour is a token they are wounded with the ſword of Chriſt at the verie heart, and theſe their ragings are nothing but ſtruglings before death eternall: vnleſſe the Lord in mercy recouer them of this deadly wound.

II. Hereby wee are let to ſee and know the lamentable eſtate of the greateſt number in thoſe congregations where the word hath long beene preached; for we ſhall find by lamentable experience, that in thoſe places few come to true knowledge, repentance, and obedience, but moſt remaine ignorant and impenitent: now this their condition is moſt fearefull. A terrible iudgement of God is vpon them: for when men haue long heard Gods word and are not thereby bettered, for knowledge in mind, and obedience of life; they are thereby wounded vnto death.

This two edged ſword hath alwayes his worke: it either cureth vnto life by working repentance and other graces of ſaluation, or woundeth vnto death them that receiue it not. We muſt therefore lament the caſe of ſuch perſons as remaine ignorant and impenitent vnder the miniſterie of the word, for they are as yet dead men for aught wee know, how ſoeuer they may make a faire ſhew by their ciuill honeſtie. If any man ſhould come into a field, and there behold many thouſands ſlaughtered, and guſhing out blood, ſome in the head, ſome in the ſide, &c. this ſight would make his heart to bleed. Well this is true in Gods church, though not to be ſeene with bodily eyes: the moſt men are wounded with this ſword of Gods word, and lye ſinfully wallowing in the blood of their ſoules, while they continue in ignorance, in ſecurtie and want of repentance.

III. This muſt admonish vs all to labour earneſtly to haue further things wrought in vs, than a knowledge of our ſinnes, an apprehenſion of wrath, or horrour of conſcience; namely, true faith and repentance, and ſound reformation of life: for without this, wee haue nothing in vs but the deadly wounds of Chriſts enemies. And thus much for the worke of the Word vpon the wicked.

The ſecond worke of this two edged ſword is in Gods elect; in them it hath ſundry workes, all which tend to their ſubiection. Firſt, it woundeth to the quicke the corruption of their nature. This is one speciall cause why it is called a two edged sword, because it entereth deeply into the heart of Gods children, and giueth their corruption such a deadly blow, as it shall neuer recouer againe: It killeth not the person, as it doth in the wicked: but quickening the soule, it woundeth his corruption. Paule ministred (a) Rom. 15 16 the Gospell, (a) that the offering vp of the Gentiles might be acceptable. Where resembling Gods church to a sacrifice, hee giueth vs to vnderstand, that euery true Christian must be slaine, though not in body and soule, yet in regard of sinfull motions, corrupt affections and rebellious actions, by this two edged sword of the spirit. And this is his conuersion whereby the roote of corruption is stocked vp.

Secondly, after conuersion, this two edged sword serueth to cut off and pare away the remnants of vnbeleefe, doubting, impietie, anger, and other sins that be in the elect: Euery branch (saith Christ) Iohn 15. that bringeth forth fruit in mee, my father the husbandman pruneth, to make it bring forth more fruit.

Thirdly, it serueth to keepe Gods children in awe and subiection vnto him. In this vision, Christ standeth in his church, holding vp the scepter of his kingdome, which hee beareth in his mouth: for this end, that though his enemies will not bee brought in subiection vnto him, yet his owne children might hereby be kept in awe of him. He therefore that will not at the lifting vp of this two edged sword tremble and feare before Christ, is but a rebellious subiect: If there bee brawling in humane societies, let the magistrate but shew himselfe with the sword of iustice, and straightway euery one is quiet: if any resist, he is taken for a rebell. Now shall this be effected in ciuile policie, and not bee true in Christs spirituall gouernment? vnlesse therefore wee will shew our selues rebels against Christ, let vs cease from sinne and tremble before him, seeing hee holdeth out vnto vs the scepter of his word.

Fourthly, this sword serueth notably for our defence and victory in all temptations. Ephes. 6. 17. The sword of the Spirit, the word of God, is one piece of the complete armour of a Christian. Herewith did Christ vanquish Sathan. Matth. 4.

And thus wee see how the word of God is a two edged sword, in regard of the elect.

Hence we are taught, that when wee haue the doctrine of the Law and of the Gospell preached vnto vs, we must with all reuerence heare and receiue the same. Men will heare it while it is taught generally, but if it once touch their particular faults, then they cannot brooke it. But wee must suffer it to ransacke our hearts, and be glad thereof: for by this meanes our corruption is wounded, and sinne slaine in vs: our soules are conuerted vnto God, and shall bee saued. If any man were diseased with a fistula, or any other dangerous sore, he would willingly suffer the surgeon to search and pierce into the same. Shall wee doe this for our bodily health, and shall wee not suffer the word of God to enter into our hearts to rip vp our sinnes, that they being wounded and subdued, wee may bee healed, and so our soules liue for euer? wee cannot liue vnto God, till wee die vnto sinne: and wee can neuer die vnto sinne, till the same bee wounded in vs by this two edged sword. Away therefore with all niceneſſe in disliking the word, when it crosseth our humour; and if wee loue eternall life, Let vs then embrace it most willingly.

Saint Iohn sayth further of this two edged sword; that it came out of Christs mouth. Other kings carry their swords and scepters in their hands; but Christ beareth his in his mouth, to teach vs this speciall point, That wee must receiue no doctrine from any man, which hee hath not receiued from the mouth of Christ. For first, God reuealeth his will vnto his Sonne, & Christ deliuereth it vnto his Prophets and Apostles by the spirit, and to his ministers in their writings. They therefore must deliuer nothing vnto Gods people, but that which they haue from Christ: if they deliuer ought els, they hold not forth Christs sword; neither can it haue that powerfull effect either in the godly, or in the wicked.

And his face shone as the Sunne shineth in his brightnesse. Here is the last braunch of this description of Christ: his face is compared to the shining of the Sunne, and that in his strength; because Christ is vnto his church as the Sunne is to the world.

And looke what duties the Sunne performeth vnto the world, the ſame duties Chriſt performes vnto his church, in a more excellent manner, as their reſemblance will euidently declare.

Firſt, the Sunne in the world diſpelleth night and darkeneſſe, and maketh the day by bringing light: ſo Chriſt the ſunne of righteouſneſſe, Malach. 4. 2. ſendeth downe the bright beames of knowledge and grace into his church, wherby blindneſſe and ignorance is taken away, 2. Corinth. 4. 6. And hereby euery one, of what ſort or place ſoeuer, is taught: firſt, to labour for knowledge of the will of God. A great ſhame it is for any to bee ignorant herein; when the day commeth, we ſet open our windowes to let in the light of the Sunne for our comfort: behold Chriſt Ieſus is euer a ſhining light in his church: Why then ſhould wee not open our hearts, that the beames of light and knowledge, which deſcend from him, may enter into vs and giue vs light? Secondly, wee muſt hereby learne in our whole conuerſation among men, to walke by this light. We are here but pilgrims trauelling towards heauen: and the way of this miſerable word is full of darkeneſſe: yet Chriſt Ieſus is in the middeſt of his church, ſhining as the Sunne in his ſtrength, to giue the light of knowledge, whereby wee may ſee the right way thither. Without him there is nothing but darkeneſſe and wandering: his word is the light, and himſelfe the day ſtarre. We therefore muſt attend vnto him in all our affaires of this life: and in the particular duties of our lawfull callings take direction from the light which ſhineth from his face.

Secondly, the Sunne ſerueth moſt excellently to comfort and reuiue cold and dead ſtarued bodies; as experience in the ſpring time teacheth: So Chriſt Ieſus by the worke of his ſpirit conueyeth ſpirituall life and heat vnto the dead and frozen heart of man: he is of power to comfort them that mourne, to giue life to the broken hearted, and to reuiue the ſpirit of the humble, Iſay. 57. 15. and for this moſt excellent worke may well bee called the Sunne of Righteouſneſſe. In regard whereof wee muſt labour aboue all things to bee partakers of this life and ioy which commeth from Chriſt. In Winter time men vſe to ſtand in the ſunne to comfort and warme themſelues with the heat thereof. Behold Chriſt Ieſus is the ſunne of righteouſneſſe to his church, which giueth heat and life to all the true members thereof. Wee therefore muſt ſeeke aboue all things to haue his bleſſed beames of grace to ſhine vpon our cold and frozen hearts, that by his ſpirituall heat we may be reuiued vnto euerlaſting life. In this world nothing is ſo much regarded, as riches, honours, and pleaſures: Who will ſhew vs any good, is the worldlings ſong. But with godly Dauid wee muſt ſay, Pſal. 4. 4. Lord lift thou vp the light of thy countenance vpon vs, quicken thou vs with thy ſpirituall life, and comfort vs with the beames of mercy. Queſt. How may I get the gracious beames of grace and life, to come from this Sunne of righteouſneſſe into my heart? Reſp. Before a man can liue by Chriſt, hee muſt bee killed in himſelfe. Men doe not kill thoſe whom they would reſtore to temporall life, but the Lord taketh that courſe. Thou therefore muſt ſuffer his two edged ſword to enter into thee, yea to bee thruſt vp to the hilts into thy heart, that ſo thy vile ſinnes and corruptions may be ripped vp, and the wrath of God deſerued thereby made knowne vnto thee, that in thy ſelfe thou mayeſt bee out of hope: and then and not before art thou fit to receiue comfort and life by Chriſt; as a man that is cold in bodie is moſt fit to receiue heat by cloathes and other meanes of warmeneſſe. Now being thus humbled in thy ſelfe, thou muſt vſe the meanes which God hath ordained, to wit, the hearing, reading, and meditating in his word, with earneſt prayer for grace and mercie: and then ſhalt thou perceiue the ioyfull beames of life ſhining into thy ſoule. If a man had all the world, and wanted this grace of life and comfort by Chriſt, it were but a curſe vnto him: but though a man want all things els, yet by this life of grace in Chriſt he is bleſſed for euer: and therefore aboue all other things men ſhould labour for it.

Thirdly, the ſunne ſerueth to diſcouer all things. In the night nothing is diſcerned, but al things appear in one form: but when the ſame commeth forth, all things are made manifeſt, euen the ſmall motes in the aire. Euen so Christ Iesus the sonne of righteousnesse, he seeth all things, and can discouer the most hidden secrets of men: nothing is hid from the light of his countenance, so infinit is his diuine wisdome and knowledge. In regard whereof we must bee moued to looke vnto all our wayes, both thoughts, words, and actions, that they bee such as Christ approueth: for though we may deceiue the world by a false glosse, yet all that wee do, speake, or thinke, is naked and bare before him, he knoweth the same, & can and will reueale it.

If this were beleeued and remembred, it would be a meanes to suppresse much fraud and iniustice, and many grieuous sinnes which is rife in the world. Men thinke if they can bleare the eyes of the world, all is well, they may do what they will: but we must thinke vpon the shining face of Christ, which discerneth and discouereth all secrets; and labour thereupon to make conscience of all our wayes, yea of our secret thoughts, that God may approoue the same.

Vers. 17. And when I saw him, I fell at his feete as dead: then hee laid his right hand on me, saying, Feare not, I am the first and the last.

Verse. 18. And I am aliue, but I was dead: And behold, I am aliue for euermore, Amen: And I haue the keyes of hell and of the earth.

Here Saint Iohn describeth Christ further by other Arguments: namely, by sundry actions of his. The first whereof, is a confirmation of Iohn, being sore afraid, set downe in this & the next verse. In which action note two things: First, the occasion therof: Secondly, the meanes of his confirmation. The occasion was Iohns exceeding feare, set downe in these words: And when I saw him, I fell at his feete as dead. The meanes of confirmation, as in the words following, Then hee layed his hand vpon me, &c.

For the occasion. Iohns feare was exceeding great, and that of death: as appeareth by Christ his confirmation: wherein he telleth Iohn, That he liueth, and hath power ouer death. In this his feare note sundry points; The cause, the effect, and the kind of this feare. For the first: The cause was Christ his appearance in glory and maiestie vnto Iohn, set downe in these words, When I saw him. Where we learne, that sinfull men since Adams fall cannot abide the presence of God. (a) Adam before his fall talked face to face with God without feare: but so soone as he had sinned, (b) hee fled away at the hearing of his voyce, and hid himselfe among the trees of the garden. This feare commeth by reason of mans guiltinesse before God. Hence Manoah sayd vnto his wife, (c) We shall surely die, because wee haue seene God.

(a) Gen. 2.
(b) Gen. 3.8.
(c) Iudg. 13.22

The Vse.

First, by this, That no sinfull man can abide the presence of God, we are taught to labour to become new creatures, to haue the image of sinne defaced in vs, and the image of God restored in righteousnesse and true holinesse. True happinesse consisteth in fellowship with God: but wee can neuer haue true fellowship with him, while wee liue in our sinnes, 1. Iohn. 1.6. If wee say we haue fellowship with him, and walke in darkenesse, we lie. We therefore must labour to bee purged from our sinnes, and so his presence shall bee our ioy.

Secondly, this feare of Iohn at Christs presence in glory, teacheth vs, That the sight and presence of Gods maiestie is a most excellent meanes to humble a man, and to make him know himselfe to bee nothing in himselfe. When Abraham talked with God, the more hee beheld the maiestie of God, the more hee humbled himselfe, confessing at last, that he was but dust and ashes, Gen. 18.27. And Peter by a great draught of fishes seeing but a glimmering of diuine maiesty in Christ, could not abide it, but cried out, Depart from me, for I am a sinfull man, Luk. 5.8. And so the holy Angels when they stand before the maiestie of God are sayd (a) to couer their faces and their feete with their wings: to signifie, that they are nothing in regard of the exceeding Maiestie of God, and in themselues vnable to behould his glorie.

(a) Esay 6.3.

Thirdly, hereby wee are taught to acknowledge Gods great goodnesse towards vs in the ministerie of the word: wherein hee vouchsafeth to speake vnto vs, not in his owne person, as hee did in mount Sina, which would bee so terrible, that none could abide it, but fauorably & famifamiliarly by the miniſterie of men that are like vnto our ſelues. Many abuſe this mercy of God, and deſpiſe the word becauſe of the meſſenger: but wee muſt learne by this bountie of God, to receiue the word with all reuerence as from the Lord.

Laſtly, in this exceeding feare of Iohn, who was an Apoſtle and a very godly and righteous man; wee learne that the moſt holy man that is will be aſtonied euen to death with the preſence of Gods glorious maieſtie. And if no man, be he neuer ſo holy, can ſtand before Gods preſence, much leſſe can the moſt righteous workes of any man endure the triall of his iudgement: if his perſon cannot abide his preſence; his workes will neuer beare his iudgement. For the perſon muſt firſt bee approoued before the workes be accepted. Therefore damnable is the doctrine of the church of Rome, which teach that ſuch as in themſelues are ſinfull men muſt ſtand before Gods iudgement ſeate bringing with them works of grace, as meanes of their iuſtification, and part of ſatiſfaction to Gods iuſtice. It is a doctrine of deſperation: for how can our works be perfectly holie, ſeeing our perſons are but ſanctified here in part? And who can thinke that the infinit iuſtice of God can bee ſatiſfied by the imperfect righteouſneſſe of man?

II. point. The effect of this feare in his body, He fell downe as dead at his feete: This was no ſmall feare but exceeding great, aſtoniſhing his ſenſes and laying him downe as dead. Phyſitions ſay, and that truly, the mind followeth the temperature of the body. But hence we may as truly ſay, That the body followeth the diſpoſition of the mind; for the affections of the ſoule wil worke vpon the body like vnto ſtrong diſeaſes. Iohns feare caſteth his body into a ſound: And ſo horrour of conſcience when the heart is cold will make the body hot, and the intrals to roule in the body. The ſame may be ſayd of anger, 1. Reg. 21. 4. When Ahab could not obtaine Nabals vineyard, he layd him downe on his bed in diſpleaſure, and was almoſt dead: Euen ſo will other affections worke vpon the body.

Hence wee learne that the bodies of men being diſeaſed muſt not alwayes be cured by bare phyſike, but ſomtimes by curing of the mind and ordering of the affections: for when the diſtemper of the body ariſeth from the diſorder of the mind, then till the mind be well compoſed and ſetled, phyſicke will little auaile.

III. point. The kind of this feare is inſinuated in theſe words, he fell at his feet, Wherby the holy Ghoſt giueth vs to vnderſtand, that this was a religious reuerent feare, which hee bare to Chriſt: For this kind of proſtrating the body betokeneth humilitie; and argueth a reuerent eſtimation of the thing feared.

Hence we are taught, when we come into the preſence of Chriſt, we muſt proſtrat our ſelues as Iohn did, and looke that we be ſtriken with a religious feare of his maieſtie. If any ſhall thinke that Chriſt is now aſcended into heauen, and therefore we cannot now fall down at his feet as Iohn did. I anſwer, though Chriſt be now in heauen, yet hath he his feet vpon earth, at which we muſt fall downe. In the old teſtament the mercy-ſeat was the pledge of Gods preſence: and therefore it is called Gods footeſtoole, Pſal. 99. 5. before which the Iewes were to fall downe. Well, though the mercy-ſeat be now taken away, yet ſome thing is inſtead thereof: For whereſoeuer Gods people aſſemble themſelues in the name of God, there is his footſtoole: and therfore in the aſſemblies of Gods ſaints we muſt caſt downe our ſelues before Chriſt Ieſus, and do all duties vnto him with all feare, awe, and reuerence of his maieſtie.

This feare of Iohn, though it was holy, yet is it tainted with ſome ſinne and corruption: for it was an immoderat feare of death which made him thus aſtoniſhed and affright. Whence wee learne that the moſt holy affections of righteous men are not perfectly holy, but mixed with imperfection according to the meaſure of their ſanctification, which is alwayes in part in this life. Whereby it appeares that no man hath in him a filiall feare of God alone, but ſome ſeruile feare (whereby wee feare God for his iudgements) is mixed therewith. And thus much for Iohns feare which is the occaſion of his confirmation.

Now

Now followeth the meanes of his confirmation in theſe words, Then he layd his right hand vpon me, ſaying, feare not, I am the firſt and the laſt: and I am aliue, but I was dead: and behold I am aliue for euermore, Amen: and I haue the keyes of hell and death. Here note two things, firſt, the time when Chriſt vſed theſe meanes for Iohns confirmation: ſecondly, the means themſelues. The time is noted in this word, then, that is, after his preſence had ſtroken a feare in my heart, which made me as dead; then the Lord vſed meanes to comfort me. The meanes of comfort and confirmation are then vſed when the party is humbled. And thus the Lord dealeth with all his ſeruants in the matter of their ſaluation: Firſt, he bruiſeth their ſtonie hearts, and woundeth their ſinfull ſoules, before hee powreth in the oyle of grace. Firſt, a man muſt bee a loſt ſheepe, and then Chriſt findeth him and layeth him on his ſhoulders and bringeth him home. And indeed they that would feele ſound comfort by Chriſt, muſt firſt be humbled in themſelues. And the reaſon why men reape ſo little comfort either by the word or ſacraments, is the want of true humiliation before they come, whereby the ſoule is fitted for grace and conſolation.

II. point. The meanes vſed by Chriſt to confirme Iohn, and they are two. Firſt, a ſenſible ſigne, He layd his right hand vpon me. Secondly, comfortable words, Feare not.

Here firſt obſerue in generall Chriſts gratious dealing with Iohn: he vſeth not one meanes apart, but in great mercie, that he may throughly confirme Iohn, he giueth him both a ſigne and words. And ſo hee hath alwayes dealt with his ſeruants: When he called Moſes to bee a deliuerer of his people. Firſt, hee gaue him his word; ſaying, I will be with thee, and then a ſigne, ſaying, Vpon this mountaine ſhal ye ſerue God, Exod. 3.12. So when he would confirme the heart of (a) Ahaz againſt his enemies, he firſt giues him a promiſe of deliuerance, verſe. 7. then biddeth him aske a ſigne, verſ. 11. And for this cauſe Chriſt in the publiſhing of his Goſpell, added ſignes and miracles vnto his word, that the truth thereof might be fully confirmed. And ſo in the worke of our ſaluation, beſides his mercifull promiſes which were ſufficient in reſpect of his fidelitie; he giueth vs further ſignes and ſeales to ſupport our weakneſſe, and to confirme our faith in the aſſurance thereof, euen the vſe of the holy Sacraments.

(a) Kay. 7.

This teacheth vs that Chriſt hath a ſpeciall care ouer his church and people, in that he doth ſo condeſcend and abaſe himſelfe vnto their weakneſſe, adding vnto his word, which of it ſelfe were ſufficient, ſignes and tokens, that by both he might more euidently giue that aſſurance, which by one alone our weaknes would not ſo well conceiue.

Againe, in this meanes of confirmation note the order which Chriſt vſeth: Firſt, he giueth him the ſigne of his preſence: Laying his hand vpon him, to aſſure him of protection frō al danger of death. Thē he giueth him his wrod, bidding him not to feare. Hence we may learne that the aſſurance of Gods preſence and protection, is a ſouerigne remedie againſt all feare: when Moſes feared the great calling he was ſent about, to take away that feare, the Lord ſaith, (b) I will be with thee. Hence Dauid ſaith, (c) He will not feare though he walke through the valley of the ſhadow of death, becauſe God is his ſtay and comfort. Wherefore it concerneth vs to labour to be aſſured not onely of Gods preſence, but of his prouidence and ſpeciall protection: And ſo in all dangers both of life and death, wee ſhall haue ſtay and comfort for our ſoules.

(b) Exod: 3, 12.

(c) Pſa. 23. 4.

The Lord hauing vſed theſe two meanes to confirme Iohn, both a ſigne & his word: doth yet further condeſcend vnto Iohns weakneſſe, and eſtabliſheth his owne word by two reaſons. The firſt in theſe words, I am the firſt and the laſt. Chriſt is the firſt; Becauſe nothing was or could bee before him: The laſt, becauſe nothing is or can bee after him. Theſe two titles are giuen vnto Chriſt to expreſſe his Godhead and eternitie, as before wee haue heard, verſe. 8. Now here they are againe ſet downe, to giue vs to vnderſtand that hee hath in his owne power the beginning and end of all things: and therefore is able to protect his ſeruants from all dangers, and from death: and will make good vnto them all his promiſes vnto eternall life.

Verſe. 18.

Verſe. 18. And Am he that liueth, but I was dead, and behold I am aliue for euermore, Amen: And I haue the keyes of hell and of death.

These words conteine the second reason to confirme Iohn. And it may thus be framed by way of a distinction, Although I was dead, yet I am he that liueth (for so the words are) and behold I am aliue for euermore, Amen: Yea I haue power ouer death and hell. This distinction containeth three parts. First, Though I was once dead, yet I am he that liueth. Secondly, Though I was once dead, yet I liue for euermore. Thirdly, Though I was once dead, yet I haue the keyes of death and of hell. Of these in order.

I. part. And Am he that liueth, though I was dead. Here life is ascribed to Christ in a speciall manner. For Christ liueth in a peculiar sort differet frō the life of other creatures. For first hee hath sufficient life in himselfe and from himselfe: Secondly, he giueth life to others. For the first: that wee may better conceiue it, wee must know that life is twofold, vncreated, and created. Vncreated life is the life of God whereby God liueth: This life is eternall and infinit in it selfe, & from it selfe. Now as Christ is God he liueth this vncreated life: which is all one with the godhead. Againe, created is twofold. The first is naturall preserued by means of meat and drinke. The second is spirituall, both begunne and continued by meanes of the immediat operation of Gods spirit, whereby wee haue fellowship with God. And this spirituall life is more perfect than the naturall. Now Christ liueth not the naturall life but as he is God liueth the vncreated life, & as he is man he liueth the spirituall life, his body and soule hauing al their subsisting and sustentation in the second person in Trinitie: and therefore he hath in himselfe most absolut and perfect life, and so liueth of himselfe.

Secondly, Christ is here said to liue, because, he giueth life vnto men: & that two wayes: First, as he is God; and so he giueth life to all good and bad: For in him euery thing liueth, moueth, and hath his being, Act. 17. 28. Secondly, as he is mediator God and man: and so he giueth spirituall life vnto his church and people. Hence he saith to his Disciples, Because I liue, yee shall liue also, Iohn. 14. 19. For looke as Christ died not for himselfe, but for vs, that we might not die eternally: So hee liueth now in heauen the spirituall life, not for himselfe alone, but for vs, that we might liue that spirituall life in and by him eternally. And therefore our life is sayd, To be hid with God in Christ. And for this cause in the Sacrament we doe eate the body and drinke the bloud of Christ really by the mouth of faith, that wee might know that our life is to be fetched from him. For as we receiue grace from his grace; so wee receiue life from his life.

Hereby wee are taught to seeke for this spirituall life at Christs hands: that we may say with Paul, I liue not now, but Christ liueth in me, Gal. 2. 21. and that Our life is hid in Christ, as in a head and roote. For he liueth in heauen, that wee might liue by him: our care must not be so much for our temporall life, which is but a vapour and like a fleeting shadow, as for this spirituall life which is eternall. But the practise of this duty is rare to bee found, though the omission of it bee a grieuous sinne. Mens whole care is for temporall life: few thinke on this, how to procure to themselues this spirituall life by Christ; though he haue said, I liue that you may liue in me. This appeareth by their common practise: They will goe ten, twenty, yea an hundred miles to prouide means for their bodily preseruation; and yet will scarce go one or two miles for the meanes of their saluation for euer. The cause thereof is, the hardnesse of mens hearts, which are not touched for their sinnes, nor feele the smart & weight thereof. This we may see plainly in the woman of Samariah: For when Christ sate at the well of Iacob talking with her, and telling her that he was the well of life, of whose water whosoeuer dranke should neuer thirst: She did nothing but cauill with him. But when he layd to her heart her principall sinnes, then she left off cauelling, and in reuerence, and some beginning of faith, Acknowledged him to be the Messias. Euen so let the minister say vnto his people, hee can bring them to the water of life; they will nothing regard, but cauill at the doctrine of the Gospell, till their sinnes bee touched, and their soules humbled by the sight thereof. Wherefore if wee would haue our hearts fit to receiue spirituall life by Christ; we must first labor to haue a sense of our sinnes, and to feare Gods wrath due vnto vs for the same. Hereby we shal be weined from the dangerous loue of earthly things, and our soules shall bee ravished with desire of Christ Iesus. He is the well of life; and if once we could feele a parching heat in our soules by reason of our sinnes, then would we thirst & neuer be at rest till we had drunke our fill, and diued our selues in his saving merits. This naturall life is but vanishing, and therefore we must labour for this spirituall life by Christ which is eternall. This will comfort vs in all distresse: and take from vs the feare of death, of hell, and all danger.

The second part of the distinction: Though I was dead, yet behold I liue for euermore, Amen. This part is vttered and propounded by two notes to bee obserued. First, by a note of certaintie, Amen. Secondly, by a note of attention, Behold. The note of certaintie (Amen) serueth to assure vs that this is an infallible truth which Christ affirmeth of himselfe: saying, I liue for euermore. The note of attention which is prefixed, Behold, serueth to stirre vp Iohns mind, and the mind of euery one of vs to a serious consideration of this which Christ saith, I liue for euermore. And because it pleaseth Christ to propound this point in this manner, let vs a little stand thereon, and herein consider two points. First, in respect of what nature Christ is sayd to liue for euer. Secondly, for what end he liueth for euer. For the first, No doubt as Christ is the mediator of the church, He liueth for euer: and therefore this must bee vnderstood of Christ, in regard of both his natures, godhead and manhood. In respect of his godhead, he is coeternall with the father and with the holy Ghost, liuing of himselfe that vncreated and essentiall life, which is all one with the godhead, being eternall, without beginning or ending. Secondly, hee liueth for euer as hee is man: for after his death hee ascended vp to heauen, where in full glorie he inioyeth immediat fellowshippe with the godhead: for in him dwelleth the fulnes of the godhead bodily; his manhood being wholly and immediatly susteined by his godhead.

II. Point. The end for which Christ liueth for euer, is to giue eternall life to his church, and to euerie true member thereof. So Saint Iohn saith, This is (a) the ieslimonie of God, euen the father, that hee hath giuen vs life euerlasting, and this life is in his sonne. And here Christ must bee considered of vs, as the head of his church, as the roote and ground of our saluation, and the fountaine of all our happinesse. For as the roote of a tree liueth not for it selfe, but for the body and for all the branches: euen so Christ Iesus, he hath eternall life in him, not for himselfe alone, but that he may conuey the same to al his members. Yea, wee must consider Christ as the common treasurie & storehouse of all true felicitie: wherein life eternall is laid vp for al the members of his church. For which cause hee saith, (b) His flesh is meate indeed: and whosoeuer eateth his flesh and drinketh his blood shall liue for euer, To giue vs to vnderstand, that his manhood hath quickning vertue in it: Yet not of it selfe or by it self, but as it is the mānood of the sonne of God; For from the godhead it receiueth this quickning power, to giue eternall life vnto the church. And here the meanes must be considered, by which Christ giueth life vnto his church: namely, by vertue of that misticall vnion which is betweene him and euery member of his church. Which vnion is thus caused: God the father giueth Christ vnto his church, and to euery one that is to be saued by Christ; and that really and truly according to the tenor of the couenant, in which he hath promised to giue Christ with all his benefits to euery one that beleeueth. The manner and order of this gift is this: Whole Christ God & man is giuen to euery beleeuer; euen as he is mediator. And yet the godhead of Christ is not giuen with the manhood, but only the vertue & operation of the godhead in the manhood; by which the manhod is made able to merit for the beleeuer. But the manhood of Christ is giuen both for substance, and in regard of all benefits that are conueyed to man by it, as iustification and redemption; as truly as lands and goods are giuen of man to man. And when God giueth Christ to any, he doth withall giue vnto the same partie the spirit of Christ: for hee that hath

(a) 1. Io. 5. 11

(b) Ioh. 6. 54, 55.

hath part in Chriſt, hath part in his ſpirit: and this ſpirit createth in his heart the inſtrument of faith, by which Chriſt giuen of the father, is receiued and apprehended; both his body and bloud, and the efficacie and the benefites thereof. Chriſt is not receiued in imagination, as men receiue things by conceit in the braine: but as hee is giuen of the father; namely in the word and ſacraments really and truly, though ſpiritually. And the ſame ſpirit that worketh this faith, doth knit the beleeuer vnto Chriſt really, though myſtically, making him one with Chriſt, ſo as Chriſt is the head, and the beleeuer a member. And thus is this myſticall coniunction wrought, from whence proceedeth this eternall life.

The benefites that come from this myſticall coniunction are theſe.

I. Hereby a beleeuer begins in this world to liue eternall life: for by the worke of his ſpirit, Chriſt maketh that man that is thus vnited vnto him, to begin to die vnto all ſinne, and to liue vnto him ſpiritually, as himſelfe liueth.

II. Hence commeth the reſurrection of the body: for this coniunction being once begun, remaineth eternall, and is neuer wholly broken off, no not from the body, while it is conſumed to duſt and aſhes. Looke as in the Winter ſeaſon the ſap returneth to the root of the tree, and then all the branches ſeeme as they were dead: but when Spring time commeth, by vertue of the ſunne the ſap aſcendeth and maketh them freſh and greene againe: euen ſo, the bodies of Gods children haue their Winter ſeaſon, while they lie dead and rotten: but yet by vertue of their vnion and coniunction with Chriſt, at the laſt day ſhall life bee conueyed from Chriſt Ieſus vnto them, whereby they ſhall be raiſed to life.

III. Hence commeth eternall life to euery beleeuer: that is, glory and bliſſe in body and ſoule in heauen for euer and euer: for being once begun (as it is in this world) it is neuer diſſolued. And thus we ſee how Chriſt conueyeth eternall life vnto his members.

The Vſe. The words bearing this ſence, do containe in them the foundation of two maine articles of our beleefe, namely, the reſurrection of the body, and life euerlaſting: for both theſe are effected to vs, by vertue of our vnion with Chriſt: for he liueth for euer to giue life to vs. And this is the ground of all true ioy: as wee may ſee in Iob, who in the middeſt of his miſerie ſtayed himſelfe on this, That hee knew his Redeemer liued, and that hee ſhould riſe againe, and behold him with theſe ſame eyes, wherewith he ſaw other creatures, Iob. 19. 25, 26.

2. Againe, if Chriſt liue in heauen to giue vnto vs eternall life, then muſt wee learne to haue our conuerſation in heauen with Chriſt: for where our life is, there ſhould our conuerſation bee. Now that our conuerſation may be with him, wee muſt often ſeriouſly conſider with our ſelues of this euerlaſting life which Chriſt there keepeth in ſtore for vs: and for this cauſe principally doth Chriſt here ſay, Behold, I liue for euer.

3. This alſo muſt moue vs to put all our affiance in him, and to place all our ioy and reioicing in him. Men haue moſt regard to that part of their bodie, by which the whole body and euery member liueth. Well, wee profeſſe our ſelues to bee members of Chriſt, and in him is hid our ſpirituall life: wee therefore muſt ſet our hearts and affections on him eſpecially.

The third part of the diſtinction is this: Though I was dead, yet I haue the keyes of death and of hell. Here we muſt not imagine that hell is a bodily place kept with locke and key, and dores, as mens dwelling houſes are: that cannot bee proued by any place of Gods word. Neither yet that the torments thereof are bodily, ſuch as bee inflicted in this world: but rather they are ſpirituall, being the apprehenſion and feeling of Gods wrath and vengeance, whoſe iealouſie burnes like fire. But Chriſt in this phraſe borroweth a compariſon from ſtewards of great houſes, who at their inſtalling into their ſtewardſhips, haue the keyes of all things giuen vnto them. Which giuing of the keyes is a token of regiment and authoritie beſtowed vpon them. And the meaning is this, That Ieſus Chriſt though he once died, yet by his death did vanquiſh hell and death, and hath obtained full power & dominion ouer them both for euermore.

Hence ariſe ſundry inſtructions: firſt, that power and authoritie to forgiue ſinnes properly, belongeth onely vnto Chriſt. No meere creature hath this power; for hee that can forgiue ſinnes, muſt bee able to take away the puniſhments of ſinne, namely, hell and death, which none can doe but Chriſt alone, who onely hath the keyes thereof. And to ſay that a man can properly forgiue ſinnes, is to ſay, that a man hath power in himſelfe ouer hell and death. And therefore the prieſthood of the church of Rome is full of blaſphemie, who take vpon them properly to pronounce vnto men the pardon of their ſinnes of themſelues: and they deride the cuſtome of reformed churches, who from God pronounce the pardon of ſinnes vnto them that repent.

Secondly, hereby wee are taught to reuerence Chriſt, and to performe vnto him all due honor and loyall obedience. If wee neuer haue done this heretofore, wee muſt now begin; and if wee haue done it, we muſt endeuour to do it more. For Chriſt hath the keyes of hell and death, hee can open the gates thereof at his pleaſure, and caſt thither whom hee will. Many deceiue themſelues through their falſe conceit of Chriſt, they thinke not of him as of a Iudge, but as a Sauior onely: they make him all of mercie and pitie, and thereby they take occaſion to goe on in ſinne. But wee muſt conſider, that Chriſt is likewiſe a righteous iudge, who hath the power of hell and death in his hands, and therefore we muſt not flatter our ſelues in our euill wayes, but ſtriue to pleaſe him continually with fear and trembling, leaſt by our ſinnes we ſtir vp his wrath againſt vs, and cauſe him to caſt vs into hell, whence is no redemption.

Thirdly, this is a matter of great comfort vnto all thoſe in Gods church, that in this life vnfainedly cleaue vnto Chriſt: and eſpecially in time of affliction and temptation, and at the houre of death, for Chriſt hauing the keyes of hell & death is able to keepe them from hell, and from the ſting of death. And this hee will doe becauſe they truſt in him, for he hath promiſed it. If this were alwayes ſounding in our eares, it would miniſter endleſſe ioy vnto our ſoules againſt the ſeruile feare of hell and death.

Verſ.19. Write the things which thou haſt ſeene, and the things which are, and the things which ſhall come hereafter.

Here S. Iohn propoundeth a ſecond action of Chriſt. For hauing confirmed Iohn againſt his great feare, hee giueth him a commaundement to write the things which he had ſeene, &c. This commaundement was giuen to Iohn in the eleuenth verſe, and is here againe repeated for theſe cauſes: Firſt, that Iohn might ſee the ſpecial care of Chriſt ouer his church that he ſtill continueth a prouident head thereof for their good eſtate after his aſcention. Secondly, that Gods church in all ages may vnderſtand, that it is neceſſarie men ſhould know the eſtate of the church to bee ſubiect vnto troubles, that thereby they may better arm themſelues againſt the euils to come. Thirdly, that Iohn might be fully aſſured of his calling, to write and publiſh this booke. Fourthly, that Gods church in all ages might be out of doubt, that this booke is no deuice of man, but a booke of God, and part of holy Scripture reuealed from Chriſt to Iohn for the good of his church. If it be ſayd: though Chriſt did faithfully reueale his will, yet Iohn might erre in publiſhing it. Anſw. As Chriſt deliuered this to Iohn, ſo hee receiued and publiſhed it faithfully, without all fault either in matter or manner: for we muſt make a difference betweene the Prophets and Apoſtles, and all other teachers. As the Prophets in former times, ſo the Apoſtles in the New Teſtament were called immediately by Chriſt, and had ſuch ſpeciall aſsiſtance of Gods ſpirit, that they could not erre, when they propounded by preaching or writing any doctrine of Chriſt vnto the church of God: this appeareth by the promiſes of Chriſt made vnto them, Luk. 10.16. He which heareth you, heareth me, and he which refuſeth you, refuſeth me: and he which refuſeth me, refuſeth him that ſent me. Againe, Matth. 10.20. It is not you which ſpeake, but the Spirit of your father ſpeaking in you. Ioh. 14.26, hee promiſeth to ſend his ſpirit to be their comforter, which ſhall teach them all things: yea, to lead them into all truth, Iohn 16.13. Which promiſe ſome apply to all Gods miniſters; but if we marke the circumſtances therof, we ſhall ſee that properly it agreeth to the Apoſtles: for though in others the certaintie hereof cannot be affirmed, yet in them it may: for which cauſe, in the counſell at Ieruſalem thus they write vnto the churches: It ſeemed good to (a) the holy ghoſt and to vs; as being aſſured of the certaine direction of the holy ghoſt: which no miniſters euer ſince could ſay, being ſubiect to errour both in ſpeaking and writing. This diſtinction muſt bee held for the certainetie of our faith in the points of Religion; and for our aſſurance of the faithfull penning and publiſhing of this booke. And thus much of the cauſes of this repetition.

(a) Act 15.28.

In the words of this commandement is contained the diuiſion of this whole booke, Write the woords which thou haſt ſeene: that is, ſet downe what I haue ſhewed thee in this viſion. And which are; that is, all things which I reueale vnto thee touching the preſent eſtate of the church. And which are to come hereafter: that is, thoſe things which concerne the future eſtate of the church to the end of the world, as I will reueale it vnto thee. Thus then is the whole booke diſtinguiſhed. I. It containeth things touching the preſent eſtate of the church in Iohns daies. II. It entreateth of things which concerne the future eſtate thereof from Iohns time to the end of the world.

The Vſe. Hence obſerue the lawfulneſſe of the art of Logicke: for diuiſions be lawfull (elſe the holy ghoſt would not here haue vſed them) and ſo by proportion are other arguments of reaſoning: and therefore that art which giueth rules of direction for the right vſe of theſe arguments is lawfull and good. Thoſe men then are farre deceiued, who account the arts of Logicke and Rhetoricke to be friuolous and vnlawfull, and in ſo ſaying, they condemne the practiſe of the holy ghoſt in this place.

Verſ.20. The myſterie of the ſeuen ſtarres which thou ſaweſt in my right hand, and the ſeuen golden candleſticks is this: The ſeuen ſtarres are the ſeuen Angels of the Churches, and the ſeuen candleſticks which thou ſaweſt are the ſeuen Churches.

This is the third action of Chriſt: namely the interpretation of the Viſion in the principall parts thereof; which he expoundeth for theſe cauſes: Firſt, Iohn in this buſineſſe was to ſhew himſelfe a Prophet of God, by declaring the preſent and future eſtate of Gods church. Now the principall part of a Prophet is to expound viſions or dreames reuealed either to himſelfe or to others: as wee may ſee in Daniell and the reſt of the prophets. Secondly, that Iohn might bee encouraged in the publiſhing of this booke and of the things reuealed vnto him: For Iohns calling reſpected the Church of God. And when he ſhould perceiue theſe viſions to concerne the Churches; this would ſtirre vp his diligence, in obſeruing, and penning the things reuealed.

Now Chriſt expoundeth not the whole viſion, but two principall things therein; namely, what was meant by the ſeuen ſtarres; to wit, the ſeuen Angels, or the ſeuen miniſters of the Churches. And what was meant by the ſeuen golden candleſticks: namely, The ſeuē Churches themſelues. The reaſons why both were ſo called, wee haue ſhewed before, with the vſe thereof. Here onely I will obſerue theſe three points: Firſt, why Chriſt in the interpretation of his viſion doth not expound the whole, but onely two principall parts thereof: This he doth for theſe cauſes, Firſt, becauſe hee hath giuen vnto his church the gift of interpretation, which hee would haue them to exerciſe about this viſion: For if hee had expounded euery part himſelfe, then he had left herein no matter to his church, whereabout ſhee might exerciſe her gift. Secondly, to prouoke Gods miniſters eſpecially, with other members of his church, vnto all diligence in ſtudying this and other parts of ſcripture. For if all things were eaſie and plaine, then men would grow careleſſe in reading and ſearching out the knowledge of Gods word. Thirdly, to ſtir vp in euery Reader of this booke an earneſt and hartie deſire to vnderſtand the ſame. Fourthly, to excite all his ſeruants to prayer and inuocation vpon God for his grace, that they may with reading the Scripture vnderſtand the true meaning thereof.

II. point. Note here, the miniſters of the churches are called Angels. What theſe Angels are, appeareth in the chapters following; to wit, the pastors and ministers of these seuen churches of Asia. So *Mat.*11.10. Iohn Baptist is called Christs Angell or messenger, whereby wee haue good light for the expounding of a place in Paule, 1.*Cor.*11.10. saying, That the woman ought to haue power ouer her head, that is, bee couered, because of the Angels. Where, by Angels may well bee vnderstood the preachers and ministers of the Gospell. And the reason of that precept may bee this: Among the Corinthians the couering of the head was not as it is with vs, a token of preheminence and superioritie, but a signe of subiection. And therefore the Apostle would haue the women of Corinth, when they came into the congregation, to haue their heads couered according to the custome of their countrey in other assemblies, to signifie their submission and reuerence vnto the ministerie of the Gospell.

The Vse. Whereas Ministers are the Lords angels and embassadours: hence wee gather, that euery Minister of the Gospell must carry himselfe as the messenger of the Lord. Messengers haue regard of two things; of the matter of their message, and of their manner of deliuerie, that they speake all which they are commanded: and in such order as their Lord and master would haue it spoken, or speake it himselfe if hee were present: and he that faileth in either of these, may iustly bee chalenged of vnfaithfulnesse. The Minister therefore being Christs messenger, must deliuer the whole will of Christ alone vnto his people: as also in that manner which Christ approoueth, and would himselfe obserue, if hee were present. Now can we once imagine, that Christ would deliuer his will, partly in English, partly in Latine and other Languages, or intermingle with the testimonies of the Prophets and Apostles, the sentences of Fathers, of Philosophers, Poets, and other writers? Those therfore that in this sort dispence Christs gospel, doe hereby bewray vnfaithfulnesse in their deliuerie. Indeed this is counted the learned kind of preaching: But it is not that manner which Christ approoueth. And besides, if this kind of teaching may take place, it will bring in as great Barbarisme, in regard of true Diuinitie, as was among the Schoolemen, when Gods word was wholly turned vnto needlesse disputation, yea it would shortly banish the Gospell out of this land.

III. point. Note the phrase which the holy ghost vseth: he sayth not, The seuen starres signifie the seuen Angels, but Are the seuen Angels: and the seuen candlestickes Are the seuen churches; giuing to the signe the name of the thing signified. Wherein wee haue a good warrant for our exposition of that phrase in the Sacrament: This bread is my body: this cup is my blood: Which the Papists vnderstand properly of the very bodie and bloud of Christ by reall transmutation. But as these seuen starres are sayd to bee seuen Ministers, because they did signifie the seuen Ministers: so is the bread called the body of Christ, because it signifieth and representeth his bodie, and the cup his bloud. And as it is absurd to say, the seuen ministers were indeed seuen starres, because they are so called: so it is absurd to hold the bread in the Sacraments to be really Christs body, or the wine his bloud, because it is so called. And thus much of the third action of Christ in the interpretation of this Vision.

The Second Chapter.

Vers.1. Vnto the Angell of the Church of Ephesus write: These things sayth he that holdeth the seuen starres in his right hand and walketh in the middest of the seuen golden candlesticks.

IN this Chapter and in the next, is contained the fourth action of our Sauiour Christ: wherein he giueth seuen particular commaundements to Iohn, to write vnto the seuen Churches of Asia, and to send vnto them seuen letters or Epistles. The first of which commandements is expressed in the beginning of this first verse: Vnto the Angell of the Church of Ephesus write; Then after followeth eth the Epiſtle, Theſe things, ſaith hee, &c. continuing to the eight verſe. Firſt, for the commaundement: The partie to whom Iohn muſt write is the Angell: which word may bee expounded two wayes: either to ſignifie the miniſter or paſtor of the particular church of Epheſus, and ſo it is commonly taken of the moſt: or els it may betoken the company of the miniſters, teachers, and gouernours of the church of Epheſus: for therein were many paſtors and gouernours, as appeareth Act. 20.28. where Paule calleth together the Biſhops (as the word ſignifieth) and giueth them charge ouer their particular flockes. Now in Scripture the name of one perſon taken collectiuely, oftentimes ſignifieth the whole multitude, as Exod. 4.22. Iſraell is my ſonne, euen my firſt borne, Where the whole body of the people of Iſrael is called by the name of one man. And ſo though Antichriſt bee not one particular man, but a ſtate and company of men in the ſucceſſion of Popes: yet is that whole eſtate noted by the ſpeciall name of one man, as that (a) Antichriſt, that man of ſinne: and ſonne of perdition. Thus we ſee how the word Angell may bee taken: and whether wee vnderſtand it of one man, or of the whole company of elders, it is not much materiall.

(a) 2. Theſ. 2.

In this particular commaundement note two points: Firſt, that Chriſt his intent is to write to the whole church of Epheſus, as appeareth Chap. 1. 11. where Iohn is commaunded to write in a boohe, and ſend it to the Churches: as alſo by the concluſion of this Epiſtle, where it is ſayd, Let him that hath an eare to heare, heare what the ſpirit ſaith vnto the Churches: and yet he directeth his Epiſtle not to the whole church, but particularly to the Angel or paſtor therof. This he doth for two cauſes: Firſt, to intimate vnto this miniſter his duty: which ſtood in two things: In teaching the contents of this Epiſtle vnto the whole church: & in becomming a patterne and example to them all, of doing the things therin required. Secondly becauſe either much good or much euill comes to euery particular church by the miniſters thereof, ſuch is the efficacie of his place and calling. If he be faithfull he bringeth great good to the church: if vnfaithfull, exceeding great hurt: as might eaſily be proued by many examples in all ages. Now Chriſt writeth to the Angell of this church, that he might be a meanes of much good vnto them al, by exciting them to the practiſe of all good duties required in this Epiſtle.

Verſe. 7.

II. point. Among all the churches of Aſia Chriſt writeth firſt to the church of Epheſus: not for that this church had authoritie ouer the reſt (for they were all candleſtickes, and all of gold) but becauſe Epheſus was the mother citie, farre exceeding the reſt in riches and eſtimation. Whereby Chriſt giueth vs to vnderſtand, that his will is, that thoſe people, towns and cities which excell others in eſtimation and wealth, ſhould alſo go before them in knowledge, obedience and other graces of God. And ſo anſwerably ſhould it bee with particular perſons: They which excell others for outward reputation and temporal bleſſings, ought to go before them in ſpiritual graces, as godlineſſe and religion. Thoſe which ſhall faile herein, and ſuffer others that are far their inferiours for outward things to go before them in ſpiritual graces, ſhall find it true to their ſhame before men, but eſpecially at the tribunall ſeat of Ieſus Chriſt.

Thus much for the commandement. Now followeth the example it ſelfe, which containeth three parts (as all ordinarie Epiſtles doe.) A pereface; A propoſition; and the concluſion. The preface is in theſe words, Theſe things, ſaith he, that holdeth the ſeuen ſtarres in his right hand, and walketh in the middeſt of the ſeuen golden candleſticks. The propoſition and concluſion, in the verſes following. The preface is borrowed from the former chapter, verſe. 16. and 13. Where alſo it was handled. The intent of Chriſt herein is to draw this church to a reuerent adoration of his perſon; and to cauſe in them a greater care to embrace and obey his admonition. This appeareth by that twofold action which he auoucheth of himſelfe, to wit, his holding the ſeuen ſtarres in his right hand, and his walking in the midſt of the ſeuen golden candleſtickes: by the firſt whereof is ſignified his power in protecting and gouerning his miniſters. And by the ſecond is noted his preſence in the middeſt of his church, guiding and bleſſing his miniſters with all the members thereof. As if he had sayd: If I be he that haue power to protect and gouerne; that am present also to blesse and direct both ministers and people: then my admonitions are to be reuerenced and obeyed.

In this preface note two special points. First, that Christ here againe repeateth that which was before deliuered touching his presence in his church, and his mightie power and prouidence ouer the same in protecting, guiding, and blessing both minister and people. By which reputation hee would giue vs to vnderstand, the special weight and moment of this point, to wit, that it ought to be ingrauen in the harts of euery one in Gods church. And indeed till we be persuaded thereof, wee shall neuer learne religion soundly. The ground of true religion is this: To take the true God for our God. And Christ Iesus for our redemer: and it consisteth not in a swimming notion hereof in the braine, but in the sure persuasion of the heart, which we neuer haue till we be resolued both of Christs presence with vs: and of his prouidence ouer vs; for our blessing and defence.

II. point. In this preface also note: that the persuasion of Christs presence and speciall prouidence in his church, is a notable meanes to draw vs on to all good duties; for thereby Christ would persuade both the ministers and people of Ephesus, to receiue and embrace this his Epistle. And no doubt he that is indeed persuaded hereof, cannot but bee moued to walke before God in all holinesse and obedience: as did Enoch, Abraham, and all the godly patriarkes. Thus much for the preface.

Verse. 2. I know thy workes and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not forbeare them which are euill, and hast examined them which say they are Apostles and are not, and hast found them liers.

Here beginneth the second part of this Epistle, to wit, the proposition; containing the substance and matter of the whole Epistle. This proposition hath two points. First, a commendation of this church, in the second and third verses. Secondly, a rebuke and reprehension, in the fourth verse. The commendation is first generall in these words: I know thy workes. Then more particular, for special duties & actions, in the words following, and thy labour and patience, &c. For the first, I know thy workes: many doe expound this of workes of mercie and liberalitie: but that wil not so well stand; for he saith to euerie church, I know thy workes; and yet some of them are blamed for want of these good workes. By workes then is meant, the wayes, that is, the practises and dealings of the whole church: as well of ministers as people, in all their affaires. Also by knowledge here we must vnderstand a knowledge that goeth with application, as may appeare by comparing this with the fourth verse, whither it hath relation: for thus they must go, I know thy workes, and approue of them: and yet I haue somthing against thee. So that his meaning is, I know thy workes, that is, all thy wayes and dealings in thy life and conuersation are manifest vnto me, and I do generally approue of them.

Here first in this testimonie of his knowledge, Christ ministreth a remedie against secret sinnes and offences. The theefe, the murtherer, and adulterer wait for the night wherein to attempt their shamefull practises: The tradesman in secret falsifyeth his weights, and mingleth his wares: among most men fraud, oppression and iniustice do abound: and all because they thinke, that if men see not, all is well: as Dauid saith the wicked man saith, God shall not see, he will not regard. Psa. 94.7. But if men could thinke and bee persuaded of this, that Christ seeth and knoweth all their wayes, it would cause them to make conscience not onely of grosse sinnes, but euen of their hidden and secret offences.

Secondly, whereas this knowledge is ioyned with approbation, it may be demanded how this can stand with the iustice of God, to approue of that which is not answerable to the tenour of his law, as the best workes of the most righteous man are not, beeing stained with some corruption, Isay. 64. 6. Answ. The Gospell, which is another part of Gods wil, reuealeth more vnto vs than euer the law could do: namely, that if a man bee in Christ, to him there is no condemnation; and that God will accept his true desire and endeuour to please him for the the deed it selfe, 2. Cor. 8.12. And thus according to the tenour of the Gospell Christ approueth of their workes in this place, though they were not able to abide the rigor of his law. But a Papist will here reason thus: If a righteous mans workes bee approued of God, then they are no sinnes (for God will not approue of any thing that is sinfull) and if his workes be no sinnes, then he may fulfill the law; and so bee iustified by his workes. Answ. That which Christ approueth simply, hath no sinne in it; but here he onely approueth of their workes in part, namely, so farre foorth as they came from the work of his spirit in them: but as they proceed from the will of the worker, which is in part corrupt, they are not free from the staine of sinne; and so he approueth them not. Againe, workes of grace are approued of Christ with the pardon of sinne: for accepting of the person, he remitteth the faults that be in his good workes, and so onely approueth his own worke in him. And so here we must conceiue of his approbation of their workes, to wit, as proceeding from his spirit, and hauing the faults thereof remitted in his owne merit.

The speciall commendation of this church is for particular actions: The first whereof is diligent labour: which is an excellent worke especally in a minister of Gods word, to be painefull in his particular calling, for the faithfull instruction and godly regiment of his particular charge. Hence Paule saith, 1. Tim. 5. 17. He that laboureth in the word and doctrine is principally worthy double honor. And herein Paul matcheth, yea preferreth himselfe before other Apostles, That hee laboured more abundantly in the ministery of the Gospell than they all, 1. Cor. 15.10. Hence we learne The Vse. that the worke of the ministerie, if it be done as it ought, is a worke full of great paines and labour, contrary to the common opinion of men, who thinke that the life of the minister is full of ease, and his calling a matter of nothing, such as may be done with the turning of the hand: but here the iudgement of Christ is other wayes, who vseth not thus to approue a light or idle worke.

Secondly, this commendation of diligence in the minister must admonish all christians that desire to be approoued of Christ, to giue all diligence to learne and know the will of God that they may do the same. And here a common fault is to be reproued: many will heare, but where is their labour to grow in knowledge & in grace? that is wanting: which is the cause of such fruitlesse hearing as is common in the world. For earthly things men refuse no paines: but Gods heauenly knowledge and graces are not regarded. What a shame is this that men should bestow their strength and wit about base and transitorie things, and yet neglect the main good which concernes their soules for euer.

Thirdly, the ministers diligence in teaching, must prouoke conscience of obedience in the hearers; that is the end of his worke, without this hee spends his strength in vaine; and therefore with the Apostle they must indeuour in all things to keepe a good conscience before God and all men, Act. 24.16.

The second thing which Christ here commends, is patience in bearing the crosse, which doth vsually accompanie the Gospell of Christ. And this indeed is praise worthy in the angel of this church: for herein he goeth before sundry worthy prophets: Ieremie was maruellous impatient, for the mocking of the people: (d) And though Ionas had beene schooled in the whales belly, yet when all things went not according to his mind in the destruction of Niniuie, he became exceeding discontent. (d) Ier. 20. 14, 15.

Herein must all the ministers of the The Vse. Gospell become followers of the Angell of this church. While they labour in the Gospell of God, they must possesse their soules with patience, and make knowne to all men their meeke and mild spirit. Yea euerie christian in the profession of religion must learne to practise this duty. Luk. 8.16. The good ground receiueth the seed, and bringeth forth fruit: but how? with patience: Neither can wee possibly attaine to eternall life, vnlesse we arme our selues with patience to beare the crosse: for whosoeuer will liue godly must suffer affliction, 2. Tim. 3.12. Through many tribulations we must enter into heauen, Act. 14.22.

II. Againe here obserue how Christ ioyneth labour and patience together: this he doth for two causes. First, to let ys see the fruit of sinne which God hath set on the labour of man. Before the fall, the labour of mans calling was practised without all trouble or paines; but since mans fall, the best callings haue their crosses and vexations, which are the punishments of mans transgression. Secondly, to shew vs the malice of Sathan against the good progresse of the Gospell, Paul saith to the Thessalonians, He would haue come to them but Sathan did hinder him. He seeketh the trouble and sorrow of the minister, not onely by stirring vp persecution, but by keeping his people from profiting by his ministerie: and therefore euerie minister had need to take paines with patience in his calling. 1. The. 2. 18.

And as Christ ioyneth together labour and patience in the worke of the ministerie: so should euery christian after this direction ioyne patience with his paines in the duties of his particular calling, whether it be in church, commonwealth, or familie. For looke what is the estate of the minister in his place, such shall be the estate of euerie child of God in his. This therefore they must doe: first seeke to know the duties of their particular calling, and therein labour and take paines with all good conscience: Then considering the crosse doth accompany godly diligence, they must labour to ioyne patience with their diligence, for their continuance in weldoing euen vnder the crosse. And for attaining of this patience, they must set before them the promises of Gods blessing and protection while they so continue, not suffering themselues to be dismayed by any affliction. And if we shal thus walke in the duties of our particular places painefully and with patience, wee shall haue our commendation of Christ Iesus and his blessed reward, which farre surpasseth the praise of men and their rewards. But on contrarie, if we walke in our callings negligently, or else forsake them because of afflictions: or be impatient in our labour, we shall loose our reward, and vndergo the rebuke of Christ, which is worse than all outward euils that can befall vs.

The third speciall worke for which Christ commendeth this church is, seueritie shewed against wicked men: in these words, And how thou canst not beare them which are euill. By euill men, Hee meaneth such as liued offensiuely, and maintained manifest errors and heresies. These she could not beare, but iudged them as burdens: and therefore sought to disburden her selfe of them.

Hence we may gather, that it is a necessary thing for euery church to be purged of euill men. The church of God in all ages hath put in practise this worke. So soone as Cain had slaine his brother Abel, (a) God cast him out from his face, as appeareth by his owne complaint, to wit, from that particular place where Adam and his familie worshipped God. When false prophets and Idolaters did arise among the Israelits, the Lord commandeth (b) That they should be killed and taken from among them. And therefore hee saith to Ieremie (c) If thou turne and repent, I wil bring thee againe, and if thou take away the pretious from the vile thou shalt be according to my word. 1. Cor. 5. 4, 5, Paul commandeth in the name of Christ, that the incestuous man be deliuered vnto Sathan, the church purged of that old leauen, and that wicked man put from among them, verse. 13. Besides the euidence of these testimonies, some reasons may be added to prooue the necessitie of this separation. First, God will be worshipped in an holy manner; and they that worship God must be purged and sanctified; but euill men defile Gods worship, and therefore they ought to be seuered from the church. Secondly, lest the whole church be infected with the contagion of their doctrine, or the infection of their life: for as leauen sowreth the whole lumpe, so will euill men defile the whole church. Thirdly, they are burdens to the church, and therefore must be cast out. For the church should be eased of euery burden.

The Vse.

(a) Gen. 4. 14.

(b) Deu. 13. 7, 8.

(c) Ier. 15. 19.

This doctrine is the truth of God, & ought to be practised of Gods church. Whereby we may see a common fault in the most cōgregations among vs: wherein all that will are admitted not onely to the hearing of the word, but also vnto the Lords table, hand ouer head without restraint, as though euerie man were a good & sound christian: Whereas experience sheweth, that many be ignorant, many contemners of the Gospell, many Saboath breakers, drunkards and blas-

phemers, all which ought to bee barred from the ſacraments: and in that reſpect ſeuered from the church as burdens.

Secondly, hence we may gather, that Chriſt hath giuen to his church a power iudiciall, to ſuſpend euill men from the ſacraments, and to excommunicate them from the outward fellowſhip of the church: for els he would not haue commended this miniſter with his church for the execution of this power. The reaſons alledged to the contrarie, are of no force. I. Say they, the parable, Matth. 13. 30. alloweth the growing together of tares and wheate till harueſt: and therefore euill men muſt bee ſuffered in the church without ſeperation. Anſw. In that parable Chriſt ſpeaketh not of any particular purging of the church by Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction: but of the vniuerſall purging of his whole church by his holy Angels in the end of the world: for there the field doth not ſignifie any particular church, but the whole world: and the ſeruants are not men, but Angels, that muſt gather together all both good and bad in the end of the world, to the laſt iudgement. Againe they alledge, Luk. 14. 23, Compell them in the high wayes to come into the ſupper. Here (ſay they) all muſt bee brought in, but none muſt bee excluded the ſociety of the church. Anſ. Chriſt ſpeaketh not of compelling men vnto the ſacraments, but vnto the miniſterie of the word, wherto men muſt be cauſed to ſubiect themſelues: which hindereth nothing why the vngodly ſhould not be debarred from the ſacraments, which are the ſeale of Gods mercy in Chriſt, ordained onely for ſuch as repent and beleeue. Qu. Seeing this ſeparation muſt be made, how farre forth may wee conuerſe with thoſe that are openly euill & offenſiue either for life or doctrine? Anſ. Euill men muſt be conſidered diuers waies: firſt, as they be members of ſome commonwealth, of ſome citie or incorporation: ſecondly, as they are members of ſome particular church by tolleration. In the firſt regard, it is lawfull for vs to conuerſe with thē, I. for outward dealings and ciuile affairs, as bargaining, buying and ſelling, &c. II. we may maintaine outward ciuile peace with them. So (i) Rom. 12. 18 Paule commandeth the Romans (a) to haue peace with al men ſo much as in them lay: that is, ſo far as it would ſtand with faith & good conſcience. III. In this ciuile conuerſing with the wicked we muſt perform all duties of outward courteſie and loue vnto them, ſo far forth as it doth not diſhonor God, or hinder the good of the church. And therefore Paule commaundeth vs to be (a) ſoft and courteous, ſhewing all meekeneſſe vnto all men; euen to euill men, as the reaſon following ſheweth: For wee our ſelues were in time paſt vnwiſe, diſobedient, deceiued, &c. and then were we euill. (a) Tit. 3. 2. Verſe 3.

Secondly, conſider them as dwellers in the church, and members by permiſſion: and ſo we may liue with them in it: for we may not make a ſeparation from the church, becauſe wicked men are permitted therein. Chriſt liued among the Iewes, though their teachers and rulers were both heretickes and hypocrits: and yet wee muſt remember, that liuing among them, and beholding their wicked conuerſation, wee muſt not approoue of their vngodlineſſe, but bee grieued for the ſame, as righteous Lot was for the abhominations of Sodome, 2. Pet. 2. 7. Further, if it fall out by the negligence of the gouernours, that euill men bee admitted to the Sacraments, we muſt not for their companie refuſe to communicate: for our ſauior Chriſt liuing among the Iews communicated with them in their Sacraments and ſeruice of the Temple, though many of them were notorious both for wicked life and falſe doctrine. The reaſon is: for that another mans euill conſcience doth not defile our good conſcience: but wee may keepe a good conſcience in that action wherein the wicked is defiled. Now though wee may thus conuerſe with euill men, yet theſe two caueats muſt be obſerued, I. To haue no priuat companie with knowne and open euill perſons. This Paule expreſſely forbiddeth, ſaying: I haue written vnto you, that you companie not together: that is, in priuate and familiar manner. 1. Cor. 5. 10, 11 II. Wee muſt not ſhew ſpeciall familiaritie to euill perſons. God will not take the wicked by the hand, Iob. 8. 20. and we ſhould be followers of God. Therefore S. Iohn ſayth: If any man come vnto you, and bring not this doctrine, receiue him not into houſe, neither bid him God ſpeed. 2. Iohn. 9. Which muſt bee vnderſtood of ſpeciall familiaritie: for thereby we doe not onely performe outward dutie to the perſon, but alſo giue countenance to their ſinnes: which in any caſe wee muſt not doe. And thus wee ſee how to conuerſe with euill men.

The Vſe. Hereby all thoſe are iuſtly blamed which fit themſelues for the humors and diſpoſitions of al companies. This ought not to be. If any be knowne to be openly wicked, either for life or opinions, wee muſt not keepe priuate companie with them, or affoord them our ſpeciall familiaritie; but by withdrawing our ſelues from them, eaſe vs of ſuch burdens:

Our Sauiour Chriſt hauing commended this church for her ſeueritie againſt the wicked, in that ſhe could not endure them, doth prooue the ſame to bee true by two arguments. The firſt whereof is contained in theſe words: And haſt examined them, &c. to the end of the third verſe. The ſecond, in the ſixt verſe. For the firſt: it is taken from the ſharpe and round dealing of this church againſt euill men; and it hath two parts: Firſt, her diſcouerie of falſe Apoſtles, And haſt examined them which ſay they are Apoſtles, and are not, and haſt found them liers. Secondly, her oppoſing her ſelfe againſt them, being diſcouered, in the third verſe: Thou haſt ſuffered, and haſt patience, &c.

In their diſcouerie of theſe falſe Apoſtles note two ſpeciall points: firſt, that God hath giuen to particular churches the ſpirit of wiſedome, that is, the ſpirit of diſcerning: This appeareth by ſundry teſtimonies of Scripture, 1. *Cor.*2.15. The ſpirituall man, that is, hee which is endued with Gods holy Spirit, diſcerneth all things. And (a) Paule aſſumeth, That the faithfull Corinthians did diſcerne the Lords bodie: that is, ſee and put a great difference betweene the bread and wine in that ſacrament, and other common bread & wine: which none that want the ſpirit of God can doe. Againe, he biddeth them (b) proue themſelues whether they be in the faith or not: to giue vs to vnderſtand, that they had a gift of diſcerning, whereby they did know their owne eſtate, whether they were vnder the curſe, or vnder grace. And S. Iohn biddeth the Church to (c) trie the Spirits: that is, thoſe doctrines which men pretending the gifts of the ſpirit, did teach. And in this place this churches diſcouering of falſe Apoſtles, declareth plainely, that ſhee hath a gift to diſcerne who bee ſent of God to teach his church, and who not. And hence the godly learned in the church are ſayd to haue their ſences exerciſed to diſcerne both good and euill, Heb.5.14. And in this regard, the churches of God differ from all other companies of men. For vnleſſe men be of Gods church, they want this gift of diſcerning ſpirituall things that differ, as true Apoſtles and falſe, good and bad, truth and falſhood, &c.

(a) 1.Cor.11.29.

(c) 1.Ioh.4.1.

The Vſe. Hence we may gather, that the church of God hath a gift to diſcerne which is a true church, and which is not: for the church can diſcerne whether a man bee a true Apoſtle, or not: and by the ſame gift it may diſcerne the ſtate of any particular church. Whence alſo it followeth that wee may eaſily ſee whether the church of England bee a true church, or not: It pleaſeth ſome to call it into queſtion, as it now ſtandeth; and they auouch, That it is no church of God, that there are no true Miniſters, no true preaching, or right adminiſtration of the Sacraments in it: and that theſe things with vs are illuſions of Sathan, and our church his ſynagogue. But that ours is a true church of God is thus prooued: The churches of Germanie, Fraunce, Scotland, and Italie, that haue receiued the Goſpell, are the churches of God: and they haue the gift of diſcerning which is a true church of God, and which is not. Now they giue the right hands of fellowſhip vnto vs, and reuerence our church as the church of God. To whoſe teſtimonie we muſt rather cleaue, than to the opinion of a few priuate men, and ſo reſolue our ſelues, that wee are the true church of God.

Secondly, hence we may gather, that the church of God hath a gift to diſcerne ſcripture from that which is no ſcripture. The papiſts ſay the church indeed hath this gift: but it is by counſell and commiſſion frō the church of Rome; which is a meere forgerie. For the church of Epheſus, which could diſcerne of falſe Apoſtles, could no doubt by the ſame gift diſcerne of the bookes of God, and that without counſell from the church of Rome; for at this time when Iohn writ, it was a more famous church than the church of Rome, and therefore went not thither for counſell.

II. point.

II. point. In what things this diſcerning of falſe Apoſtles doth conſiſt: it is a iudiciall action of the church, conſiſting in two things here noted: Firſt, in examination of falſe doctrine and falſe teachers: ſecondly, in condemnation afterward. The examination of them is ſet downe in theſe words: And haſt examined them that ſay they are Apoſtles, and are not. Their condemning or ſentence giuing, in the words following, And haſt found them liers.

For the firſt: examination is a gift of God to his church, and was here vſed for the triall of falſe Apoſtles. Que. How may any church trie a falſe teacher? Anſw. This is a point of large diſcourſe: but the heads of true examination are theſe.

Firſt, that church or that man that would rightly examine a falſe teacher, muſt prepare himſelfe thereunto after this manner: he muſt looke that he haue a meeke ſpirit and an humble heart; for God reuealeth his will, not to the proud, but to the meeke and lowly: and as Iſay ſayth, to them that are of a contrite ſpirit, Iſay.57.15. And in this humbling of himſelfe, a man muſt renounce his owne naturall wit and reaſon, and become nothing in himſelfe but euen a foole, in reſpect of his owne conceit. Alſo he muſt vnfainedly pray to God, that hee would reueale vnto him his truth. Aske (ſayth Chriſt) and it ſhall be giuen you; euen (a) the holy ghoſt, vnto them that deſire of the father. And S. Iames ſayth: (b) If any man lack wiſdome, let him aske of God, which giueth to all men liberally.

(a) Luk.11.13

(b) Iames 1.5.

Secondly, after preparation hee muſt labour to know throughly what the falſe teachers are, and what be their opinions, with the grounds and foundations thereof; wherein they agree, and wherein they differ from the truth of God, maintained by the church: for it is a foule ouerſight to miſconceiue the ſtate of the aduerſaries queſtion, by propounding it otherwiſe than they hold, as it falleth out with many in the handling of controuerſies.

Thirdly, due proofe muſt bee made, whether the aduerſaries doctrine bee of men or of God. This is Gods commandement, 1. Iohn.4.1. Proue the ſpirits, whether they be of God, or not. And for triall hereof, we muſt haue recourſe vnto the word of God; it muſt be Iudge in this cauſe, Iſa.8. verſ.20, To the law and to the teſtimonies, if they ſpeake not according to this word, it is becauſe there is no light in them. Iohn. 5.39, Search the Scriptures, for in them yee looke to haue eternall life, and they are they which teſtifie of mee. Who is ſo fit to iudge in the matters of God, as God himſelfe? and ſo hee doth in his written word, of all doctrine and opinions in religion. The Scriptures ſhew whether the doctrine examined be directly gathered thence, and by iuſt conſequent, or not.

Fourthly, ſerious conſideration muſt bee had of the faith and liues of the teachers examined: for a falſe teacher by Gods iuſt iudgement is vſually a wicked liuer. And therefore Chriſt ſayth: (a) yee ſhall know them by their fruits: if they bee throughly examined, ſuch they will appeare, howſoeuer for a time they may bleare the eyes of men: as the hyſtories of the church in many famous heretickes doe plainely declare.

(a) Mat. 7.16.

The ſecond braunch of this diſcouerie, is ſentence giuing, in theſe wordes: And haſt found them liers. The church here giueth out a ſharpe and ſeuere ſentence againſt them, ſhee calleth them falſe Apoſtles and liers; and yet ſhe ſinneth not, for Chriſt commendeth her for it. Though to raile or taunt cannot beſeem any, yet magiſtrats and miniſters in their places may giue out ſeuere ſpeeches againſt offendors in token of deteſtation to their ſinnes, and not offend. Thus Iohn called the Scribes and Phariſees a generation of vipers, Matth.3.7: and our Sauiour Chriſt called Herod a foxe, Luk.13.32. and Paule called the Galathians fooles, Gal.3.1. And in this place the church calleth theſe falſe teachers lyers, which is very much: for therein ſhee accuſeth them of three things: Firſt, of teaching that which was falſe indeed: ſecondly, that they know it to be falſe, and ſo ſinned of knowledge. Thirdly, that they did it of malice, with intent to blind the eyes of the Church, and to deceiue the people.

The Vſe. In this diſcouerie, wee may obſerue the iuſt accompliſhment of Paules prophecie, *Act.*20.29,30. namely, that there ſhould riſe vp among the Epheſians grieuous wolues, and men ſpeaking per-uerse things: and such were these false Apostles, who after examination were found liers.

Againe, seeing in the dayes of this Apostle Iohn, men durst presume to claim Apostolicke authoritie, and call themselues Apostles when they were not: no maruell if the Pope of Rome sixe hundred yeares after did challenge to himselfe to be Peters successour, and to haue Apostolicke authoritie: and that they dare now auouch some bookes to bee scripture which are not; as also bring in their traditions & vnwritten verities to bee receiued and obeyed equally with Gods word.

Verse 3. Thou hast suffered, and hast patience, and for my names sake hast laboured.

Here our Sauiour Christ declareth how this Minister and church of Ephesus opposed themselues against false teachers after their discouerie. The manner we shall see in handling the points particularly as they lie in order. Thou hast suffered, or, Thou hast borne a burden: for the word signifieth to be pressed downe vnder a great burden. This burden was the troubles which false Apostles brought vpon them after they were discouered, partly by open affliction and persecution, partly by the spreading of their hereticall and schismaticall doctrine. These false teachers were Ebion, Cerinthus, Marcion, and such like, who in the dayes of Iohn troubled this church, as hystories do shew.

Here wee may obserue, that it is Gods will, that the best churches should be troubled by wicked men and hereticall teachers, who both by false doctrine and persecution become grieuous burdens. This the Lord permits for weighty causes, I. That true beleeuers may bee excited more constantly to embrace the syncere doctrine of the Gospell: and therefore Iude (a) most worthily exhorts the Christians in his time to fight for the common faith. II. That professors may be tried whether they soundly hold the doctrine of the Gospell, or not. 1. Cor. 11. 19. It is meete (sayth Paule) that there should bee heresies in the Church, that they which are sound in the faith, and approoued, may bee knowne. III. That God may execute his iudgements vpon wicked men and hypocrites that haue not loued his truth, reuealed vnto them, 2. Thess. 2. 10, 11. God gaue them vp to strange illusions to beleeue lies, because they haue not loued his truth. For many know the word, that loue it not.

(a) Iud. 3.

This must teach vs to take heed of a common scandale in the world, which is, to be offended at religion, because there be in the church schismes and heresies: which come not from the Gospell, but from the malice of Sathan, who soweth his tares among the Lords wheate. Wee must consider, that it is the will of God there should be such euils in his church; and therefore should labour to bee so farre from offence, that hereby wee bee rather prouoked with more cheerefulnesse and courage to loue and embrace religion. The Vse.

And hast patience, and for my name hast suffered, &c. Here is set downe the dealing of this church against these false Apostles in all their persecutions. But first note the coherence of this vertue with the former: Thou hast suffered trouble, and hast had patience. Quest. How can these stand together? It is against mans nature in trouble to be patient: for troubles and afflictions make men discontent, and to fret against God and man. Answ. They stand not by nature, but by grace, Rom. 5. vers. 4. Tribulation bringeth forth patience: namely, to all those that haue receiued to beleeue in Christ; for to them God giueth the spirit of meekenesse in their troubles, shedding his loue into their hearts, whereby they are enabled to suffer any thing for his name, euen with ioy.

And hast patience. This is the first means whereby this church opposed her selfe against the false Apostles: they troubled her two wayes; by persecution, and by false doctrine. Now by patience this church opposeth her selfe against their persecutions. And indeed that is the most excellent meanes for any man or any church to oppose themselues against their enemies, and to vanquish them: for hereby they shall stop their mouths, and if it bee possible win them to their faith and religion.

whom we liue; or any enemie that ſhall trouble vs, either by oppreſsion, or hereticall doctrines: We muſt not render taunt for taunt, and abuſe for abuſe, but labour for patience, not in bearing with their ſinnes (that may not bee) but in a meeke enduring of their iniuries and wrongs whereby they trouble vs. Thus ſhall we ſtoppe their mouths, and ſoonest ouercome them.

And for my names ſake haſt laboured. Here Chriſt ſetteth downe the ſecond meanes whereby this church oppoſeth her ſelfe againſt the ſpreading of falſe doctrine by theſe falſe Apoſtles, which was the ſecond way whereby they became a burden vnto her. The meaning of the words is this, that they had taken much paines to maintaine the glory of God, and the true doctrine of Chriſt Ieſus, labouring therein as much as the falſe Apoſtles did to broach their damnable hereſies.

Here wee are taught a ſecond duty how we are to oppoſe our ſelues againſt all hereticall and ſciſmaticall teachers: namely, as they labour to publiſh their falſe doctrine; ſo muſt wee endeuor to maintaine the glorie of God and his true religion. Hereunto a twofold labour is required: partly of the miniſter, and partly of the people. The labour of the miniſter ſtands in theſe things principally. I. He muſt endenour by reading and ſtudie to furniſh himſelfe with the true knowledge of the foundation and ſubſtance of the Goſpel & true religion, that hee may be able ſoundly and plainly to teach the ſame. For this cauſe S. Iohn is commanded to eat the little booke, Re. 10. 9, 10, which was as it were by ſtudie and meditation to haue the ſame digeſted and ſetled in his heart. Hence Malachie (a) ſaith The prieſts lippes ſhould preſerue wiſedome, and thither ſhould the people come for inſtruction. And euerie ſcribe taught of God muſt haue ſtore in the treaſury of his hart, like a good houſholder, Matth. 13. 52. ly, he muſt deliuer the whole will and counſell of God, concerning ſaluation, truly and diſtinctly vnto his people, as it is propounded in the bookes of the Prophets and Apoſtles. This Paul commendeth by his owne example, Act. 20. 27. teſtifying vnto this Church that He had taught them all the will of God, and kept backe nothing which he was commanded to deliuer vnto them. II. Hee muſt labour to diſcerne and bee able to diſcouer falſe teachers vnto the people; that hee may not onely know them himſelfe, but alſo cauſe the church to take notice of them, Tit. 1 9. Paul requireth that the teacher in the church, Be able to conuince the gainſaiers to his truth. In this diſcouerie he muſt do two things. Firſt, detect their hereticall doctrins. Secondly, their wicked maners. Thus dealt our Sauiour Chriſt in his owne perſon liuing in the church of the Iewes, with the Scribes and Phariſes: he did detect vnto the people their falſe interpretations of the law, Mat. 5. 21, to the end. And alſo their wicked liues and damnable hypocriſie, Mat. 23. 3, 4. &c. to the end. And Saint Paul in all his Epiſtles, laboureth to diſcouer the wicked liues, and to confute the hereticall opinions of the falſe Apoſtles. IV. Hee muſt endeuour that the doctrine of the goſpell thus publiſhed, may edifie. This is the end of all teaching, as Paule ſheweth, 1. Cor. 14. throughout the whole chapter. Now it doth edifie, when it is ſo applied to the hearers, that thereby they are wonne to Chriſt, ſuffering themſelues to be reformed by it in heart and life, & ſo made fit for the kingdome of God. V. He muſt be careful in his own perſon to become a patterne of the doctrine of the Goſpell which hee teacheth, that ſo the people may haue a double light to follow. This is a notable meanes in the miniſter to make men loue the Goſpell, and the neglect hereof cauſeth many to contemne and deſpiſe the ſame. VI. Laſtly, he muſt bee diligent in praying for his owne and other particular churches of God, that they may know, beleeue, and obey the ſame doctrine which is taught them out of Gods word. Thus did Paul as wee may ſee in his particular Epiſtles pray for euery church: that by the bleſsing of the ſpirit, they might embrace and obey the Goſpell of Chriſt, Phil. 1. 4. 9, 10. Col. 1. 9, 10, 11.

(a) Mal. 2. 7.

The people alſo for the name of Chriſt and his religion, muſt vndergo a threefold labour. I. Euery one muſt ſee that himſelfe know and beleeue the true and ſincere doctrine of the Goſpell. This Chriſt inioyneth to all, in this commandement, Repent and beleeue, which none can do vnleſſe they firſt know and vnderſtand derſtand the doctrine thereof: and therfore euery one muſt do as Mary did, for which Chriſt ſo commends her: namely, lay aſide matters of leſſer moment, & giue our ſelues to heare and learne the doctrine of Chriſt, Luke. 10. 39. 42. II. Euery one muſt vſe all good meanes that knowledge of religion which himſelfe hath receiued, bee conueyed to others. And indeed if we truly beleeue, we cannot containe our ſelues, but muſt needs teach others. For as Chriſt ſaith, He (a) that drinketh of the water of life, out of his belly ſhall flow riuers of water of life, ſtreaming out for the good of others. Que. How ſhould priuat men conuey their knowledge vnto others? Anſw. I. All maiſters and gouernours of families are bound in conſcience to teach thoſe that are vnder them the maine points and grounds of true religion: his place requireth gifts, and God lookes for increaſe. For euery chriſtian family ſhould be a little church, as it is ſayd of the houſe of Aquila and Priſcilla, 1. Corinth. 16. 19. II. Euerie man in his place muſt labour to conuey that knowledge he hath vnto his neighbour, yea to his enemies. The Iewes (b) would compaſſe ſea and land to make a man a proſelite: And Idolaters at this day will trauell farre and neere to make a man of their profeſſion. Much more therefore muſt all true chriſtians labour to conuey their knowledge to others, ſo to winne them vnto Chriſt. III. Euerie man is to edifie thoſe that bee members of the ſame church, in theſe three things: faith, hope, and loue, as Iude notably exhorteth in the end of his Epiſtle, Edifie one another in your moſt holie faith, verſe. 20. Haue compaſſion of ſome in putting difference, and others ſaue with feare in pulling them out of the fire, ver. 22. 23. IV. Euery priuat man muſt profeſſe and defend the true religion of Chriſt againſt all the enemies thereof. 1. Pet. 3. 15. Be readie alwayes to giue an anſwer to euery man that aſketh you a reaſon of the hope that is in you. And this confeſſion muſt be, not onely in word, but in deed. For by a blameleſſe and holy conuerſation euerie chriſtian holdeth foorth the word of life, Phil. 2, 15, 16.

(b) Mat. 23. 15

The Vſe. Seeing the maintenance of true religion is ſo excellent a worke: wee muſt be admoniſhed euery one in our place, to take paines in all the duties that belong vnto vs: that by vs Chriſts religion may be furthered. For Gods church is not called the piller of truth, onely becauſe the miniſter thereof maintaineth Gods truth: but alſo becauſe euery member of the church is as a piller in his place to maintaine and profeſſe the true doctrine of Chriſt for his glory. Beſides, this is a duty of the firſt table, and therefore we muſt haue more ſpeciall care for the performance thereof. And thus wee ſee the two meanes whereby the church of Epheſus oppoſed her ſelfe againſt falſe teachers. And haſt not fainted. Here Chriſt ſetteth downe in what manner this church laboured to maintaine his true religion, and thereby his honor and glory: namely, by conſtancie and perſeuerance in labour. This is an excellent vertue, and a notable example for vs to follow: for we through Gods goodneſſe haue the true religion of Chriſt among vs, and for many yeares ſundrie among vs haue maintained the ſame againſt all enemies, though not without ſome trouble and danger. Now this which hath beene done is nothing, vnleſſe we hold on our good courſe conſtantly, and labour vnto death in the maintenance thereof. This exhortation is the more neceſſary, becauſe we know not how long we ſhal enioy the goſpel with peace; for vſually after long peace God trieth his by perſecution: neither know we by what meanes of triall God will exerciſe vs. Therefore as we now profeſſe the Goſpell, ſo let vs continue conſtant therein, and not turne with time or ſtate: for then wee looſe our cõmendation at Chriſts hands. And thus much of the commendation of this church for her vertues.

Theſe words containe the ſecond part of the propoſition of this Epiſtle, to wit, a ſharpe and ſeuere reproofe of this church for decay in grace; as will appeare in the opening of the words. Neuertheleſſe I haue ſomewhat againſt thee, Here Chriſt ſpeaketh as a Iudge vnto this church, and to the miniſter thereof, and layeth this action vnto their charge: that they

they had left their firſt loue, that is, that loue which they bare to God, and his religion, and to their brethren, at that time whē they were firſt called vnto the profeſſion of the goſpell. This loue they are ſayd to haue left, not as though they had quite loſt it, but onely becauſe they ſuffered it to decay, and to waxe cold in good workes. But ſome will ſay they are before commended for their zeale and labour for Gods glory; and for their ſeueritie againſt falſe teachers: how then had they left their firſt loue? Anſw. At this time when Chriſt doth thus reproue them, their loue was commendable; but yet it was nothing in regard of that which they had at their firſt conuerſion.

The Vſe. If Chriſt haue ſomething againſt this church for leauing her firſt loue; then no doubt he hath ſomething againſt the church of England, and againſt vs at this day; howſoeuer wee may perſuade our ſelues that we be high in his fauour, yet we are in the like, or a worſe eſtate than this church now was: for a great part of the body of our church hath left off their firſt loue: and the greateſt part hath no loue at all. That many haue left their firſt loue is too too euident. For ſuch as in Queene Maries time were content to ſuffer much for the Goſpell, as the hiſtories of our church do ſhew, after they inioyed a little quietneſſe became meere worldlings, as their liues haue teſtified afterward. And in ſuch congregations where the word hath long bin preached, this is too apparant that men who for the ſpace of twentie, of ten, or ſeuen yeares haue ſhewed feruent loue to Chriſt and his Goſpell, and to their brethren, do now fall away and ſhew none at all. He that hath but halfe an eye, may ſee many for a yeare or two very forward and zealous in religion, who ſoone after ſuffer pleaſures, profits, or preferments to drawe them quite away: ſome I confeſſe through the mercie of God are free from this decay. But there is yet a more grieuous fault among vs: for the greateſt part of our people haue no loue at all. Theſe are the dayes whereof (a) Matth. 24. 12. Chriſt ſayd (a) loue ſhould waxe cold. And (b) 2. Tim. 3. 2. whereof Paul ſayd, Men ſhould be (b) louers of themſelues: for take the moſt congregations where the Goſpell hath bene long preached, yet you ſhall find that the hearers are neither bettered for knowledge nor for obedience, but remaine ſtill as ignorant and profane as euer they were. This argueth that they haue no loue of God in their hearts, though they haue a formall profeſſion of his name in their mouth: For where the loue of God is, there moſt needs bee increaſe in knowledge, in grace, and in obedience. Againe, ſee how men generally walke in their callings, and therin behold a meere defect of loue. All the paines they take is for their priuat gaine and pleaſure; no regard is had of Gods glory, of the maintenance of true religiō, and of the good of their brethren: herein their owne conſciences ſhall be the witneſſes. So that generally this may be ſaid, We haue no loue at all. What an action then ſhall we thinke hath Chriſt againſt vs? It muſt needs bee grieuous; and ſo our caſe fearefull and dangerous. If an earthly prince and potentat had an action againſt vs, and his caſe were good, it would make vs looke about vs, yea to tremble and quake, and to be at our wits end. Behold, not a worldly prince but the king of heauen and earth hath a matter againſt vs, iuſt and grieuous: oh how ſhould this moue vs to ſearch our ſelues, to trie our eſtate, and to humble our ſelues vpon the knees of our heart before his maieſtie. We may not imagine that this charge of Chriſt doth not concerne vs: the concluſion of this Epiſtle ſhewes it belongs to all that haue eares to heare. And therefore we ſhould labour to preuent Gods iudgement, by iudging our ſelues for our decay and want of loue.

Againe, this rebuke of Chriſt for decay of loue, ſhould teach vs to labour for increaſe in loue to God and to our brethren; adding grace to grace in our harts, as we adde day vnto day in our liues, that ſo our loue may obound: read 1. Theſ. 4. 1. 9, 10, where Paule vrgeth this dutie at large: he confeſſeth they did loue one another, and yet beſeecheth them to increaſe therein. Phil. 3. 13. 4. in Pauls perſon we haue a worthie preſident, which we muſt follow, if wee thinke to come whither he is gone before: though hee had gone farre in the loue of God, yet he laboured to perfection, and therefore conſidered not that which was paſt, as reſting ſting in it, but rather how farre hee was too ſhort, that ſo he might vſe meanes to increaſe in loue, and in all other good graces, till hee come to perfection. A chriſtian mans life is a way that leadeth to heauen, wherein we once ſetting foot, muſt euer go forward, and not ſtand ſtill or turne backe, leſt we neuer come there. The ſtate of a chriſtian is like vnto a child, which ſtill groweth till it come to a perfect ſtrength: and ſo muſt euerie child of God labour to grow in the graces of God, till they bee perfect men in Chriſt: For if they ſtand ſtill, Chriſt hath ſomething againſt them.

The Rhemiſts in their annotations abuſe this place, to proue that a man may quite fall away from grace. Therefore to cleare this text, and to confirme our hearts in the truth of Gods word, this queſtion muſt be ſcanned, Whether a man may quite fall away from grace? Anſw. Grace in Scripture is taken two wayes: Firſt, for that fauour of God whereby hee accepteth of ſome for his children in Chriſt. This is the firſt grace and the fountaine of all other: and taking grace in this ſenſe, I ſay, that the ſignes of grace and the ſenſe thereof in the heart, may be loſt: But the fauour of God it ſelfe cannot bee loſt of them that truly beleeue. When an earthly father is diſpleaſed with his child for ſome notorious crime, hee will turne the ſignes of his fauour into ſignes of diſpleaſure, and ſhew the ſame partly by words, and partly by ſtripes: and yet he ſtill continueth his father, and holdeth him for his ſonne, without any purpoſe to diſinherit him: Euen ſo God dealeth with his children; for their ſins and corruptions, he will turne away his louing countenance from them, and change the ſignes of his fauour into anger and diſpleaſure; when as yet the good purpoſe of their adoption is not altered, but remaineth firme for euer: and God is ſtill their father, though an angrie father through the prouocation of their ſinnes. Secondly, grace in Scripture is taken for the gifts of grace which are beſtowed on them that beleeue in Chriſt. Theſe gifts of grace be of two ſorts, ſome more principall, of abſolute neceſſitie vnto ſaluation, without which none can bee ſaued; as faith, and alſo hope, and loue, which proceed from faith. There be others alſo leſſe principall, which be very profitable and requiſit, yet not abſolutly needfull vnto ſaluation: As the feeling of Gods fauor, alacritie in prayer, & ſenſe of ioy and comfort in the holy Ghoſt. Theſe leſſe principal graces may quite be loſt. The principall graces alſo may be decayed, leſſened, and couered, in regard of operation, euen in Gods children: but quite extinguiſhed they cannot be, for God vpholdeth them by perſeuerance; where faith, hope, & loue are once truly wrought by Gods ſpirit, they are neuer wholly or finally taken away, but onely in part, and in ſenſe and feeling for a time. This anſwer is agreeable to this text, for the church of Epheſus is here blamed, not for quite looſing her loue; but becauſe ſhe had left her firſt loue, ſuffering it to decay and waxe leſſe than it was at their firſt conuerſion.

And becauſe this doctrine is oppugned earneſtly, not onely by the church of Rome, but alſo by ſome churches and ſchooles of the Proteſtants: I will firſt ſhew the truth hereof out of Gods word, and then ſcan the cheefe reaſons that are brought againſt it. That grace cannot bee wholly and finally loſt, theſe reaſons proue: I. Matth. 16.18. The promiſe is made to Peter, and in him to all the faithfull: That vpon that faith which he profeſſed, Chriſt would build his temple, and the gates of hell ſhould not preuaile againſt it. Which laſt words muſt be marked, for they intimate, that the diuell with his adherents would ſhew much force and violence againſt the faith of the elect, but yet they ſhould neuer get the victory, or ouercome it wholly. II. Matth. 24.24, Chriſt foretelling that falſe Prophets ſhould come, ſayth: They ſhould ſeduce, if it were poſſible, the very elect. Where he taketh this for graunted, that the elect, albeit they may bee aſſaulted greeuouſly, yet they can neuer be wholly or finally drawne away from their faith. III. Iohn. 10.27,28, My ſheepe heare my voyce (ſayth Chriſt) and I know them, and they follow me: and I giue vnto them eternall life, and they ſhall neuer periſh. To this they anſwer: It is true, they ſhall neuer periſh, ſo long as they remaine the ſheepe of Chriſt. But that cauill is cut off in the next wordes: Neither ſhall any plucke them out of my hands, my father which gaue them me, is greater than all, and none is able to plucke them out of my fathers hands: And therefore neither the deuill, nor the world, nor the fleſh, can by any temptation draw the ſheep of Chriſt from their faith, and make them to be no ſheepe. IV. Reaſon. Iohn. 3. 36. Hee that beleeueth in Chriſt hath eternall life. They ſay hee hath it in hope, and no otherwiſe. I anſwere; if they haue it in hope, they (a) Rom. 5. 5. ſhall neuer periſh: (a) For hope maketh not aſhamed. V. Reaſon. Rom. 8. 30. Whom hee predeſtinat, them alſo he called: and whom hee called, them alſo he iuſtified: and whom hee iuſtified, them alſo he glorified. Thoſe which are elected, called, and iuſtified by faith, muſt needs be glorified, and therefore cannot fall away finally: for ſuch ſhall neuer be glorified. And in the end of the chapter, verſ. 38. hee addeth; That neither death, nor life, Angels, principalities, nor powers, nor any thing els can ſeparate vs, viz. the faithfull, from the loue of God, which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord. But if the faithfull might fall away finally, then they might be ſeuered from the loue of God. VI. Reaſon. Rom. 11. 29. The gifts of Gods calling (that is, the peculiar gifts that pertaine to ſaluation) are without repentance. They ſay it is true, God indeed neuer repenteth him of his gifts: but yet a man may periſh and fall away, becauſe he may refuſe and reiect Gods grace giuen vnto him. This anſwere is friuolous, maintaining this abſurditie, that the powerfull will of God ſhould be broght vnder the ſilly will of the creature: if man could repell Gods grace giuen vnto him, then ſhould mans will take place, and Gods will bee made fruſtrate and void. VII. Reaſon. 1. Iohn. 3. 9. Whoſoeuer is borne of God ſinneth not, becauſe his ſeede remaineth in him: neither can hee ſinne, becauſe he is borne of God. How is that true, for chap. 1. 10, Hee that ſayth he hath not ſinned, maketh God a lyar, and his word is not in him? Anſw. The place muſt bee vnderſtood thus: He that is borne of God ſinneth not, that is, with full conſent, and with all his hart. Sinne doth not raigne in him: for the regenerate man conſiſteth of two parts; fleſh and ſpirit: he ſinneth not as hee is ſpirit, that is, regenerate; but as hee is fleſh and ſinfull. His will ſinneth not as it is ſpirituall, but as it is carnall. The papiſts ſay, Indeed he ſinneth not, ſo long as he continueth to be borne of God. But this ſhift is cut off by the wordes of the text, Neither can be ſinne, becauſe the ſeede of grace, euen the word of God abideth in him. This place plainely proueth, euen in the iudgement of the Papiſts, that the child of God cannot wholly or finally fall from grace. They ſay it is a hard place, and indeed they cannot anſwere to it. VIII. Reaſon. If a man may finally fall from grace, then may hee bee wholly cut off from Chriſt: for grace is neuer wholly loſt, till a man bee quite cut off from Chriſt. But it cannot bee, that a member of Chriſt can be quite cut off: for then it ſhould follow, that one and the ſame man muſt bee often ioyned to Chriſt; namely, ſo often as hee falleth by ſinne, if he would be ſaued. Whereupon this would alſo follow, that one and the ſame man muſt be often baptized: for Baptiſme is the Sacrament of inciſion, the meanes of admiſsion into the church, and the ſeale of our vnion with Chriſt. But Rebaptization may not bee admitted. The church of God denieth it vpon this ground, becauſe a man is onely once borne of God. IX. Reaſon. Chriſt teacheth vs to pray thus, Leade vs not into temptation: that is, ſuffer not Sathan and ſinne wholly to preuaile againſt vs, and finally to vanquiſh vs. This petition being taught by Chriſt, muſt needes be lawfull, and according to Gods will; and therefore hereunto, as to euery lawfull petition, belong theſe two things: Firſt, Gods commaund to make it: Secondly, his promiſe to aſſure vs, it ſhall bee graunted. Whereby this is euident: That there is in Gods word a promiſe, aſſuring euery child of God, that hee ſhall neuer wholly be conquered of the deuill: and therefore he can neuer wholly or finally fall from grace; for if hee might, then were he wholly ouercome in temptation.

The contrarie arguments be of three ſorts; places of ſcripture, Examples, and Reaſons: for the firſt, Exod. 32, 32. When the Iſraelits had ſinned that great ſinne of Idolatrie, Moſes prayeth God to forgiue them; If not (ſayth he) blot mee out of thy booke. Hence they gather, that a child of God may bee blotted out of Gods booke of life, and ſo finally periſh. Anſw. That place muſt be vnderſtood with this condition: If it be poſsible; as in the like prayer it is expreſſed by Chriſt: Father, if it be poſsible, let this cup paſſe from me. This condition muſt needs be added: for els wee muſt ſay, that Moſes prayed for that which he knew was impoſsible; namely, that one priuate man ſhould ſuffer eternall puniſhments for the ſinnes of others, though in temporall puniſhments ſuch a thing may be, yet in eternall, it is impoſſible. Againe, Moſes in this prayer doth principally ſhew his exceeding affection and zeale for Gods glorie, and for the ſafetie of his brethren, both which hee preferred before his owne life; as if hee ſhould ſay: Lord pardon them, and rather than thy name ſhould looſe glorie, blot me out of thy booke. The like affection was in Paule, when hee ſayd, (a) He could wiſh himſelfe to be ſeparate from Chriſt for the loue of his brethren the Iewes. They further vrge the Lords anſwere to Moyſes, verſ. 33. Whoſoeuer hath ſinned againſt mee, I will put him out of my booke. But as the Lord therein anſwereth to Moſes prayer, ſo muſt it bee vnderſtood, with the like exception.

(a) Rom. 9.3.

II. Obiect. Ezek. 18.24. If the righteous man turne away from his righteouſneſſe, and commit iniquitie, and doe according to all the abhominations that the wicked man doth, ſhall hee liue? All his righteouſneſſe that hee hath done ſhall not be mentioned: but hee ſhall die in his ſinne. Here (ſay they) it is plaine, that a man may fall from grace? Anſw. Righteouſneſſe is twofold: of the outward action, and of the perſon. So Paule diſtinguiſheth, when he deſireth to be found (b) not in his owne righteouſneſſe, which is of the law; that is, ſuch as was in him while hee was a Phariſee: but in the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt. The righteouſneſſe of the action is, when a man for outward actions keeps the law of God. The righteouſneſſe of the perſon is that, whereby a man is accepted righteous before God. And anſwerable hereunto, there be two kinds of righteous men: one that is outwardly righteous before men, though not indeed: The other, that is truly righteous before God. Now of the former of theſe two, muſt that place be vnderſtood: for the Lord there pleadeth with ſuch as did eſteeme and auow themſelues to be righteous, ſaying: Their fathers had eaten ſowre grapes; that is, had ſinned, and they were puniſhed for their fathers offences, though they were righteous: And the Holy ghoſt ſpeaking according to their own conceit and opinion of themſelues, calleth them righteous: and of ſuch it is true they may turn from their righteouſneſſe.

(b) Philip. 3.9.

III. Obiect. Luk. 8.13. Some beleeue for a time, and in time of temptation goe away. Anſw. There be three kinds of faith: Hiſtoricall, Temporarie, and ſauing faith. In Hiſtoricall faith, is knowledge of the word of God, with aſſent vnto it. In temporary faith are three things: knowledge of the Word, Aſſent, and Approbation alſo, with ſome ioy. In ſauing faith, there are foure things: Knowledge, Aſſent, Approbation, and Apprehenſion: that is, an applying of the promiſes of God vnto a mans ſelfe; whence proceedeth ſome ioy. And anſwerably, there are three kinds of beleeuers. I. ſuch as know the word of God, but yet haue no loue thereof. II. ſuch as know it, aſſent vnto it, and reioyce in it alſo, for a time. The third are ſuch as apprehend the promiſes, and apply them to themſelues. Now the two firſt kinds of faith may bee left: and the two firſt kinds of beleeuers may fall away, whereof Saint Luke ſpeaketh: But hence it followeth not, that ſauing faith, may be loſt; for he that is endued therewith, can neuer fall away. But faith (ſay they) is onely one, Epheſ. 4.5. There is but one faith, one God, one hope, and one Baptiſme. Anſw. By one faith is there meant one religion, and doctrine of ſaluation: as elſewhere is vſuall, by the name of faith. 1. Tim. 1.19.

Their ſecond kind of arguments are Examples: which are chiefely two: one of Adam, the other of Dauid, For Adam; they ſay he was created righteous, and yet hee fell wholly from grace; and therefore any beleeuer now, may much more fall away, who haue farre leſſe grace than he had. Anſw. This Argument is not good: for though Adam had a greater meaſure of grace than we now haue, yet our grace hath a greater priuiledge than his had: his grace came by creation; ours is by redemption and regeneration. Adam had the firſt grace, to bee able to obey; but he wanted the ſecond, to be ſure to perſeuere: becauſe God would permit his fall, to make a way both to manifeſt his iuſtice and mercie in our redemption by Chriſt. But the child of God after his conuerſion, wherein hee hath the firſt grace grace to repent and beleeue, hath alſo an infallible promiſe, That he ſhall receiue the ſecond grace, to abide in that faith.

(a) Philip 1.6. And therefore Paule ſayth: I (a) am perſuaded, that hee which hath begun this good worke in you, will performe it vntill the day

(b) 1. Theſ. 3 of the Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And againe, (b) The Lord is faithfull, who will ſtabliſh you, and keepe you from euill.

Secondly, Dauid (ſay they) by his two grieuous ſinnes fell wholly from grace? Anſw. He fell indeed grieuouſly, but not wholly: for after his fall hee contemned not Gods word, he hated not God, nor deſpaired of mercie; which hee muſt haue done, if he had fallen wholly. And therefore he had remorſe for his ſinne, ſo ſoone as the Prophet Nathan came vnto him. But (ſay they) hee prayeth God to create a new heart in him, therefore hee had then no grace: For creation is a making of that which hath no being. Anſw. Dauid then ſpeeketh not as he was before God, but as hee was in his owne ſence and feeling: for by his ſinnes Gods graces were ſore decayed. But (ſay they) hee repented not for the ſpace of one whole yeare: Now where there is no repentance, there is no faith, and conſequently no grace nor pardon. Anſw. In repentance there be two things: the gift of repentance, and the act and practiſe thereof. The gift of repentance was in the heart of Dauid, when he yet lay in his ſinnes: but the act thereof lay hid, and he wanted the renewing thereof all that time. Againe, Dauid had the pardon of his ſinnes paſt, though hee had not the pardon of thoſe two ſinnes, till hee repented of them. Neither was his repentance loſt but decayed onely, hee wanted not the power of it ſimply, but the practiſe of it onely in that act.

Their third kind of arguments are drawne from equitie and reaſon.

I. Hee that is a member of an harlot, and of the deuill, ceaſeth wholly to bee a member of Chriſt: but a child of God truly beleeuing, may become the member of an harlot, and of Sathan, as Dauid did. Anſw. There be three kinds of members; dead, decaied, and liuing members: a dead member is that which is onely in ſhew a member: as a legge of wood or of braſſe in a mans bodie. A decayed member is a true member, though weak, as is a legge or arme that is taken with a palſie, or ſore wounded. But a liuely member is that which doth moue, and do all it functions perfectly. So in the church there be ſome members dead, and onely in ſhew; others feeble and weake, that by reaſon of ſome grieuous ſinnes are not able to doe their duties. And there bee liuely members, which ſerue God with an vpright and perfect heart. Now, though a member of an harlot cannot be a liuely member of Chriſt, becauſe by his ſinnes hee weakeneth and woundeth the graces of God (for euery adulterer and fornicator doth as much as in him lieth cut himſelfe off from Chriſt) yet hee may bee a decayed member of Chriſt. And this may the rather ſtand, becauſe a man is made the member of Chriſt one way, namely, ſpiritually; and the member of an harlot another way, namely, bodily.

II. Reaſon. If a man cannot fall from grace, then preaching, prayer, the ſacraments, and all means of perſeuerance are needleſſe? Anſw. Nothing leſſe: for they haue all their good and neceſſarie vſe vnto them which haue grace: euen to make them conſtant in grace. For where the Scripture teacheth the certaintie of ſaluation, it implieth the vſe of the meanes of perſeuerance. Paul in his iourney to Rome was certaine they ſhould come all ſafe to land (a) by the promiſe of God: yet when the marines would haue gone out of the ſhip, Hee telleth the Captaine, vnleſſe (b) theſe ſtay in, we cannot be ſaued: becauſe they were the meanes to bring them to land. So when Iſay had told Ezekias from the Lord that he ſhould liue fifteene yeares longer, he was thereby aſſured of recouerie, and yet hee vſed (c) a bunch of figges as a meanes thereof: as alſo food and rayment to preſerue his life afterward.

(a) Act. 27.24

(c) Iſa. 38.21.

III. Reaſon. This doctrine of certaine perſeuerance maintaineth men in ſecuritie? Anſw. Securitie is twofold, carnall, and ſpirituall: carnall, when a man regardeth not at all the means of his ſaluation, but giueth himſelfe wholly to the profits and pleaſures of this world. Spirituall, when a man relieth on God for his ſaluation, by beleeuing his promiſes: and this ſecuritie it maintaineth, but not the carnall ſecuritie: For it teacheth the vſe of the meanes of perſeuerance, as prayer, hearing, and reading of the word, and receiuing the Sacraments. And thus I conclude this queſtion, That the true child of God, who truly beleeueth, when he ſinneth, doth neither wholly nor finally fall away, neither can doe.

Laſtly, if this were true of this famous Church of Epheſus, which was founded and preſerued by the Apoſtles, that ſhee ſuffered her firſt loue to decay; then how can it bee otherwiſe with vs, but that wee ſhould ſuffer our firſt loue as well towards God as man, to leſſen and diminiſh? and that this is ſo, our conſciences will tell vs, if wee looke to that loue and zeale we had at our firſt calling: and though wee haue not felt this decay, yet we muſt know wee bee in danger of it continually. And therefore we muſt take heed that we ſuffer not our good affections in religion to diminiſh. Water that hath beene once hot, will afterward be moſt cold, and freeſe the hardeſt: euen ſo, when our hearts haue beene once heated with the fire of the Lords altar, as true loue, and other graces of the ſpirit, if we ſuffer them to decay, we ſhall become more frozen in iniquitie than any others. The hawke while ſhee is quicke to take her prey, is ſet vpon the hand of kings and nobles: but if ſhee wax weake and die, ſhe is caſt off to the dunghill. Euen ſo while we are hote and cheerefull in loue towards God and his church, wee are carried as it were on Gods owne hand: but if wee faint and decay in loue, we ſhall be caſt lower than if wee had neuer beene ſo exalted. This loue of God in vs is like a little flame of fire, for the maintaining whereof wee muſt doe three things: Firſt, take heed of all manner of ſinne, which quencheth loue and other graces of the ſpirit, as water quencheth fire. In the old Teſtament the prieſts kept fire burning vpon the altar day and night, to be alwayes readie to ſacrifice vnto the Lord: and ſo muſt we keep the flame of loue & other graces continually burning in our hearts, that thence we may offer vp acceptable ſacrifices of praiſe and thankſgiuing vnto the Lord. Secondly, we muſt ſtir vp the gifts of grace that are in vs, as Paule ſayth to Timothie, 2. Tim. 1. 6. vſing a compariſon from the fire, which burneth more bright and cleare when it is ſtirred vp. Laſtly, wee muſt exerciſe our ſelues in the duties of pietie, as faith, repentance, loue, and ſuch like: & ſo ſhall they not decay. And thus much for the ſinne of this church.

Verſe 5. Remember therefore whence thou art fallen, and repent and doe thy firſt workes: or els I will come againſt thee ſhortly, and will remoue thy candleſticke out of his place, except thou amend.

Our Sauiour Chriſt the faithfull phyſition of our ſoules, hauing ſharpely rebuked this church, doth here preſcribe vnto them a ſoueraigne remedie againſt their ſinne of decay in loue. Frō whence we may learne, that the law whereby ſin is reproued is to be taught, but yet with this qualification, that withall the doctrine of the Goſpell be ioyned thereunto, that the ſinnes which are ripped vp by the law, may be cured by the Goſpel. This is Chriſts manner of preaching in this place, whoſe practiſe is a moſt worthie platforme for all his miniſters: for we haue no warrant at this day to preach the law barely, which onely maketh the wound, without the Goſpell which alone ſheweth the remedie.

This remedie here preſcribed is of ſpeciall vſe, and worthie our conſideration: generally, by it we haue direction to anſwer to two neceſſarie queſtions of practiſe, which often fall out in the life of man. Firſt, a man is effectually called to profeſſe the goſpell, and yet after his conuerſion, either through the corruption of his nature, or by the temptation of the diuell and the world, falleth into ſinne againe: what muſt this man do for his recouerie? Anſ. He muſt remember whence he is fallen, and repent of thoſe his ſinnes, and do his firſt workes. The ſecond queſtion is this: A man that hath all his life long liued in ignorance and ſin, is now touched in conſcience for his looſe life; how ſhall this man eſcape the wrath of God, & become reconciled vnto him? Anſ. He muſt firſt remember whence hee is fallen by Adams ſinne, and by his owne tranſgreſſions: Secondly, hee muſt repent of his ſinnes: Thirdly, endeuor to do the firſt workes, whereto he is bound by the law of creation, & ſo ſhal he eſcape the wrath of God, and be receiued into his loue and fauour.

In

In particular, this remedie hath three parts: The first, Remember whence thou art fallen: The second, And repent: The third, And do thy first workes. The words following, Or else I will come against thee, &c. Are a reason of this remedie to perswade them to do the duties prescribed.

For the first, Remember whence thou art fallen; The words beare this sence: Examine thy selfe throughly, & see in thy selfe the decay of thy former loue: and then ponder the same in thy heart seriously and throughly. Here Christ inioyneth to this church two duties. I. Examination, whereby shee must descend into her owne heart, and search out her owne wants; especially the want of her loue to God, to his word and to her brethren. II. Consideration, whereby she must often thinke of these her wants, and lay the same to her heart vnfainedly.

This course which Christ taketh with this church, teacheth vs first that it is a dangerous thing for any person in Gods church not to bee acquainted throughly with his owne estate, that so hee may search out his owne wants, and deeply consider of the same. For this very thing Ieremie blamed the people in his time, that (a) no man sayd with himselfe, (a) what haue I done. And Christ layeth this sinne to the charge of the people of the old world, that they were ignorant of their estate, (b) They knew nothing till the flood came and tooke them all away. And this is the common sin of this age: no man almost doth examine himselfe & consider in his hart his owne estate, by reason of his sinnes and wants. Nay, men are growne to this, that they count it a meanes to breed melancholie, and therefore do flie the practise of this dutie, and so nuzzell themselues in their fearefull securitie.

(a) Ier. 8. 6.

Secondly, here wee learne that it is a speciall dutie for them that liue in Gods church, to be throughly acquainted with their owne estate: to examine and search out their owne sinnes: and often to consider seriously of their particular wants. Zephanie preaching the doctrine of repentance vnto the people, beginneth thus: Search ye, search your selues oh nation not worthie to be beloued. Where the word translated (search) signifieth such a search as a man would make for some small thing in a great heape of chaffe. This is the Lords counsell, Hag. 1. 7. Consider your owne wayes in your hearts: and it must be our practise if we would be saued. This duty is the beginning and ground of true repentance, and therefore Christ here giueth it the first place; for no man can truly repent before hee bee acquainted with his owne infirmities, and with his owne fearefull and damnable estate, by reason of his sinnes. And therefore Dauid saith, (c) I first considered my wayes and then I turned my feete into thy teslimonies. The cause why so few in the world doe truly repent, is want of consideration from whence they are fallen: and what bee their sinnes and the dreadful iudgements thereby deserued. For till the mind doe truly conceiue her owne miserie, the hart can neuer rightly hunger after mercie: Sinne must bee our greatest woe, before Christ become our chiefest ioy. The second part of this remedie is Repentance it selfe, for after a man is well acquainted with his wants, and hath throughly considered of his owne misery, then he commeth to repent. In the handling hereof fiue points are to be obserued. I. What repentance is. II. How it is to be practised. III. Who commandeth it. IV. To whom it is commaunded. V. For what they must repent.

(c) Psal. 119. 59.

For the first. Repentance properly is in the mind, as the word in this place doth import: for it signifieth thus much, After some follie or ouerslip to be better aduised. Repentance then in the mind is a change from euil to good, or a turning from sinne vnto God, Act. 26. 20, Repent and turne to God. Which latter words expound the former, & plainly shew what repentance is. And this change in the mind standeth in this resolution, whereby a man by Gods grace purposeth to leaue all his former sinnes, and to cleaue vnto God in holy obedience vnto all his commandements: And when this resolution is in the mind, therwithall followeth a turning of the whole man in will, in affections, and in all the actions of his life. This appeareth by that description of the practise of repentance, which Paul reduceth to seuen heads, viz. Care, clearing of themselues, indignation, feare, great desire, zeale, and reuenge, 2. Cor. 7. 11. whereof some are renewed affections, and some reformed actions.

Hereby

The vſe. Hereby appeareth that their deſcription of repentance is not ſo fit & proper, which ſay it ſtandeth in theſe three: contrition, faith, and new obedience. For contrition is not a part of repentance, but a cauſe thereof, and ſo is faith, as Chriſt teacheth in his well-knowne Sermon: (a) Repent, and beleeue the Goſpel: where they are plainly diſtinct. And indeed a man muſt firſt beleeue in Chriſt, and then followeth repentance, and for new obedience it is not a part of repentance, but a fruit thereof. Others make regeneration and repentance all one, but that cannot ſo well ſtand: for regeneration goeth before, and repentance followeth after as a fruit thereof, for godly ſorrow which is a part of regeneration, cauſeth repentance. The minde therefore muſt firſt be renewed, & then it turneth it ſelfe vnto God, and withall turneth the whole man. And thus wee ſee what true repentance is.

(a) Mar. 1. 15.

II. Point. How muſt repentance be practiſed? The practiſe of it ſtandeth in two things: in true humiliation, and true reformation. In humiliation a man humbleth himſelfe vnder the hand of God, making true confeſsion of al his ſinnes, from a ſorrowfull heart, condemning himſelfe for the ſame, and earneſtly craving pardon for them at the hands of God in Chriſt. Reformation is a change of all bad actions into good; and if caſe require, a making of ſatisfaction vnto others for iniuries done vnto them: example hereof wee haue in Dauid; who hauing committed thoſe two great ſinnes of whoredome and murder, when he was reproued by Nathan, repented, confeſsing his ſins, and made the one and fiftie Pſalme, and (as it is thought) the 32 Pſalme, therein notably ſhewing both his humiliation in heart, and reformation of life. So Manaſſes, when he was conuerted, (b) he repented, humbling himſelfe before God, and praying for the pardon of his ſinnes, God heard him: And thus came the prodigall child vnto his father, ſaying (c) Father I haue ſinned againſt heauen, and before thee, I am not worthie to be called thy ſonne, make me one of thine hired ſeruants. And ſo in all the Pſalmes of repentance wee ſhall ſee theſe duties of humiliation and reformation, ioyntlie practiſed: as Pſal. 6. and 38. and 77. and 130. 143.

(b) 2. Cro. 33. 12.

(c) Luc. 15. 21.

Here then conſider the fearefull practiſe of the church of Rome in their doctrine of repentance, receiued generally for many hundred yeares. Repentance with them ſtandeth in three things: In contrition, in confeſsion of all his ſinnes to the Prieſts, and in ſatisfaction to God by good works. But all theſe things may a wicked man doe: For Iudas was greeued for betraying his maiſter; he confeſſed his ſinnes; and alſo gaue againe the money wherwith he was hired. A ſecond abuſe is, that they make contrition a part of the practiſe of repentance: by contrition we muſt vnderſtand remorſe of conſcience for ſinne; which is no grace of it ſelfe, though it may bee an occaſion thereto in Gods elect. A third abuſe is, that they preſcribe a confeſsion of all a mans ſinnes vnto men; which is a gibbet for any mans conſcience: wherein they require more than God doth. A fourth abuſe is, that they require ſatisfaction to Gods iuſtice by mans good workes; whereby they ouerthrow ſatiſfaction by Chriſt, and exact that of men which none is able to performe. We therefore muſt reiect their wicked doctrine, brought by the diuell into Gods church, and embrace that ſauing repentance which ſtandeth in true humiliation and reformation.

III. point. Who is it that commandeth repentance vnto this church: namely, Ieſus Chriſt. Many, not onely Papiſts but Proteſtants, gather vpon this & ſuch like commandements, That God giueth to euerie man ſufficient grace to repent if he will: For elſe (ſay they) hee ſhould but mocke them, in bidding them repent: conſidering that without his grace it is as impoſſible for any man to repent, as for a man to riſe and walke that is faſt bound hand and foote. Anſ. This collection is vnſound: For the manifeſtation whereof, I wil firſt lay down the grounds of the true anſwere: and then apply the ſame. Firſt, this commaundement to Repent, is not giuen to euerie man, but only to the church of God, or to that people which is to be a church: and God giueth it to them for this end, that hee may gather among them his elect. In Gods church there be two ſorts of men: Elect, and Reprobat: both which are mingled in this life. Now when the commaundement ment to beleeue and repent, is giuen out in Gods church, it is directed properly to the elect; and to the other whom God hath refused only by consequent, because they are mingled with the elect. Againe, these commandements bee giuen to the elect for two causes. I. To teach them, not what they are able to doe of themselues, but what they ought to doe. II. To be an outward meanes to bring them to repent and beleeue. For with the commandement Christ is present by his spirit to worke in the elect grace to repent and beleeue, Phil. 2. 12, Worke out your saluation in feare and trembling: rendring this reason in the next words, For God worketh in you both the will and the deed. In the church there be some reprobates who haue the same commandement giuen vnto them: but for other vses: as I. to keepe them in outward order. II. to teach them their owne impotencie. III. and principally, that God in his iustice may make them void of all excuse at the last day. From hence I answer thus. This proposition is not true, to wit, If God command men to repent, then he giueth them grace to repent, vnlesse it be thus qualified; That God commandeth them to repent, for this end that they may practise repentance. For God giueth out his commandements for diuerse ends: Some that they may be practised: & others, to take from men al excuse in their disobedience. Thus he commaunded Pharaoh to let the people go; that by his disobedience his heart might be more hardned, and God more iustly manifest his glorie in his destruction. So hee commaunded Isay to go & preach vnto the people: not for their conuersion, but to (u) blind their eyes, and to harden their harts. And so he commands the reprobate to repent: but neither directly, as hee doth his children, in whom he intends the practise of repentance; but by consequent, because they liue among his chileren: nor yet with intent they should obey, but rather to harden them, and to make them inexcusable, because of their sinnes. And therefore in them his commandement cannot import anie abilitie to obey.

(u) Isa. 6. 9.

IV. point. Who bee commanded to repent? namely, The Church of Ephesus, that is, the minister with the whole body of the church. This may seeme strange that he should command them to repent, seeing they had alreadie repented at their conuersion. Herein therefore wee must learne that there bee two degrees in the practise of repentance: First, the beginning of repentance: Secondly, the renewing of the same. And in these two consisteth the whole state of a christian mans life. He must begin to repent when he is receiued to mercie: he must renew that repentance for his daily offences.

The vse. If God therefore haue giuen vs grace to repent, we must not content our selues with that good beginning, but adde more repentance daily vnto it. For no man liueth that hath receiued grace to repent, but hee seeth in himselfe continuall cause of renewing the same, by reason of his daily fals and wants; for euery sinne decayeth grace, which must be repaired by a new practise of repentance. This dutie must needs be practised. It is the most dangerous case that can bee for any man to lie in sinne, for sinne makes a man liable to all Gods iudgements. And it is not so much the act of sinne, as the lying in sinne that bringeth damnation. For this cause Paule 2. Corin. 5. 20, speaking to those that were reconciled to God, doth still most earnestly beseech them to be reconciled vnto him, saying, We beseech you in Christs steed, as though God did beseech you through vs, that ye be reconciled to God: Intending thereby to prouoke them to the daily renewing of their repentance, that thereby they might get a more full assurance of their reconciliation.

V. point. For what must they repent? namely, for the decay of their loue: not for the want thereof, but for that they suffered it to waxe lesser, both towards God, and his word, and towards their brethren. The same thing is spoken to vs dayly in the ministerie of the word: that whereas our first loue is gone, many hauing fallen from it, and moe hauing none at all, wee would vnfainedly repent of this our decay and want: that if wee haue had loue, and now waxe cold, wee may renew it; and if we neuer had it, we may labour for it; that so we may be answerable to his blessed desire. And here obserue, that Christ enioyneth vs a strait repentance. It is not ynough for men to repent them of grosse sinnes, as whoredome, theft, drunkennesse, and such like: but they must repent them of their wants.

of grace, as of the knowledge, and feare, and loue of God, and of brotherly loue, and of decay in any grace, bee it neuer ſo little. Wee haue many iuſticiaries in conceit, that bee Phariſaically minded, thinking too well of themſelues, that they need no repentance, becauſe they liue ciuilely, and are not tainted with groſſe ſinnes: But theſe conſider little what God doth here require, euen repentance for our ſecret wants and decayes. And great reaſon it ſhould bee ſo: for els to what end ſhould we examine our ſelues of our ſecret wants, vnleſſe wee ſhould repent vs of them, hauing found them in vs?

Againe, if this church muſt repent for her wants; then what great cauſe haue we to repent in this laſt age, of Atheiſme, a groſſe and common ſinne: of outward pride in apparrell, a ſinne flat againſt Gods word: and for contempt of the goſpell; a ſinne that enlargeth it ſelfe more and more among vs. And for crueltie, and want of mercy and compaſſion, all which are rife in our church: and may more eaſily remooue the candleſticke from vs; then want of loue could remooue the candleſticke from this church. And thus much for the ſecond part of this remedie.

The third part of this remedie is, to do their firſt workes: that is, ſhewe the like zeale and feruencie of loue to God, to his word, and to their brethren, that they did at the firſt time of their conuerſion. This duty Chriſt addeth to the former; becauſe true repentance neuer periſheth in the heart, but alwaies breaketh out into action in the life.

Here then is an excellent leſſon for vs to learne and put in practiſe: wee muſt ſearch our own harts, and ſee what good things haue bene in vs: what good motions and deſires, or good affections. We muſt alſo call to mind our former wayes, and ſee what good things wee haue done: and if in heart or life we find decay, we muſt recouer our loſſe, and ſeeke to do our firſt workes, and ſtriue to continue ſo doing to our liues end, that ſo wee may eſcape this heauie charge of decay in grace. Thus much of the parts of this remedie.

If not, I will come againſt thee ſhortly, and remoue thy candleſticke out of his place, except thou amend.

In theſe words Chriſt layes downe a reaſon to perſuade the church of Epheſus to the practiſe of the former remedy; eſpecially for repentance. This reaſon containeth three parts. I. A generall commination in theſe words, If not, I will come againſt thee ſhortly. II. A particular threatning of a particular iudgement, And remoue thy candleſticke out of his place. III. The condition of them both: except thou amend.

I. point. If not, I will come againſt thee ſhortly, that is, if thou do not practiſe this remedie and the duties therein preſcribed, eſpecially the dutie of repentance; then will I come againſt thee ſhortly. The words may as well bee read thus, If not, then will I come to thee ſhortly: For ſo they are in the originall, and doe containe in them ſufficient and profitable inſtruction. God is ſaid to come to any people two wayes, in mercie, and in iudgement. In mercie when he teſtifieth his preſence by workes of mercie: As when Chriſt in ſpirit went vnto the old world and preached vnto them in the perſon of Noe an hundred and twentie yeares before the floud, 1. Pet. 3. 19, 20. Secondly, God commeth in iudgement when hee teſtifieth his preſence by iudgements. In the ſecond commandement God ſaith, He wil viſite the ſinnes of the fathers vpon the children, that is, he will make inquirie among the children for the fathers ſinnes, and if hee find them to liue in the ſame ſinnes that their fathers did, then will hee puniſh them, this is properly to viſit. So in this place, If thou repent not I will come vnto thee, and teſtifie my preſence, not in mercie but in iudgement.

The vſe. In this generall threatening we may obſerue: that when a church or people decay in loue to God, to his word, or to their brethren; or els lye in any ſinne: then God prepareth himſelfe to come vnto them in iudgement, Amos 4.12. Becauſe I will doe thus and thus vnto thee, for thy ſinnes, therefore prepare to meete thy God, Oh Iſrael, meaning, that becauſe they lay ſtill in their ſinnes, therefore he would make knowne his preſence by more fearefull iudgements. This doctrine according to Chriſts direction is to bee applied to vs and to our church: for the ſinnes that were in the church of Epheſus are the ſinnes of our church and people. They decayed in loue to God, to his word, and to the brethren, ſo doe we. Nay, generally there is no loue at all in vs, as hath been ſhewed: and beſides theſe wants, there be many other groſſe ſinnes wherein our church and people doe lye, as in Atheiſme both in iudgement and practiſe; in contempt and neglect of Gods worſhip and true religion; in crueltie, oppreſſion, and want of mercie: and that which is more, though God ſummon men to repent by his dayly iudgements, yet few or none by true humilitie prepare to meete God, and to preuent his iudgements. Securitie ſpreads it ſelfe ouer the whole bodie of our people. And this being our caſe and ſtate, it muſt needes bee, that God hath beene long ſince in comming to vs by his iudgements, and at this day he is ſtill comming, becauſe we ſtill decay in loue and other graces, and more and more goe on in ſinne. So that if we thus continue, the truth is, hee will come ſhortly vnto vs, and that by moſt fearefull iudgements. For this was written to the church of Epheſus, to be a direction, not onely vnto them, but to all churches to the end of the world, that be in the like or worſer caſe. What ſhall wee then doe?

Our dutie is taught vs in theſe words (If not) that is, if thou repent not. Wee muſt preuent the Lords comming in iudgement by vnfained repentance: euery man and euery familie apart muſt repent priuately, and the whole Church openly and publickely: no way elſe wee haue, to ſtay the Lords comming againſt vs by his fearefull iudgements.

The ſecond part of this reaſon, is a more particular threatening than the former: And will remoone thy candleſticke out of his place. Where hee ſheweth with what particular iudgement hee will puniſh this church: namely, by remooning away the candleſticke. The meaning whereof may bee gathered out of the former chapter, where particular churches were called candleſticks: therefore here hee threateneth to remooue his church from the citie of Epheſus, to take away the Miniſterie of his Goſpell, and the profeſſion thereof; and in his iuſt iudgement to ſend among them, Ignorance, Apoſtacie, and Hereſie, in ſteed of the knowledge of his truth. This particular iudgement muſt be referred to the firſt words, If not: that is, if thou repent not, this will I doe; I will make thee to be no Church, and take my Goſpell from thee.

In this particular threatening, three points are to bee obſerued: one concerning the Miniſter; the ſecond concerning the whole body of the church: the third concerning euery priuat man. Touching the Miniſter note this: If he ſhall decay in loue to God, to his word, or to his brethren, or if hee lye in any one ſinne knowne to himſelfe, it is a meanes to depriue him either of his calling, or of Gods gifts beſtowed on him: for this threatening is here directed eſpecially vnto the Angell of this Church of Epheſus. When Ieremie had beene wanting in deliuering the Lords will vnto the people, partly for feare, & partly through impatience: then the Lord becomes a Prophet vnto him, ſaying, If thou (a) returne, I will bring thee againe, and thou ſhalt ſtand before me. Whereby hee would giue him to vnderſtand, That if hee returned not, he ſhould ceaſe to be a Prophet vnto him. The ſame thing is true of all Gods Miniſters: if they decay in loue, faile in their dutie, or lye in any ſinne, they muſt ſpeedily renew themſelues by repentance, or els God will depriue them either of their calling, or of the gifts thereof. True repentance and the renewing thereof is needfull vnto all Chriſtians; but eſpecially to Gods Miniſters, if they would continue in his fauour, and ſtand before him, becomming his mouth vnto the people.

(a) Ier. 15. 19.

The ſecond point concerneth the whole bodie of a Church: to wit, if a Church or people decay in loue to God, to religion, and to their brethren; or doe lye in any common ſinne, they procure hereby the remooning of the goſpell from them, and the aboliſhing of true religion. (b) The Prophet is a foole (ſayth the Lord) and the man of the ſpirit is mad: This was a great and fearefull iudgement: but marke the cauſe; All is for thine iniquitie: that is, for the ſinne of the whole church doth God ſend fooliſh Miniſters. If this bee ſo, then wee haue iuſt cauſe in our Church to feare the remooning of the gospell from vs: for there is a generall decay of loue in many, and in the most no loue at all. Many scorne and contemn true religion, and hate the professours thereof. In regard whereof, wee may wonder at the great patience of God, that yet continueth his gospell among vs: For (a) God giueth men vp to strong delusion, to beleeue lyes, because they loue not his truth. Wherefore, being in this danger, our dutie is, to vse all good meanes to preuent this iudgement of God: which can no other way bee done, than by true and vnfained repentance by the whole Church in generall: and by euery man apart, and euery familie apart. For when God shall speake suddenly against a nation or kingdome, to root it vp, and to destroy it: if that people repent of their wickednesse, the Lord will repent of the plague and iudgement which hee thought to bring vpon them, Ierem. 18. vers. 7, 8.

(a) 2. Thess. 2. 11.

The third point concerneth euery priuate man: and it is this: If any man decay in loue, or want loue to God and to his brethren, or lye in any sin knowne to himselfe. This is a meanes to remooue the candlesticke from him; to depriue him of his knowledge and other graces of God. The affection of loue in the heart is like the watch of the clocke: if the watch stand, the wheeles stand: as the watch goeth fast or softly, so goe the wheeles answerably. And so it is in man: if his loue to God and to his gospell doe encrease, then doth his knowledge and other graces of God encrease in his heart: but if his loue decay, then other graces decay: and if loue be gone, then farewell all pietie and true religion. If we would know the cause of such palpable ignorance as is in many that haue long heard the gospell preached, it is nothing but want of loue. Heb. 3. 12, 13. The Holy ghost sheweth by what degrees men come to fall away from God. First, sinne deceiues them, by drawing them to commit it: then their hearts are hardened by custome of sinning: Thence followes vnbeleefe in maine points of Religion: and so they make Apostacie from God, and set themselues against his truth. Take heed therefore of lying in any sinne, for that is the high way to finall Apostacie: rather striue to encrease in loue vnto God and vnto his word; and so shall all his good graces encrease in thine heart.

Out of this particular threatening some gather, That a man may bee cut off frō Christ, & fall away finally from true faith and repentance. For (say they) if a whole Church may bee cut off from Christ, and become no Church: then may any one member of the Church be cut off, and become no member: But a whole church may bee cut off, as here we see, and therefore may any one man. Answ. This reason is not good: there is great difference betweene the state of a whole Church, and of one man that is a true member of Christ. For a particular Church is a mixt companie of true professors and dissemblers: like vnto a field wherein are good corne and tares; and like vnto a barne floore, wherein is wheat and chaffe mingled together: and yet all are reputed beleeuers, because they professe the Gospell outwardly. Now by reason of this mixture, it may come to passe, that a particular visible Church may fall away, and become no Church: either when the godly are taken away, and hypocrites and dissemblers made manifest: or els when true beleeuers waxing few, are not able to maintaine the publicke profession of the truth against the might and multitude of the enemies, which may dayly encrease. But the case is not so with a particular member of Christ, he cannot finally fall away, as hath beene shewed at large, vers. 4. And thus much for the second part of this reason.

The third part of this reason, is the condition of both the former threatenings, in these words: Except thou amend: that is, I will come in iudgement vnto thee, and take my gospell from thee, vnlesse thou preuent my comming by true repentance.

Here note, that all the threatenings of the old and new Testament are conditionall: Ionas commeth to Niniue, and crieth, yet fortie dayes, and Niniue shall bee destroyed. He sayd no more; but yet that threatening must bee vnderstood with this exception, vnlesse they repent. Why (will some say) are the threatenings in Gods word propounded conditionally? Answ. Gods whole will and pleasure is one alone in it ſelfe: and yet it may bee thus diſtinguiſhed, to bee partly ſecret, and partly reuealed. Gods ſecret will is touching thoſe things which hee hath not made manifeſt vnto men. His reuealed will is touching thoſe things which are manifeſted in Scripture, or doe fall out euery day. Now Gods ſecret will is without condition, for as euery thing commeth to paſſe, ſo God willed it: when good things come to paſſe, them he willeth ſimply: when euill things fall out, them he permitteth to be done. And to make Gods ſecret will conditionall, is to bring Gods will vnder the power of man, and to ſubiect the Creator vnto the creature. But Gods reuealed will is conditionall; becauſe it containeth the matter of mans ſaluation: and this manner of propounding it, is a moſt effectuall way to bring the ſame to paſſe, for it keepeth men more in awfull obedience, than if it were abſolute.

In this condition note this thing, that Chriſt repeateth it twice, both in the beginning of this reaſon, if not: and in the end, Except thou amend. Hereby hee would giue vs to vnderſtand, That when men commit ſinne, and lye therein: or when they decay in any grace, then haue they moſt neceſſarie cauſe to repent, if they would eſcape Gods fearefull iudgements. And ſeeing our eſtate is like to the ſtate of this Church, or els worſer by much (for wee lye in ſinne, and thereby cauſe God to come to vs in iudgement) as we tender our owne good both in this life and after death, let vs turne from our ſinnes and repent, euery man apart, euery familie apart, and the whole church publickely: for repentance is moſt needfull, els would not the Lord haue doubled this condition.

Verſe. 6. But this thou haſt, that thou hateſt the workes of the Nicolaitans, which I alſo hate.

Theſe words are a ſecond reaſon to proue that which was ſet downe in the ſecond verſe: namely, That this Church could not abide them that were euill. In the ſecond verſe this was made manifeſt, by their diſcouery of the falſe Apoſtles: and here he proueth it by their affection of hatred, towards the workes of the Nicolaitans. Theſe Nicolaitans were certaine heretickes in the primitiue Church that held theſe two opinions: Firſt, that adulterie and fornication were no ſins: Secondly, that men might communicate with the ſacrifices of idolaters in their Idoll temples: and according to their opinions were their practiſes. Theſe heretickes (as it is thought) came of one Nicholas, one of the ſeuen deacons mentioned, Act. 6. who though for a while hee did faithfully diſcharge his dutie outwardly; yet after fell away, and became the head of this hereticall ſect.

But this thou haſt. This Particle But, hath reference to the former verſe. As if hee ſhould ſay, Though this be thy fault, that thou faileſt in thy firſt loue; yet for this I commend thee, that thou hateſt the workes of the Nicolaitans.

The Vſe. This practiſe of Chriſt diſcouereth the common ſinne of this age: which is, to ſet out in their colours mens faults and infirmities, to their greateſt diſgrace: and yet by ſilence and oblition to burie all their vertues, which are prayſe worthie. This ought not to bee ſo; wee muſt follow Chriſts example, who with iuſt reproofe adioyneth due deſerued praiſe. If our friend or our foe haue a fault, when we are called thereunto, wee may ſpeake of it, and wee muſt reproue them: but yet withall we muſt commend the good things that be in them. Secondly, Chriſt here teacheth vs, That it is not ſufficient to any mans good eſtate before God, that hee haue good things in him: for that a man may haue, and yet bee in danger to bee cut off from Chriſt. Saule had good things in him at the firſt entrance into his kingdome, but what was hee afterward? Iehu was verie zealous for Gods glorie, in killing all the idolatrous prieſts, but he would not depart from the ſinnes of Ieroboam. And Iudas no doubt had many good gifts while he was with Chriſt, but his end was moſt fearefull: And this church had many good things in her; yet is ſhe in danger of being cut off from Chriſt: And ſo many among vs haue excellent gifts: ſome for knowledge, ſome for mercie and conceiuing of prayer: & yet for all theſe they may be cut off from Chriſt. Therefore wee muſt not content our ſelues with theſe, but labour for the principall which is true, hearty, and vnfained repentance, which wee must dayly renew for our continuall fals. And this will keepe vs in Gods fauour, and from his iudgements.

(4) 2. King. 10 25, 31.

More particularly Christ here commendeth this Church, for hating the errours of the Nicolaitans. Whereby hee would teach vs our dutie if wee bee Christians; namely, to take knowledge of the sinnes and errours of our times, and to hate the same vnfainedly. Yet note, he commendeth them for hating their workes, not their persons: giuing vs direction how to temper our hatred in the world. We must set it against the sinne, not against the person of any man. Some will say, the Prophets prayed against the persons of the wicked. And Dauid professed hatred of the men, *Psalm.*139.21, Doe not I hate them that hate thee? Answ. Dauid was an extraordinarie Prophet, and no doubt had this reuealed vnto him, that those his enemies were obstinate, and would not repent. Againe, imprecations of the prophets in Scripture, must bee vnderstood as prophecies of Gods iudgement to come vpon those against whome they prayed. But wee which want that extraordinarie spirit, must keepe our selues to our ordinarie rule: Hate the sinnes, and loue the persons.

Further, obserue the workes here hated: namely, Idolatrie, and Adulterie, which are ioyned together in these Nicolaitans. Adulterie is the punishment of Idolatrie; and Idolatrie the punishment of Adulterie. Spirituall Adulterie is punished with bodily adulterie. This was verified in the old Iewes: when they fell a whoring after strange gods, God gaue them vp to vncleane lust. And it is palpable in the Church of Rome: they being fallen to idolatrie, doe abound in all vncleanenesse: for they tollerate stewes for fornication: and adulterie and Sodomie are common among them.

Againe, sundry men may here be well admonished, who will bee of no Religion, becäuse there are many sects and schismes among the professours thereof. These men should consider, That in the best Churches planted by the Apostles, there were sects and heresies, euen in the Apostles times, as here in Ephesus. And therefore no maruell, if there bee sects and schismes among vs at this day. This offence should not moone any to dislike the gospell: but rather cause them more firmely to cleaue vnto the truth.

Which I also doe hate. This Christ addeth to encourage them to goe forward in the vertue for which hee commended them, in hating euill workes: for what could more prouoke them to zeale and constancie therein, than to know they did that which Christ himselfe did? And here wee see, that Christ would haue euery member of his Church to be like minded, and like affected vnto him, as he was man. Wee must loue those things which Christ loueth, and hate those things which Christ hateth, reioyce wherein Christ reioyceth, and mourne for those things for which Christ mourned. And great reason it should be so: for wee professe our selues to be members of Christ, bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh, for out of his bloud sprung the Church: and there must bee consent and conformitie betweene the head and the members. Quest. If Christ hated these wicked men, why did hee suffer them to liue, and not cut them off from troubling his Church? Answ. Because hereby hee would manifest his loue to his Church, and his iustice vpon the wicked: for hee can bring light out of darkenesse, and good not onely out of good, but out of euill.

Verse. 7. Let him that hath an eare, heare what the Spirit sayth vnto the Churches: To him that ouercommeth, will I giue to eat of the tree of life, which is in the middest of the paradise of God.

These words containe the conclusion of this Epistle: the scope whereof, is to excite this Church to the more carefull performance of the duties before prescribed. This conclusion hath two parts: a commaundement, and a promise. The commaundement in the beginning of the verse: Let him that hath an eare heare what the Spirit sayth vnto the Churches. In this commaundement note three points, I. who are commaunded: Those which haue eares. II. The dutie commaunded: They must heare. III. What they must heare: namely, What the Spirit sayth vnto the Churches.

I. point.

1. point. The parties commanded are thus ſet forth, He which hath an eare: who theſe bee, Chriſt doth more fully expound, Matth. 13.9. when hee ſaith: Let him that hath an eare to heare, heare. Where he maketh this diſtinction of hearers: that ſome are deafe hearers, ſome hearing hearers. The deafe hearers are thoſe that bring with them to the miniſterie of the word their outward eares only, but their hearts are not affected with it: neither do they care to learne, to beleeue, or obey that which is taught them. The hearing hearers are all ſuch as beſide their bodily eares, haue eares pierced in their hearts by the ſpirit of grace, whereby they doe not onely heare the word outwardly, but their hearts are alſo affected with it, and made pliable vnto it; ſo as they beleeue it, and bring forth obedience vnto it. This hearing eare is ſet forth by Dauid, when he ſaith: (a) Sacrifice and burnt offerings thou wouldeſt not haue: but mine eares haſt thou opened and prepared, and then I ſayd, Loe I come. Hereof Iſay ſaith, Thou (b) openedſt mine eares, and I was not rebellious. And this hearing eare Lidia had giuen her: when God (c) opened her heart whereby ſhe became attentiue to the word of God preached by Paule.

(c) Act. 16.14

The Vſe. By this diſtinction of hearers which Chriſt maketh, we may learne, that Gods grace vnto ſaluation is not vniuerſal, that is, God giueth not vnto al men ſuch meaſure of grace whereby (if they will themſelues) they may beleeue, repent, and be ſaued; For in Chriſts time, and euer ſince there haue bene in the church theſe two kind of hearers; whereof the deafe hearer, doth not receiue nor beleeue the goſpell vnto ſaluation. Neither is it true, that God giueth grace ſufficient vnto all, whereby they might be ſaued, if they by their malice and ſinne did not aboliſh the ſame. For though he admit all ſorts into his church, yet not all, but ſome onely haue eares pierced by the ſpirit of grace that they can heare. And therefore when the Diſciples asked Chriſt, (d) Why bee ſpake in parables? he anſwered thus, To you it is giuen to know the will of God, and the ſecrets of his kingdom: but to others it is not giuen. Shewing plainly that the gift of hearing to ſaluation is not giuen to all, and in ſome made void by their own wilfulneſſe: but to ſome it is giuen, and they haue hearing eares: and to ſome it is not giuen and their eares are deafe.

(d) Mar. 13. Verſ. 11

Secondly, ſeeing this commaundement is directed to the hearing hearers; we muſt thereby be admoniſhed to vſe all good meanes to become good hearers of Gods word; bringing with vs not onely the bodily eares which we haue by creation, but the ſpirituall eares of the heart, which we haue by regeneration. For it is not ſufficient to our ſaluation to receiue the word into the outward bodily eares, vnleſſe the inward eares of the heart bee opened, that our ſoule may bee affected with the word, and fitted to receiue, to beleeue, and obey the ſame. Thus did good king Ioſias heare the law read, the text ſaith, (e) His heart melted within him. And thus did Dauid heare when the Lord ſayd to the church, (f) Seeke yee my face: his heart anſwered, I ſeeke thy face O Lord. And as we muſt bee carefull to get ſpirituall eares; ſo wee muſt take heede of deafe eares. Which is when a man commeth & heareth the word of God, but yet hath no care in his heart to learne, beleeue, or obey the ſame. This deafe eare is a fearefull iudgement of God, whereof we may read, Iſay. 6.9. where the Prophet is ſent, To make their eares heauie, and their harts fat, that they might not heare, nor beleeue: leſt they ſhould turne and be ſaued. And this the rather we muſt looke vnto: becauſe it is a iudgement of God vpon many among vs at this day. The greateſt part of hearers are deafe hearers; which appeareth by this that after long teaching they neither increaſe in knowledge, nor in faith, nor in obedience: but remaine the ſame for blindneſſe of mind, hardneſſe of hart, and profaneneſſe of life, that they were at their firſt hearing of the word; theſe muſt know that Gods iudgement is on them; and if they would bee ſaued, they muſt labour to come out of this eſtate, & endeuour ſo to heare with their hearts that they may be turned vnto God both in mind, heart, and life.

(e) 2. Chr. 34. 27.

(f) Pſ. 27, 8.

II. point. The dutie commaunded: namely, to heare. Hearing in Scripture is not onely to liſten with the bodily eare: but to be attētiue to that, which is taught, and with attention to bring faith, conuerſion, and obedience euery way. Eph. 4.21,22, the hearing of Chriſt is notably deſcribed: It is not ſo much to conceiue the the doctrine of Christ in our minds, and to be able to vtter it, as to die vnto sinne, and to the lusts of the flesh, and to rise to newnesse of life. And indeed, a man doth heare and learne no more of Gods word, than hee doth beleeue and practise. From whence we are again to be admonished: that we so heare with attention, that by hearing we suffer our selues to be changed: and that with our change, we ioyne care to beleeue, and conscience to obey. This is that saving hearing which bringeth eternall life: all other hearing doth increase our sinnes to our further condemnation. Whereby also appeareth the fearefull state of many, who lend onely the outward bodily eare to heare the word, but their hearts bee not mooued, nor their liues changed thereby.

II. point. What is to be heard? namely, That which the spirit saith vnto the Churches. Which words must bee referred to that which went before, & not to that which followeth: for this commaundement belongs to the matter of the Epistle which went before. The promise following rather concernes the persons themselues than the matter. The things then that are to bee heard, are these. Christ his sharpe reproofe for sin: his threatnings of punishment: a remedie prescribed: & motiues to practise the same, especially repentance: for of all these Christ spake before.

The Vse. From this, that Christ bids them heare these things which cõcerned their estate in sinnes, & amendment by repentance, we learne two things. First, that it is a most necessarie thing for euerie church of God, and euerie member thereof, to know and consider their own wants and sinnes: and also, the iudgements of God that hang ouer them for the same. Secondly, that after any man, or any church hath considered of their sinnes, and of Gods iudgements; it is a most necessary thing, to turne vnto God by true repentance, if they haue not repented: and if they haue repented, to renew the same daily, & do it more: that so Gods iudgements both priuat and common may be auoided. We therefore must hereby be moued to search into our own wayes, to find out our owne sinnes, and to consider of Gods iudgements thereby deserued, that by true repentance wee may turne vnto God, and so escape his fearefull iudgements.

Further, these words, What the spirit saith vnto the Churches, containe two reasons to moue euerie man to heare. 1. Because they are spoken by the spirit, that is, the holy ghost. 2. because they are not spoken to one man, or one church alone, but to all churches. For the first: It may bee demanded seeing Christ spake these words, How can it be sayd that the spirit speaketh the same? Both may stand: first, because all the outward actions of any person in trinitie are common to the rest. But to teach the church is an outward action of Christ, and therefore it agreeth to the father, and to the holy ghost: As when the father created things in the beginning, the sonne also created, and the holy ghost created them. So here when the sonne teacheth, the father teacheth, and the holy ghost teacheth: For as the three persons are one in nature, so must they be ioyned in all outward actions. Secondly, Christ saith the spirit speaketh, because he now sitting at the right hand of the father, doth not teach his church in bodily presence, but by his spirit, which after his ascention hee sent to be their comforter and instructor.

Here then obserue that the holy ghost speaketh to the church in Scripture. The church of Rome appoints a Iudge to speake vnto men in al matters of controuersie, which is the church, because (say they) A iudge must speake: and Christ is absent from his church: and the word is a dumbe letter, and cannot speake: Therefore the church must needes bee iudge. But they erre grosly: The church cannot be iudge: It is but Christs minister to put in execution that which hee commandeth. Christ therefore must bee iudge vnto his church by Scripture, which is not a dumbe iudge, for therein his spirit speaketh plainely and sufficiently for the resoluing of any point in controuersie, that is needfull in Gods church.

The second reason to attention is, because these things are spoken to all Churches. Where we see that things spoken to one church agree to all. From whence we must learne this speciall dutie in reading and hearing Gods holy word: namely, to read and heare with application.

cation. We muſt not reſt in a flouriſhing knowledge of the ſtorie, but apply euery precept and example vnto our ſelues. If it be an example of vertue, wee muſt apply it to our ſelues for imitation: if it be an example of vice, we muſt apply it to our ſelues to moue vs to eſchew and auoid the like. For God would haue all to learne that which hee ſpeaketh vnto one. And thus much of the commandement.

To him that ouercommeth will I giue to eate of the tree of life, which is in the middeſt of the paradiſe of God. Theſe words containe the ſecond part of this concluſion, to wit, a moſt excellent promiſe: wherein conſider two points, Firſt, to whom it is made. Secondly, what is promiſed. For the firſt. The promiſe is made to him that ouercommeth: That is, to him that in fighting, preuaileth againſt all the ſpirituall enemies of his ſaluation, ſinne, ſathan, hell, and condemnation. There bee three things requiſit to make a man able to ouercome theſe enemies. Firſt, he muſt be borne anew in Chriſt, of water, and of the ſpirit, 1. Ioh. 5. 4. He that is borne of God ouercommeth the world, ſo by regeneratiõ he is freed from the bondage of hell, death, ſinne, and Sathan. Secondly, hee muſt haue true faith, by vertue whereof hee muſt denie and renounce himſelfe, and bee whatſoeuer he is in the death, paſſion, & obediẽce of Chriſt. Therfore S. Iohn ſaith in the ſame place: This is the victorie which ouercommeth the world, euen your faith. For when a man is in Chriſt, by faith hee is made partaker of Chriſt his victorie vpon the croſſe, and by it receiueth power to ſubdue his owne corruptions, the world, and the diuell. Thirdly, hee that would ouercome muſt keepe faith, that is, true religion, and a good conſcience, ſtanding out in life and death againſt all aduerſarie power whatſoeuer.

The Vſe. In this, that life euerlaſting is promiſed to them that ouercome. Firſt, we obſerue that the doctrine of vniuerſall grace, affirming that the promiſes of the goſpell for life and ſaluation belong to all and euerie man whatſoeuer, vnleſſe hee will reiect them, is a deuice of mans braine. For life eternall is not promiſed to euerie man as he is a man comming of Adam: bnt to a man as hee is in Chriſt by faith, and a new creature. The promiſes of the goſpell bee vniuerſall indeed to all that ouercome: but that is a propertie which reſtraines them wholly to true beleeuers. Secondly, hereby we are taught ſo to liue, that we may ſay truly in the teſtimonie of a good conſcience, we haue ouercome all our ſpirituall enemies, and do continually ſtand conquerours ouer them. This is a matter of endleſſe ioy & comfort, which will cheere the ſoule in greateſt diſtreſſe: But to liue and lie in ſinne, is or will bee a hell to the conſcience. What auaile the treaſures & honors of this world to any man, while his conſcience ſhall tell him he is a vaſſall to ſinne and ſathan? for while he continueth in that eſtate, he is out of the fauour of God, and hath no part nor portion in the kingdome of heauen. Therefore it ſtandeth vs vpon to labour to feele in our harts the certaine euidence of this victorie ouer our ſpirituall enemies, by the ſure teſtimonie of the ſpirit of grace.

The ſecond point is the thing promiſed, to wit, life euerlaſting, noted by this gift, To eate of the tree of life. And it is ſet out vnto vs by two circumſtances. Firſt, by the cauſe of it. Secondly, by the place where it is to bee found. The cauſe is Chriſt Ieſus: I will giue to him to eat of the tree of life. Where he maketh an oppoſition betweene himſelfe and the firſt Adam. The firſt Adam ſinned; and thereby caſt himſelfe with all his poſterity out of the earthly paradiſe, and loſt the benefit of the tree of life: But Chriſt the ſecond Adam commeth and ſuffereth for ſinne, and thereby openeth the way to a better paradiſe, than the firſt Adam loſt: and to all that ouercome he giueth libertie to enter in, and to eate of the tree of life. The tree of life properly, was a tree placed in the middeſt of the earthy paradiſe: and it was ſo called, firſt becauſe it was a pledge and ſacrament vnto Adam, that he ſhould liue for euer if hee continued in obedience to God: ſecondly, becauſe it had in it (as may be proued) vertue and power, whereby it would haue preſerued him from death and old age for euer, if hee had ſtood in his innocencie.

This earthly tree of life was a figure and ſigne of Chriſt our Sauiour and mediator: who liueth an eternall ſpirituall life, not onely as hee is God, but as hee is mediator, and that not for himſelf alone, but for this end, that hee may conuey quickning ſpirituall life to all that beleeue in him: and for this cauſe hee tearmeth himſelfe the tree of life. Further, he ſaith, He will giue hereof to eate: To eate, ſometime ſignifieth to beleeue: Iohn. 6. 50. but it cannot heare be ſo taken; For faith endeth with this life, and hath no vſe afterward. Therefore to eate, in this place ſignifieth to haue immediat fellowſhip with Chriſt in heauen: where Chriſt ſhall bee vnto him a tree of life to make him liue for euer.

In this promiſe note two points. I. In what things eternal life conſiſteth: namely, in immediat fellowſhip and communion with Chriſt in heauen. Secondly, that life eternall ſtandeth not in outward meanes, as meat, drinke, clothing, phyſicke, recreation, ſleepe, and ſuch like: but in an immediat partaking with Chriſt in all his bleſſings. So that when Chriſt is all in all vnto vs immediatly, then do we eat of the tree of life, and therby ſhall liue eternally.

II. Circumſt. The place where eternall life is to be had, is in the paradiſe of God. This paradiſe of God is the third heauen, a place wherein the Lord doth manifeſt himſelf in his glorious maieſty, and which he hath prepared for the glory of all his elect. Hereof Chriſt ſpake to the theefe on the croſſe, ſaying, This day thou ſhalt be with me in paradiſe, Luk. 23. 43. and hither was Paule wrapped in viſion: 2. Cor. 12. and ſaw and heard things that cannot bee vttered, and he calleth it the third heauen, in reſpect of the heauens vnder it, for the place wherein we breath is the firſt heauen, the ſtarrie firmament is the ſecond heauen, and this paradiſe of God is the third: which is therefore called paradiſe, becauſe it is a place of endleſſe ioy and pleaſure. And the adding of the name of God, doth not onely put a difference betweene it and Adams earthly paradiſe, but alſo ſheweth it to be a great and moſt excellent place. So Rahel ſaith, I haue wreſtled with my ſiſter (a) the wreſtlings of God, that (a) Gen. 30. 8. is ſtrong wreſtlings. And in the Pſalmes the mountaines of God, do ſignifie high and mightie mountaines. And that this paradiſe is ſuch an excellent, place appeareth at large, Reuel. 22. For therein muſt come none vncleane thing, but the Saints and Angels do there enioy the preſence of God, and behold his glorie ſo much as the creature is able to comprehend: There God communicateth himſelfe to all the elect, and becommeth all things vnto them immediatly; ſo that this muſt needs bee a place of all ioy and comfort.

The conſideration whereof muſt admoniſh vs to ſeeke the things that bee aboue, that wee may haue a place in this heauenly paradiſe. For why ſhould we ſet our hearts vpon the vaine glorie of this world which paſſeth away as a ſhadow and commeth to nothing, and in the end is but labour and ſorrow, when wee haue all that the world can affoord? But the ioyes and glorie of this paradiſe of God bee endleſſe and vnſpeakeable: Let vs therefore denie our ſelues, depend vpon Chriſt, and in all things keepe faith and a good conſcience vnto the end. And thus much for the firſt Epiſtle.

Verſe. 8. And vnto the Angell of the Church of the Smirnians write, theſe things ſayth he that is the firſt and the laſt, which was dead and is aliue.

In this verſe and the reſt that follow, to the twelfth, is layd downe the ſecond letter or Epiſtle of Chriſt to another church of Aſia, called Smyrna. Before the Epiſtle Chriſt giues a ſecond particular commaundement vnto Iohn; touching the writing hereof vnto this church in theſe words, And vnto the Angell of the Church of the Smirnians write: Which is prefixed to this Epiſtle, that this church, and all other churches of God might bee aſſured, that Iohn had ſufficient warrant and calling for the writing hereof. Which thing is neceſſarie to euerie pen-man of the holie Ghoſt, that the church need not to doubt of the authoritie of Scripture, but receiue the ſame as the pure word of God.

Hence we may gather, that all ordinarie Miniſters of the goſpell muſt haue warrant and calling for euery doctrine which they teach in Gods church: for the Apoſtles, that were extraordinarie men, of more excellent gifts, might doe nothing without warrant. Of the parts of this commaundement we ſpake in the firſt verſe of this chapter. The vſe.

The

The Epiſtle it ſelfe followeth, containing three parts: a Preface, a Propoſition, and a Concluſion. The Preface containeth a preparation to the matter of the Epiſtle, in theſe words: Theſe things, ſayth he, that is, the firſt to the laſt, which was dead, and is aliue. In this Preface he ſheweth in whoſe name this Epiſtle was written vnto this Church, namely in Chriſts name: which he ſetteth downe for two cauſes; Firſt, to ſtir vp the people in this church to a religious attention, and a reuerent care of receiuing the things therin written, as the pure words of Chriſt Ieſus. Secondly, becauſe no commaundement in the matter of Gods worſhip and religion is to be receiued from any creature, but from Chriſt alone. And therefore this Epiſtle concerning the true worſhip and religion of God is propounded in his name alone. In this Preface Chriſt is deſcribed by two notable Arguments: Firſt, To be the firſt and the laſt: ſecond, that he was dead, but is aliue. The meaning of them both was ſhewed in the 17 and 18 verſes of the former chapter, whence they are borrowed. By the firſt, Chriſt would ſignifie, that he is euerliuing God, without beginning or ending, before all creatures and after them. By the ſecond, that hee is true man, and aſſumed mans nature to ſuffer death for our ſinnes, and roſe againe to liue for euer, and to giue to man eternall life.

In this deſcription two points of doctrine are expreſſed.

I. That Chriſt is a perſon, conſiſting of two natures; Godhead, and Manhood: He is the firſt and the laſt, and therefore God: He was dead, and is aliue, and therefore is true man. If any aske how one perſon can conſiſt of two natures? Anſw. As bodie and ſoule concurre to make one man: ſo the Godhead and Manhood of Chriſt concurre to make one Chriſt; and therefore are vnited.

II. Doctr. Here is the foundation of all true comfort vnto Gods Church and people, in any miſerie or affliction. Which ſtandeth in two points: firſt, that Chriſt is able to helpe them in any miſerie; either by freeing them quite from it, or eaſing them in it, ſeeing hee is God, the firſt and laſt. Secondly, that as he is able, ſo he is willing and readie to helpe them; for he is man, who tooke on him our nature, died for vs, and roſe againe vnto life, to giue to vs eternall life. This is the very ſcope and end for which Chriſt thus deſcribeth himſelfe to this church that was in affliction. Here then wee haue direction, where and whence to ſeeke for true comfort in any tribulation of this life: namely, wee muſt haue recourſe to Chriſt, and in him conſider both his ability and his willingneſſe, to eaſe all his children in affliction. And by theſe wee muſt arme our ſelues againſt deſpaire, and againſt immoderate griefe and ſorrow vnder the croſſe.

Verſe 9. I know thy workes, and tribulation and pouertie, (but thou art rich) and I know the blaſphemie of them which ſay they are Iewes and are not, but are the Synagogue of Satan.

Here beginneth the Propoſition of this Epiſtle, containing the matter and ſubſtance of the whole Epiſtle. This Propoſition hath two parts: a commendation of this Church: and counſell how to behaue her ſelfe in the time to come. The commendation is in this ninth verſe, wherewithall are mingled ſome comforts vnto this Church, being in affliction.

I know thy workes. Theſe words were handled in the former Epiſtle. The meaning breefely is this: I know all thy dealings, & thy waies, I know the whole tenor of thy life; and I doe withall well like and approoue of them. Here Chriſt ſetteth downe an excellent propertie touching himſelfe: namely, that he ſeeth and knoweth all things whatſoeuer, nothing is hid from him: and that this Church might bee reſolued hereof, hee repeateth this vnto them: I know thy workes. Neither is it any vaine repetition; being indeed the ground of all true pietie, and ſyncere obedience.

Wee therefore in all our affaires are here taught to labour, to bee fully reſolued in our conſciences, that Chriſt is with vs, and ſeeth vs, and knoweth the whole tenour of our wayes in thoughts, words, and deeds. Dauid had learned this, when as he ſayd, (a) Thou knoweſt my ſitting and my riſing, thou vnderſtandeſt my (a) Pſal. 139. 2, 3.

thoughts a farre off. Thou compassest my paths and my lying downe, and art accustomed vnto all my wayes: there is not a word in my toung, but thou knowest it wholly. This perswasion is very necessarie; for it will moue a man to make conscience of euery thought, word, and action, and of his whole behauiour: but where this perswasion is wanting, there is no religion in the heart, nor good behauior in the life. When this takes place, Religion beginneth and encreaseth with it; so doth good conscience and true obedience: for hee that hath the Lord alwayes before him, will not greatly fall, Psal.16.8.

And tribulation. Marke here how workes, that is, a godly conuersation, and tribulation goe together. Hence we learne, that God will haue tribulations ioyned with his grace; where hee bestowes his graces, there also hee layeth tribulation: and that for weightie causes, as to humble them for their sinnes past, to make triall of their faith and other graces, and to preuent in them sinnes to come. The consideration whereof must moone all Gods children in this our Church to looke for some tribulation: for God hath bestowed among vs plentie of his graces, with long peace, and many outward blessings: and his will is, that trouble and affliction should accompanie the same.

Further, Christ saying, I know thy tribulations, would hereby comfort this Church; as if hee should say, True it is thou art in great trouble, but it commeth not by chaunce, but by the speciall prouidence of my father; and I do know and regard the same. Psal.113.6,7, The raising vp of the poore and needie, is made a fruit of Gods beholding the things that are done vpon the earth. This is an excellent comfort for any church or people that be in affliction: for when they shall know, that beside the hand of God therein, Christ Iesus regardeth their sorrowes; this must needes arme them with long suffering and ioyfulnesse. We in this Church (as hath beene shewed) may persuade our selues, that God will send tribulations among vs; now when they come, what shall we doe? Shall wee sinke vnder them? No: but wee must now forecast to vse the meanes whereby we may stay our hearts vnder the smart and burden of them; that is, by setling our hearts in this perswasion, that Christ seeth our affliction, and withall hath speciall care to comfort or deliuer vs, as hee seeth most for his glory, and the good of our soules.

In the next words Christ setteth downe two kinds of tribulations in this church, Pouertie, and Reproch: By Pouertie he meaneth want of temporall things, to maintaine this naturall life. Where obserue sundry things, 1. That true religion and pietie will not free any from outward pouertie. The religion of this church was excellent, and yet they were in want: and therefore let no man think, because he is godly, he shall bee rich, or not fall into pouertie. If it be sayd: Godlinesse hath the promise not onely of the life to come, but also of this life, that is, of earthly blessings and riches: I answere, it is true; but yet with difference: Eternall blessings onely are promised absolutely; and temporall blessings with restraint, namely, if they serue for Gods glory and the good of his children: otherwise they must want as this Church did. II. The Lord would comfort this Church in her pouertie, by saying that hee knew it and regarded it. Where wee see a meanes to comfort all those that be in want of outward blessings: They must consider, that Christ seeth & obserueth their want whatsoeuer; and if they be his seruants, he will free them from it, so it bee for his glory and the good of their soules; or els arme them with patience to beare it, if they pray vnto him. III. Christ here approueth of works, where he acknowledgeth pouertie: so that good workes and pouertie may stand together. And therefore good workes doe not consist onely in large almes, as the Church of Rome would haue it; though these haue due reward and prayse in their place. But euery worke of a mans lawfull calling, done in obedience to God, with an honest heart, from a good conscience, and for Gods glory, is a good worke, bee the calling neuer so base. Thus may the shepheard please God in his calling as well as the magistrate or minister. For it is not the matter of the worke that commends it vnto God, but the manner of doing. 1.Tim.4.8.

But thou art rich. Here Chriſt intendeth both to prayſe and to comfort this church: as if hee ſhould ſay, Notwithſtanding thy outward pouertie, yet thou art rich in God, as Luke 12.21. Men are rich in God in two reſpects: I. when they are reconciled to God in the merites of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 8,9. Chriſt became poore for our ſakes, that we through his pouertie might be made rich: that is, that wee might haue the pardon of ſinne, and bee receiued into Gods fauour. Hereupon Dauid cals the Lord his portion and his cup. And durable riches, and righteouſneſſe are with wiſedome, Proverb. 8. 18. II. When they receiue his grace, whereby they are enabled to bring forth good works, both in duties to God and man. Of this Paule ſpeaketh, when he exhorteth rich men to be rich in good works, and to lay vp for themſelues a good foundation againſt the time to come, 1. Tim. 6.16.

In this commendation ſundry duties are to be learned: I. poore men are here taught, ſeeing God denieth vnto them earthly riches and wealth, to labour to be rich in God, to bee reconciled vnto him in Chriſt, and to get ſuch grace, that they may doe good duties both vnto God and man, in faith and with a good conſcience. II. Rich men, on whom God beſtoweth outward wealth, muſt hereby be admoniſhed to embrace Paules charge, 1. Tim. 6. 17,18, Aboue all things ſeeke for true riches in the liuing God: and not ſuffer theſe outward bleſsings to puffe vp their minds; but vſe them as meanes to make thē rich in God, by getting Gods grace, doing good workes, and diſtributing to the poore. This admonition is moſt neceſſarie, for though the promiſes of Gods grace be not denied vnto the rich; yet ſure it is, riches doe choke the ſeede of grace in the heart, and hinder the care men ought to haue for ſpirituall riches. And hence it commeth, that moe of the poorer ſort receiue and obey the goſpell than of the rich. III. Herein behold the madneſſe of the world. For the moſt mens greateſt labour and care is after worldly wealth and honour: neuer regarding the true treaſures of Gods grace which will commend them vnto God, when the other muſt periſh, and the wicked owners thereof. Let vs therefore iudge as Chriſt doth of true riches, and accordingly labour to be rich in his ſight.

The ſecond part of their tribulation is the reproch and blaſphemie of their enemies, in theſe words: I know the blaſphemie of them which ſay they are Iewes, and are not, &c. that is, I know the greeuous ſlaunders and reuilings which thine enemies faſten vpon thee. For Blaſphemie ſignifieth not onely ſpeeches of diſgrace againſt God, but alſo againſt men. As Naboth was accuſed, 1 King. 21.10, to haue blaſphemed God and the king. And of this Paule ſayth: When wee are reuiled, wee bleſſe: when wee are blaſphemed, wee pray, 1. Cor. 4. 12,13.

Hence wee learne, that all churches and men that deſire truely to ſerue God, and to keepe good conſciences, muſt looke for ſlaunders and reuilings: Neither muſt this ſeeme ſtrange vnto them; for Chriſt hath ſayd, it muſt bee ſo. Nay, rather they might maruell, if they ſhould ſuffer no reproches for Chriſts ſake, ſeeing hee hath ſayd: Curſed are you, when all men ſpeake well of you, Luke 6.26. It is indeed a greeuous thing, to bee ſo euill rewarded for well doing: but this muſt bee their comfort, and ground of patience, That Chriſt heareth and knoweth euery reproch, and will in his good time remedie the ſame.

The perſons which blaſpheme this Church are thus deſcribed: Which ſay they be Iewes, and are not, but are of the Synagogue of Sathan. As in other famous cities, ſo in Smyrna dwelt ſome of the Iewes, who had their Synagogues, that is, ſuch places of aſſemblies, where they ſerued God after their manner: and though they denied Chriſt, yet they thought themſelues to be the onely true worſhippers of God in all the world; and therefore did blaſpheme and raile vpon the Chriſtians that beleeued in Chriſt. And of theſe Chriſt ſayth, though by birth they were Iewes, yet indeed they were not the Iſraell of God, nor his true worſhippers, as they accounted themſelues. Whereby in generall we may ſee, from whom come railings and reproches on Gods ſeruants; namely, from thoſe which ſay they are true worſhippers of God, and are not: For he is not a Iew that is one outward, Rom. 2.28. He therefore that ſlandereth the truth and the profeſſors thereof is an enemie to Christ, as well as to his seruants: for no friend of Christ can possibly speake euill of his gospell and religion. This should be considered for the comfort of the godly, because they that endeuour to serue God in synceritie, are of all men most subiect to reproch: He that refraineth from euill, maketh himselfe a prey, Isay 59.15.

Touching these Iewes, two points are to bee considered: I. What they are in their owne opinion: II. What they are in the iudgement of Christ. For the first, because they were Iewes, by birth descending from Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, Gods auntient seruants, therefore they thought themselues the onely true worshippers of God, as their forefathers were. And this is the manner of all wicked men; to blesse (a) themselues in their wickednesse: and whatsoeuer they doe, yet still to say and thinke, God will blesse them. Take an heretick, who ouerthrowes the truth of God by his errors, and he will say he teacheth that which in conscience hee is persuaded is the truth, for which hee will shed his bloud, and whereto he would haue all men yeeld. So take a professed witch, man or woman, they will say, all that they doe is by the power of the good Angels, and by some speciall gifts giuen vnto them aboue others; but they will not bee brought to acknowledge, that they doe any thing by vertue of their league with the deuil, from whence indeed commeth all they can doe. And so the carnall protestants of our time, they looke for Gods blessings in this life, and for eternall life by Christ after death, and yet walke in the broad way to destruction, in sinne & profanesse. Thus they blesse themselues in their euill wayes, and make Christ a pack-horse for their iniquities. But in the example of these Iewes we must learn to lay downe all presumptuous thoughts of our owne goodnesse and vaine persuasions of gods fauor, without his true grace, and rather looke vnto our sinnes, and bee humbled for them, that God may lift vs vp. II. point. Christs iudgement of them is this: They are not Iewes, but a Synagogue of Sathan; that is, a companie of men that seemed to serue God after the Iewish maner, but did indeed worship the deuill. Herein are many things to be considered,

(a) Psal.10.3.

I. How this could be true of any companie of the Iewes, who were the chosen people of God? Answ. Election is twofold: speciall, and generall. Gods speciall election is, when in his eternall counsell he chuseth a man to life eternall; and this befell not all the Iewes, but some onely: Gods generall election is, whē he vouchsafeth any people to become his visible church, to haue and shew the outward signes and priuiledges of his couenant: & thus was the nation of the Iewes elected, and therefore were circumcised, and receiued the passeouer. From this generall election, a church and people may fall, as the Iewes did, and so became the Synagogue of Sathan; being indeed neuer within the particular calling, from which a man cannot fall away: for Gods election remaineth sure, 2. Tim. 2. 19. his calling is without repentance, Rom. 11. 29. Rom.9.

II. point. At what time did the Iewes begin to be a synagogue of Sathan? Answ. Not at the crucifying of the Lord of life, (though that were a most heinous sinne) for though some therin sinned of malice, yet many did it of ignorance. This Peter confesseth, Act. 3. 17. And therfore in his first Sermon after Christs ascension, telleth them, That the promise belonged to them and to their seed that were a farre off, Act. 2. 39. But when the Apostles had a long time preached Christ vnto them, & conuinced their consciences out of the old testament that he was the true Messias, and yet they remained obstinate, reiecting and persecuting both them and their doctrine; then they ceased to bee a church of God, and became the synagogue of Sathan: for this cause Paule and Barnabas shooke off the dust of their feet against them, and turned to the Gentils, Whereby we see when a church of God becommeth no church, namely, not so soone as they hold an heresie: for the church of the Galatians held iustification by workes, yet thereupon ceased not to be a church; but when they embrace an heresie against the foundation of religion, and be conuicted of it, not by priuate men, but by Apostolicall authority, or by publick iudiciall sentence of the church, from the authoritie of Gods word. Act.13.46.51

Hence we may learne, first, what we are to thinke and iudge of the church of the papists, of the Libertines and Anabaptists, familie of Loue, and such like; name-namely, that they are no churches of God: for they hold hereſies againſt the foundation which the Church long agone condemned by Apoſtolicall and Iudiciall authoritie. Againe, here we learne what to iudge of this our church of England: many there be that ſay wee haue no church among vs, becauſe ſome priuat men haue reprooued the ſame for ſome things that are amiſſe, and yet they are not reformed. But this is a fond and fooliſh reaſon: For firſt, the errour muſt be againſt the foundation, and yet that maketh not a church to bee no church, vnleſſe it be obſtinatly maintained after ſufficient reproofe and iudiciall conuiction by the word of God: But no ſuch thing can be affirmed of vs, and therfore we remaine the true church of God.

III. point. How became the Iewes a Sinagogue of Sathan? Anſw. Through their vnbeleefe: as is plainely prooued, Roman. 11. 20. Obiect. But they held the word of God and defended the bookes of the old Teſtament, for which we are beholding vnto them. Anſw. Indeed they held the letter: but if we regard the true meaning of the Prophets, and the ſubiect of the old Teſtament, which is Ieſus Chriſt, that they raced out and denied. And ſo though they held the letter, yet worſhipping God out of Chriſt they worſhipped an idoll, and not that God which would giue vnto them eternal life. For out of Chriſt there is no ſaluation. And ſo wee may ſay of the church of Rome: though they hold the bookes of the Old and New teſtament, with the Creed of the Apoſtles (whereupon ſome ſay wee ought not to depart from them,) yet the truth is, that indeed they hold them not. The Chriſt of the Papiſts is but a fained Chriſt: for they take from him both his nature (eſpecially his humanitie) and his offices: and therefore wee haue iuſt cauſe to ſeparat from them.

This example of the Iewes, that were once a moſt famous people, but are now become the Sinagogue of Sathan muſt be ſet before our eyes continually. For whē al the world were reiected, they ſtood high in Gods fauour: but now for their vnbeleefe they are caſt off from God, and are become the Sinagogue of the diuell. Which muſt admoniſh vs, Not to be high minded but to feare, Ro. 11. 20. For if God ſpared not the naturall branches, them that were his firſt choſen people, he will not ſpare vs that are but wild oliues graffed into the true vine. We muſt therefore take heed of vnbeleefe, and labour for true faith, which we muſt teſtifie by obedience in our liues & cōuerſations.

Verſe. 10. Feare none of thoſe things which thou ſhalt ſuffer. Behold it ſhall come to paſſe that the diuell ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon that yee may be tried, and yee ſhall haue tribulation ten dayes. Be thou faithfull vnto the death and I will giue thee the crowne of life.

Here followeth the ſecond part of the propoſition of this Epiſtle, to wit, that heauenly and ſpirituall counſell which Chriſt giueth to this church of Smyrna: which I call counſell, becauſe in the next chapter our Sauiour Chriſt calleth ſuch kind of inſtruction by the name of counſell. Firſt, here note that Chriſt commendeth this church and giueth her counſell, but doth not at all rebuke her for her faults, as he did the church of Epheſus. Hence the Papiſts gather, that Gods church, and ſo the members thereof, may liue without ſinne, and fulfill the law. But they are deceiued: Chriſt therfore abſtaineth from reproofe of this church, not for that he had not any thing againſt them, but for theſe two cauſes eſpecially. Firſt, becauſe this church of Smyrna did truely repent and beleeue, and did not decay in grace as the church of Epheſus did; and therefore had the pardon of her ſinnes, and was in Gods loue and fauour. Secondly, this church did indeuour to obey Chriſt, and to teſtifie her faith and loue thereby. Now God accepteth the deſire and will of obedience in his children, as obedience it ſelfe: and therefore did not reprooue them for any fault that was among them.

Seeing this church being in affliction is ſo farre forth accepted, that Chriſt reproueth nothing in her; wee are taught it is profitable for Gods church and people ſometime to bee in affliction: for thereby, are the gifts and graces of God preſerued: as Faith and Repentance; and many greeuous ſinnes preuented, which otherwiſe Gods children might fall into.

The

The counſell it ſelfe containeth three parts. A precept. A prophefie. And a precept againe. The firſt precept is in theſe words, Feare none of thoſe things which thou ſhalt ſuffer. This precept may ſeeme to be againſt other places of Scripture, as Phil. 2. 12. Worke out your ſalvation in feare and trembling. And Rom. 11. 20. Be not high minded but feare. Anſw. There bee three kinds of feare. I. naturall feare. II. feare proceeding from grace. III. a diſtruſtfull fearefull proceeding from vnbeleefe. I. The naturall feare is a declining and eſchewing of death and thoſe things that tend thereto: this feare is in all men, in as much as euerie thing deſireth to preſerue it ſelfe: this was in Chriſt, who in his agonie feared death, as it was a ſeparation of ſoule and bodie aſunder: yet this was no ſinne in him, but onely an infirmitie without ſinne. The ſecond kind of feare, is that which commeth from grace, Mal. 1. 6. If I be a maiſter where is mine honor, If I be a father where is my feare. This feare is a reuerent awe towards God in regard of his mercie and iudgements; and this is a vertue and no ſinne. The third is diſtruſtfull feare; when men for affliction forſake religion and obedience to God, ſtanding more in feare of men than of God: and this is that feare which Chriſt in this place forbiddeth, being a ſin that draweth men from God vnto perdition.

In this commaundement Chriſt doth two things. Firſt, he giueth them and vs to vnderſtand, what is the ſinne in which euerie man is conceiued, and the ſeed whereof remaineth ſtil in the children of God; namely, diſtruſtfull vnbeleefe, whereby men feare the authoritie of the creature more than the glorious maieſty of the eternall God: which proceedeth from this, that men conſider not of God as he extendeth his prouidence ouer all things, and as he is a mightie iudge taking reuenge vpon all ſin and wickedneſſe.

Secondly, here Chriſt deſcribeth the meanes wherby Gods people may arme themſelues againſt all perils and troubles whatſoeuer, to wit, Chriſtian fortitude: which is a gift of God proceeding frō true faith inabling a man to lay aſide all feare, and with courage to vndergo al dangers whatſoeuer, that he may in life and death maintaine faith and a good conſcience. This vertue God preſcribed to the Prophets when they were to enter into their calling, and our Sauiour Chriſt to his Apoſtles, and to this church of Smyrna. And it were to be wiſhed that all the miniſters of the goſpell might ſpeake vnto their people as Chriſt ſpeaketh vnto this church, Feare not. But the truth is, if they deale faithfully they muſt change their note, and ſay with Ioell, (a) Waile and houle ye prieſts and people lying in ſackcloth and aſhes, becauſe the day of the Lords vengeance is at hand. For it is lamentable to ſee the ſtate of the whole body of our people, of whom wee may generally ſay with the Prophet, (b) There is no knowledge of God in the land. And where knowledge is, there is litle conſcience to liue therafter. Conſider alſo how the moſt are carnall minded, dead in ſin, they ſauour not the things that pertaine to Gods kingdome, but their hearts are wholly poſſeſſed with earthly deſires & delights, and ſpirituall things affect them not. Yea in all places wee ſhall ſee that as naturall ſleepe wrappeth vp the ſenſes of the body: ſo a ſpiritual ſlumber benummeth their minds and hearts. For though God preach daily vnto vs by his iudgements, yet like the old world wee know nothing of the euill day: we neuer cal to mind the iudgement to come. And if herunto we ioyne the common crying ſinnes of this land, as ſwearing, curſing, oppreſſion, Saboath breaking, drunkenneſſe, whordome, and all vncleanneſſe, yea Atheiſme it ſelfe the ground of all: How can we ſay with Chriſt, Feare not? yea rather wee muſt call men to repentance in ſackcloth and aſhes. For God is iealous of his glorie, neither will hee alway be chiding, nor winke at our iniquities, he hath whet his ſword, and bent his bow, and vnleſſe wee repent the day of hauocke will come ſhortly, wherein hee will take vengeance vpon all our iniquities. And although this be the common ſtate of our land, yet Chriſt hath his remnant among vs who mourne for the ſinnes and abhominations of the times, and doe endeuour to keepe faith and a good conſcience in all things: and to theſe it may be ſayd, Feare not, but take to your ſelues chriſtian courage, & arme your ſelues therewith; lay aſide all diſtruſtfull feare, and glorifie God in your hearts, hearts, ſtriue to keepe the faith in a pure conſcience vnto the end, and ſo ſhall Iſay. 66. 5. Chriſt appeare to your ioy when the wicked ſhall be aſhamed. And to moue Gods children to this chriſtian fortitude; Firſt, let them conſider what a iudgement of God is due vnto them that are diſtruſtfully fearfull, when they ſhould ſuffer any thing for the name of Chriſt, Reuel. 21. 8. They muſt haue their reward in the lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone among the damned. Secondly, let them obſerue the Lords preſence and his gracious promiſe of protePſa. 34. 7. ction in diſtreſſe, He will cauſe his Angels to pitch their tents about them that no perill ſhall hurt them. 2. King. 6. When a mightie armie came againſt Eliſha, his ſeruant was ſore afraid: but marke how he comfor(a) Verſ. 16. teth him, (a) Feare not (ſaith he) for they that be with vs are more than they that be with them: And ſo it is with Gods children. Thirdly, let them conſider that it is a moſt honourable eſtate to ſuffer any thing for the name of Chriſt. And therefore the Apoſtles reioyced exceedingly when

Act. 5. 41. they had bene beaten, That they were counted worthie to ſuffer any thing for Chriſts ſake. Gal. 5. 24. The croſſe of Chriſt is Paules whole reioycing. And if hee would boaſt of any thing it ſhould bee herein, 2. Cor. 12. 9, 10. This were Gods ſeruants affected: and therefore they that repent and beleeue, need not to feare what fleſh can do vnto them.

The ſecond part of Chriſts counſell is his propheſie: which is a prediction of that particular afflictions which this church of Smirna ſhould ſuffer: and firſt he prefixeth this note of attention, behold: then he ſetteth downe the propheſie it ſelfe, The diuell ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon. Behold, hereby he would teach vs an excellent leſſon: that wee muſt often conſider before hand of the day of our viſitation, wherein God will try vs, leſt we periſh therin: our Sauior Chriſt com(b) Lu. 19. 41. ming towards Ieruſalem (b) wept ouer it, and when he came to it hee foretold the finall deſtruction of that citie: which therefore came vpon them, becauſe they conſidered not the day of their viſitation, neither the things therein foretold that did concerne their peace. And the like deſtruction wil come vpon vs in this land, if we conſider not the dayes of our viſitation: let vs therefore now in the dayes of peace forecaſt what is to come, and prepare our ſelues againſt the day of the Lords triall; and ſo ſhall wee eſcape the fearefull and finall deſtruction that ſhall come vpon the wicked. It ſhall come to paſſe that the diuell ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon that ye may bee tried: and yee ſhall haue tribulation ten dayes. Theſe words containe Chriſts propheſie, wherin he ſheweth himſelfe to be true God: for as Iſay in many places ſheweth, it is a propertie of God alone to (c) foretell a particular (c) Iſa. 44. 7. affliction that is contingent. But ſome wil ſay, others can foretel certaine things to come; as the Phyſition, the ſicke mans death; and the Aſtronomer the time of the eclips; how then is this proper to God? Anſw. The Phyſition foretelleth the ſicke mans death, onely by vertue of cauſes preſent, in which the future death is to him apparant: And the Aſtronomers foretelleth the eclips by the conſideration of the naturall and ordinarie courſe of the heauens in preſent, and by that can come to foretell it in time to come. So that ſimply none can foretell a thing contingent, except he ſee it preſent in the cauſes: but Chriſt foretelleth things to come ſimply of himſelf, though no cauſe be preſent, as appeareth in this place.

In this propheſie Chriſt deſcribeth this affliction by ſundry arguments. Firſt by the cauſe thereof, which is the diuell. Secondly, by the parties that were to be afflicted, Some of you of the Church of Smyrna. Thirdly, by the kind of puniſhment, Impriſonment. Fourthly, by the end thereof, their triall. And fiftly by the time of it continuance, for ten dayes.

1. Argument. The cauſe of their affliction is the diuell. Queſt. How can that be, for being a ſpirit he cannot offer violence to mens bodies to caſt them into priſon? Anſw. True, but he is the God of the world that ruleth in the hearts of the wicked: he inclineth their wils to hate Gods children, hee ſtirreth them vp to perſecute, and maketh them his inſtruments to caſt Gods ſeruants into priſon.

In this that the diuell cauſeth the affliction of Gods church, we learne ſundry points. 1. What manner of men thoſe be that perſecute the church of God? namely, wicked men, ſuch as are inſpired by Sathan, and wholly guided in mind, will, and in affection by him: this made Paule (a) 1. Tim. 1. 15. say, (a) He was the head of all sinners; because in persecuting the church of God he was guided by the diuell, and made his minister: which must teach vs to take heed how we persecute the church of God, or any member thereof, either in word or deed: for he that doth so is the vassall of Sathan in that action, and while he holdeth that course he sheweth himselfe to be no better than one that is wholly guided by the diuell: for the diuell is the principal agent in persecutions, and wicked men be his instruments.

II. Hereby wee are taught to take pittie vpon all persecutors, be they kings or monarks, or whatsoeuer. Yea wee must pray for them, though they be our enemies: because they are possessed and guided by the diuell, and in their persecutions do his will, and become his seruants and vassals.

III. Hence wee learne with what weapons we are to defend our selues in time of persecution: namely, with spirituall weapons of prayers, & inuocation, wherin we must shew our faith in Christ, our repentance & true obedience; for our principall aduersary is a spirit, and hereby we shall best defend our selues against him, and get the chiefest victorie. Elias (b) 1. Ki. 2. 12. for his prayer is called (b) The chariot and horsemen of Israell. Nothing doth so much preuaile in troubles and persecutions as prayer frō a penitent & beleeuing heart. And if God should send a forrain nation against vs, howsoeuer the weapons of the souldier must bee vsed, yet our principall weapons must bee prayer and fasting: for thereby we shall soonest foyle our principal aduersary Sathan, who feareth not the speare nor sword, and yet will flie before these spirituall weapons.

II. Argument. The parties that must be afflicted, were some of the church of Smyrna, not all.

III. Argument. The kind of their affliction was imprisonment.

IV. Argument. The end of their affliction, was the triall of their faith, hope, loue, and patience, with other graces of God, and the manifestation of the same, first to their owne conscience, and then vnto the world. In these three arguments note, first a speciall point touching Gods prouidence, to wit, that it is the first cause of all, aboue all causes, ruling and disposing them all. God in gouerning the world by his prouidence vseth instruments of two sorts: good, or euill. The good instruments are good Angels and regenerat men; by whome commeth no disorder, for God worketh both in them and by them. Wicked instruments, are the diuell and wicked men, and though God vse them well, yet from them is much disorder and sinne: for he worketh not in them, but onely by them, permitting their sinnes and disorders, that thereby he may shew forth his iustice, mercie, and power: which herein doe notably appeare in vsing these instrumēts, which be euill in themselues, that notwithstanding their malice he causeth wonderfull order: for first by his prouidence hee restraineth their furie and rage, so as they cannot shew it to the full as they desire. See this in the diuels persecution against this church: he cannot kill the members hereof, but onely cast them into prison: hee cannot imprison them all, but some onely: neither can he keepe them in prison alwaies, but for a short time. Secondly, by his prouidence hee turneth all that they doe, to the good of the church: the diuell afflicteth the church for the destruction and damnation of their soules; but God turneth it to their good, to make their faith manifest, and to preuent many sinnes in them. These things wee should often thinke of, and blesse Gods name for euer, that by his prouidence he doth maister Sathans power & malice: and so dispose of all actions of the wicked, that they tend to the good of his church. This must also teach vs to renounce our selues, and to put all our trust and confidence in Christ his prouidence, making that our comfort, our stay and protection in all distresse.

Againe, whereas the end of afflictions in Gods church is the trial of faith & other graces. Hence we are taught many things: First, to labour to haue in our hearts the power of godlinesse in true faith, and vnfained repentance; and not to content our selues with the forme and shew thereof in a naked profession only: For we must bee cast into the fierie triall of afflictions to see what is in our hearts. In the day of triall shewes will not serue the turne, nor stand vs in steed: Trials and afflictions will conſume them, as the fire doth droſſe and ſtubble. Secondly, to bee ioyfull and glad, when the Lords will is to call vs to ſuffer for his ſake: Becauſe this is a means to make knowne good graces in our hearts. Iames 1. 2. Brethren, count it exceeding great ioy, when yee fall into diuers afflictions, knowing that the triall of your faith bringeth forth patience.

V. Argument. The time of their continuance in affliction is for tenne dayes. By which ſome vnderſtand a long time: according vnto that which Iacob ſayth to Laban; Thou haſt changed my wages tenne times, that is, often. And ſo the Iſraelits (a) are ſayd to ſinne, tenne times againſt the Lord; that is, many times: but this Expoſition will not ſo fitly ſtand in this place; for Chriſt intendeth to comfort this church. But what comfort could this bee, to ſay they ſhould bee ſo long in affliction? Others expound tenne dayes to be tenne yeares. And ſo the word dayes is ſometime vſed to betoken yeares: for in the Scripture there bee yeares of dayes, as well as yeares of weekes. But though this expoſition may well ſtand with the words, yet none can ſhew by true record, That this church was afflicted only fourtenne yeares and no longer. Therfore a third expoſition is this, That by tenne dayes is meant ſome ſhort ſpace of time: and I ſo vnderſtand this place, becauſe it is moſt ſutable to all circumſtances. For here Chriſt intendeth to comfort this church, which is moſt fitly done, by foretelling a ſhort time of their affliction.

Gen. 31. 41.

(a) Numb. 14. 22.

The Vſe. In this circumſtance of time, Chriſt ſetteth downe two things: Firſt, that the affliction of Gods church and people are for a certaine time decreed of God, which cannot bee changed, lengthened, or ſhortened. Particular proofes hereof we haue in Scripture. So God foretold Abraham, That the afflictions of his people ſhould be 430 yeares: which time they were afflicted, eſpecially in Egypt: but at the ſame night when thoſe yeares were expired, they were led out of Egypt, and their afflictions ceaſed, Exod. 12. 46. And the 70 yeares captiuitie were well knowne vnto Daniell to bee determined of the Lord: And therefore hee armed himſelfe with patience during that time, and prayed not for deliuerance, vntill it ſhould bee expired.

The conſideration hereof muſt moue vs to arme our ſelues with patience when God ſhall ſend affliction, becauſe wee cannot deliuer our ſelues before the time which God hath appointed: for the continuance of our afflictions is ſet downe by God, and cannot bee changed by vs. Secondly, here Chriſt ſheweth, that the afflictions of his church are but for a ſhort time: and therefore Paule (a) calleth them momentanie, in regard of the eternall weight of glorie which ſhall be reueiled at the end of this life, and neuer haue end. Which is a ſingular ground of comfort vnto the child of God in any diſtreſſe.

(a) 2. Cor. 4. 17.

Thus we ſee the parts of this propheſie; yet in the words there is a further thing intended, for euery word containeth a reaſon to comfort this church: as firſt from the cauſe of their perſecution, which is the deuill; and therefore they muſt not feare, for if hee caſt them into priſon, their caſe is good, he is Gods enemie, and ſo the Lord is on their ſide, who then can bee againſt them to doe them hurt? Secondly, not all your whole church, but onely ſome (ſayth Chriſt) muſt be afflicted. Thirdly, Sathan cannot kill you, but onely caſt you into priſon. Fourthly, his impriſonment ſhall not tend to your damnation, but make for the triall of your grace. And laſtly, it is but for a ſhort time. In all which you may ſee the power of Gods prouidence ouerruling your enemie, and turning his rage vnto your ſaluation: and therefore take comfort and courage vnto your ſoules, lay aſide all feare and al dread, and keepe faith and good conſcience to the end.

The third part of this counſell, is a moſt bleſſed precept, containing moſt heauenly aduice: Bee thou faithfull vnto death, and I will giue thee the crowne of life. Gods ſeruants are called faithfull, in regard of their fidelitie which they owe to God: and that is in two reſpects: I. Euery member of Chriſt is baptized, wherein God for his part promiſeth Chriſt, with life euerlaſting: and the partie baptized promiſeth vnto God againe, that hee will denie himſelfe, and caſt himſelfe wholly vpon God in life and death, and keepe faith and a good conſcience. Which promiſe is called the Stipulation of a good conſcience, 1. Pet. 3. 21. And when a man keepeth this promiſe made to God, then is hee faithfull, and when hee breaketh it, hee is vnfaithfull. II. God giueth vnto his children many good gifts and graces, as knowledge, faith, repentance, and care to keepe a good conſcience, which he would haue them in all things to keepe and preſerue. And therefore Paule biddeth Timothie, (a) keepe that thing which is committed vnto him of truſt. Now a man is faithfull vnto God, when hee maketh good vſe of the gifts and graces of God, and ſtill preſerueth the ſame, vſing them for Gods glorie and the good of his owne ſoule, and of his brethren: like as we are counted faithfull with men, when wee keepe that thing ſafe which is committed vnto vs of truſt. The meaning then of Chriſt is this: Thou haſt made a promiſe vnto mee in baptiſme, to renounce ſinne and Sathan, and to keepe faith and a good conſcience vnto death; therefore performe this thy promiſe: and for thoſe gifts which I haue committed of truſt vnto thee, ſee thou keepe them well, and vſe them to my glorie in the good of thy brethren.

(a) 1. Tim. 6. 20.

Againſt this precept, three ſorts of men offend, and bee vnfaithfull vnto God. I. Thoſe that being baptized, doe yet liue in ignorance and ſecuritie, neuer ſeeking to know God, or to vnderſtand his will, no not ſo much as for their owne vow in baptiſme; though none will brag more of fidelitie vnto God, than theſe men do. II. Thoſe that haue knowledge and vnderſtanding in Gods will, and yet make no conſcience to liue accordingly. III. Thoſe that for a time ſhew forth many good things, as care to get knowledge, and to keepe faith and a good conſcience, but after ſuffer themſelues to be intangled and drawne away with the profites and pleaſures of the world, or els to bee driuen backe by trials and perſecutions. And of theſe three ſorts be moſt men generally: whoſe caſe is fearefull and dangerous, for they ſhall neuer haue the crowne of life, if they continue thus vnfaithfull.

To induce men to fidelitie, Chriſt addeth a moſt forcible reaſon: promiſing thereunto, The crowne of eternall life. Hence the Papiſts conclude, that Martyrs by ſuffering martyrdome doe merite the kingdome of heauen; becauſe it is called a crowne, therefore ſay they it is a reward. Whereto I anſwere two wayes: I. The kingdome of heauen is called a crowne onely in reſemblance, becauſe as with men after the race is run, they receiue the garland; euen ſo after men haue fought the good fight of faith, and kept good conſcience in this life, then in the life to come they receiue the crowne of glorie. For the keeping of faith & good conſcience is not the cauſe, but the antecedent of eternall life. Secondly, the reward is promiſed not to the martyrdome but to the martyr; and yet not for his ſufferings, but becauſe hee is a member of Chriſt, and by ſuffring death hath ſhewed his faith in Chriſt; for whoſe merit alone hee is ſo rewarded. And ſo muſt this and all other promiſes of like ſort be vnderſtood: for the Papiſts do foulely erre, when they apply the promiſes vnto the workes, which are made vnto the workers. By this promiſe, wee all that haue made our vow to God in baptiſme, muſt learne to become faithfull in keeping the ſame vnto the end. It is a ſhame for a man to be vnfaithfull vnto men, much more with God. And the more fearefull is this ſinne, becauſe onely the faithfull ſhall inherite eternall life. Secondly, all ſuch as haue made a ſhew of good things heretofore, and now doe ſuffer the ſame to decay, muſt call to mind from whence they are fallen, and become faithfull keepers of the graces of God, holding faſt true religion and good conſcience, and walke conſtantly in obedience: and then ſhall they haue the crowne of life, though not for their deſerts, but only for the merits of Chriſt.

Verſe. 11. Let him that hath an eare heare what the Spirit ſayth vnto the Churches: he that ouercommeth, ſhall not bee hurt of the ſecond death.

Theſe words containe the laſt part of this Epiſtle: namely, the Concluſion. Wherein obſerue generally, as alſo in the two next verſes, that Chriſt repeateth the ſame things which he ſpake before fore in this and the former chapters, yea, in the very ſame words. This muſt bee conſidered, becauſe it is done by Chriſt, who is the doctor of his church; whoſe example both for matter and manner of teaching muſt bee our rule and precept. The like did the Apoſtles: It grieued not Paule to write the ſame things, Phil.3.1. And (a) 2.Pet.1.12 Peter ſayth vnto the diſperſed Church, (a) That he will often put them in mind of the ſame things before his departing, wherein they had knowledge and were eſtabliſhed. Hereby all the Miniſters of the goſpell in their Miniſterie haue warrant, often to teach and repeat the ſame points of doctrine, euen in the ſame words. Yea, Gods faithfull Miniſter may preach the ſame Sermon oftentimes, if hee doe it not for eaſe to himſelfe, but for the benefit of the people. And therefore if any hearer of Gods word ſhall at any time marke the Miniſter to deliuer the ſame things often; he is not curiouſly to find fault with his Miniſterie, for by that reaſon they may find fault with Chriſt, who ſeuen times repeateth the ſame things vnto theſe churches.

This Concluſion hath two parts: a Commaundement, and a Promiſe: The words of this commaundement haue beene expounded in the ſeuenth verſe, with the doctrines and vſes thereof: yet here is to bee obſerued what the ſpirit commendeth thus ſeriouſly to our hearing. The things are three, which were handled in the former verſes. Firſt, touching Gods prouidence, that hee ſeeth and regardeth the tribulations of his church. The ſecond, touching triall: that Gods church and people ought beforehand to conſider of the day of viſitation, and thereby arme themſelues with courage againſt all afflictions, that they ſuffer not themſelues to bee ouermuch daunted with any feare. The third touching faithfulneſſe: Gods people muſt conſider what promiſes they haue made to God in baptiſme, namely, to keepe faith, true religion, and good conſcience vnto the end; and theſe they muſt performe vnto death. Theſe things being ſo carefully commended vnto vs by Chriſt, wee muſt labour to haue them engrauen in our hearts, that we may practiſe them in our liues. And to incite vs hereunto, wee muſt marke the two reaſons contained in the words. Firſt, becauſe the Spirit of Chriſt ſpeaketh to vs. Secondly, becauſe they concerne all Churches, (though principally they were ſpoken to the church of Smyrna) and therefore none may ſeeke excuſe to exempt himſelfe from learning and obeying theſe things.

The Promiſe, Hee that ouercommeth ſhall not be hurt of the ſecond death. Of the meanes of ouercomming, we haue ſpoken in the ſeuenth verſe. By ſecond death is meant the condemnation of the ſoule and bodie for euer and euer. For there be two kinds of death mentioned in Scripture: The firſt is the ſeparation of bodie and ſoule aſunder at the end of this life: The ſecond is, when ſoule and bodie both are ſeuered for euer from Gods comfortable preſence, *Reu.*21.8. This ſecond death is expounded to bee an abode in the lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone. The meaning therefore of the promiſe is this; that they which ouercome, thogh they may ſuffer the firſt death, yet they ſhall neuer ſuffer damnation: their ſoule and bodie may be ſeuered one from the other for a time, but neither ſoule nor bodie ſhall euer be ſeuered from God to goe into that lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone. Which is a moſt gracious and happy promiſe.

Here firſt marke to whome this promiſe is made, namely, To them that ouercome. Where learne, that it is not ſufficient for a man to profeſſe and approoue, or to teach the doctrine of the goſpell: but withall he muſt ioyne a fight againſt himſelfe, againſt ſinne, the world, the deuill, and againſt all the enemies of his ſaluation, and not ſuffer them to raigne ouer him, but ſo fight, as by Gods grace hee may ouercome; and then ſhall the ſecond death neuer hurt him. It is nothing to profeſſe, if we ſtill liue in ſinne: and therefore wee muſt not content our ſelues with knowledge, but labour to feele in our hearts ſuch power of grace, as will make vs truly to ſay we are conquerours ouer our ſpirituall enemies. This is that bleſſed ſtate of all thoſe, vnto whom life euerlaſting belongeth, who ſhall neuer taſte of the ſecond death.

Secondly, here is anſwered a great queſtion, which euery mans conſcience will moue vnto him; namely, How may I ſcape the ſecond death, that lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone? Anſw. Thou muſt in this life truely turne vnto God from all thine euill wayes, renounce thy ſelfe, and put all thine affiance in Chriſt his death and paſsion; and euermore labour to keepe true religion, faith, and good conſcience vnto death in all eſtates. This doe, and though thou taſt of the firſt, yet the ſecond death ſhall neuer touch thee.

Thirdly, hereby Chriſt giueth vs to vnderſtand, that of the two deaths the ſecond is the worſer. The bodily death is terrible vnto Nature; but the ſecond is the proper death indeed, the deſtruction of the creature in ſoule and bodie eternally. And yet behold the madneſſe of man, who feareth greatly the firſt death, and regardeth nothing the burning lake; like vnto little children that feare their owne ſhaddowes, and yet are not afraid of fire and water, that will burne and drowne thē. This is mans miſerable eſtate, through the blindneſſe of his mind, & the hardneſſe of his heart.

Verſe. 12. And to the Angell of the Church which is at Pergamus write, This ſayth hee, that hath that ſharpe ſword with two edges.

Here is the third particular commaundement which Chriſt gaue to Iohn, whereof wee haue ſpoken before in the firſt verſe: ſhewing there what is meant by Angell; and why this particular commaundement was giuen vnto Iohn. This third Epiſtle of Chriſt, as the former, hath three parts: a Preface in this verſe: The Propoſition of the Epiſtle, verſe 13, and ſo forward vnto the 17: And the Concluſion in the 17 verſe.

I. part. The Preface ſheweth in whoſe name this Epiſtle is written; namely, in Chriſts name: The cauſes whereof we haue ſhewed before in the firſt verſe. Chriſt is here ſet foorth by an action of his kingly office, borrowed from the former Chapter, verſe 16. Theſe things ſayth hee, that hath that ſharpe two edged ſword: that is, He who is not onely Prieſt and Prophet of his church, but the king thereof, to guide and gouerne the ſame. The ſword which hee hath in his hand, or in his mouth (as Iſay ſayth) is that two edged ſword, yea, that ſharpe two-edged ſword; thereby is ſignified the whole word of God, the Law and Goſpell: which is ſo called, by reaſon of the operation thereof, as it is Hebr. the 4.12.

Chriſt is thus deſcribed to comfort this Church of Pergamus. For hereby three things are ſignified: Firſt, his wonderfull power in ſlaying originall ſinne and corruption by his word, in all them that beleeue in him: ſo as there is no hope of recouerie for ſinne, after it is once wounded. Secondly, that hee will ſtrengthen and preſerue his Church, and all the true members thereof, by the ſame word, againſt all their enemies. This it doth after this manner: The whole word of God, both law and goſpell, muſt both bee knowne, and beleeued; then whenſoeuer any temptation commeth, faith maketh the ſame word powerfull in vs, to repell the temptation, and to ſtrengthen vs in affliction: for it is that ſword of the ſpirit, whereby wee wound all our enemies. But if it bee not beleeued, it is but as a ſword in a ſheath, and will nothing helpe vs. Thirdly, hereby he ſignifieth, that hee deſtroyeth all their enemies: this is the chiefe end why hee ſo deſcribeth himſelfe in this place. How Chriſt woundeth his enemies herewith, wee haue ſhewed in the former Chapter, and the ſixteenth verſe, with the vſes thereof.

Verſe 13. I know thy workes, and where thou dwelleſt, euen where Sathans throne is: and thou keepeſt my name, and haſt not denied my faith, euen in thoſe dayes when Antipas my faithfull Martyr was ſlaine among you, where Sathan dwelleth.

Here beginneth the ſecond part of this Epiſtle; to wit, the Propoſition: which containeth two parts: A commendation of this Church, in this verſe: and a Reproofe, verſ. 14, 15. The commendation is twofold: Firſt, generall, in theſe words: I know thy workes; then ſpeciall, in the words following, I know where thou dwelleſt, &c. Of the generall commendation wee haue ſpoken in the former Epiſtles, verſe 2. and 9.

This

This yet muſt be obſerued, that Chriſt herewith beginneth the matter of all his Epiſtles: intending no doubt, hereby to ſettle the perſuaſion of his preſence deepely in euery one of our hearts: for it is indeed the ground of the holy feare of God, which is the beginning of all true religion and godlineſſe. And here Chriſt giueth a preſident for his miniſters: namely, that the firſt thing they muſt teach their people is, to be perſuaded of this preſence of Chriſt, whereſoeuer they are Chriſt is with them, and whatſoeuer they do he ſeeth them. This will cauſe them make conſcience of all their waies, and it is impoſsible that any ſhould euer haue ſound knowledge or good conſcience, till he be perſuaded hereof. Abraham knew well that in Abimelekes court they would make no conſcience of murther, becauſe they (a) wanted this feare of God: to feare God and keepe his commaundements is the whole man: and therefore wee ſhould giue all diligence hereunto. It is indeed a hard leſſon for vs to learne, and of our ſelues wee cannot learne it: but if we vſe the meanes, Gods bleſsing will be vpon our endeuour, and then ſhall wee haue knowledge vpon knowledge, and grace vpon grace, with the comfort of a good conſcience.

(a) Ge.20.11.

The particular commendation of this church is, for her conſtancie in maintaining the doctrine of the goſpell, in theſe words, I know where thou dwelleſt, euen in a place where Sathans throne is, and yet for all that thou keepeſt my name: that is, thou holdeſt ſtill my true religion and doctrine. The throne of Sathan is any place where ſuperſtition, idolatry, or profaneneſſe is maintained without controlement, and from whence wickedneſſe is conueyed to other places. For the diuell is the God of the world, and he hath his thrones among men. Pergamus was a great citie of the gentiles which maintained idolatry, and perſecuted the goſpell, from whence alſo iniquitie was deriued to other townes and places: therefore it is called the diuels throne.

Herein we may obſerue ſundrie points of great importance. Firſt, the exceeding pollicie of Sathan: he hath his kingdome in this world: and for the eſtabliſhing thereof, he muſt haue his thrones where wickedneſſe and idolatrie is maintained without controlement, and whence ſin is deriued to other places. In all ages it hath bene thus, and will continue ſo to the end. In the old world hee had his thrones among Cains poſteritie: in the church of the Iewes, euen in the daies of the kings of Iſraell, the high places and groues, where the people ſacrificed to their idols, were the diuels thrones: the oracles of the gentiles where the diuels gaue anſwere vnto men were his cheefe thrones: in the dayes of poperie, euerie church and chappell were thrones of Sathan, wherein were erected images & holy roods for the worſhip of ſaints; whither the people came to worſhip from countrey to countrey. In moſt ſchooles of learning for many hundred yeares the diuell had his thrones; For therein was nothing tanght but errors, hereſies, and moſt abhominable idolatries. In theſe our dayes the diuell hath his thrones among vs, where any wizard dwelleth, or cũning perſon (as they are called) for thither whole countries do flocke for helpe and for connſell, and ſo yeeld homage to Sathan. All dicing, & all brothel houſes, wherein abhominable wickedneſſe is freely committed, are Sathans thrones. Yea all thoſe families are the diuels thrones, where men liue without loue or practiſe of religion, in blindneſſe and ignorance, in blaſphemie, drunkenneſſe, whoredome, iniuſtice, or any ſuch impieties. And in reaſon it muſt needs bee thus, for the diuell being a prince of this world, will haue his throne in ſome parts thereof.

Hereby we ſee it is moſt needfull in euerie Chriſtian kingdom, there ſhould be thrones of iuſtice in ciuill courts, for the maintenance of equity, the reward of vertue, and for the repreſsing of iniuſtice and iniquitie. And alſo thrones of Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction for the reprehending and puniſhing of all thoſe ſinnes which the ciuill court reacheth not vnto. And it is neceſſarie that in theſe thrones iuſtice ſhould bee adminiſtred without partialitie, that Gods throne may bee erected, which is oppoſit to the throne of Sathan. The Vſe.

Againe, the diuels cunning appeares notably in the choiſe of the place where he ſetteth vp his throne: it was no petty towne or village, but a chiefe and famous citie, which had beene the ſeate of many kings. This hath bene his practiſe in all ages, to chuſe the chiefeſt places for the ſeat of his throne. Great Babylon in Scripture is called, A citie of iniquitie, that is, a throne of the diuell. And Rome that was once a famous church, is now, and hath beene long that ſpirituall Babylon, the throne of the diuell. Yea, in Ieruſalem the city of the great king, had the diuell got vp his throne, when Chriſt called the temple a den of theeues. And in our dayes the people of great towns and cities are generally more backward in embracing the goſpell, than in little villages. The cauſe hereof is, the malice of the diuell, who will haue his throne in chiefeſt places, for the greater hinderance of religion: there he much preuaileth by choaking the word with pride, profit, and pleaſures, cauſing them to content themſelues with a forme of godlineſſe, when as they want the power thereof. And thus he dealeth in greater townes, that thence impietie may be deriued to the countrie round about, as tradeſmen do their wares from place to place. And therefore the people of great townes eſpecially, muſt labour not onely to know the goſpell, but to beleeue and obey the ſame. Euery man muſt reforme himſelfe, and euerie familie themſelues, that Gods throne may be eſtabliſhed, & the diuels throne battered down among them.

Secondly, whereas this church dwelleth where the diuels throne is, wee may obſerue, whence the church of God is gathered, namely, out of Sathans kingdome. Gods church is a company of men ordained to ſaluation, taken from vnder the power of the diuell: though after their calling they be Gods peculiar flocke, yet they are by nature the children of wrath. Thus Paul ſpeaketh of all the Gentiles, Act. 26. 18. And particularly of the church of Coloſſa, Coloſ. 1. 13. that God deliuered them from the power of darkneſſe, and tranſlated them into the kingdome of his deare ſonne.

The Vſe. Hence we learn. I. That no man is to ſtand vpon his his gentilitie, or glory in his parentage for nobilitie and great bloud, but onely reioyce in this, that hee is drawne out of the kingdome of darkneſſe, and from vnder the power of Sathan, and placed by Chriſt Ieſus in the kingdom of grace. For what will it profit a man to weare about his necke a chaine of gold, if ſo be his heart, will, & affections bee chained to the diuels ſeruice? and what auaileth it princes to ſit vpon their ſtately thrones, if they themſelues be in ſubiection vnto Sathan, and do homage vnto his throne? yea what will all the treaſures, honors, and pleaſures of the world auaile to him that is debarred from the riches of Gods loue in Chriſt, and deſtitute of the treaſures of his grace, and ſo led captiue by Sathan at his will and pleaſure? Secondly, ſome do thinke that a man may be ſaued by any religion, the Iew by his religion, the Turke by his, and the Papiſt by his, &c. Yea, it is the common receiued opinion of our ignorant people, that euerie one ſhall bee ſaued by his good meaning. But all theſe are meere dotages of mens braine: for a man may hold his good meaning, and yet ſerue the diuell at his throne. It is not ſufficient to hold this or that religion, or to practiſe ciuill vertues, as iuſtice, temperance, &c. vnleſſe a man be one of Gods church, ſeuered frō the company of thē that ſerue Sathan. Thirdly, here all Gods ſeruants haue a notable meanes of ſtay and comfort in afflictions. If they be perſecuted, and caſt into moſt darke dungeons for the name of Chriſt, they muſt call to mind, that they are taken out of the diuels priſon in the kingdome of darknes, and placed in the glorious kingdome of Ieſus Chriſt, and made members of his church, and ſhall be inheritors of his glory. Fourthly, hence wee learne, that the preaching of the goſpell hath in it a diuine power: no creatures, except the good Angels, haue power comparable to the diuels: and yet the preaching of the goſpell is ſtronger than al the power of Sathan, for it gathereth a church where the diuell hath his throne, it deliuers men from vnder the power of Sathan, and placeth them in the glorious libertie of the ſonnes of God: although therefore it be preached by ſinfull man, yet it muſt be reuerenced as the power of God, and his owne arme to ſaue his elect. Fiftly, hence wee gather that God will haue his people to dwell with wicked and vngodly men: for the church of Pergamus dwelleth where Sathans throne is. This hee doth with wicked and vngodly men for good cauſes: I. That their faith, obedience, and repentance might be exerciſed, and they preſerued from many ſins which otherwayes they ſhould fall into. Moſes telleth the Iſraelits that the Cananits muſt not be all caſt out at their firſt entrance, but dwell among them, leſt wild beaſts did grow vp which would deuour them: & ſo the wicked muſt dwell among the godly to exerciſe Gods graces in them, leſt they fall into ſinne and ſecuritie. II. That they might ſhine foorth as lights vnto the wicked by their godly conuerſation, Phil. 2.15. That ye may be blameleſſe and pure, the ſonnes of God without rebuke in the middes of a naughtie and crooked nation, and among whom ye ſhine as lights in the world: holding forth the word of life. And thus the godly muſt do, that by their vnblameable life others might bee wonne to the faith; for godly example is a notable meanes to draw men to loue and embrace faith and true religion, 1. Pet. 3.1. III. That God may ſhew on the godly tokens of his ſpeciall loue and fauour: which he doth when hee ſendeth iudgements vpon the wicked, and ſpareth his children. Hence it was, that when the Lord would bring a common iudgement vpon the Iewes, he cauſeth thoſe that mourned for their owne ſinnes, and for the abhominations of the people, (a) To bee marked in the foreheade, that they might be ſpared. So that if any godly perſon dwell among ſuch as hate religion, and bee profane, he muſt content himſelfe, knowing it is Gods will his church ſhould be vexed and troubled by the ſocieties of the wicked and vngodly. Sixtly, hence it appeareth that Gods people may lawfully dwell among wicked and vngodly men, alwayes remembring that they communicate not with them in their ſins and rebellions againſt God: For ſo Lot dwelt in Sodome, and this church of Pergamus, where the diuell had his throne. 1. Cor. 7.2, This queſtion is anſwered: a maiſter is a heathen man, and his ſeruant is conuerted to the faith; whereupon hee thinketh that he is free from ſeruing his maiſter: but Paule telleth him he muſt doe externall ſeruice ſtill, ſo farre forth as he keepe good conſcience, and bee not conſtrained to renounce true religion. Laſtly, hence wee haue direction to aunſwere a queſtion much vrged againſt vs by the Papiſts, to wit, Where our church was foureſcore yeares ago, when Luther firſt beganne to preach: they intend hereby to proue our church to be but of foureſcore yeares continuance, and ſo our religion to be new. We aunſwere by the like, Where was the church of Pergamus when the diuels throne was in that citie? Surely it was there where the diuell had his throne. And ſo when Antichriſt that man of ſin, had ſpread poperie ouer all Europe, at that verie ſame time was Gods church in Europe where poperie was profeſſed, mingled with the Papiſts: which to bee true appeareth by this, that in all ages there haue bene ſome, who openly haue oppugned poperie, more or leſſe, partly by writing, and partly by ſpeaking, as the records of all ages do teſtifie & make manifeſt: ſo that though iniquitie had the vpper hand, yet our church had his being in the middeſt of poperie.

(a) Ezec. 9.4.

And thou keepeſt my name, That is, though thou dwell in a place where the diuell hath his throne, yet thou holdeſt faſt my name, ſo as neither force nor fraud of the aduerſarie can take my name from thee: ſo much the words import. By Chriſts name we muſt vnderſtand the doctrine of the goſpell: ſo Paul is ſayd to bee (b) A choſen veſſell to carrie Chriſts name among the Gentiles: That is, to publiſh among them the doctrine of the Goſpell.

(b) Act. 9.15.

Here this church of Pergamus is particularly commended for her conſtancie in holding faſt true religion againſt all aduerſary power whatſoeuer. Hence wee learne that it is not ſufficient to teach, or know, and beleeue the doctrine of the goſpell in time of peace: but we muſt be conſtant in holding it faſt againſt all gainſayers, and not be turned about with euery wind of doctrine, but in life and death keepe ſure the truth, that neither fraud nor force of any aduerſary power draw it from vs, or vs from it. Mat. 13. The kingdome of heauen is compared to a treaſure hid in the field, which when a man findeth hee goeth and ſelleth all hee hath to buy the field. The ſcope of that parable is this, If any man ſhould come into any of our fields, & by ſearching find a gold mine, he would not make it knowne to any, but couer it cloſe, and go his way and ſell all that he had to buy that field, that thereby he might enrich himſelfe: euen ſo hauing found this, that the goſpell reuealeth the way to life euerlaſting, though we muſt not conceale the ſame from others, yet we muſt be like this man herein, that we could be content to part with all that we haue, that ſo we might make the goſpell ours, 1. Tim. 3. 9. Deacons muſt haue this propertie, To haue the miniſterie of faith in a pure conſcience. There a good conſcience is compared to a ſure treaſure houſe, which cannot bee robbed by any aduerſaries power: and faith, that is, true religion is the treaſure that is there ſafely layd vp: ſuch a ſtore-houſe muſt wee get for the preſeruation of the faith. Any thing elſe we may leeſe, but if we part with true religion, ſaluation is gone and all is loſt. And therefore in life and death we muſt keepe faſt the faith.

Further Chriſt amplifieth the praiſe of their conſcience by two arguments: Firſt, that they held Chriſts name without deniall: Secondly, that they kept the faith in the time of bloudie perſecution. For the firſt in theſe words, And haſt not denied my faith. This is an excellent commendation; for many will hold the doctrine of the goſpell for a time, and yet after deny the ſame by apoſtacie: but this Church held faſt true religion without any reuolt at all. Their practiſe muſt we follow: and ſo hold faſt true religion that therein we neuer make reuolt: for if wee ſhall once deny religion, wee know not whether God will giue vs the grace of repentance, that wee may profeſſe it againe; which if he do not, we periſh eternally. Conſider Eſaus example who ſold his birth right for a meſſe of red broth, and after loſt the bleſsing, which when he wold haue recouered he was reiected: (a) And found no place to repentance, though he ſought it with teares. Therfore to preuent the fearefull danger of not repenting after reuoult, we muſt ſtill hold faſt true religion without deniall.

(a) Heb. 12. 17.

Here in this place the faith of Chriſt, is all one with Chriſts name, that is, with the true doctrine of the goſpel. And it is called Chriſts faith: firſt, becauſe Chriſt with the father and the ſpirit, is the author thereof: Secondly, becauſe Chriſt reuealeth the ſame from the boſome of his father: for God reuealeth his Goſpell vnto men by his ſonne Chriſt Ieſus. Thirdly, becauſe Chriſt is the ſubſtance and matter of the goſpell: for indeed Chriſt Ieſus is the principal ſubiect of the whole Bible, being the end of the law, & the ſubſtance of the goſpell.

The ſecond argument of their praiſe for conſcience, is taken from the circumſtance of time; they hold faſt true religion in the time of bloudy perſecution: Euen in thoſe dayes (ſaith Chriſt) when Antipas my faithful martyr was ſlaine among you where Sathan dwelleth. Who this Antipas was, is not knowne, neither certainely recorded in any hiſtorie: it is thought hee was the miniſter of this church, vnto oppoſed himſelfe againſt idolatrie and gentiliſme in this citie of Pergamus.

In this argument note two points. I. That Chriſt commends Antipas, calling him his faithfull martyr. Whereby wee ſee, that in Gods church it is lawfull to honor ſaints and martyrs. For that which Chriſt doth, his church may doe. This their honour muſt ſtand in two things, In due deſerued praiſe & commendation, & in a careful imitatiō of their good vertues & godly liues: and for this end doth Chriſt cōmend Antipas vnto this church, that they might follow his good conuerſation: but as for popiſh honor of inuocation & adoration, it hath no ground in Gods word. Againe, in calling him faithfull martyr, hee commendeth more the cauſe of his death, than the death: to ſhew, that the cauſe maketh a martyr, not the death: For an hereticke may be put to death for his damnable opinions. Therefore Antipas is a martyr, not becauſe he was ſlain, but becauſe he was faithful vnto death for the maintenance of Chriſts true religion.

II. point. In the end of the verſe Chriſt ſheweth who were the authors of Antipas his death; namely ſuch among them in whom Sathan ruled: for he was ſlaine (ſayth Chriſt) among you, where Sathan dwelleth. Which words hee repeateth, to giue vs to vnderſtand, that all perſecutors, let them carry what face they will, are in truth ſuch, in whome the deuill ruleth, where he hath his hold, and keepes poſſeſsion. Queſt. Why did Sathan more dwell there than in other places? Anſw. Becauſe many in this place were Gentiles, who contemned and mocked the goſpell, goſpell, and maintained idolatrie, wherby they became the holds of Sathan. And by proportion we may gather, that all contemners of religion, and all that walke in their owne wicked wayes, are indeed the ſtables and holds of the deuill, though they ſhould bee the temples of the holy ghoſt. And ſo many families as there are, where religion is mocked, Gods name blaſphemed, iniuſtice and impietie practiſed; ſo many holds of Sathan there are where the deuill ruleth: and ſuch they continue, till they reforme themſelues of their impieties, and embrace the Goſpell ſyncerely. And therefore all maſters of families eſpecially ſhould loue the Goſpell, and ſee that in their families religion be taught, embraced and obeyed, that ſo the deuill may haue no hold in their families. Que. Whether might not Antipas, being Paſtour of this Church, haue fled for the ſafetie of his life? Anſw. There bee two kinds of perſecution, one that is directly intended againſt the Paſtor principally: the other againſt the whole Church equally. In the perſecution directed againſt the Paſtor, this muſt bee conſidered, Whether God gaue him oportunitie and libertie to flie, or not: if God giue him libertie and oportunitie, hee may flie, and the Church is to aſsiſt him, and to vſe means for his preſeruation: but if God denie him meanes to eſcape, then he muſt iudge himſelfe to bee called of God, to ſuffer death for his name; and ſo hee may not flie. And ſuch was the cauſe of Antipas in this Church. But if the perſecution be directed againſt the whole church equally, then the Paſtor may not flie, but take part in their ſufferings, that hee may be a meanes to ſtay and comfort his brethren.

Verſe 14. But I haue a few things againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt there them that maintaine the doctrine of Balaam, which taught Balac to put a ſtumbling blocke before the children of Iſraell, that they ſhould eat of things ſacrificed vnto Idols, and commit fornication.

Here followeth the reproofe of this Church of Pergamus, which is firſt generally propounded in theſe words, I haue a few things againſt thee: Secondly, in particular, for want of zeale, in ſuffering among them ſuch as maintained the doctrine of Balaam. Thirdly, hee ſetteth downe a reaſon or confirmation thereof in the end of the 14 verſe, and in the 15.

The generall reproofe is the ſame which was giuen out againſt the Church of Epheſus, verſ. 4. Whereby hee would teach vs a ſpeciall dutie: namely, that euery man muſt ſeriouſly conſider with himſelfe what ſinnes hee hath in him, which Chriſt may haue to lay vnto his charge. For this very cauſe doth Chriſt rehearſe it vnto this Church. And therefore wee muſt call our ſelues to reckoning, and examine our ſelues not by our owne wits, but by the rule of Gods word, and ſearch out all our thoughts, words, and actions; and ſee how many things Chriſt may haue againſt vs, that ſo making a forehand reckoning, and ſeeking to be cleared by true repentance we may not bee condemned for them at the laſt day: for if we would iudge our ſelues, we ſhould not be iudged. This is a neceſſarie dutie, and the practiſe of it is the ground of all grace, and conſcionable obedience: as on the other ſide, the want hereof is the cauſe why many that liue in the Church doe periſh eternally. For a day of accounts will come, wherein wee ſhall neuer eſcape, vnleſſe by a forehand reckoning in the practiſe of true repentance from dead workes, and by faith in Chriſt Ieſus wee preuent the ſame. Lamentable and fearefull is the ſtate of all thoſe, that neuer call themſelues to this account: it cauſeth them to goe on in ſinne without remorſe, Hoſ. 7.2. Hereof Ieremie complained, (a) That no man ſayd what haue I done. And for that cauſe hee denounceth fearefull iudgements againſt the people. This was the ſinne of the old world: (b) men knew nothing till the floud came and deſtroyed them all. This ſecuritie bringeth mens ſoules to hell, before they wot where they are: And therefore Dauid crieth out, Pſal. 50. verſ. 22. Oh conſider this (meaning the account that God will take with them) leaſt God teare them in pieces, and there bee none to deliuer them. The end of preaching and hearing Gods word, is to bring the ſoule to eternall life and ſaluation: but the want of this account maketh the holy ordinance of God to bee of none effect to many a one. For how ſhould men embrace with comfort the word of reconciliation, till they feele in themſelues their enmitie with God, and deſert of condemnation.

II. point. Becauſe thou haſt them that maintaine the doctrine of Balaam, &c. Here is the particular reproofe of this Church for want of zeale, in that they entertained and ſuffered hereticall Miniſters to liue among them which maintained the doctrine of Balaam. This ſhewed, that though they loued the goſpell, and embraced it, yet it was very coldly, and without that feruent zeale which they ought to haue ſhewed againſt ſuch hereticks.

The Vſe. Here firſt Chriſt teacheth this church to ſhew forth zeale in excommunicating and caſting out ſuch hereticks as by damnable doctrine did trouble them. This place is a ſufficient ground for the practiſe of that Eccleſiaſticall cenſure. When men hold hereticall opinions, the Church after two or three admonitions is to excommunicate them and caſt them out. So did Paule to Hymæneus and Alexander, 1. Tim. 1. 20. Secondly, Chriſt reproouing this Church for entertaining ſuch hereticks and wicked men, doth giue vs to vnderſtand, that euery member of Gods church ſhould haue a great diſlike of all perſons, that hold not the doctrine of Chriſt in truth, but maintaine errours againſt the tenour of Scripture, and the profeſsion of the Church. For this cauſe Paule chargeth Timothie to (a) ſeparat himſelfe from ſuch as teach otherwiſe than hee had giuen direction, and conſent not vnto the wholeſome words of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and to the doctrine which is according to godlineſſe: being puffed vp and knowing nothing. This then muſt be our carefull practiſe: wee haue by Gods mercie true religion among vs, which wee muſt maintaine with zeale: and if any bring in other doctrine, wee muſt reiect it, and ſhew forth deteſtation to him that bringeth it, not bidding him God ſpeed. 2. Iohn. 10. Wee muſt rather looſe our liues, than ſuffer the truth of God to be defaced. Thirdly, that which Chriſt laieth to the charge of this church may in ſundry reſpects be charged vpon our churches and congregations at this day; namely, want of zeale againſt ſinne, and ſecuritie againſt ſinners: for though the gouernours of our Church repell the hereſies of Poperie, Anabaptiſts, and familie of Loue, and ſuppreſſe all doctrines that race the foundation, which are commendable things: yet in the middeſt of our congregations bee abundance of Atheiſts, who by deed and conuerſation denie Chriſt Ieſus: for many know nothing in the matters of religion, and moe be profane, who both thinke and ſpeake moſt baſely of religion, and of the teachers and profeſſours thereof. Yea, wee haue flat epicures permitted to liue in our church, ſuch as make their bellie their God: who giue themſelues wholly vnto eating, drinking ſports, and delights, without all regard either of the generall duties of Chriſtianitie, or of the particular duties of their calling. Wee haue alſo among vs many cruell and mercileſſe perſons, that in their affaires abound in the practiſes of fraud, wrong, vſurie, and oppreſsion, (a) whoſe treading is vpon the poore in the pride of their couetouſneſſe, whereby alſo they eate the fleſh of Gods people, and flea off their skin from them, and breake their bones, and chop them in pieces as for the pot, and as fleſh within the cauldron, Mich. 3. 6. And yet all theſe, becauſe they ſubmit themſelues to the ciuile authoritie, are permitted without controlment to be partakers of the priuiledges of Gods Church, euen to the receiuing of the ſeales of Gods couenant, being themſelues flat enemies to the grace of God. Yea, many of theſe are greatly countenanced and graced for wiſedome and reputation; when as ſuch as feare God, and make conſcience of their wayes, are counted vile. All which as it argueth exceeding want of zeale in ſeueritie againſt ſinne: ſo it cannot chuſe but prouoke the Lord to come againſt vs in iudgement, as hee did againſt this Church. The meanes whereby this euill is to bee reformed, doth follow afterward.

III. point. The reaſon or confirmation of the former reproofe, whereby the Lord would mooue this Church to deteſt theſe falſe teachers, is taken from the effect of their doctrine, and it is layed downe in this ſimilitude. As Balaam the falſe Prophet taught Balac to put a ſtumbling blocke before the children of Iſrael, to cauſe them to eat of things ſacrificed to Idols, and to commit fornication: ſo this Church maintained among them Nicholaitans, who taught, it was lawfull to eat things ſacrificed to Idols, at Idols feaſts, and to commit fornication. The firſt part of this ſimilitude is in the end of this 14 verſe: Which taught Balac to put a ſtumbling blocke, &c. The ſecond part is in the 15 verſe.

on:

Touching the doctrine of Balaam we are to obſerue three points: Firſt, What a ſtumbling blocke, or an offence is. Secondly, what it is to caſt or put a ſtumbling blocke. Thirdly, by what meanes king Balac did caſt a ſtumbling block before the children of Iſraell. For the firſt, a ſtumbling block is properly any thing, as wood, or ſtone, or ſuch like, that is caſt in a mans way, to hinder him in his gate, and to cauſe him to trip or fall: And by reſemblance in this place, an offence is any thing that cauſeth a man to ſinne againſt God, and ſo to ſlip or fall, or to go out of his way that leadeth to life. Further, an offence is twofold; either giuen or taken. An offence giuen, is any ſpeech or deed, whereby a man is prouoked to ſinne: and ſo was Peter an offence vnto Chriſt, though he tooke it not, *Mat.*16.23. An offence taken, is when any man taketh occaſion to fall and ſinne, by that which is well done by others: ſo were the Phariſies offended at the ſacred preaching of our Sauiour Chriſt. II. point. The caſting or putting of a ſtumbling blocke, or giuing an offence, is the doing or ſaying of any thing, whereby a man is occaſioned to ſinne: and this is done, either about things euill in themſelues, or in things indifferent. Things euill are ſuch as Gods word forbiddeth: and they are twofold, either perſuaſions, or examples. Bad perſuaſions are falſe doctrine, and euill counſell. Bad example is alſo a giuing of offence, becauſe it doth embolden euill men in their ſinne, and draw the godly to euill. Againe, in things indifferent, as meate, drinke, apparrell, &c. may offence be giuen, when as they are vſed vnſeaſonably, not in fit time and place, and before fit perſons. And of this Paule ſpeaketh, ſaying: If I knew my eating did offend my brother, I would eat no fleſh while the world ſtandeth. The offence here ſpoken of, was an offence giuē in euil things, for it was an euill act done by Balaam, and accordingly receiued and taken of the Iſraelits, for he vſed outward prouocations to allure them vnto ſinne. III. point. The meanes whereby king Balac did caſt a ſtumbling blocke before the children of Iſraell, is ſet downe in the end of the verſe, by prouoking them to eat of things ſacrificed to Idols, and to commit fornication. That we may vnderſtand this fully, read Numbers 25. The ſumme of the hiſtorie is this: When Balaam had aſſayed ſundry wayes to curſe the children of Iſraell, and could not, he gaue Balac counſell to vſe meanes to cauſe them to ſinne. At his counſell Balac ſent foorth the moſt beautifull women in his kingdome into the campe of Iſraell to entiſe them to the ſeruice of their idols, and to banquet with them at their idoll feaſts, that ſo they might draw them to fornication: whereunto the Iſraelites condeſcended, and ſo ſinned againſt God. Thus much of the meaning of the words.

The Vſe. Firſt, here obſerue a ſpeciall property of falſe teachers: namely, to caſt offences before men, to cauſe them to fall in the way that leadeth to ſaluation. By this Chriſt intendeth to make knowne vnto this Church the falſe doctrine of Balaam. Paule in his Epiſtles (a) calleth the doctrin of the goſpell a truth according to godlineſſe: becauſe the intent of the goſpell is, to lead men to true godlineſſe. On the contrarie, the doctrine of Antichriſt is called (b) the myſterie of iniquitie; becauſe the ſcope thereof is, to draw men to all iniquitie and abhomination. Here then wee haue a rule, whereby wee may iudge betweene true doctrine and falſe, euen by looking into the end and ſcope thereof: if it ayme at true pietie and ſyncere obedience, wee may iudge it to be good; but if it tend to draw men to idolatrie and ſinne, then it is a falſe doctrine. Thus wee might ſcan all falſe religions, as the religion of the Turke and Iew at this day. But becauſe wee are more troubled with the doctrine of Poperie among our common people, who call it The old Religion, therefore let vs a little examine the ſame by this rule.

The end of Poperie is to pull downe the kingdome of Chriſt, and to diſanull his lawes; as will appeare by a ſhort view in euery commaundement: and therfore it cannot bee the true religion. The firſt commaundement teacheth vs, To chuſe and acknowledge the true God for our God alone. But the Church of Rome teacheth to make more gods than one, & to acknowledge the creature to be God: for by their doctrine men are to pray vnto Saints, wherby they make them gods, in giuing this diuine propertie vnto them to know the heart. Their doctrine alſo aſcribeth vnto Saints power to merite; which is a propertie of God: for none can merite but he that is God. The humane nature of Chriſt could not haue merited any thing, vnleſſe it had beene ioyned to the godhead. Yea they make the wood of the croſſe to bee God, for in their maſſe booke at this day they call (not Chriſt crucified on the croſſe) but the very croſſe it ſelfe, our only hope: yea, the virgine Marie, who is but a creature, they place as a queene in heauē, giuing her power ouer Chriſt to commaund him in the matter of ſaluation, and ſo they diſanull the firſt commaundement. The ſecond commaundement they reuoke, in teaching it to bee lawfull to make images of the Trinitie, according as they ſhewed themſelues in the old and new Teſtament: the father like an old man, the ſonne as hee liued, and the holyghoſt like a doue; and therein to worſhip them. Againe, they teach that men may adore the Images of Saints, which is flat againſt that commaundement. The third commaundement they diſanull, in teaching it to bee lawfull to ſweare by Saints, and not by God onely. The fourth they diſanull, by making the feaſtiuall dayes of Saints equall with the Lords Sabbath, and to be kept holy vnto God as ſolemnly as the Lords day. Wherby alſo they take away the libertie of the church in the lawfull vſe of the ſix dayes, for honeſt labour in a mans calling. The fift they diſanull in giuing freedome and immunitie to their cleargie from ſubiection to ciuile authoritie: and in diſpenſing with ſubiects, for their loyaltie and allegeance to their lawfull princes: and with children and ſeruants from yeelding due helpe, ſeruice, and obedience, to their parents and maſters. The ſixt, by their houſes of refuge which they call Sanctuarie, wherein murderers may be in ſafetie; and by maintaining ignorance in religion, through which they murder many a ſimple ſoule. The ſeuenth, by tollerating of ſtewes, and allowing of inceſt: for by their law it is lawfull for the great vncle to marry his neece, deſcending from his brother or ſiſter, ſo it bee without the fourth degree, which is againſt nature. The eight, by making ſale of all things, of heauen, hell, of earth, of pardons, & deliuering men from purgatorie: which is flat robberie, and moſt groſſe deceit and couſenage. The ninth they diſanull, by falſifying the canon of ſcripture, for they make that canonicall which is no Scripture: and beſides in their doctrine practicall they defend a lye, for when a man hath confeſſed his ſinnes to the prieſt, if the magiſtrat aske the prieſt what ſinnes the man confeſſed, they teach the prieſt to ſay, I know not; that is (ſay they) to tell it to thee: which is a flat lye. And whereas they would defend this by an expoſition of Chriſts words, when he ſayth: (a) The day of iudgement is not knowne to the Sonne of man: that is (ſay they) to reueale it vnto others, they doe but deceiue the ſimple by an expoſition which is not fit. The laſt commaundement they diſanull, by holding concupiſcence before conſent to be no ſinne, when as wee know by Gods word, that the firſt euill motions in vs bee ſinnes. So that hereby wee may ſee, that Poperie is but a falſe religion, though it haue falſely among our common people the name of The old Religion, and therefore wee muſt abhorre the ſame, as vngodly.

(a) Mat. 24.

Now, whereas ſome doe charge the doctrine of our Religion to bee ſundry wayes ſcandalous, they may be eaſily anſwered: Firſt they ſay, it is a doctrine of deſperation: becauſe it imports, that God created men ſo, as he will ſaue but a few, making them for this end, to caſt the greateſt number to hell. To this I anſwere two things: Firſt, touching the number of them that are to bee ſaued: of which little is ſayd in Scripture, & therefore I will not ſay much: yet this may be auerred, The number of the elect in it ſelfe is (b) a great companie, but being compared with them that ſhall bee damned, it is but ſmall. Secondly, touching the end of mans creation, our doctrine is not, that God created mē for this end, to caſt them to hell: but this we teach, that God created all men, to manifeſt his glory in them: in ſome, by their iuſt and deſerued damnation for ſinne. Wee teach not, that men are otherwayes condemned than for their ſinnes, and therefore he that is condemned hath his iuſt reward. II. Charge, They ſay further our doctrine is a doctrine of blaſphemie; for that wee teach God to haue decreed the fall of man, and ſo make God the author of mans ſinne. Anſ. We teach indeed that God decreed Adams fall, but thence it followeth not, that he is the author of mans ſinne. For Gods will is twofold, generall, and ſpeciall. Gods generall will is, to permit that which is euill, not ſimply, but becauſe with God euill hath ſome reſpect of good, and in this reſpect wee ſay God decreed Adams fall. Gods ſpeciall will, is his approouing will; whereby hee taketh pleaſure and delight in that which is good: and in this regard God nilled Adams fall, and mans ſinnes: And yet in ſome reſpect he may be ſayd to will them. A magiſtrat, though he take no comfort or delight in the death and execution of a malefactour: yet hee decreeth and appointeth it, and ſo may bee ſayd to will it. Euen ſo God, who out of light can bring darknes, permitteth euill becauſe with him it hath ſome reſpect of good, and ſo may be ſayd to will it. III. Charge. They ſay alſo that the doctrine of our church is a doctrine of ſecuritie: becauſe we teach, that a man may be certaine of his ſaluation, and of perſeuerance in the faith vnto the end. Anſw. This is not a doctrine of carnall ſecuritie; becauſe we do impoſe neceſſarily the vſe of meanes to them that would bee certaine of their ſaluation, and perſeuer vnto the end, as namely, deniall of themſelues, & humbling themſelues in continuall prayer, with hearing & meditating in the word of God, and receiuing the Sacraments for the increaſe of faith, and renewing of their repentance: All which will rather make a man fearefull and carefull than ſecure. For with the meanes, is certainty of ſaluation, both atteined and preſerued: ſo that our doctrine is not a doctrine of offences, but a true doctrine that beateth out the plaine way that leadeth vnto life.

Secondly, Chriſt his deteſtation of this doctrine of Balaam, muſt admoniſh vs to be ſo carefull of our behauiour euerie way, that we giue no offence vnto anie, for if wee do, wee are Balaams ſchollers. This is a point of ſpeciall obſeruation, wee muſt looke to our communication that it be void of railing & bad ſpeeches, and to our conuerſation, that it bee holy and vnblameable. In euerie thing we muſt haue care not to hinder others in the way of life, Woe (a) bee to them (ſaith Chriſt) that giue offences: it were better that a huge milſtone (ſuch as an aſſe can but turne about, as the word imports) were tied about his necke, and that he were caſt into the ſea. The reaſon is, becauſe when a man by any means giueth his brother an offence: he doth as much as in him lieth, to plunge his brothers ſoule into the pit of deſtruction, and therefore we muſt flie offences as hell it ſelfe: yea rather on the contrary, we muſt helpe our brethren forward in the way of ſaluation, and remooue from them all ſtumbling blockes that cauſe them to fall. If this duty were practiſed, our church would abound with grace and godlines: but this duty is wanting, and hence it comes that we haue ſo ſmall increaſe after long labour in preaching, for example and euill counſell do quench the graces of the ſpirit in mens hearts. (a) Mat. 18.6, 7.

Thirdly, hereby wee muſt learne to haue ſpeciall care againſt offences giuen by euill counſell, or bad example. For if it be the propertie of a falſe prophet to caſt ſtumbling blocks before others, then is it a dangerous thing to fall vpon them when they are laid before vs. While we liue in this world wee ſhall ſee many offences giuen: but we muſt take heed we take them not. And therfore Chriſt biddeth vs, (b) If thy foote offend thee, or thine hand, cut it off: or thine eye, plucke it out: Teaching vs to forgo the deareſt thing that can be vnto vs, if it would cauſe vs to ſin againſt God. And to mooue vs hereto, marke the Iſraelits example in the wilderneſſe: while they kept a good conſcience, and obſerued the true worſhip of God, all Balaams curſes were turned into bleſsings: but when they fell to idolatrie & fornication with the Moabitiſh women: then was Gods wrath kindled againſt them, and his plague ſeized vpon them. Euen ſo, if our church be carefull to keep it ſelfe to the true religion, which by Gods mercie we enioy, and withall haue care to keepe good conſcience in becomming a penitent and obedient (b) Mat. 18.8.

people vnto God: then may Balaam curse, and al our enemies spit their venome, yet we shall be safe: But if we let go true religion and good conscience, and fall to sinne, then we must looke for Gods heauie iudgements to fall vpon vs in his wrath, as they did vpon his owne people. Fourthly, when Balaams cursing would not preuaile, then did faire women, and banqueting, draw them to idolatrie and fornication. Hence we learne, that temptations on the right hand, that is, taken from profits, pleasures, and preferments, are most dangerous, and soonest preuaile to draw men from God. The state of a christian, is like a besieged citie; when a huge armie cannot sacke it, than siluer and gold will open the gates hereof: euen so, when aduersitie cannot make a man to forsake religion & good conscience, then by prosperitie, ease, and pleasure hath the diuell stollen away his heart. Those therefore that haue ease, pleasures, and outward blessings at will, are in a farre more dangerous case in respect of sinne than others; vnlesse God vouchsafe vnto them speciall grace to watch against these pleasing temptations. This made godly Iob (a) To sanctifie his children euerie day when they feasted each other at their houses: lest any one then should haue blasphemed God in his hart. Because he knew the diuell by pleasures would soonest wind himselfe into their hearts.

(a) Iob. 1. 5.

Lastly, note the order of these sinnes: First, they are drawn to sit at idols feasts, and then to commit adulterie: where we see that these two sinnes goe together, Spirituall adulterie, that is, idolatry; and bodily adultery, one is the plague & punishment of the other: that people which giue themselues to idolatrie, will God giue vp to bodily adultery. As this was true in these Israelits, so is it to be seene among the Turkes, and with the Papists at this day, who maintaine fornication, in tollerating stewes, and further it much by their vow of single life, wherewith they bind the conscience, though the partie want the gift of continence.

Verse. 15. Euen so hast thou them that maintaine the doctrine of the Nicholaitans, which thing I hate.

Here followeth the second part of the comparison, where Christ setteth downe two things: First, what the Nicolaitans were: Secondly, how hee was affected towards them. What they were is expressed in the first words, Euen so, which is a note of resemblance or comparison, hauing reference to the words going before. They may be thus described: The Nicolaitans were a sect in the church of Pergamus, that maintained two damnable opinios according to the doctrine of Balaam. I. That it was lawfull to eate things offered to idols in the honor of idols, sitting in the idols tẽple. II. that fornication was no sin; but that a man might lawfully commit it. It may seeme strange, that in the dayes of the Apostles there should bee men professing the name of Christ, and yet hold such damnable opinions: but the truth is hereby euident, that there were such in this church. And that we do not conceiue a liking of their wicked opinions, let vs examine their reasons, whereupon they might seeme to be grounded.

For the eating of things sacrificed to idols, they would pleade thus. I. From the doctrine of christian libertie, Things indifferent may be lawfully vsed. Things offered to idols are things indifferent, as meates, and drinkes, and therfore may lawfully be vsed. Ans. Meats and drinkes, if they bee considered in themselues, are things indifferent, and may lawfully be vsed: yea after they haue bene offered to idols, if they be sold in the market, they may bee lawfully bought and eaten in priuat houses, if it be done without offence of the weake, as Paul teacheth at large, 1. Cor. 10. 25. 29. But if these meats be considered as they are offered to idols, and eaten in the idols temple in the honor of idols, they be vnlawfull. And yet the Nicolaitans held this to be lawfull.

II. Reason. An idoll is nothing, 1. Cor. 8. 4. and therefore we sinne not in eating meates offered vnto them. Ans. An idoll is nothing, that is, in nature subsisting; nothing created or ordained of God, it hath no propertie of the godhead: but yet an idoll is something in mans imagination, which giueth to it the honour of God, and reputeth it as God, making it a God vnto himselfe.

III. Reason. Naaman the Syrian (b) went into the temple of the god Rimmon, and there

there kneeled down: Euen ſo may chriſtians go eat in idols temples? Anſ. When Naaman went in thither he did not kneele downe to the idoll, but to the king, performing a ciuill dutie vnto his Prince; who vſed to leane on Naamans ſhoulder and worſhip his falſe god. And though Naaman were preſent at idoll-worſhip & ſeruice, yet it was with proteſtation againſt it: for being cured of his leproſie, he promiſed to worſhip no God but the God of Iſraell: and thereupon he laded two mules with the earth of the land of Iſraell, in token of his publicke profeſſion of thankfulneſſe to the true God for his cleanſing. If theſe in Pergamus whom Chriſt diſliketh, had gone as Naaman did into idoll temples, they had not ſinned as they did. And at this day if men proteſt againſt the idolatry of the maſſe, they may enter into thoſe congregations where maſſe is ſaid: for this proteſtation is a flat condemning of their falſe worſhip.

The ſecond opinion of theſe Nicolaitans was, That men might lawfully commit fornication. This opinion they would thus iuſtifie: Firſt, from the practiſe of Lot, Who (a) offered to the men of Sodom his daughters, when they called for the ſtrangers that were come into his houſe. Which thing (ſay they) Lot would neuer haue done, if fornication had bene a ſinne? Anſ. It ſeemeth that Lot cannot be excuſed in that action, though his purpoſe was by a leſſer euill to preuent a greater, but God hath plainely taught, That no man may do the leaſt euill, for the procuring of the greateſt good that can be, Rom. 3.8.

(a) Ge. 19.8.

II. Reaſon. The Lord (ſay they) commanded Hoſea, To take a wife of fornication, and children of fornication, Hoſ. 1.2. It is not therfore vnlawfull? Anſ. There be diuers interpretations of that place. Some ſay that was onely in viſion, and not a fact done. Others ſay, it was in ſpeech onely, becauſe hee propheſied vnto the people that he himſelf was as a man of fornicatiō vnto them. Theſe expoſitions may well ſtand. Yet others hold that the Lord commanding him this, it was to be done, and was done indeed. And ſundrie circumſtances ſeeme to prooue that it was a fact done, for the womans name is ſet downe to be (b) Gomer, and her fathers name Diblaim. Secondly, a thing in viſion or in ſpeech onely, doth not ſo much preuaile with wicked people, as that which is done indeed. Thirdly, the antient opinion of beſt diuines that liued neereſt to the Apoſtles times, auouch it was a fact done. Obiect. But this maintaineth fornication, againſt good maners, and the expreſſe law of God. Anſ. It were ſo indeed, if the Prophet had done it on his owne head, but he did it by Gods ſpeciall appointment, who is Lord of his owne law, and may diſpence with it at his pleaſure. God in his law forbiddeth to kill, yet Abraham is commaunded to kill his ſonne: Which if he had done he had not ſinned, becauſe hee had a ſpeciall commaundement for it, which a man muſt obey, though it bee againſt a morall precept. Againe, Hoſea tooke a wife of fornication, not to maintaine her in her ſinne, but to make her a chaſt woman. And whereas he was commaunded alſo to take vnto him children of fornication: it muſt not be vnderſtood of children begotten by him, but borne of her in fornication: As if he ſhould ſay, Take a wife with her children which ſhe brought forth in fornication. So that this place which way ſoeuer wee take it, doth nothing maintaine their wicked errors.

(b) Verſe. 3.

III. Reaſon. Acts. 15. The Apoſtles charge the churches, To abſtaine from that which is ſtrangled, from blood, and from fornication: There (ſay they) fornication is reckoned among things indifferent, and therefore may be vſed lawfully. Anſw. It is there reckoned among things indifferent: Firſt, becauſe it was ſo accounted of amongſt the gentiles: Secondly, becauſe the gentiles did ioyntly by theſe three things offend the churches of the Iewes. But hence it followeth not that it is indeed a thing indifferent.

II. Point. The affection of Chriſt towards theſe men is noted in theſe words: Which thing I hate. This hatred muſt bee referred not to the perſons of the Nicolaitans, but to their opinions, liues, and practiſes.

Hereby Chriſt would inſtruct vs in ſundrie needfull duties. Firſt, if we will follow him, wee muſt hate all honour and approbation that may bee giuen to idols, bee it neuer ſo little. Theſe Nicolaitans might ſay, they abhorred idols and worſhipped them not, onely they The Vſe.

went with their friends into their Temples, and ſate downe to eate meat before them; now euen this dealing Chriſt hateth. Wherein hee doth notably condemne the practiſe of the Romiſh church, which ſay, they worſhip not idols, but the true God: and yet they doe that which Chriſt hateth; for they kneele downe before them, they adore them, and light candles vnto them, and offer vnto them many rich iewels, and much ſumptuous attire, which is a great deale more than the Nicolaitans did: And therfore they are much more to be condemned, and their practiſe alſo hated of vs. Secondly, Chriſts hatred of the leſt honour of idols, doth affoord a ſpeciall caueat to ſuch men as giue themſelues to a trauelling life; as into Italy, Spaine, and other idolatrous places: they ſhould content themſelues within the precincts of the church, and not proceed further without warrant of a ſpeciall calling, whereby they may aſſure themſelues of Gods gracious protection. For hereby they giue occaſion to themſelues to do that which Chriſt hateth; though they ſay, they hate idolatrie: For if a man eſcape to bee preſent at their abhominable ſeruice, yet he cannot auoid going to their Temples, where hee is to offer ſome gifts, or performe ſome ceremonie after the cuſtome of the country; whereby hee ſhall giue ſome approbation at the leaſt of their idolatrie: whereas hee ought to hate the leaſt appearance therof, euen the garment ſpotted with the fleſh. Thirdly, by this his affection Chriſt would teach vs to grow to an hatred of all familiar ſocietie with idolaters: for though we may haue ſociety of concord with them, yet ſocietie of amitie, which is a ſpeciall liking between man & man, we muſt not maintaine with them.

Fourthly, Chriſt hateth not onely their idolatrie, but their fornication alſo. Hereby teaching vs to grow to a hatred of fornication; which the rather muſt bee deteſted, becauſe (a) The bodies of euery man and woman be not their owne, but Chriſts: and therefore ought not to bee imployed in the honour or ſeruice of the diuell, but of Chriſt. Againe, the bodies of euery chriſtian man and woman are the members of Chriſt, now it is an vnſeemely thing to take the member of Chriſt, and make it the member of an harlot. Fiftly, their bodies are temples, and dwelling places; not for earthly Princes, but for the holy Ghoſt: and therefore muſt be furniſhed with Gods graces, and adorned with chaſtitie & other gifts of Gods ſpirit, that they may be fit mantion places for ſo worthie a gueſt. But by fornication they are made the ſties & ſtables of the prince of darkneſſe.

(a) 1. Co. 6. 19

Verſe. 16. Repent thy ſelfe, or elſe I come vnto thee ſhortly: and will fight againſt thee with the ſword of my mouth.

Chriſt hauing layd downe the ſinnes of this church, and the errors of the Nicholaitans, doth here propound vnto this church, Firſt, a remedie for her recouerie: Secondly, a reaſon to inforce the practiſe of the remedie. The remedie is in theſe words: Repent thy ſelfe. In it conſider theſe points: Firſt, what it is to repent: Secondly, why Chriſt ſo often vrgeth thereunto: Thirdly, to whome Chriſt preſcribeth this remedie. Of the firſt, we haue ſpoken in the firſt verſe of this chapter: Briefly therefore, Repentance is a change of the mind from euill to good, and a turning from ſinne vnto God. Here repentance muſt bee taken more largely, for all the duties that accompany repentance in the practiſe therof: as I. Humiliation of a man by confeſſing of his ſins vnto God; and condemning of himſelfe for the ſinne. II. Prayer, wherby a man doth earneſtly intreat the Lord for the pardon of the ſame ſins. III. Reformation, wherby a man in hart propoſeth, and in life indeuoureth to leaue all his former ſinnes, and for euer after to do all things in obedience vnto God: vnto all theſe doth the holy Ghoſt exhort them in this place.

II. Point. Why doth Chriſt ſo often preſcribe this duty of repentance, and ſo much vrge it? An. Not for that it is a cauſe or a meritorious means to procure remiſſion of ſins & life euerlaſting, as the Papiſts do falſly and damnably teach; for that nothing can do but the obedience & paſſion of Chriſt: but firſt becauſe it is a token of Gods fauor procured, & a moſt excellent frũit of faith, ſuch as maketh a man ceaſe to do euill, and moueth him to do good: Secondly, becauſe it is a way wherin mẽ muſt walke vnto the end, that wold haue remiſſiõ of ſins, & life eternal.

III. Point.

III. point. To whom is this remedie preſcribed? Anſw. Firſt to the church of Pergamus, and then to the Nicholaitans in that church, though they were moſt wicked men. Touching the church of Pergamus: they were before commended for moſt worthie graces, for they had repentance: and yet note, Chriſt ſayth ſtill vnto them, Repent thy ſelfe. Herein teaching vs a moſt worthie leſſon, which euery one ought to learne and practiſe: namely, that the life of a Chriſtian is a continuall practiſe of repentance. When a man hath once repented, that is not ſufficient; but euery new day muſt haue a new repentance for his dayly ſlips. Wee (d) 2. Cor. 5. 20 (a) are Gods embaſſadours (ſayth Paule) for Chriſt: beſeeching you in Chriſts ſtead, that you would be reconciled vnto God. Now they were reconciled to God before, for they are (b) Cap. 6. 16. called (b) the Temple of the liuing God; His meaning therefore is, That they ſhould ſtriue more and more after reconciliation with God; both in regard of their further aſſurance, and alſo for their particular ſinnes wherein they dayly offended. Euery Chriſtian muſt dayly wreſtle with his owne corruptions, which hee feeleth in himſelfe, that the longer hee liueth, the more hee may grow in diſlike with himſelfe. And in this diſtaſt of himſelfe hee muſt dayly proceed, that hee may euery day more and more grow vp in Chriſt. And leaſt any ſhould thinke, that this was ſpoken to this church alone, and not to vs: conſider, that wee are in the ſame caſe with them; their ſinnes are our ſins, as we haue prooued: We want zeale and ſeueritie againſt ſinne and ſinners. Now being in the ſame fault with them, wee muſt therefore practiſe the ſame remedy, and renew our repentance, though wee haue repented heretofore.

Secondly, he preſcribes this dutie to the Nicolaitans, that held two damnable errours, and no doubt liued accordingly in thoſe ſinnes: and yet Chriſt barres them not from his kingdome, but bids them repent. Where note, that great and grieuous ſinners are not barred frō Gods mercie, if they will repent. Excellent is that ſaying of Iſay, God is much in ſparing: and that of Dauid alſo, With God is plentifull Pſal. 130. 7. redemption. This point is ſeriouſly to bee conſidered: for wee haue in our congregations many that are well ſpoken of in the world: and yet for knowledge of God and practiſe of life, are flat Atheiſts. We haue alſo among vs epicures, blaſphemers, murtherers, and fornicators with theſe Nicolaitans. Now to all theſe and ſuch like this doctrine appertaines, not to embolden them in ſinne, but to aſſure them there is mercy in ſtore for them with God, if they will truly repent. They muſt not turne the grace of God to wantonneſſe, and make his mercie a bolſter to their iniquitie; for this is deſpiſing of Gods bountie, whereby they heape vp vnto themſelues wrath againſt the day of wrath: but if with Iob they humble themſelues in duſt and aſhes, and crie to heauen for mercie from a broken heart that carrieth a reſolute purpoſe to leaue all ſinne; then, though their ſinnes were neuer ſo many, they ſhall all be drowned in the bottomleſſe ſea of Gods mercie: though they were as crimſon and ſcarlet, which will take no other dye, yet in Chriſts bloud they ſhall be made as white as wooll & ſnow: yea, though they haue fallen often into the ſame ſinnes which is moſt fearefull and dangerous, yet vpon this vnfained repentance they ſhall bee reſtored to mercie: for the fountaine thereof cannot be dried vp: but ſee they doe repent, for whoſoeuer looketh for Chriſts merits, muſt know that hee looketh for true repentance. Thus much for the remedie.

II. point. The reaſon whereby Chriſt would ſet an edge vpon the former remedie, containeth a twofold threatening or commination: the firſt, againſt the whole Church in theſe words: If not, I come vnto thee ſhortly. The ſecond againſt the Nicolaitans in theſe words: And will fight againſt them with the ſword of my mouth. For the firſt, If not, I will come vnto thee ſhortly, theſe words were expounded in the fift verſe. The meaning is this: If thou repent not, I will come vnto thee, & teſtifie my preſence by taking puniſhment vpon thee, for thy want of zeale, and of ſeueritie againſt ſinne and ſinners. To this effect the Prophet Iſay ſayth, Chap. 30. 27. The name of the Lord ſhall come from farre, to take puniſhment vpon the Aſſyrians.

In this threatening the phraſe is to be noted. Chriſt ſayth: If not, I come vnto thee: expreſſing a thing to come, by a word of the time preſent. To giue them to vnderſtand, that his comming vnto them by iudgements was as certaine, as if it were preſent, vnleſſe they did repent. Where this generall rule is to be obſerued of all: namely, that when a Church or people doe not repent, the Lord will come vnto them to execute his iudgements vpon them. Yea, though they haue before repented, if for particular ſinnes and wants they doe not renew their repentance, hee will ſurely come to puniſh them. This might be proued at large by teſtimonies of the Prophets & Apoſtles: but it is ſo euident in this text, that I omit all further proofe; onely I will applie it to this our Church, of which this may bee truely ſayd; Thou doeſt not repent, nor renew thy repentance for thy dayly ſinnes. For albeit there bee ſome among vs, that by Gods grace repent and ſet themſelues dayly to the exerciſe thereof: yet take the greater part of our congregations, and they are ſo far from renewing their repentance, that they doe not repent at all: for either they haue no knowledge of Gods will; or if they haue knowledge, yet they want care and conſcience to put the ſame in practiſe. This being our caſe and condition, what man may not bee a Prophet againſt our churches and congregations, being thus directed by this portion of Scripture, to ſay and that truly, That God will come vnto vs in iudgments, to plague and puniſh vs for our ſinnes and iniquities? Wee may ſooth our ſelues in hope of mercie ſtill, but the ſtate of our Church continuing as it is, nothing can bee expected but iudgements from the Lord. This then muſt be a motiue to perſuade vs to repent, euery perſon apart, and euery family & congregation apart, we muſt humble our ſelues in duſt and aſhes for our ſinnes paſt, entreating the Lord to be reconciled vnto vs, and purpoſe fully in our hearts, and ſtriue in our liues to obey God in all his commaundements: yea, though we can ſay wee haue repented, yet for our dayly wants and ſinnes wee muſt renew our repentance. Thus doing, we ſhall ſtay the Lord when he is comming againſt vs. But if we goe on in blindneſſe, ignorance, and rebellion, following the luſts of our own hearts, then nothing but vengeance and iudgements are to bee expected: for this concluſion muſt ſtand with all churches and people: If they repent not, God will come in iudgement againſt them.

The ſecond threatening or commination is directed vnto the Nicolaitans, in theſe words: And will fight againſt them with the ſword of my mouth; that is, I will bee at enmitie with them, and teſtifie the ſame by waging battell againſt thoſe among you, that maintaine the lawfulneſſe of eating things ſacrificed to Idols, and of fornication. Thus I ſay will I fight againſt thē with the ſword of my mouth; that is, with the preaching of my word, the law, and the goſpell.

In this commination Chriſt alludeth ſtill to the ſtorie of Balaam: for when hee was ſent for by Balac to curſe the people of God, the Lord ſtood againſt him in the way with a naked ſword, to keepe him from going: and when his eyes were opened, that hee ſaw the Angell of the Lord withſtand him in that ſort, hee fell downe and adored the Angell, for it was the Lord: yet becauſe he ceaſed not from his wicked couetouſneſſe, but gaue bad counſell againſt the Iſraelites, when he could not curſe them, to cauſe them to ſinne: therefore hee was ſlaine with the edge of the ſword among the Midianites by the children of Iſrael, Num. 31.8. Euen ſo Chriſt dealeth with the Nicolaitans, becauſe they goe on in their bad counſel, perſuading the lawfulneſſe of eating things ſacrificed to Idols, & alſo of fornication: therfore firſt he will fight againſt them with the ſword of his mouth, the miniſtery of his word, therby to reclaime them from their wicked wayes, if it bee poſsible: but if that will not ſerue, hee will ſtill fight againſt them, and with the ſame ſword deſtroy them for euer.

Firſt here marke, Chriſt ſayth not, I will kill them, but fight againſt them: for hee intended not at the firſt to deſtroy theſe Nicolaitans, but his purpoſe was to withdraw them from their wicked wayes; yet ſo, as afterward if they would not be reclaimed by his word, he would therewith deſtroy them. Wherein wee may behold the exceeding patience of Chriſt Ieſus towards leaud and grieuous ſinners, that maintained the lawfulneſſe of idolatrie and fornication, and gaue themſelues thereunto. So the Lord (a) in ſpirit ſtroue with the old world, and ſpared them 120 yeares to withdraw them from their wicked- (a) Gen. 6.3.

nesse by the preaching of Noe. So likewise hee
(b) Gen. 15. 16. ſpared the Ammonites (b) till their ſinnes were come to the full; and the Egyptians alſo for many hundred yeares, though they were moſt cruell perſecutors of his owne people. And though the Iews moſt maliciouſly crucified the Lord of life; yet he ſpared them fiftie yeares, before hee cut them off from being a people. Yea, dayly experience teacheth vs this his long ſuffering: we may heare moſt bloudie and bitter oathes from blaſphemers, whereby they dayly crucifie Chriſt with their tongues. The like may be ſaid of the adulterers, and all cruell perſons, and yet he forbeares the ſame: yea, in our owne ſelues we dayly taſt of this his patience: for ſo ſoone as we were borne, we deſerued to be caſt into hell, and yet in mercie he vouchſafeth vnto vs, to ſome twentie, to ſome thirty, and to ſome moe years, for a time of repentance; when as euery day hee might in iuſtice condemne vs. This therefore muſt admoniſh vs in the feare of God, not to abuſe this his long ſuffering any longer, but now while the day of mercie laſteth, to humble our ſelues, and turne vnto him by true repentance. Theſe are the dayes of grace, but how long they will laſt, God onely knoweth: For when death once commeth, he ſheweth no more mercie. The old world, becauſe they abuſed the long ſuffering of
(c) 1. Pet. 3. 19, 20. God (c) were deſtroyed, and are now in hell in priſon for it, as Peter teacheth. And vndoubtedly the ſame priſon will be our portion if wee take the ſame courſe that they did.

Secondly, in this threatening we may obſerue, that all irrepentant ſinners haue God for their enemie, to fight againſt them with a drawn ſword. For this cauſe ſinne in Scripture is called rebellion, and euery ſinner is a rebell againſt God. A fearefull thing it is to haue God for an enemie: and yet this is the condition, not onely of ſuch as did neuer repent, but of all thoſe that hold the name of Chriſt in profeſsion, and yet continue in any one ſinne, without renewing their repētance. This alſo muſt ſerue to induce euery man that hath not repented now to begin: and if they haue begun, to repent more, dayly renewing the ſame for their daily ſlips, and ſo ſhal they be the friends
(d) Lam. 2. 23 of Chriſt, as (d) Abraham was, and as his diſciples were, Ioh. 15. 15.

Thirdly, in theſe two threatenings Chriſt ſheweth himſelfe to bee the true Doctor of his Church: for he will fight againſt theſe Nicolaitans, when as hee will onely come vnto his Church. Where wee ſee hee deuideth his word aright: wherein conſiſteth the principall wiſedome of a true Prophet, giuing comforts to whom comfort belongeth, and threatning iudgements to whom iudgement is due; and making difference of iudgements according to the ſtate of the perſons againſt whome they are threatened. For the heauie iudgements of God muſt not be threatened againſt all perſons, but againſt the impenitent. And becauſe there be degrees of iudgements, temporall, and eternall; therefore temporall iudgements muſt be threatened to thoſe to whom they belong, & eternall iudgements denounced againſt thoſe to whom they belong: obſeruing the circumſtances of time, place, and perſons, according to Chriſts example in this place, and elſe where. So likewiſe the benefites of the Goſpell are not to bee propounded to euery perſon hand ouer head without difference, but with reſtraint to ſome onely, as Gods Prophets haue done. It is often a great offence in the Church, when the benefits of the Goſpell are propounded to all, and the threatening of the law denounced againſt all, without limitation or reſtraint. The conditions therefore of repentance & impenitencie, of faith and vnbeleefe, and alſo the degrees of them all, muſt carefully bee obſerued in the diſpenſation of the Law and the Goſpell.

Fourthly, the end of Chriſts fighting muſt be conſidered: for firſt hee intends to reclaime them from their euill wayes; but if they will not be reclaimed, then to cauſe the ſame word to be an occaſion of their deeper condemnation. This muſt be deepely weighed of vs all, who haue had by Gods mercie for many yeares the plentifull preaching of the goſpell, by which God hath continually rebuked & checked the ſinnes that bee among vs, as ignorance, blaſpemie, and filthineſſe, crueltie, and all iniquities whatſoeuer: and the ſame thing the Lord yet continues to doe vnto vs. Wee therefore muſt thinke, that all this while the Lord is fighting againſt vs: when ignorance is reproued in the miniſterie of the word, the ignorant perſon muſt thinke the Lord is fighting againſt him: and ſo all Atheiſts, blaſphemers, adulterers, oppreſſers, and cruell perſons, when their ſinnes are reproued, they muſt know that the Lord ſtands face to face againſt them with the ſword of his mouth, ſeeking to reclaime them from theſe iniquities, as hee did to Balaam in his way. And when any mans ſinnes be thus touched, hee muſt not rebell, but humble himſelfe, as Balaam fell before the Angell: conſidering it is the Lord that wageth battell againſt him. When wee heare that forraine nations ſhake their ſwords againſt vs, how are wee mooued, both high and low? Shall wee feare the ſword of mortall man, and ſhall we not tremble when we heare that the ſword of the euerliuing God is ſhaken againſt vs? Thoſe therefore whoſe hearts are guiltie of any one ſinne, muſt humble themſelues by true and ſpeedie repentance, there is no withſtanding of the Lord: if his ſword doe not cure vs, it will cut vs in pieces: if his word doe not conuert vs from our ſinnes, it will bee an occaſion to caſt our ſoules deeper into hell. Thus he dealt with Balaam, when he would not be reſtrained from giuing bad counſell, he was ſlaine among the Midianites. Few thinke on theſe things; from whence commeth ſuch great contempt of Gods ordinance in the miniſterie of the word, as we ſee at this day: but they muſt know, that either death or life come by the ſtroke of this ſword, and therfore they muſt repent.

Fiftly, note the title giuen to Gods word: it is called The ſword of Chriſts mouth: not onely becauſe it was once deliuered by himſelfe, from his own mouth, but becauſe it doth dayly proceed from his mouth: for the Miniſters of the goſpell, which bee truely called, are the very mouth of Chriſt, from which Gods people receiue his word. (d) If thou ſhalt returne (ſayth the Lord to Ieremie) and ſhalt ſeparate the precious from the vile, then ſhalt thou ſtand before me, and be according to my word. 2. Cor. 5. 19, Wee are the embaſſadors of Chriſt, beſeeching you in his ſteed: which is an high and wonderfull honour. The conſideration whereof is a ground of ſundry duties.

(d) Ier. 15. 19.

Firſt, all ſtudents that are in the way of preparation to higher callings, muſt hereby learne to conceiue a good opinion of the Miniſterie of the goſpell, and to affect the ſame aboue other callings. For though the blind world count it a baſe calling, yet Chriſt wee ſee maketh the miniſter his owne mouth: which honour is not giuen either to the Lawyer or to the Phyſition.

Secondly, hereby euery Miniſter of the Goſpell is taught to deliuer nothing in his publicke Miniſterie, but the pure word of God, ſo farre foorth as Chriſt ſhall enable him: and that alſo in ſo pure a manner, as in the perſuaſion of his owne conſcience hee thinkes Chriſt would ſpeake, if he were there preſent; like vnto faithfull embaſſadours, who ſpeake onely the will of their lord and prince, and in that manner which their lord and prince doth beſt approoue. If this were well weighed, wee ſhould not haue ſuch preaching as is commonly vſed, conſiſting of a mixture of teſtimonies, partly diuine, and partly humane, conſidering that neither Chriſt nor his Apoſtles preached ſo.

Thirdly, the people alſo are hence taught their dutie: when they heare a ſinfull man like vnto themſelues ſpeake vnto them in the Miniſterie of the word, they muſt not deſpiſe Gods ordinance, becauſe it is deliuered by man, but receiue the ſame, as from the mouth of Chriſt, and as the pure word of God, ſo far forth as it conſenteth with holy ſcripture. In this behalfe Paule bleſſed God for the Theſſalonians, That they receiued the word from him, not as the word of man, but as it is indeed the word of God, 1. Theſſ. 2. verſ. 13.

Sixtly, where Chriſt ſayth, I will fight againſt them with the ſword of my mouth. We may obſerue, that the kingdom of Chriſt is ſpirituall, and not of this world: for if it were worldly, then a ciuile ſword, wielded by the hand of man, ſhould belong vnto him: But he hath no ſuch ſword, he gouernes his church and people by the ſword of his mouth, his holy word. Wherby appeareth, that the primacie of the ſea of Rome is from hell, not from heauen: for the Pope ſayth he is Chriſts vicar, and yet he will be armed with both ſwords: when as Chriſt dealeth not with the ciuill ſword, but onely vſeth the ſword of his mouth.

Verſe. 17. Let him that hath an eare heare what the ſpirt ſaith vnto the Churches: To him that ouercommeth will I giue to eate of the Manna which is hid, and will giue him a white ſtone, and in the ſtone a new name written, which no man knoweth, ſauing he that receiueth it.

Theſe words are the concluſion of this Epiſtle, which containeth two parts, a commaundement, and a promiſe. The commaundement in theſe words, Let him that hath an eare heare what the ſpirit ſaith vnto the Churches. The promiſe in the words following, To him that ouercommeth, &c. The commandement ſerueth to ſtir vp Gods church to attention, in marking that which Chriſt deliuereth vnto them, as hath bene ſhewed before verſe 7.

In this commaundement of Chriſt note two things: Firſt, that all men in Gods church are bound in conſcience to frequent Sermons, whereby they may come to the knowledge of thoſe things that God preſcribeth vnto them. At the natiuitie, Eaſter, and ſuch good times as they are called, ignorant people will come to the church: but it may bee not once more of a moneth after, or a quarter
(a) Ioh. 10.27 of a yeare. But Chriſt ſaith, (a) My ſheepe heare my voyce. So that hee that will not come to heare the voyce of Chriſt, is none of his ſheepe. Math. 16. 19, Chriſt ſaith to Peter, I will giue thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen. There the preaching of the goſpell, is the key of the kingdom of heauen: So that looke how neceſſary it is for a man to haue his ſoule ſaued and to enter into heauen, ſo behouefull is it for him to heare Sermons: for that is the turning of the key whereby we enter into this kingdome, 2. Cor. 5. 18. the preaching of the goſpell is the doctrine of reconciliation: and therefore looke how neceſſary it is for a man to be reconciled to God; ſo needfull is it for him to heare the word preached. He that is of God heareth Gods word: and he that heareth it not is not of God, 1. Iohn. 4. 6. But men haue manie excuſes to exempt themſelues from hearing Sermons: Some ſay if God himſelfe would preach, or Chriſt, or an Angel from heauen, then they would heare; but ſo long as ſinfull man preacheth it is no great matter though they abſent thēſelues. Anſw. This is a preſumptuous reaſon: for the preaching of the goſpell by man, is Gods owne ordinance; and that for theſe cauſes: Firſt, ſince Adams fall man cannot abide the voyce of God: ſo as if man ſhould heare God ſpeake, he would cry out with the Iewes, Exod. 20. 19, Let not God talke with vs leſt we die. And with Peter, (b) Depart from me I am a miſerable ſinner: Secondly, God ſpeaketh by man to trie the obedience and humilitie of men; to ſee whether they would bee content to receiue and beleeue his word, being propounded by ſinfull man that is like vnto themſelues: And thirdly, to maintaine loue betweene man and man, by mutuall conuerſing in this holy ordinance. Others doe ſay, they may well inough keepe themſelues in their families, for there they haue their Bible wherein bee the Sermons of Chriſt, and of his Prophets and Apoſtles, than which no miniſter can preach better. Anſ. It is Gods ordinance, that theſe Sermons of Chriſt, of the Prophets, and Apoſtles, ſhould be againe handled, preached, and expounded in his church: and therefore euerie man is bound in conſcience to come into the congregations, & there to heare with reuerēce Gods holy word. Others will not come to the church, for (they thanke God) they can ſerue God with as good a heart on horſe-backe, or on their iourneys, as thoſe that come vnto the ſermons. Anſw. Theſe perſons are blind and ignorant, a ſeduced heart beguileth them, and therefore they deſpiſe the ordinācе of God: but let them heare
(b) Luk. 5. 8. what Salomon ſaith, (c) He that turneth away his eare from hearing the law, that is, the doctrine of God: euen his prayer ſhall be abhominable. God ſpeaketh vnto vs in the miniſterie of his word, and if wee refuſe to heare him there, ſhall we thinke hee will heare vs when wee pray? Know therefore, if thou refuſe his word, hee will refuſe thy prayers: neither indeed can any without the word pray aright. Such people deceiue themſelues, their prayers in their needleſſe iourneyes ſhall bee their iudges to condemne them: for therein they confeſſe God is to bee worſhipped, and yet in practiſe they reiect his direction for the ſame. Laſtly, others ſay

they haue knowledge inough, the miniſters can teach them no more than they know: and therefore they need not go heare ſo much preaching. Anſw. Theſe that pretend ſuch perfect knowledge, are commonly the moſt ignorant, not knowing the end of this ordinance of God: for preaching ſerueth not only to teach men to know God and his will; but alſo to increaſe in knowledge, and to yeeld obedience to that which they know. If therefore thou haſt knowledge, it is well; but that is not inough, if thou wouldeſt be bleſſed thou muſt doe that which thou knoweſt, Iohn. 13.17. And for this cauſe the moſt learned man that is, muſt ſtill frequent the hearing of Sermons, to further himſelfe in obedience: becauſe a man may know much and yet want conſcience to obey.

Secondly, in this commandement men are inioyned the reading of the word, & hearing of it read, not onely publickly but alſo priuatly in their families: that therby alſo they may come to the knowledge of that thing which Chriſt propoundeth vnto them. Luk. 10.26, Chriſt ſaith to one of the Scribes; what is written, how readeſt thou? Taking it for granted that men muſt read the Scripture priuatly. (a) And the Lord ſaith, (a) My people go into captiuitie, becauſe they haue no knowledge: yea they periſh, Hoſe. 4.6. But wofull is the defect of this duty; for many haue not the Bible in their houſes for their priuat exerciſe in the word: and in many families it is ſet vp for a ſhew, or lieth couered with duſt, when as cards and tables are worne with vſe. It is not amiſſe for men to get the ſtatutes of the land into their houſes, and to read therein for the knowledge of mens lawes: but yet herein they are blame worthie, that either they haue not, or elſe regard not the booke of God, whereby they might bee acquainted with the ſtatutes of the Lord, for the better guiding of our vnruly affections. Other things in this commandement haue beene obſerued before.

(a) Iſay. 5.13.

The ſecond part of this concluſion, is an excellent promiſe made to him that ouercommeth, which for ſubſtance hath beene handled in the concluſions of the former Epiſtles. Here onely ſome ſpeciall bleſſings are particularly promiſed: In the handling whereof two points are to bee conſidered: Firſt, the perſons to whom the promiſe is made, To him that ouercommeth: whereof entreatie was made before verſe. 7. Secondly, the bleſſings promiſed, compriſed in this threefold gift of God: Firſt, To eate of the Manna which is hid: Secondly, To receiue a white ſtone: Thirdly, A new name written in the ſtone. All which three ſignifie in effect, The election, vocation, iuſtification and glorification of Gods people. But I wil handle them in particular. The I. benefit is, The giuing of the hidden Manna to eate. Manna properly ſignifieth that food which God gaue from the clouds to the people of Iſraell, which for the excellencie of it is called, The (b) wheate of heauen. The (c) food of the ſtrong, or the food of Angels. In forme it was like (d) Coriander ſeed, and in colour white, in taſt it was pleaſant and ſweete. Herewith God fed his people in the wilderneſſe 40. years: to (e) teach them, That man liueth not by bread only, but by euerie word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. This is thought to bee the ſame white Manna which is vſed in ſhops at this day, but I will not diſpute thereof, ſeeing it is doubtfull. That Manna did repreſent a more excellent food: and therefore Paul calleth it, (f) A ſpirituall meat, becauſe it repreſented vnto them the ſpirituall food of the ſoule, Chriſt Ieſus the true Manna, (g) The liuing bread that came downe from heauen: as wee may ſee at large, Iohn. 6. And ſo in this place by Manna, wee muſt not vnderſtand the Manna of the people of Iſrael: But Chriſt himſelfe the true food of life eternall. How Chriſt doth become vnto vs our ſpirituall Manna, and the true food of life, I will ſhew by theſe concluſions. I. He is this food, not in regard of his doctrine, or of his miracles, nor yet onely in regard of the bleſsings of his death and paſsion: But Chriſt himſelfe God and man is true food of life, as is ſhewed at large, Iohn. 6. And in Chriſt himſelfe are his death and paſſion, & the benefits thereof, food vnto the ſoule. II. Concluſ. Chriſt is this food, not as he lay in the manger, or as he now ſitteth in heauen at the right hand of his father: but as he ſuffered the wrath of God and pangs of hell vpon the croſſe, and as he died & was buried; for our life commeth out of Chriſts death. III. Concl. He is this food, not in regard of his godhead, for that no creature can receiue or apply to his iuſtificatiō, or ſanctification: but in regard of his manhood, ſubſiſting in the perſon of the ſonne of God. Chriſts fleſh profiteth nothing, ſeuered from the godhead: but yet his body and bloud haue this vertue, to be true ſpirituall food, becauſe they are the fleſh and bloud of that perſon which is God. IV. Concl. Chriſt is not a bodily food to be receiued with the hād, eaten with the mouth, & digeſted in the ſtomacke: but he is a ſpirituall food, to be receiued, applied, & digeſted by faith: And being ſo receiued he doth preſerue the ſoule vnto eternall life. This faith is that wherby a man is enabled to beleeue that Chriſt crucified is his Chriſt. And thus doth he become our ſpirituall Mannah, when by true faith wee aſſure our ſelues that he ſuffered for our ſinnes, and roſe againe for our righteouſneſſe.

The Vſe. Is Chriſt crucified, the true bread of life, and our ſpirituall Manna? then ſhould we long after him, with a true ſpirituall hunger in our very hearts, as truly as any man longeth after meat & drinke. When a man is famiſhed, for the ſtaying of his hunger he will pull his owne fleſh from his bones and eat it: Euen ſo, for the ſatisfying of our hungrie ſoules with Chriſt Ieſus this food of life, we muſt forſake the deereſt thing in all the world, though it bee our owne fleſh: For that which we will do for our bodies, we muſt do much more for our ſoules. Que. How ſhall we attaine to this true ſpirituall hunger? Anſwer. It is with the hunger of the ſoule, as it is with the hunger of the body. In bodily hunger bee two things: A great paine in the ſtomacke for want of nouriſhment: And a ſtrong and earneſt appetite, which continueth till the ſtomacke be filled. Euen ſo we ſhould feele a paine in our hearts, riſing from a ſenſe of the wrath of God for our ſinnes: And then wee muſt labour to haue a greedie appetite, and earneſt deſire to bee filled with Chriſt crucified; & neuer be at reſt til we be ſatiat with the merit of his paſſion, which only can free vs from Gods wrath, and fill vs with true ioy. But woefull bee theſe times: for there is in moſt mens hearts a deadneſſe of ſpirit, whereby they are made inſenſible of inward wants and miſeries: They are like vnto full men that feele no paine for want of food. There is indeed an hunger, nay a greedie worme in many after the profits, pleaſures, and honors of this world: but few or none do hunger after Chriſt. But if wee would haue (a) part in the feaſt of the Lambe, we muſt labour to haue this longing appetite after Chriſt: If we be full ſtomacked wee ſhall haue no refreſhing from his merits. Mary ſaith truly in her ſong, (b) God filleth the hungrie with good things, but the rich and full goe away emptie. Which is a moſt fearfull curſe, when the ſoule is debarred from this food of life, But (c) bleſſed are we if we hunger after Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe, for then we ſhall bee ſatisfied: Chriſt will giue vnto vs our fill of the water of life freely, Reuel. 21.6.

(b) Luk. 1.53.

(c) Mat. 5.6.

Secondly, here we may take a view of the profane madneſſe of the world: For though this bread of life Chriſt Ieſus, be the moſt excellent food of all, farre ſurpaſsing the Iſraelits Manna, the food of Angels; yet it is nothing or little deſired. Men are like to the fooliſh Iſraelits that had more regard to leekes and onions, and to the fleſh pots of Egypt than to Angels food which God gaue them frō heauen. They ſpend their wits, and their ſtrength, by day and by night, that they may ſatiate themſelues with the fraile riches and vaine pleaſures of the world: And yet theſe men haue the name to be the onely men, whereas indeed they are profane Eſaus, & wicked Iſraelits. As therefore this practiſe is damnable: ſo muſt we learne to deteſt it. And on the contrarie, ſeeing Chriſt Ieſus is the true Manna, our principall care and deſire muſt bee to bee fed therewith. Wee muſt thinke it is a great diſgrace to Chriſt Ieſus, which hee cannot endure without reuenge, that wee ſhould haue leſſe regard to him the true bread of life, than to earthly foode which periſheth.

Thirdly, here wee may ſee that which is vſuall in the Scripture intreating of the Sacraments, to wit, the name of the ſigne giuen to the thing ſignified: for Chriſt here promiſeth them Manna, meaning thereby, not the Iſraelits food, but himſelfe, whereof their Manna was a ſigne, a ſeale, a pledge: as appeareth plaine, becauſe Paul calleth it ſpiritual meat, 1. Cor. 10. 2.

Further Chriſt is not only called Manna, but hidden Manna; to put a difference betweene himselfe and the Manna of the Israelits which was visible that euery man might see. And Christ is called hidden Manna for two causes: first, because no man by nature knoweth this food, or desireth it: secondly, because God doth not reueale this food to al men effectually; as may appeare, Mat. 11. 25. I giue thee thankes (oh father) that thou hast hidden these things: (that is, the doctrine of the gospell and the mysteries of the kingdome of heauen) from the great and wise men of the world, and hast opened them vnto babes.

The Vse. Is Christ hidden Mannah? then first here learne to take knowledge of the state of men in the world: They know not Christ, neither do they feele in themselues any want of this food, and therefore they know not what it meaneth: for meat and drinke is neuer knowne, till a man be hungrie. Yea, to many that liue in the church this Manna is hidden: for though men heare the doctrine of Christ, yet not one of an hundred feele in themselues any want of Christ: let the conscience speake and this will prooue true. Ignorant people blesse themselues and say all is well, Christ is a sauiour: when as indeed to them Christ is hidden. Nay which is yet more lamentable, to many which teach and preach Christ, Christ is hidden Manna: for many of them neuer felt in their hearts and conscience, that they had need of Christ for the pardon of their sinnes, and the saluation of their soules. It is not the knowledge in the brain that maketh Christ known to man; but knowledge in the cõscience, when a man feeles in his heart and soule, that hee stands in need of the bloud of Christ, and all the benefits of his passion for his redemption & saluation. And seeing this is the condition of the world, wee on the contrarie must labor to feele in our selues our owne pouertie, & to see in our selues that we stand in need of Christ, and of all the benefits of his passiõ, to free our souls from the gulfe of hell, and the wrath of God. Away with bare mentall knowledge: for till we haue this true sense of our owne wants, wee can neuer get into our hearts any sound grace.

Secondly, is Christs hidden bread not reuealed to all? Then calling effectuall to saluation (so as if hee will, euery man may be saued) is not vniuersall: for then should Christ not be hidden, but reuealed to all: which is not so. Election therefore and effectuall vocation is definite & particular. And thus much of the first branch of this gift.

The second gift, is a white stone. Here Christ borroweth a comparison from the custome and manner of the gentiles, to whom these Epistles are directed. A white stone was of great vse among thẽ: For first, the iudge in giuing sentence, vsed white stones, and blacke stones: the giuing of a white stone was a token of absolution; the giuing of a blacke stone, a signe of condemnation. Here then the giuing of a white stone, may signifie Absolution from Christ, of all a mans sins and trespasses. Againe, when the gentiles would know, which were luckie dayes (as they spake) and which were vnluckie; they vsed to cast lots with white and blacke stones, and that day which light on a white stone was iudged to be a lucky day, that which light on a blacke stone was iudged to be vnlucky. This practise they vsed as might be shewed by sufficient records. And though this practise haue no warrant, yet may Christ allude vnto it, to signifie vnto them that hee will giue them good successe in all their actions; yea happie dayes, and a blessed life full of all ioyes and pleasures. Others doe expound it of giuing victorie, whereof the giuing of a white stone was a signe: but this is not so fit, neither can it bee shewed by true record that they had such a practise. I rather take it Christ alludeth to the first, and here promiseth to him that ouercommeth, the true remission of all his sinnes, and full absolution; not in regard of ciuill punishment, but in respect of guilt and punishment before God, which is eternall damnation.

Here note one infallible token of the pardon of sinne: namely, to ouercome, that is, to renounce our selues, and by faith relie wholly on Christ, testifying this faith by maintaining good conscience and true religion vnto the end: And therefore if anie desire to know whether God haue absolued him of his sinnes, let him labour thus to ouercome, and then shall this assurance be sealed vp vnto him.

The third gift is, a new name written in the ſtone. What this new name ſhould be S. Iohn expreſſeth in his firſt Epiſtle, chapter 3. verſ.1. ſaying: Behold, what loue the father hath ſhewed to vs that we ſhould be called the ſonnes of God. This new name therefore is to bee the ſonne and heire of God in Chriſt. And becauſe it is giuen of God himſelfe, therefore wee muſt not thinke it is an idle name, or a bare title onely: but withall God giueth him a new condition, whereof this name is a token and title. God changed Abrams name, & called him Abraham; but it was when he had changed his eſtate, and made him the father of the faithfull. And there was a change in Iacob, when God called him Iſraell. This new name then ſignifieth the giuing of a new eſtate to a man or womā, which they had not before: namely, their regeneration, whereby they are made to die vnto ſinne, and to liue vnto God: for therewith goeth the bleſsing of adoption, whereby they become the ſonnes of God, and heires with Chriſt, and ſo haue heauen and earth for their poſſeſsion; and all miſeries and croſſes, yea ſinne it ſelfe turning to their good, they haue alſo the protection of Gods holy Angels in this life, and at the laſt gaſpe death to bee no death, but a ſtrait paſſage to eternall life.

in

Further, this new name is ſayd to bee written in the white ſtone: that is, in the pledge of abſolution: which ſheweth the vnion of theſe two: Abſolution, and Regeneration. So that whom the Lord of his mercie abſolues from their ſinnes, them in his bountie hee brings to a new eſtate and condition. He that is in Chriſt, is a new creature, 2. Cor. 5. 17. A point to be obſerued, as yeelding ſpeciall aduice to reforme the groſſe and common abuſe of Chriſt. Men perſuade themſelues, that Chriſt is their Sauiour, and will pardon their ſinnes, for he is mercifull: and thereupon they take occaſion to liue as they liſt. But let no man herewith deceiue himſelfe: for they that haue abſolution, haue regeneration alſo: a new condition of life goes with the fruition of Gods mercie in Chriſt: they that go on in ſinne, haue not the pardon of ſinne: the corruption of ſinne muſt bee aboliſhed, where the guilt of ſinne is abſolued; and their liues are reformed that haue their ſinnes remitted. Here ſome man may ſay, Why are not thoſe called by this new name, to whom Chriſt giues it, for vſually men are called after their names? The anſwere is made in the end of the verſe: Becauſe no man knoweth that name ſaue he that receiueth it: that is, in that manner and certainetie as hee that receiueth it. And therefore the children of God muſt not be much offended when they are reuiled for their profeſsion, becauſe the world knowes not their eſtate.

Here we may obſerue diuerſe points: Firſt, that hee which is the child of God, and hath this new name giuē him, knows that hee is Gods child, iuſtified and ſanctified: Neither is this knowledge by probable coniecture onely, and good hope, as the Papiſts would haue it; but certaine and infallible: for elſe others ſhould know it as well as hee that receiueth it: which is here denied. Each one is bound in charitie to bee perſuaded, that godly profeſſors are the ſons and daughters of God: But the man himſelfe that hath receiued this new name and new eſtate, hee knowes it otherwiſe, and therefore certainely and infallibly.

Secondly, if no man know this name but hee that receiueth it; then can none beſide God and the conſcience, know from within the man, his particular faith and adoption. And hereby we are to bee admoniſhed, to beware of charging the euill and hard cenſure of hypocriſie vpon any that liue in the church: in ſo doing we ouerſhoot our ſelues: this iudgement belongs to God, not to man, ſaue onely to the man himſelfe; for wee cannot diſcerne the good within the man properly, but by effects. Queſt. How farre forth may a man iudge of another mans election? Anſw. There be two degrees of iudgement: iudgement of certentie, and iudgement of charitie. Iudgement of certentie is when a man can ſet downe certainely, ſuch a man ſhall be ſaued: This is peremptorie iudgement belonging vnto God, and to ſome men onely, ſo farre forth as the Lord reuealeth it vnto them: as he did the eſtate of ſome men, to Dauid and to ſome Prophets. Whereupon Dauid ſometimes prayes for the finall deſtruction of his enemies: but this is not giuen ordinarily, no not to Gods miniſters. The iudgement of charity is that which binds a man to iudge the beſt of another: and herein bee two degrees. Firſt, touching the vnregenerate, charitie binds vs, not to deſpaire of ſuch as yet liue profanely; but to hope that God will in good time call them. And touching the regenerate, who haue giuē good teſtimonies of their vocation, charitie binds vs to be perſuaded without doubt that they be the children of God. And this we may doe without repugnance to this place: for though wee cannot from within the man know his eſtate, yet by the fruits we may; which is the higheſt degree of iudgement that charitie can exerciſe.

Thirdly, here wee ſee the church of Rome is deceiued, who make Viſibilitie the marke of Gods church: for Gods church is a companie of men which beleeue: the ground of the church is Gods election, and adoption, and mans faith, which none other can ſee but the parties that haue them. The ſignes thereof may be ſeene, but properly the church cannot bee ſeene. It comes to bee viſible by the fruits of election, and by the outward works of loue, which proceed from faith. We therefore hold farre better, that wee beleeue there is a church, and not that we ſee the church.

Laſtly, if others know not the name of Gods children, then what maruell is it, if the wicked miſcall them? 1. *Iohn.*3.2, The world knowes vs not. Gods children therefore muſt not be daunted at the reproches of the wicked, but pray with Chriſt, Father forgiue them, they know not what they doe, Luk.23.34.

Verſe 18. And vnto the Angell which is at Thyatira write, Theſe things ſayth the ſonne of God, which hath his eyes like to a flame of fire, and his feete like fine braſſe.

Here followeth the fourth particular commaundement of Chriſt vnto Iohn, as alſo the fourth particular Epiſtle. The commaundement in theſe words: To the Angell which is at Thyatira write; of the ſubſtance of this commaundement I haue ſpoken before: onely remember the end thereof, which is to certifie this church of Thyatira, that Iohn had a calling and commaundement from God to write this Epiſtle vnto them: and further to certifie the whole Church of God, to the end of the world, of his calling to write this booke of the Reuelation.

The Epiſtle it ſelfe containeth three parts: a Preface, a Propoſition, and a Concluſion. The Preface in theſe words: Theſe things ſayth the ſonne of God, which hath his eyes like vnto a flame of fire, and his feete like fine braſſe: all which things almoſt haue beene handled in the beginning of this chapter, and in the former, from whence they are borrowed. In the Preface, firſt is ſet downe in whoſe name the Epiſtle is written, to wit, in Chriſts name: the cauſes thereof we haue ſhewed before. Then Chriſt is deſcribed by three arguments: Firſt, To be the ſonne of God: Secondly, To haue eyes like a flame of fire: Thirdly, To haue feete like fine braſſe. For the firſt, In the former chapter he was called The ſonne of man: but here he is called The ſonne of God; where by God wee muſt not abſolutely vnderſtand the godhead of the whole Trinitie, but the perſon of the father, who being oppoſed either to the ſonne or to the holy ghoſt, is vſually called God: not that he is God more than the ſonne, or than the holy ghoſt; but becauſe he is the firſt in order, and becauſe hee is that perſon from whom the godhead is communicated to the ſonne and to the holy ghoſt. So that here Chriſt is called the ſonne of the father: which myſterie wee cannot fully vnderſtand, for the word hath not reuealed the ſame: neither can wee find it elſewhere out of the word. But yet for the better conceiuing thereof, remember theſe two rules. I. That Chriſt is the ſon of the father, not in reſpect of his godhead, but in reſpect of his perſon: For the godhead of the ſonne is the ſame with the godhead of the father: The godhead of the father doth not beget, neither is the godhead of the ſonne begotten. II. Rule. Chriſt is the ſonne of the father, not by creation, as the Angels and Adam were; nor by adoption, as euery beleeuer is; but by nature, in that hee is begotten of the ſubſtance of his father before all worlds: for the father communicates from himſelfe the whole godhead that is in himſelfe vnto his ſonne. Verſ.5.14.15.

Chriſt is here called the ſonne of God, to ſtirre vp reuerence, attention, and care in this church, in marking and obeying the things that follow in this particular Epiſtle. And in their example Chriſt alſo teacheth vs, that when we heare the word The Vſe.

of God preached or read vnto vs, wee ſhould receiue it with fear, and trembling and reuerence: becauſe he that ſpeaketh vnto vs out of his word, is the ſonne of God. When Pilate was about to condemne our Sauiour Chriſt, he heard it ſaid, that Chriſt was the ſonne of God. And thereupon hee trembled, and was the more afraid, Ioh.19. verſe. 8. ſhall a fillie heathen man that knowes not Chriſt tremble towards him when hee heares his name; and yet wee that profeſſe our ſelues to beleeue in him bee nothing mooued with reuerence towards him, when hee ſpeakes vnto vs in his word? At his preſence the hils melt, and at his voyce the rockes cleaue in ſunder: and therefore if our hearts ſhall not melt and cleaue aſunder with a reuerent feare when he ſhall ſpeake vnto vs, wee are worſer than theſe ſenceleſſe creatures.

Secondly, Chriſt is ſayd, To haue eyes like a flame of fire: which we muſt not conceiue literally. The words are borrowed from the former chapter, verſ.14. where Chriſt is deſcribed not as hee is in truth, but as he appeared to Iohn in viſion. We haue ſhewed before what is ſignified by theſe fierie eyes: namely, Chriſts infinite wiſedome in himſelfe, and vigilant zeale ouer his church. The end wherefore hee ſo deſcribeth himſelfe to this church, is, to giue them to vnderſtand, that hee can ſee and diſcerne their very ſecret ſinnes: for ſundry among them were giuen to priuate offences, as to fornication and idolatrie, as we ſhall ſee afterward.

The Vſe. Here then wee haue an excellent remedie againſt ſecret ſinnes: ſhame and feare of puniſhment will reſtraine ſome men from open ſinnes, but yet the ſame men when they are in ſecret, doe without fear commit priuie ſinnes againſt the firſt and ſecond table. But theſe men muſt remember, that being withdrawne from the preſence of men, they are yet in the preſence of Chriſt: for hee hath fierie eyes, wherewith he ſeeth their moſt ſecret ſinnes, which they hide from the world. For though we may make faire weather with men, yet wee can neuer bleare the eyes of Chriſt. If fornicators, wantons, vſurers, and blaſphemers would remember this, by Gods grace it would bee a notable meanes at leaſt to reſtraine them from their ſecret ſinnes, if not to mooue them vnto the practiſe of true repentance.

Thirdly, Chriſt is ſayd to haue feete like fine braſſe. Whereby is ſignified (as hath beene ſhewed) his infinit power and ſtrength, whereby he doth ſubdue ſinne, Sathan, and al his enemies, firſt vnto himſelfe, and then vnto his members. And Chriſt is thus deſcribed vnto this church, to terrifie certaine wicked men among them, that gaue themſelues to fornication, idolatrie, and other ſinnes: as alſo to affright this whole church, who by their wicked companie were almoſt drawne away to the ſame ſinnes.

The Vſe. Here wee haue a notable remedie againſt looſeneſſe of life: namely, to conſider that Chriſt, whom we call our Sauiour, walketh continually in his church with feet of braſſe to tread Sathan and all his enemies vnder his feet: and ſuch are all that will not ſubmit themſelues to the regiment of his word, Luk.19.27. If the blaſphemer could conſider this, it would ſtop his mouth: and when the adulterer, the theefe, or any ſinner goeth about his wicked deuices, this by Gods grace would be a notable meanes to make him breake off his wicked purpoſe. When Benhadad heard, that the king of Iſrael would come againſt him in battell, (a) He ſent his men with ropes about their necks to craue peace, and in them humbled himſelfe. Shall men be thus afraid at the furie of man, and ſhall not wee tremble and feare at the fury of Chriſt, who hath theſe feet of braſſe to trample in pieces all his enemies? The want of this conſideration is one maine cauſe why ſinne doth abound.

Verſe. 19. I know thy workes, and thy loue and ſeruice, and faith, and thy patience, and thy deeds, which are moe at the laſt than at the firſt.

Here begins the ſecond part of this Epiſtle, to wit, the Propoſition; which containeth the ſubſtance & matter thereof: and it hath two parts; a commendation of this church, and a rebuke thereof. The commendation in the 19 verſe; the rebuke or diſpraiſe in the 20 verſe and thoſe that follow, almoſt to the end of the chapter. The commendation is twofold: generall in theſe words, I know thy workes.

This hath beene handled before, vers.2. The particular commendation standeth in fiue notable workes: to wit, Loue, Seruice, Faith, Patience, and Encrease in godlinesse.

For the first, by Loue wee must vnderstand Loue to men: for afterward they are cõmended for duties to God in faith and patience: but loue and seruice are duties of man to man. Touching Loue, note three points: What this loue is; What is the propertie of this loue; and how it is to be practised. First, Loue to man is a gift of the Spirit of God, whereby a man is well affected to his neighbour for Gods sake. That loue is a gift of the Spirit, is plaine, Galat.5. verse 22. where it is reckoned among the gifts of the spirit. Next I adde, That hereby a man is well affected to his neighbour. To bee well affected to another, is to reioyce at his good, and to desire and seeke the same; and withall to bee grieued at his miserie, and to beare the bowels of compassion towards him, being readie to releeue and helpe him to our vttermost. By Neighbour, wee must not vnderstand only those that are neere vnto vs in habitation, but euen all those that are of the same nature with vs, euen any of mankind. Hee is thy neighbour that is a man as thou art, and so bearing the image of God as thou doest bee hee friend or foe, neere or stranger vnto thee; and to him must thou be well affected. Lastly, I say, For Gods sake: for God is first and principally to bee loued for himselfe, and man in God and for God, because hee is the creature of God, and beareth his image. The loue we beare to man, is a fruit of our loue vnto God: for this commaundement wee haue of him, That he that loueth God, should loue his brother also, 1.Iohn.4.21.

II. point. The propertie of this loue is, To be feruent; and that for two causes: First, if need require, euery man is bound within his calling to testifie his loue (a) by giuing his life for his neighbour, though he be our enemie, or a stranger; which wee shall neuer doe, vnlesse our loue be feruent. Secondly, there is much ingratitude, hatred, emulation, and many iniuries in the world: Now the persons from whom these come, must be loued: the vnworthinesse of the partie must not quench our loue, but it must burne when the waters of mens iniuries and malice would quench the same.

(a) 1.Ioh.3.16.

III. point. The practise of our loue must be squared by this rule, The loue of our selues, as wee wish our owne good heartely, so we must wish our neighbours good. This is the law of Nature, To doe as a man would be done vnto: And it is the law of God, Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. Example: A man of some trade is to make a bargaine, and if hee will lye, or vse false weights and measures, he may aduantage himselfe. This the deuill and his owne corruption will suggest vnto him, while hee is about the bargaine: he therefore must call to mind this rule of loue, and examine his owne heart, whether hee would haue another man to deceiue him by lying, by false weights, &c. The same thing must men doe, when they are tempted to oppression or crueltie, let them thinke whether they would haue others to wrong or oppresse them; and so shew forth loue by this rule, doing as they would bee done vnto. It were to bee wished, that our Church might haue the deserued prayse of this vertue of loue: But Christ foretold of these our dayes, That loue should waxe cold, Matth.24.12. And (a) that men should be louers of themselues. And so it is: for euery man now is for himselfe, no man seekes anothers good. Goe through townes, markets, and fayres, and rare it is to find a man that in his affaires seeketh the common good, as well as his owne. For this is the common rule, May I not make of mine owne what I will? But he that hath the grace of loue, Seeketh not his owne onely, but the good of others also, 1.Corinth.13.5.

(a) 2.Tim.3.2.

The Vse. Here then wee must learne to practise this vertue, that wee may haue Christs commendations with this church. Euery man in the generall calling of a christian will make great shew of loue; as when he comes to the Lords table, & in praier: But in their particular affaires few shew forth true loue; nay many by lying, oppression, crueltie, Flea the skinne from the flesh, and the flesh from the bone of the poore, and breake the bones within the flesh, and chop them as for the pot, as the Prophet speaketh. These little consider this rule, or that account which the Lord will take of them, who hath ſworne neuer to forget theſe works, Amos.8.7. Learne therefore in thy particular calling to ſhew forth loue, and imploy thy commodities, not for thy ſelfe alone, but for the good of thoſe with whom thou liueſt: herein is loue, and hereby ſhalt thou be known to be the ſeruant of Chriſt, Iohn.13.35. and the child of God, Tranſlated from death to life, 1. Iohn.3. verſ.14.

The ſecõd thing for which this church is cõmended, is ſeruice, To omit the diuers ſignifications of the word, here it betokeneth a worke of loue, whereby a man within the compaſſe of his calling becomes a ſeruant vnto euerie man for that mans good. Read Heb.6.10, where this is both commended and deſcribed. Gal.5.13. Do ſeruice one to another in loue. 1. Cor.13.5. Loue ſeeketh not her owne, but maketh her ſelfe ſeruant to all, to do them good. And Chriſts commaundement is, Let him that would be chiefe among you, bee as the ſeruant, Luke.22.26. Now the principall part of this ſeruice is, when a man is readie with his goods, according to his abilitie, to helpe the poore, eſpecially thoſe that be godly. This is a fruit of loue, and therefore it is here ſet after it, as alſo in the places before named, Hebr.6. verſ.10. Gal.5.13.

The Vſe. It were to be wiſhed that our church and people might haue the like praiſe for this vertue. But the richer ſort ſpend their ſubſtance and wealth vpon haukes and hounds, buls, and beares, vpon coſtly attire, and banqueting: ſo as when the poore that are in need come for releefe, they haue nothing to ſpare; and if any thing bee giuen, it is drawne as hardly from them as a ribbe out of their ſide: Men wil giue frankly to delight themſelues with playes and paſtimes, and ſuch like vanities; but the poore that be their owne fleſh, may die in the ſtreetes for want of that which men giue to their dogges. But if we reſpect the commendation of Chriſt Ieſus, let vs abandon theſe vanities which hinder vs in the practiſe of this vertue of ſeruice for the good of our brethren. And to induce all men hereto, let them conſider 1. how the church of the Old teſtament was charged with giuing the firſt fruites of their wine, corne, and oyle: and likewiſe with many ſacrifices and ceremonies which belonged to the temple: theſe things indeed be ceaſed, and yet wee may not miſpend theſe good which hereby are ſpared; for in the New teſtament the poore are in ſteed of the altar, and they muſt haue that which the altar had among the Iewes. Againe, Iſay.58.18, He that powreth foorth his ſoule to the hungrie, that is, he that ſeeing the poore in miſerie, hath the bowels of compaſſion mooued towards them, and from his pitifull hart releeueth their wants, according to his abilitie; his light ſhall neuer bee put out, but ſhall ſpring out of the darkneſſe, and his darkneſſe ſhall bee as the noone day. This is pure religion, and vndefiled before God, to viſit the fatherleſſe, and the widdow in their aduerſitie. Remember this, He that hath mercie vpon the poore lendeth vnto the Lord, Prou.19.17. So that when the poore come for releefe, God commeth to borrow of vs ſome of that which he hath giuen vs. The poore are the Lords collectors, now when the Lord would borrow of vs, ſhall we make deniall, & ſend him emptie away? Thirdly, conſider that Chriſt himſelf comes in the perſõ of the poore that is hungrie, ſicke, naked, or in any want; and therefore if wee would eſcape the fearefull ſentence of condemnation at the laſt day, Away from me ye curſed into euerlaſting fire, for I was an hungred, and ye gaue me no meate, &c. then we muſt haue regard vnto the poore, and ſhew our bountie in their releefe, who are our owne fleſh: ſo ſhall wee make God our debtor, and bee commended with this church by Chriſt himſelfe in this world, and at the day of iudgement heare that bleſſed voyce of his approbation, Come ye bleſſed, Math.25.34. Iam 1.27.

The third vertue for which this church is commended, is their faith. By faith here we are to vnderſtand Fidelitie; which is a vertue whereby a man is faithfull to God in keeping that vow and promiſe which hee made to him in his baptiſme: which was to renounce and denie himſelfe, and wholly to giue vp himſelfe to acknowledge one God in three perſons; and accordingly to beleeue in, to worſhip and obey the ſame God all his life long. In this ſence is faith taken of Paule, (a) when he ſayth, That younger widdowes haue damnation, becauſe they haue forſaken their firſt faith. And in the former Epiſtles of (a) 1. Tim.5.12

Christ vnto these churches, where hee commaunds them to be faithfull.

The Vse. It were to bee wished that our churches and congregations, might in like manner be commended for their fidelitie to God: but that cannot truly be done of vs generally. It is a common thing for men to sweare by their faith; but it is a rare thing to find a man to keepe his faith: as will appeare by this short survey of our people: For first, the greatest part in all places are ignorant of God, of his word, and of their vow to him in baptisme; and also voide of care to attaine hereto: Now all these are vnfaithfull vnto God. Others, though they haue knowledge, yet they haue no loue, nor care of good things, which concerne the kingdome of heauen: but all their delight is in eating, drinking, gaming, and in pastimes and pleasures: Herein they spend their time and strength, and these also haue denied their first faith, & their case is dangerous: for as yet their belly and their pleasure is their god, and their end will be damnation. A third sort are termed the wise men of the world; but if we regard their fidelitie to God there is nothing in them; they are worldly persons and earthly minded, such as spend both wit and strength to get wealth; like vnto the mole, who is alwayes in the earth. These also are vnfaithfull vnto God, in regard of their vow in baptisme: For as they account gaine godlinesse, so gold is their god, and they say to the wedge of gold, Thou art my confidence. Seeing then all these be vnfaithfull vnto God, we must hereby be admonished to remember what wee haue promised in our baptisme: And withall haue care to performe the same as wee tender the saluation of our soules. For if we be vnfaithfull, as Paule said of the yonger widdows, damnation belongs vnto vs.

The fourth vertue for which this church is commended, is patience. Of this I haue spoken before verse. 2. Here onely note, that it is ioyned with loue to men, with fidelitie to God, and with seruice both to God and men in the duties of loue. Whereby Christ would signifie that no good thing can be done by any man, without patience. Loue is no loue without patience: neither is faith any faith without patiẽce: for when a man loueth another, for his loue hee shall sometime receiue hatred. Now vnlesse hee haue patience to beare that hatred, his loue will surcease. And so if a man haue care to bee faithfull vnto God, in the world he shall be sure to haue much contempt: so that vnlesse he haue patience to beare the same, his faithfulnesse will faile, Patience bringeth forth experience, and experience hope, Rom. 5.4. & Rom. 15.4, No comfort of the Scriptures, nor hope without patience. And therefore in the parable of the sower, The good ground (a) bringeth forth fruit with patience: though a man haue neuer so good gifts, yet without patience he cannot put them in practise. This therefore we must ioyne with all the good graces wee haue: as Peter counselleth vs, 2. Peter. 1.6. When a man is in temptation, and apprehendeth the wrath of God, which is the sorest thing that can be, without patience he will dispaire: Without patience a man will bee wearie of well-doing, both in duties to God and man, and to his owne soule. Hence the Apostle saith, yee haue need of patience, Heb. 10.36. (a) Luk. 8.15.

And thy workes. Here Christ repeateth his generall cõmendation of this church, which we must not thinke to be done in vaine, but herby he would let vs see, how exceeding well hee did approue of their workes. The cause why he liked them so well, was their increase in well-doing: whereof we shall intreat afterward.

The Vse. Christ repeateth his approbation of their workes after foure worthy vertues, to shew vnto vs, what things are required in the doing of any worke that shall bee acceptable to God: Namely, these foure things, faith, loue, seruice, and patience. Faith is necessarie, because in well doing a man must testifie his fidelity to God, which hee shall best doe, if first hee learne out of the word, whether God haue commanded that worke to be done or not: that so hee may bee sure to do or not do that which God will haue him: for it is not sufficient to haue a good intent in the doing of our workes, as is cõmonly thought, though falsly; but our workes must be done in faith, that is in a sure perswasiõ out of Gods word, that the things we do are approued of God: for whatsoeuer is not of faith is sinne. Secondly, loue is necessarie in euery good worke we go about, For faith worketh by loue, Gal. 5.6.

5.6. Hence the Apoſtle ſaith, 1.Cor.13. 3. If a man ſhould giue his body to bee burned: and beſtow all his goods in almes vpon the poore: yet if he did not theſe in loue it would not pleaſe God. Thirdly, ſeruice to man is required in our good workes. This muſt be carefully marked: for the end of mans life is in his calling to ſerue man, and by that to ſerue God. Col. 3.24. Seruants muſt obey their maiſters, and in their perſons doe ſeruice vnto Chriſt. And that which is there ſpoken of ſeruants, muſt bee referred to the works of euery man in his calling: they muſt be done for the good of men, ſo as God may bee ſerued in them. This ouerthrowes the fooliſh conceit of the Papiſtes, which thinke that the moſt excellent workes of all are faſting, pilgramage, wearing of rough attire, and whipping of their bodies: For good workes muſt bee done in faith and loue, to benefit men, either in ſoule or bodie: but theſe works of theirs are not done in faith, neither do they profit the doers nor any others; Faſting hath it place, yet it is no good worke but a thing indifferent in it ſelfe: Laſtly, patience is neceſſarie in euery good worke, that men faint not in doing that which is good: for they that do any good thing ſhall be ſure of many croſſes, partly from men, and partly from Sathan, as alſo by Gods prouidēce: Now when theſe befal a man in welldoing without patiēce they wil ſtay his proceeding: And therfore it is truly ſaid, That be good ground bringeth forth fruit with patiēce.

The Vſe. Theſe being the vertues that make a worke acceptable to God: we muſt labour in euery action of our lawfull calling whatſoeuer it bee, to practiſe the ſame in faith, loue, ſeruice, and patience. We muſt not tie good workes to church matters onely, as hearing the word, and giuing almes; but the practiſe of any worke of a mans lawfull calling be it neuer ſo baſe, with theſe vertues is a good worke, and approued of God in it kind, as well as the beſt worke that is: not for the worke it ſelfe, but becauſe therein doth appeare faith, loue, ſeruice, and patience: and becauſe this church ſo performed their workes, therefore doth God double his approbation.

The laſt vertue for which this church is commended, is increaſe in godlineſſe, in theſe words, And that they are moe at the laſt than at the firſt. The church of Epheſus was before reproued for decay and loſſe of the graces of God; but this church did grow and increaſe in graces, and therfore are her works more approued, than the works of any other church.

The Vſe. It were to be wiſhed that our congregations might bee commended for their increaſe in godlineſſe, in faith, obedience, and other good workes; but that cannot iuſtly bee done, for the number of our people is increaſed, but their growth in grace doth not appeare. Many liue in ignorance, and though they heare much, yet they profit little, ſo as it may be ſayd of them, as the Author to the Hebrews ſaith, (a) Whereas concerning the time ye ought to be teachers, you haue need againe that we teach you the firſt principles of the word of God. And as Paul ſaith of certaine women, (b) They are alwayes learning, and neuer come to the knowledge of the truth. Others alſo, though they know ſomething, yet they practiſe leſſe than they which know nothing. And which is worſt of all, many that heretofore haue had good beginning in them, by their bad conuerſation, and the greedie cares of this world haue loſt the ſame againe, and go backward in knowledge, in obedience, in faith, and loue. Rare it is to find thoſe that are like to this church of Thyatira, whoſe workes are better at the laſt than at the firſt. A fearfull caſe it is, to be ignorant of Gods will, and a great iudgement of God, to decay in loue and other graces: and therefore that wee may preuent Gods iudgements, wee muſt haue care to get knowledge, and to increaſe therein, and with knowledge to ioyne obedience in all good duties to God and man. Some plead for themſelues by reaſon of age, want of memorie, and capacity: but theſe muſt learne to ſhew foorth better affections, and more ſincere obedience.

(a) Heb.5. 12.

(b) 2.Tim.3.7

The yonger ſort alſo muſt imploy their wit and ſtrength to get knowledge, and with knowledge ioyne obedience, that they may increaſe in grace as they grow in dayes. Yea euery one that hath any good beginning, muſt indeuour to make it more: For to him that hath ſhall more giuen, and he ſhal haue abundance; but from him that hideth his gift, or abuſeth the ſame, ſhall bee taken away that which he ſeemeth to haue, Luk.8.18.

Verſ. 20. Notwithſtanding I haue a few things againſt thee, that thou ſuffereſt that woman Ieſabell, which calleth her ſelfe a propheteſſe, to teach & deceiue my ſeruants, to make them to commit fornication, and to eat meat ſacrificed to idols.

Here is Chriſts reproofe of this church of Thyatira, and it is twofold: Firſt, of the whole church, in this 20. verſe: Secondly, of a woman in that church, verſ. 21. In the reproofe of the whole church note two things: The reproofe it ſelfe; And the reaſon thereof. The reproofe it ſelfe is contained in theſe words, Notwithſtanding I haue ſomething againſt thee: That is, though I haue praiſed thee for manie worthie works, yet there be ſome things which I do not approue. This reproofe hath bin handled in the former Epiſtles. The reaſon of the reproofe followeth in theſe words, That thou ſuffereſt the woman Ieſabell, who calleth her ſelfe a Propheteſſe, to teach and ſeduce my ſeruants.

This reaſon of her reproofe containeth ſundry points worthie our conſideration. I. From the phraſe and forme of the words wee may conſider the large power that God gaue to his church: which was, beſides the power to preach the word, & adminiſter the Sacraments, a further power to appoint who ſhould preach among them, & who ſhould not preach: and alſo a power to repreſſe euill men and euill women, & ſo to keepe them in order. The like power was giuen to the church of Epheſus, as we haue ſeene in the Epiſtle to that church: they had power to diſcerne falſe Prophets, & Apoſtles, and to reſtraine the ſame. The like power did God giue to all churches, as we ſhall ſee if wee read the hiſtories of the church; and great cauſe there is hereof: For without this authoritie no church could long ſtand & be a church.

II. Here note that it is not ſufficient for a church to haue the preaching of the word, but it muſt haue ſeueritie and ſharpe gouernement, whereby wicked people may be reſtrained. This church is therefore diſcommended for that ſhee vſed not that ſeuere authoritie which God had giuen her in ſuppreſſing of ſin. And in our congregations the like fault is to be found; where much preaching is, yet ſinne abounds, as adultery, blaſphemie, vſurie, and cruelty: and the cauſe is for that this ſeuere execution of gouernment in reſtraining ſinnes, is not ſo ſtraitly put in practiſe as it ought to be.

Againe, in this reaſon of his reproſe Chriſt doth charge thē with two faults: Firſt, for ſuffering a woman to teach: Secondly, for ſuffering a woman to ſeduce his people. For the firſt, the word tranſlated teach, is in the New teſtament commonly put for publicke teaching in the miniſterie. Their fault then was this, that they ſuffered a woman to teach openly: and it is againſt the word of God, 1. Tim. 2.12. I permit not a woman to teach. And, 1. Cor. 14. 34, 35, Women ought to keepe ſilence in the congregation, and be ſubiect to their huſbands, and learne of them at home. Obiect. But Deborah was a Propheteſſe, Iud. 4.4. And Hulda propheſied, 2. Kin. 22.4. For Ioſiah ſent to her for counſell, 2. Chro. 34. And therefore women may propheſie. An. Theſe womē had extraordinary gifts & calling: & therefore vpon their exāple we may not make an ordinary rule. II. Ob. But it may ſeeme Paul alloweth it, when he ſaith, A woman praying, or propheſying vncouered diſhonoreth her head, 1. Co. 11. 5. Anſw. Hereto ſome do anſwer thus, that in the infancie of the church ſome women were extraordinarily indued with that gift, and did indeed propheſie. Others iudge it to haue bene a fault in that church, and therfore ſay, in the 14. cha. the Apoſtle reproueth it, commaunding women to keepe ſilence in the churches. Thirdly, a woman may be ſayd to pray when ſhe giueth her aſſent to the prayer of the miniſter, by ſaying, Amen: and ſhe may be ſayd to propheſie, when ſhe Singeth Pſalmes, or readeth the Scripture: For ſo the word is vſed in Scripture, 1. Chron. 25.1. Aſaph and his company propheſied with harpes and vials, That is (as it is tranſlated) they ſung propheſies, and playd thereunto vpon their inſtruments.

The Vſe. From the rebuke of Chriſt againſt this church, we gather that it is not warrantable by Gods word for a woman to adminiſter the Sacrament of baptiſme. For baptiſme is a ſeale of the couenant in the publicke miniſterie, and ſo a part thereof, and muſt goe with the preaching of the word, and may not bee adminiſtred by women, who are not allowed to preach, no not in time and caſe of neceſsitie when men are wanting. And although though they may not teach publickly, yet they may teach at home, and in the abſence of their husband it is her duty to teach her children. Prouerb. 31, Lemuel, that is, Salomon is taught many worthie things of his mother. And Timothie was brought vp of a child in the ſcriptures by his grandmother Lois, and his mother Eunice, 2. Tim. 1. 5.

Hence ſome would gather, that as a woman may not teach publickely, ſo ſhe may not publickely gouerne in the commonwealth. But this conſequence is not good: for publicke teaching is flatly forbidden to a woman, ſo is not publicke ciuile regiment. There is ſpeciall reaſon why ſhee may not publickely teach; for it is the will of God, that as Chriſt was a man, ſo they that ſtand in his roome and ſtead in the publicke miniſterie, ſhould alſo be men. But the regiment of a kingdome is a ciuile thing, and ſo may lawfully bee adminiſtred by a woman when ſhee commeth vnto it by lawfull ſucceſſion to her father, whoſe whole patrimonie in the want of ſonnes ſhe may rightly enioy. Obiect. But the woman muſt bee in ſubiection vnto the man, 1. Cor. 14. 34. Anſw. So ſhee may, and yet haue ſouereignetie in the kingdome. Obiect. But the man is the head of the woman, 1. Cor. 11. 3. Anſw. That is, the man in that he is a man is a perſon more excellent than the woman as ſhe is a woman: Yet the perſon that in regard of ſexe is inferiour, may haue more excellent gifts, and ſo likewiſe may exerciſe authoritie and rule; and wee find by good experience, that the gouernment of a woman is a happie gouernment; no records of time can ſhew a more happie regiment for bleſſings temporall and ſpirituall vnder any man, than wee haue long enioyed vnder our noble queene.

The ſecond fault of this Church is, that they ſuffered a woman to ſeduce and teach falſe doctrine, and thereby to ſeduce Gods people. That this is a fault, Chriſts reproofe ſheweth euidently, and therefore I will not ſtand to prooue it.

The Vſe. Hence wee may gather, that euery man is not to bee left to his owne conſcience, to teach and hold what doctrine he will: but all ſuch men or women as teach erronious doctrines, by the gouernors of the Church are to bee reſtrained. It is a grieuous fault in any Church not to reſtraine the authours and maintainers of ſects and falſe doctrines, and of opinions which ſtand not with the truth of Gods word: and on the contrarie, it is a vertue and a good gift in any church, when they reſtraine the authours and fauourers of ſects and falſe doctrine. And in this regard our Church is to bee commended and approoued, and the commonwealth likewiſe, for making lawes to reſtraine both Popiſh recuſants and ſome Proteſtants, who depart from this our Church, as being no Church of God, but a member of Antichriſt and of Babylon.

Now that Chriſt might aggrauate theſe their offences, hee doth deſcribe both the woman and her teaching. Hee deſcribeth the woman, firſt by her propertie, in this name Iezabell, that is, one like Iezabell: ſecondly, by her action, Which calleth her ſelfe a Propheteſſe: her teaching is deſcribed in the end of the verſe. Touching her propertie, Chriſt calleth her Iezabell for two cauſes: Firſt, for that ſhe was like to Iezabell, and in her perſon reuiued the manners and opinions of Iezabell. For as Iezabell brought among the Iſraelites the falſe worſhip of the Idoll Baal: ſo this woman laboured to bring into this Church of Thyatira, Idolatrie, and other ſinnes.

Againe, Iezabell was giuen to fornication, as the Scripture recordeth of her by the mouth of Iehu, 2. Kings. 9. 22. and ſo was this woman giuen to fornication. Thirdly, Iezabell was a woman of authoritie, and by her place and dignitie did countenance and maintaine Idolatrie, and her wicked ſinnes: ſo it is like, that this woman was of ſome place and authoritie, and did thereby countenance her wicked opinions, and damnable ſinnes.

The Vſe. In this reaſon of her name, note firſt a notable practiſe of Sathan for the furtherance of his kingdome, which is this: In ſucceeding ages hee laboureth to reuiue the erronious opinions and wicked vices of vngodly perſons of former times. This wee ſee plaine in this place: for long after Iezabels death (the wife of Ahab, a wicked woman) euen in the Apoſtles time, he raiſed vp another woman like Iezabell both for wicked life and doctrine. And the like practiſe hee vſeth at this day. In all ſuch as follow the rules and counſell of Machiauell, is reuiued the craft of Achitophell: in the Papiſts are reuiued the opinions and manners of the wicked Scribes and Phariſees: in the refuſant Proteſtants is reuiued the ſect of the Donatiſts, and the ſect called Audiani. The familie of Loue reuiues the opinions and manners of the Valentinians and the Montaniſts, and many other damnable errours. Now this the deuill doth, becauſe hee knowes by experience the great hurt that theſe opinions and ſinnes haue formerly done vnto Gods Church.

Secondly, Chriſt calleth this woman Iezabell, that he may prouoke this church to a greater deteſtation of her in regard of her damnable wayes: and that ſhee might be in as great diſgrace with them, as was Iezabell in the old Teſtament to the people of God, that ſo they might better eſchew her wicked ſeducement. And herein we haue a good direction for our profitable reading of the bookes of the old and new Teſtament: namely, that when we meet with examples of wicked men and wicked women, we muſt thereby take occaſion to be vnlike them. And if we find our ſelues like them any way, either in wicked opinion, or in practiſe, wee muſt thereupon grow to a diſlike with our ſelues. Againe, finding the examples of good men or good women, wee muſt labour to conforme our ſelues thereto, and become like them: and in this regard approoue our ſelues, when wee ſee our ſelues conformable vnto the godly in any vertue and grace.

The ſecond argument wherby Chriſt deſcribeth this woman, is her action: She calleth her ſelfe a Propheteſſe; that is, ſhee chalengeth her ſelfe to bee one that doth teach Gods will by the inſtinct of his ſpirit. And herein ſhee became a notable patrone of the damnable ſect of the Nicolaitans: for ſhe held the lawfulneſſe of fornication, and of eating things ſacrificed to Idols. And for the maintenance hereof, ſhee ſayth ſhee is a Propheteſſe, one that ſpeaketh nothing but as ſhee is taught by Gods ſpirit. This is the practiſe of heretickes, vnder pretence of the ſpirit to maintaine their damnable deuices, as might eaſily bee prooued by induction of particular heretickes in former ages.

The Vſe. Firſt, hence then we are taught to labour to haue the ſpirit of diſcerning; whereby we may trie the ſpirits whether they be of God or not. Many will bee of no religion, becauſe there bee ſo many falſe teachers, and ſuch diuerſitie of opinions in religion. But herein they bewray their prophaneſſe: they ought the rather to labour for this gift of diſcerning, whereby to know what is from God, and what is not.

Secondly, hence wee are taught, that when wee are vniuſtly ſlaundered, diſgraced, or iniured, wee ought not to fret and fume, but by patience to content our ſelues: for wee ſee that wicked men to maintaine their wicked opinions and manners, will not ſticke to abuſe God himſelfe, and make his bleſſed ſpirit the author and patrone of their errours and ſinnes. Wee by our ſinnes deſerue diſgrace and reproch: but the ſpirit of God hath done nothing amiſſe. And therfore wee muſt bee patient, being in the ſame condemnation, as Luke 23.40,41. and rather reioyce, in as much as wee are partakers of the ſufferings of the ſpirit, 1. Pet. 4. verſ. 13.
